DEFENCE

Project/Allenby/Connaught

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Tom Watson): I am very pleased to announce to the House that the Ministry of Defence has awarded the Project Allenby/Connaught contract to Aspire Defence Ltd. for the redevelopment and provision of services to Aldershot garrison and garrisons in the Salisbury plain area. This private finance initiative (PFI) project will provide modernised and fully serviced accommodation to the Army for 35 years and is worth approximately £8 billion through the life of the contract.

This is the largest accommodation PFI project the MOD has ever undertaken. In all, this project will deliver modern living and working accommodation for 18,000 military and civilian personnel, including the provision of some 11,000 en-suite bedspaces. The total new build for the project will cover an area twice the size of Hyde Park, and there will be more than 200 individual construction sites across the project footprint. In all more than 350 new buildings will be constructed and a further 140 will be refurbished. The project will also involve the demolition of more than 400 buildings, many of which are either empty or uneconomical to maintain.

The agreement we have reached with Aspire Defence Ltd. is a highly significant one, especially given the scale of the project, and the number of people who will benefit from it—not just within the Army, but in the garrison areas as well. The project will generate many new jobs in the local areas, but will also provide benefits to the wider UK economy through extensive contracting and sub-contracting of work. Furthermore, the implementation of this project will create a large area of land in Aldershot, which will be disposed of. The availability of this land is key to the plans for the urban regeneration of the area, and this too will create many employment opportunities.

Work on the new barracks has already started in Tidworth garrison with other garrisons soon to follow; it is anticipated that all the major construction work will take place during the first nine years of the project. The project also includes the provision of a wide range of services, including catering, cleaning, vehicle management and utilities. Some of these services are currently provided within the public sector, and approximately 380 civil service posts will transfer to the new service providers. These transfers will be handled in accordance with existing legislation and the Ministry of Defence's TUPE code of practice. There will not be any redundancies arising out of this transfer. The trade unions have been involved throughout the process, and a formal consultation period is currently under way. In addition around 1,800 existing contractors staff will transfer, in accordance with TUPE legislation, to the Aspire supply chain.

This project delivers on the Government's pledge to provide our armed forces with modern and appropriately provisioned facilities. Furthermore, it demonstrates the Government's continuing commitment to private finance initiatives as a procurement option, where they are proven to offer a sensible and cost-effective way forward.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Industry Forum Adaptor Programme

The Minister for Industry and the Regions (Margaret Hodge): Today the Department is placing copies of a report on "The Industry Forum Adaptor Programme" in the Libraries of both Houses.

The report is published by the DTI in collaboration with the Industry Forum Network, and details the activities and achievements of the 15 industry forums throughout the UK. They have been instrumental in introducing global best practice into the production activities of a number of important UK industrial sectors, enabling participating firms to make significant productivity gains and to achieve marked improvements to their overall competitiveness. The 15 industry forums are listed below, with the date they started work. The report details the activities and achievements of each forum. It presents case studies which underline the success of the programme's practical, hands-on approach to the transfer of best practice, including process improvement "master classes", in which expert engineers help workforces to tackle issues of productivity and quality on the shop floor through the application of "lean" and other best practice techniques.

Benefit Fraud Inspectorate

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. James Plaskitt): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate (BFI) has today announced its phase 16 programme of work.

The authorities that will be inspected are: Caradon district council, Dumfries and Galloway council, Herefordshire council, North Lanarkshire council, Renfrewshire council and Southampton city council.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture and Fisheries Council

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mr. Ben Bradshaw): My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs represented the United Kingdom at the Agriculture and Fisheries Council meeting in Brussels on 25 April 2006.

The Council adopted a proposal to broaden the scope of the current provision for exceptional measures in the poultry meat and eggs sectors to help them through a drop in sales caused by consumer fears about avian influenza. I supported the proposals but stressed that the measures should be limited in time and in budget. The Commission tabled a declaration saying that measures already adopted by member states would be considered for co-financing on a case-by-case basis, and that serious market disturbance would be defined at EU, not member state level.

The Council held an exchange of views on a Commission Communication on improving the economic situation in the fishing industry which proposed a range of short and long term measures. I led calls from several member states that measures should deliver a profitable industry which can pay for its own investments and which was characterised by fleet capacity to match available resources.

The Council also held an exchange of views on the Commission's action plan for simplifying the Common Fisheries Policy. The action plan focuses on efforts including process changes to improve the quality of the annual quota decision.

The Council held a policy debate on Commission proposals for a management plan for plaice and sole in the North sea, on the basis of a questionnaire drawn up by the presidency. The proposal aims to manage the fisheries exploiting the stocks of North sea plaice and sole so that they are rebuilt to—and then maintained—within safe biological limits. UK Government views have been submitted to the Commission in writing.

Under any other business, in the absence the Commissioner for Health and Consumer Protection the Council took note of a written update on avian influenza H5N1 in the European Union and third countries.

The Agriculture Commissioner updated the Council on progress in the WTO agricultural negotiations. She said that the 30 April deadline agreed in Hong Kong for modalities would not be met but stressed that the EU offer from last October still remained on the table.

Rural Payments Agency

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mr. David Miliband): On 19 April, Official Report column 13WS my right hon. Friend the Member for Derby, South (Margaret Beckett) reported on progress in making full payments under the 2005 Single Payment Scheme (SPS) in England and announced that partial payments under the scheme would start as soon as operationally possible.

By close on 4 May, over 58,000 claimants, representing 48.5 per cent. of the customer population, had been paid a total of £552 million in full payments. A test run of partial payments to 1,000 claimants was undertaken, successfully, at the end of last week. The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) then moved immediately to process the remaining partial payments. As a result, RPA has now made transfers to the BAGS system, and drawn up payable orders, for £730 million in partial payments. This means the money should reach farmers over the coming week. In total, 85 per cent. of the £1,500 million worth of expected payments for the 2005 SPS scheme year will have been distributed.

The task now is to ensure that the residual element of payments are made as soon as possible to those who have received a partial payment, and that a plan is in place to deal with those who to date have not yet received either a full or a partial payment under the 2005 scheme. 31,000 claimants were not included in the partial payments system, 26,000 because their claim amounted to less than €1,000 and 5,000 because of a diverse range of other factors which made their cases particularly complex. Making full payments to this group of 5,000 will now be given the highest priority by the Rural Payments Agency. Increased priority will also be given to making outstanding payments under the Hill Farm Allowance (HFA) scheme in recognition of the importance of HFA payments to those concerned. I will make a further statement in due course on the 26,000 small claimants and those with HFA claims.

I am acutely conscious of the difficulties endured so far, and the magnitude of the challenge that still lies ahead to complete delivery of the 2005 SPS scheme year. The fact that previous estimates of payment timetables were missed, and the problems this has caused for farmers up and down the country, are a matter of deep regret. I am determined that the right lessons are learned from our experience this year, first to prepare for the undoubted challenges that will exist in the delivery of the 2006 scheme, and second to move to a more stable position for the 2007 scheme year. This will require a concentrated and sustained effort from both RPA and DEFRA, and I hope that industry stakeholders will also continue to work closely with us to that end.

At a practical level, it is important for farmers to aim to submit their applications by the 15 May deadline wherever possible for the 2006 year. However, in recognition of the real problems this year with the distribution of application forms, my noble friend Lord Bach announced last week that late claim penalties will not be applied to claims received between 16 and 31 May.

In order to progress matters in this crucial next phase of SPS delivery I am pleased to announce that Tony Cooper will join the RPA on 15 May as interim chief executive in succession to Mark Addison. Mr. Addison accepted the post at short notice in March in order to address the immediate challenges facing the RPA and has, I know, made a real impression over the last couple of months. However, his was always intended to be a short term appointment and he will leave the RPA at the end of the month.

Mr. Cooper joins the RPA with 15 years experience of business and IT change within the public sector and a proven track record in successful programmes and business change. My permanent secretary recruited him on the basis that he has the skills and experiences needed by the Agency at this stage of their recovery programme. Arrangements for a permanent appointment to the RPA chief executive post will be put in hand at the end of the year once the fundamental review referred to in the written statement made by my right hon. Friend the Member for Derby, South on 16 March, Official Report, column 104WS has been completed.

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Vernon Coaker): I am pleased to announce that the annual report 2004-05 and accounts of the Security Industry Authority (SIA) will be laid before Parliament on 9 May 2006 and published on that day.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

DFID Departmental Report

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): I am today laying before Parliament the Department for International Development's departmental report 2006.

PRIME MINISTER

Reappointment of the House of Lords Appointments Commission

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): I am pleased to announce the reappointment of the House of Lords Appointments Commission until the end of the year, pending further discussions on House of Lords reform.

The Chairman is Lord Stevenson of Coddenham CBE, a Cross-Bench Peer in the House of Lords and the Chairman of HBOS plc.

The independent Members are: Mrs. Angela Sarkis CBE, Governor of the BBC and an independent management consultant; and Mrs. Felicity Huston, Commissioner for Public Appointments for Northern Ireland and a tax consultant.

In addition, there are also three party political Members who are each nominated by one of the three main political parties: the Labour Party Member is the right hon. the Baroness Dean of Thornton-le-Fylde; the Conservative Party Member is the right hon. the Lord Hurd of Westwell CH CBE; the Liberal Democrat Member is the Lord Dholakia OBE DL.

TRANSPORT

Helicopter Search and Rescue

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Dr. Stephen Ladyman): I am pleased to announce, together with the Minister for Defence Procurement (Lord Drayson), that the Department for Transport and the Ministry of Defence have agreed that the joint Search and Rescue Helicopter Project should go to its next stage. It will now go forward to a competition under the Private Finance Initiative. The service will still retain a high proportion of military aircrew alongside civilian aircrew trained to the same high standards.

We are committed to maintaining the effectiveness and high standards of the United Kingdom Search and Rescue Helicopter Service, currently provided by the Ministry of Defence and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, when the existing Ministry of Defence helicopters come to the end of their service life and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency service contract comes up for renewal, in the next decade.

The decision to proceed to this next stage provides an opportunity to bring together the current search and rescue helicopter providers into one harmonised service under a single contract providing the taxpayer with value for money. The service will continue to be managed jointly by the Ministry of Defence and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency.

Regimental Headquarters Review

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): In my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence's written statement of 24 November, Official Report, column 130-133WS he informed the House of work which, as part of the future infantry structure (FIS), would examine the supporting infrastructure of infantry regimental headquarters (RHQs) to ensure that they can effectively support the infantry in the future. This work has now concluded and the new arrangements are set out in the tables below.

The assistant chief of the general staff has concluded a review of RHQs and I have endorsed the finding that a single RHQ will be established for each infantry regiment, supported as necessary by a network of outstations to maintain the traditional regimental footprint. This format closely mirrors that already adopted by a number of existing multi-battalion regiments, such as the Royal Regiment of Fusiliers and the Royal Anglian Regiment. In line with the overall reduction in regiments post-FIS implementation, in the region of 15 RHQs of antecedent regiments will reorganise to become outstations or home headquarters of the new regiments created in FIS. One antecedent RHQ and four outstations will close between now and 2011. One new RHQ, for the Royal Regiment of Scotland, will be created. The colonel commandants of regiments have endorsed the principles for restructuring, the details of which have been subject to wide-ranging consultation. The resultant organisation is considered to be the most efficient method of delivering the functions of our RHQs in order to support the future infantry structure. They will continue to give maximum support to our soldiers while making the most effective use of taxpayers' money.

The RHQs will also continue to fulfil their remit of supporting former members of the infantry, and it is also important not to lose sight of the role they play in preserving the illustrious history and traditions of their antecedent regiments. No regimental museums will close as a result of this review.

Subject to trade union consultation, the new RHQ structure will lead in time to a small reduction in the overall number of staff required and it is hoped that this can be achieved through natural wastage and relocation, although a very small number of redundancies may be necessary.

Northern Ireland (Future Garrison Structure)

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): On 30 January this year, the then Secretary of State for Defence announced to the House that 19 Brigade, currently stationed at Catterick, would be re-roling to a light brigade and relocating to Scotland and Northern Ireland. I announced on 28 March the structured plan for the phased reduction of troops in Northern Ireland to peacetime levels, assuming the continued maintenance of an enabling environment. We have since been considering the future requirement for defence estate and for civilian support staff in Northern Ireland for the new peacetime garrison which will reflect the Government's global defence commitments.

The updated "Security Annex to the Joint Declaration", published by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on 1 August last year, envisaged a peacetime garrison of no more than 5,000 service personnel in no more than 14 core sites. Now that the composition of the peacetime garrison has been defined, we have concluded that we can meet its needs in the most effective and efficient manner by retaining the following locations once normalisation is complete: Aldergrove, Antrim, Ballykinler, Ballykinler Training Camp, Coleraine (subject to a review of adventurous training provision), Divis Key Point (on Divis Mountain), Duke of Connaught Unit, Holywood, Kinnegar, Lisburn and Magilligan.

We intend to close: Shackleton Barracks, Ballykelly in April 2008 when the current infantry battalion, 2nd Battalion, the Princess of Wales Royal Regiment, is scheduled to move; St Lucia Barracks, Omagh by 31 July 2007, when the Royal Irish Regiment (Home Service) battalions disband; and St Patrick's Barracks, Ballymena by no later than 31 March 2008, when the last Royal Irish (Home Service) soldiers will have transferred or been discharged. In considering which locations should be retained, I have been concerned to ensure that we fully meet the needs of the future long-term garrison based in Northern Ireland, that we can continue to provide the residual level of support needed by the Police Service of Northern Ireland for as long as it is required and that we structure the garrison as efficiently as possible so as to achieve value for money for the defence budget.

As a result of the security normalisation programme, we have also been considering the future requirement for Ministry of Defence civilian support staff in Northern Ireland as the garrison reduces from some 10,000 service personnel in August 2005 to its planned peacetime level of no more than 5,000. We assess that from a current strength of some 3,400 civilian staff today, there is likely to be a reduction of some 1,500 as all the normalisation changes take effect, but this will be partially offset by the creation of some 340 new civilian posts. We will seek to manage this change as sensitively as possible and in close collaboration with the trade unions, with whom we are starting formal consultation today on our future requirement. We will, of course, seek to avoid the need for compulsory redundancy as far as possible through transfer and voluntary early release or retirement, and through the pre-redundancy measures which have been in force since August last year. The Department fully recognises the magnificent support given to the military over the past 37 years by its civilian staff. It is committed to engaging and supporting them at every stage of this period of change and is in correspondence with the trade unions on a possible additional package of support measures tailored to the particular circumstances of this programme.

In addition to the HQ and other units of 19 Light Brigade that we expect to relocate to Northern Ireland in 2007 and 2008, a new and non-deployable regional brigade headquarters will form at Thiepval Barracks, Lisburn. The current HQ 107 Ulster Brigade, based at Ballymena, will merge on 15 December this year into HQ 39 Infantry Brigade, which will itself be replaced by the new regional brigade headquarters on 1 August 2007.

The security normalisation programme is based on the continuing maintenance of an enabling security environment in Northern Ireland. Service personnel in the new peacetime garrison will be available for worldwide operations, but the armed forces are committed to continue to provide the support that the Police Service of Northern Ireland needs for as long as this remains necessary.

HEALTH

Community Pharmacies

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Andy Burnham): The Health and Social Care Act 2001 introduced powers to enable NHS primary care trusts to assure patient and public safety by requiring primary care health professionals to be included on a list maintained by the primary care trust. These provisions also enable trusts to take appropriate action where necessary to protect the public because of a health professional's poor or inadequate performance.

We have consulted professional and representative bodies on introducing these proposals for individual community pharmacists. Consultation on a draft regulatory impact assessment, available on the Department's website, took place last autumn.

Since then, we launched in March a major consultation on reforming the regulation of the pharmacy profession as a whole and to strengthen the Royal Pharmaceutical Society's role in protecting patients and promoting high standards of clinical practice. This ends on 19 June.

We shall also be considering the future requirements for the adequate regulation of health professionals as a whole and have received Andrew Foster's report on non-medical regulation.

In view of these developments, we have decided to defer the introduction of NHS supplementary list provisions for community pharmacists, pending the outcome of the current consultation and consideration of future requirements for professional regulation as a whole. I will make a further announcement when we have completed this work.

Patient Pathway

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Andy Burnham): The NHS improvement plan gave a commitment that by December 2008 no one will have to wait longer than 18 weeks from referral to hospital treatment.

The 18 week pathway is one of the most important reforms in the history of the NHS. It will significantly improve the patient experience, with most patients being treated even more quickly than 18 weeks. For the first time, the way we measure waiting times for all patients is changing and the entire patient journey will be measured. This will include waiting times for diagnostic tests and out-patient appointments beyond the first consultation, which are currently not measured. The 18 week pathway will therefore more accurately reflect the patient experience.

A listening exercise on the proposed principles and definitions that will underpin the 18 week pathway commitment was held last autumn. We received over 180 responses from the NHS and other interested organisations. I am grateful to all who have responded during this exercise.

Analysis of the responses has helped form the basis of the principles and definitions. These principles will help ensure that the 18 week pathway commitment is fair, achievable and affordable.

Today, we announce publication of "Tackling Hospital Waiting: The 18 Week Patient Pathway. An implementation framework", setting out plans for achieving the 18 week pathway and including the principles and definitions.

The implementation framework explains the nature of the 18 week pathway challenge, sets out a high-level implementation plan and timetable to achieve it, clarifying the contributions of all those involved.

We are committed to delivering a maximum 18 week pathway which will transform the NHS, putting it at the forefront of international best practice.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Justice and Home Affairs Council

The Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality (Mr. Tony McNulty): The Justice and Home Affairs Council was held on 27-28 April 2006 in Luxembourg.

Unfortunately my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary was unable to attend. In his absence, my noble and learned friend, the Attorney-General, Lord Goldsmith, and my noble Friend Baroness Ashton attended the meeting. I thought it would be useful if I were to outline what was discussed and decided at the Council meeting and the next steps in light of this.

The Council decided to increase Schengen visa fees from 2007, to meet the projected costs of issuing more secure, biometric visas in the future. Although the UK has not participated in this Schengen measure, the Government actively support co-operation at EU level to enhance the security and integrity of visas and travel documents.

Commissioner Frattini gave the Council a brief update on the approach to be taken in a forthcoming Commission communication concerning the development of common visa application centres. The concept is being explored with a view to developing, in the future, shared visa application facilities for member states in third countries, including the collection of biometric information. The communication should be formally presented to the June JHA Council.

The presidency's efforts to move the SIS II—the second generation Schengen information system— legal instruments dossier forward were welcomed by all member states. The three outstanding issues to be resolved were biometrics; harmonisation of the conditions for entering alerts; and the data protection oversight arrangements. The UK was largely supportive of the presidency's ambitions but needed to consider the proposed arrangements further at national level. Other member states were in a similar position so a new text of the document will be circulated and this work will be taken forward by the working group.

The proposal for a Council decision on the improvement of police co-operation, especially at the internal borders, was discussed. It became apparent that the decision as it currently stands was unlikely to reach agreement as there were too many outstanding issues to be resolved. However, no member state wanted to suspend negotiations entirely. The Austrian presidency will now discuss with the Finnish presidency how to proceed with and revise the text.

The presidency updated the Council on the progress of discussions to date on the data protection framework decision. The three key issues so far related to: transmission of information to third countries; whether both police and judicial co-operation should be included in the scope of the instrument; and whether the instrument should be confined to cross-border transmission of information and further processing of that data, or whether it should also encompass data gathered and used in a purely domestic context. These would be discussed further at working group level and the presidency hoped to bring the key remaining political questions to the June JHA Council.

In the main Council format, there were presentations and discussions on the issue of human trafficking. The need for member states to share more information with Europol was highlighted. There was also a presentation on the implementation of the EU external relations strategy. The presidency informed the Council it would bring forward an action-orientated paper on Afghan drugs to the June Council. It also outlined the plan for the security conference which was held in Vienna on 4-5 May. The Commission also reported on the progress of the Hampton Court conference and the December Council. With a stronger emphasis on engaging with Africa and the Mediterranean region, positive results had been achieved. However, it was concluded that the Commission and member states need to do more to tackle the problems of illegal immigration.

The Commission stated that there was already a high level of consensus in the Council on the countries to be included in the list of safe countries for the purposes of the asylum procedures directive. An agreement for the procedure for adding and removing third countries was also needed. The Commission urged member states to press ahead with its implementation.

Peter Sutherland, the United Nations Secretary-General's special representative, made a presentation to the Council on the UN high-level dialogue on "International Migration and Development". The UN will publish a paper in June setting out the proposals to take this debate forward in New York in September. He stressed the need for the EU to play an active role and take the initiative in this area.

Political agreement was reached on the articles of the draft regulation on the law applicable to non-contractual obligations ("Rome II"). The presidency tabled a final compromise package which was agreed by qualified majority. The UK along with other member states raised a number of outstanding concerns, including on limitation of the scope of the instrument; simplification of the special rule on product liability; and the operation of the general rule in article 3 in relation to stock exchange transactions. On the latter, the UK expressed concerns, but there was no support from any other member state. After in-depth discussion the compromise was agreed.

The presidency provided an update to the Council of other community draft instruments containing provisions related to judicial co-operation in civil matters, in particular the draft "Directive on Services", the draft "Consumer Credit Directive" and the Green Paper on "Damages Actions for Breach of the EC Antitrust Rules". As was agreed at the January JHA informal, the presidency would provide regular updates in this area.

The Office of Publications made a presentation to the Council on N-Lex, a new electronic database containing the national legislation of member states, and Eur-Lex, the database that gives access to EU legal instruments. N-Lex was formally declared open.

The Council discussed two of the issues discussed on the Framework Decision for the European evidence warrant. The UK maintained its position that if there were to be definitions of those offences to which the principle of some dual criminality would not apply, then they should be included in a non-binding Council statement, following the model of the European arrest warrant. The Commission outlined the case for applying the EEW to requests for retained telecommunications data. Most member states, however, thought it would be more appropriate to leave this until the second part of this initiative decision due in 2007. The presidency has referred both matters back to expert level, where other outstanding issues remain under discussion. This framework decision is likely to be on the June JHA Council agenda.

A general approach was reached on the framework decision on the fight against organised crime, subject to parliamentary scrutiny reserves, including a UK parliamentary scrutiny reserve. National Parliaments will therefore still have the opportunity to complete their scrutiny processes, although in this case the Government take the view that this measure, as now drafted, meets the concerns expressed by the UK parliamentary Scrutiny Committees. In particular, as stated in the most recent letters from the former Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Wythenshawe and Sale, East (Paul Goggins), the current draft of the framework decision, includes language to allow member states to comply with the requirements to criminalise by way of their national laws of conspiracy.

The presidency noted that an ad hoc group had been created to explore alternative approaches to the proposed framework decision on procedural rights. There was a general acknowledgement that all options should be investigated including the option of a non-binding political resolution and a package of practical measures to improve co-operation in the areas proposed to be covered by the framework decision. The UK stressed the need for a broad approach, not merely focusing on a framework decision.

The Council debated the issue of whether the transfer of prisoners should be subject to a dual criminality requirement and agreed that a solution might be found using a presidency compromise proposal which would require the abolition of dual criminality for listed offences, but would provide an opt-out for those who wished to maintain dual criminality. This was supported by the UK. It was acknowledged by all that the key to solution would be the scope of the proposed opt-out. The working group will continue work on that basis.

The Council reached a general approach on the substance of the EU agreement with Norway and Iceland on surrender procedures. The text for this measure has not as yet been deposited for scrutiny by this House because it is a classified document. Work will now focus on the accompanying annexe which will be the form used to request surrender/extradition. The UK is satisfied with this and intends to operate a system as close to the european arrest warrant as possible.

Anthony Rice

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (John Reid): I should like to make a statement about the management of dangerous offenders in the light of the murder of Naomi Bryant by Anthony Rice, a prisoner serving a discretionary life sentence who was on life licence at the time he committed the murder. I have today placed in the Library of the House a copy of a report produced by Her Majesty's chief inspector of probation of the circumstances surrounding this case and, in particular, of the management of Rice throughout his previous sentence.

I would first offer my heartfelt condolences to the family and friends of Naomi Bryant. I deeply regret that she should have been murdered in these circumstances. While nothing can compensate for her loss, we have a duty to ensure that lessons are learned and that the chances of another family having to suffer such loss again are as low as we can make them.

I am grateful to the chief inspector of probation for his report, which is a thorough and serious piece of work which merits careful consideration. It makes a number of criticisms about failures in the criminal justice system at various stages in the management of Anthony Rice. While individual members of staff did their best to discharge the very onerous responsibilities involved in managing dangerous offenders, there was, he finds, a series of errors and misjudgments that contributed to a case that was not managed to the standard the public have a right to expect. The chief inspector concludes that "on balance Anthony Rice should not have been released on life licence in the first place, and once he had been released he could and should have been better managed".

The chief inspector makes four principal findings and accompanies each with a key recommendation. These are supported by further practice recommendations. Given that he finds shortcomings at various stages of the management of Rice, the chief inspector makes a final recommendation that "there should be a major appraisal of current policy and practice for releasing prisoners from indeterminate sentences".

I take this report extremely seriously. The Government's first duty is to protect the citizens of this country, and I am determined that we should make our systems and procedures as effective and efficient as possible in order to do this. My right hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, South (Mr. Charles Clarke) announced to the House on 20 April a series of measures the Government would be taking in response to the report by the chief inspector of probation on the Monckton case. That work will be broadened out to include the recommendations in this report.

I can assure the House that I will move quickly to improve our processes and systems, including through legislation if necessary. We will consider the chief inspector's report extremely carefully and expeditiously. We need to move fast but, equally, these are weighty recommendations and we need to give them full consideration. I do not therefore propose to announce new measures today. I shall, however, return to this House as soon as I am able to do so.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Darfur Peace Agreement

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): I am also making this statement on behalf of the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

The UK Government warmly welcome the signature on 5 May of the Darfur peace agreement (DPA) by the Government of Sudan and the largest faction of the main rebel group—the Sudan Liberation Movement/ Army (SLM/A).

We congratulate the signatories to the agreement for having had the courage to take this important step towards peace. We strongly urge the other two rebel movements to demonstrate the same spirit and to sign the agreement without further delay. We also commend the tireless efforts of the African Union (AU) mediation, led by the AU's special envoy Dr. Salim Ahmed Salim.

Signature of the DPA follows almost two years of negotiations in Abuja, during which the UK maintained a permanent observer presence. My right hon. Friend the Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw), the former Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Office Affairs, visited the talks in February this year, and I spent four days at the talks during the final push to secure an agreement.

This is an historic agreement. It will give the people of Darfur the opportunity to vote on regional government in a referendum. It guarantees representation for the rebels and for Darfur in general in government in both Khartoum and Darfur, as well as in key institutions such as the judiciary and civil service. It also grants Darfur a share of the national wealth, including a special fund to rebuild and develop the region. Most importantly for the millions of internally displaced persons in camps, the DPA includes enhanced ceasefire and final security arrangements aimed at restoring peace and security to the region, as well as integration of the movements' forces into Sudan's armed forces and security forces.

The challenge now is to turn the agreement into peace on the ground. We urge the parties urgently to implement the agreement, including, as a first step, by the rapid appointment of the relevant positions within Government and forming the necessary commissions. They should work to communicate the benefits of the deal to the people of Darfur and begin preparations for the Darfur-Darfur dialogue to bring the non-Abuja stakeholders on board. The Government of Sudan should also now accept the proposed handover to a UN mission and facilitate access to Darfur for the technical assessment mission to prepare for transition.

The international community also has an important role to play. We must continue to support the AU as it takes on its new responsibilities in Darfur, ahead of the proposed handover to a UN mission; and we should continue to apply pressure on and support to the parties to ensure implementation stays on track. The international community also has an active role to play in the Joint Assessment Mission to assess Darfur's reconstruction needs. This needs to be concluded rapidly, ahead of a pledging conference where donors will be called upon to make significant contributions towards meeting these needs.

The UK stands ready to play a full part in supporting implementation. On 6 May, I announced an additional £9 million to the UN's Common Humanitarian Fund, on top of the £40 million already allocated, to help address urgent humanitarian needs in Darfur and elsewhere in Sudan. The Foreign Secretary attended a Ministerial Security Council meeting on 9 May. This agreed on the need for a continued focus on implementation of the DPA and improving security in Darfur.

Darfur now stands at a critical juncture. Its people have suffered for far too long and it is now for their leaders, with of course the support of the UK and the whole international community, to give them the chance to rebuild their lives. The DPA provides the best opportunity to achieve this and we urge all those involved to seize it.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Forest Service Agency

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (David Cairns): This statement sets out the key performance targets for Forest Service.

Forest Service is an executive agency of the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development for Northern Ireland. It is responsible for promoting the interests of forestry in Northern Ireland, the development of afforestation, the production and supply of timber and the maintenance of adequate reserves of growing trees. This includes the delivery of social, recreational and environmental benefits for the public at large. In March this year, a strategy for the delivery of forestry policy in Northern Ireland was published and I have set the agency the following targets for the 2006-07 business year to give effect to this:

To establish 500 hectares of new plantations;

To sell 400,000m^3 of timber to the wood processing sector;

To retain certification under the UK Woodland Assurance Standard;

To attract at least 400,000 paying visitors to forests; and

To deliver efficiency savings of £1.27 million.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

General Affairs and External Relations Council

The Minister for Europe (Mr. Geoffrey Hoon): The General Affairs and External Relations Council (GAERC) will be held on 15 May in Brussels. Defence Ministers are attending for separate discussions as well as a joint session. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I will represent the UK in discussions with Foreign Ministers with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence doing so for Defence Ministers' discussions.

The agenda items are as follows:

General Affairs

Preparation of the European Council: Draft annotated agenda

The Council is expected to agree the annotated agenda for the June European Council. This is likely to feature the Future of Europe, economic reform and the Hampton Court agenda. Enlargement will also be a key theme.

External Relations

Western Balkans

We expect the Council to adopt conclusions covering transition arrangements for the Office of the High Representative and the failure of constitutional reform in Bosnia and Herzegovina. We also anticipate conclusions calling for a free, fair and legal referendum in Montenegro and regretting the failure of Serbia to deliver Ratko Mladic to the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia within Commissioner Rehn's deadline.

Discussion at the Council is likely to focus on the latter issue and we will want to reiterate the UK's full support for Commissioner Rehn's decision to disrupt the Stabilisation and Association Agreement negotiations in light of Serbia's non-compliance.

EU-Russia: Summit preparation

The Council is likely to agree the Summit information note. This sets out the EU-Russia relationship based on shared values: promotion of democracy, respect for human rights and the resolution of conflicts.

Iraq

Council discussions will focus on recent political developments. conclusions are expected, although their precise nature will depend on whether a Government are formed in advance of the Council. If a Government are formed by the 15 May, we would expect the Council to welcome this.

Iran

The Council will discuss Iran over lunch. Conclusions are expected. Discussions are likely to focus on the nuclear file and next steps, in the light of the International Atomic Energy Agency Director General's 28 April report and subsequent discussions in New York.

Middle East Peace Process

The Council will discuss the Middle East Peace Process over lunch.

External Relations Commissioner Ferrero-Waldner is likely to present proposals on Commission assistance for the Palestinians. These include increased EU aid and plans for an international mechanism to channel donor funding for basic services such as salaries for workers in key sectors such as health. The UK hopes that the Commission will deliver the mechanism as quickly as possible and that Foreign Ministers will endorse it at the Council. Council conclusions will be adopted.

Africa

The Council will discuss follow-up to the recent breakthrough in the Abuja peace talks. The EU needs to give support to, and put pressure on, the parties to implement the Darfur Peace Agreement as soon as possible, including through disseminating the benefits of the deal to those on the ground in Darfur.

EU Partners should now increase the pressure on the Government of Sudan to accept transition to a UN mission, and continue to provide assistance to the African Union Mission in Sudan. Co-ordination between international actors is essential if we are to avoid duplication and maximise the benefits of international assistance. The Council is expected to agree conclusions.

The Council is also expected to adopt conclusions on the Democratic Republic of Congo, Cote d' Ivoire and Uganda.

The Presidency will brief the Council on the EU-Africa Troika.

Nepal

Nepal is on the agenda in response to recent events in which King Gyanendra, who dismissed the multi-party government of Prime Minister Deuba a year ago, restored Parliament following weeks of violent street protests. Discussion at the Council will be a useful opportunity for the UK to discuss with EU partners how we now take advantage of the opportunity of a new government to bring about a full restoration of democracy and pursue a peace process.

Defence Ministers

European Defence Agency

Ministers will discuss prospects for establishing administrative arrangements between Turkey and the European Defence Agency (EDA).

The EDA Steering Board also meets in Defence Ministers' formation on May 15 and is expected to agree a code of best practice for defence procurement. Ministers will also discuss how to establish a research and technology fund to be managed by the EDA, and increased targets for member states research and technology spending.

Capabilities

The Chair of the EU Military Committee (General Rolando Moscha-Moschini) will report to the Council on three areas of work on military capabilities: progress on the Force Catalogue; strategic lift and battle groups. The Force Catalogue is part of the Headline Goal 2010 initiative and will provide a scrutinised (evaluated for military effectiveness) listing of the capabilities which member states would draw upon in contributing to European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP) operations.

The Council is also expected to adopt the Single Progress Report, which outlines progress made in further developing ESDP military capabilities over the past 6 months.

Other capabilities issues that may be discussed are the ESDP Maritime Dimension and the Rapid Reaction Air Initiative.

Operation EUFOR Congo

In response to a request from the UN, the EU has decided to plan for the deployment of a military force, in support of the ongoing UN peacekeeping force (MONUC), during the forthcoming elections in the Democratic Republic of Congo. The force will consist of an advance element of approximately 500 troops deployed in Kinshasa with reserves of 1000 held 'over-the-horizon'.

The Operation Commander (designate) will update the Council on progress on the Operation Plan and the rules of engagement authorisation message.

The force generation process is underway with the second force generation conference planned for 10 May. The UK contribution to the force will be limited by our ongoing commitments elsewhere. The UK has already provided one officer to augment the EU Operations HQ in Potsdam, Germany and will deploy another officer to the French-led Force HQ which will be based in Kinshasa.

The Justice and Home Affairs Council approved the Joint Action establishing this operation on 27 April.

Joint session - Foreign Ministers and Defence Ministers

Emergency and crisis response

High Representative Solana is expected to brief the Council on work underway to improve the EU ability to provide a coherent response to crises. He will highlight agreement reached on how member states will, if necessary, deploy military assets in support of civilian led disaster response operations.

High Representative Solana is then expected to invite Michel Barnier, Special Adviser on the EU's response to crises, to present his non-paper on how to improve the EU's disaster response capability.

Civil Military Co-ordination

Council conclusions on Civil Military Co-ordination (CMCO) highlight the work undertaken by the Austrian Presidency (as part of a UK/Austria/Finland tri-Presidency agreement and building on work started in our Presidency) to ensure effective co-ordination of EU crisis management instruments.

The conclusions welcome the Presidency's framework paper of possible solutions for the management of second pillar EU Crisis Management Operations which makes a number of concrete suggestions for improving CMCO and calls for recommendations for further work by July 2006.

Security Sector Reform in the Western Balkans

We expect the Council to adopt conclusions on EU support for Security Sector Reform (SSR) in the Western Balkans. The conclusions set out seven principles for EU support: ownership of reform should lie with the responsible authorities of the region; EU support should take a broad based approach which contributes to stability and security while at the same time being tailored for country specific requirements; EU support, including through crisis management operations, should contribute to fighting organised crime in individual countries and throughout the region; EU support should be well co-ordinated both within the EU, through cross pillar co-ordination, and with other member states activities; the need for effective sharing of information between all EU and other international actors; the need for democratic accountability and parliamentary control of SSR within each country; a stock-take and lessons-learned process to monitor progress.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Informal Meeting of Education Ministers 17 March 2006

The Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning (Bill Rammell): The Scottish Executive Deputy Minister for Enterprise and Lifelong Learning, (Mr. Allan Wilson), and Steven Effingham, Divisional Manager of the European Union Division of the DWP/DfES Joint International Unit represented the UK during the informal meeting of EU Education Ministers in Vienna.

Ministers discussed the European Commission's recent consultation on the European Qualifications Framework. They broadly welcomed the Commission's outline of the EQF, with many seeing the wide consultation process as the correct way to ensure that the proposal is developed in a bottom-up way with the support of all relevant stakeholders.

Ministers agreed that the EQF should provide a lightweight and flexible mechanism for supporting comparability—not automatic recognition—of qualifications in different member states. They supported the idea of establishing a European framework of eight qualification levels to which national authorities could relate their qualifications.

Ministers also supported the idea that the EQF levels would be accompanied by descriptors of skills and competences that learners should have acquired. They were concerned, however, that these descriptors should not be too detailed, with many calling for a simplification and refinement of the Commission's draft descriptors.

The UK believed that the EQF could make a real contribution to the Lisbon process, particularly if developed in consultation with stakeholders, and if the needs of citizens were kept at the forefront. UK noted the link to sectoral qualifications, and the potential for sectoral skills frameworks also to be aligned to the EQF.

Most countries flagged up the need for the EQF to be complementary to the qualifications framework being developed for the European higher education area under the Bologna process.

There was general agreement that the EQF should undergo an extended phase of piloting and testing before being fully rolled out. The Commission agreed to present a paper summarising the main areas of agreement between member states as a basis for moving forwards. The Commission would then set up a technical working group with representatives of all member states in order to work up the specifications of the EQF (in particular the levels descriptors). The Commission intends to come forward with a formal proposal for the EQF in the autumn of 2006.

On the European Institute of Technology, Ministers all agreed with the Commission's analysis concerning the so-called "knowledge triangle" of education-research-innovation, and Europe's poor performance in connecting these elements and exploiting the economic value of research outcomes. Most delegations welcomed the Commission's communication on the European Institute of Technology as a contribution to this debate. Most had questions concerning, inter alia.

The legal status of the BIT under the Treaties;

degree awarding powers given that this is a national competence;

funding issues, including potential overlap with the European Research Council and the Framework Programme for research; intellectual property rights;

the relationship between the governing board and the knowledge communities;

secondment of resources to the BIT (benefits it for the sending institution?).

Some countries signalled strong scepticism. The UK, while enthusiastic about the Commission's efforts to take forward the Hampton Court agenda, stressed the need for more work with stakeholders, especially the universities and business sectors. Setting up a new institution may not be the best way forward. "The" UK stressed the need to build on existing partnerships, and suggested setting up an expert group to look at this issue, and to produce recommendations on issues such as funding, greater institutional autonomy and closer collaboration with business.

The Commission concluded the discussion by assuring Ministers that stakeholders would be consulted before the Commission came forward with a proposal. The Commission confirmed that the legal basis would cover education, research and competitiveness. Postgraduate degrees would in fact be awarded by the participating institutions (possibly jointly between member states), rather than by the BIT itself. Secondment of resources would not mean amputation—there would have to be clear added value for the "home" institution. It was too early to have a debate about location or financing, but there should be no conflict with the European Research Council (which was a financing mechanism rather than a legal entity as the EIT would be).

The EU financial contribution would be discussed at the next revision of the financial perspectives in 2008; however, the EIT would have to rely heavily on private funding.

The Austrian presidency placed particular emphasis on discussions with the Western Balkans and widening the European area of education.

Ministers stressed the importance of the Lisbon agenda for the Western Balkans noting that their participation in programmes such as the Lifelong Learning Programme, Tempus and Erasmus Mundus, would support essential educational reforms in those countries. The European Training Foundation had an important role in facilitating cooperation between the Western Balkans and the EU in the field of education and training.

The UK supported EU enlargement and welcomed bilateral cooperation with Western Balkan countries on education issues. Qualification frameworks in the UK devolved nations, for example the Scottish Credit and Qualifications Framework, were a particular issue of interest where we might share good practice.

The Western Balkan Ministers expressed a strong interest in participating in the work on the European Qualifications Framework as a means of supporting reforms and the development of lifelong learning strategies. The Western Balkan Ministers also shared the EU's priorities for higher education reform, and were actively implementing the Bologna process in their countries. The Ministers stressed the need for continued dialogue between the EU and the Western Balkans on European education policy matters and adopted a declaration setting out the key messages of their discussions

Informal Meeting of Youth Ministers
29-31 March 2006

The Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning (Bill Rammell): Simon Foster, European Union Division, DWP/DfES Joint International Unit and Suzanne Chisholm, Youth Policy Officer, Welsh Assembly Government represented the UK during the informal meeting of EU Youth Ministers in Bad Ischl.

The ministerial meeting ran alongside a youth event which started in Vienna on 27 March with the young people moving to Bad Ischl on 29 March to join the ministerial delegations for joint seminars and social events. The UK sent a delegation of young people representing the different nations.

It was acknowledged that a start has been made on implementing the objectives of the European Youth Pact, primarily under the employment guidelines and the European strategy for social inclusion, ensuring that the concerns of young people were incorporated into other policy areas. However, the European Council emphasized in its spring meeting 2006 that further progress is needed regarding the implementation of the European Pact for Youth. The emphasis of this conference was on what concrete action could be taken to make sure that vision became reality.

In the morning session, European Youth Ministers discussed issues of information, participation in democratic life and active participation of youth at local, national and European levels. There was an exchange of views on strategies for an improved implementation of youth policy objectives under the White Paper "A New Impetus for European Youth", under the European Youth Pact, and within the open method of coordination.

The Youth Ministers agreed that young people's voices must be heard at all levels with all stakeholders involved. There was considerable discussion on how to reach those young people who are currently disengaged from the political sphere or not part of a formal organisation. The UK gave examples of good practice at local level using local initiatives and at national level through the diverse representation on the Children and Youth Board set up to advise the Minister for Children, Young People and Families and officials in the Department on policy development.

The European Youth Pact emphasises that young people and youth organisations must be involved in European and national policy design in such key areas as employment, education, social inclusion and reconciliation of work and life. Active participation requires proper access to quality information at all levels. The European Youth Portal and the national youth portals were seen as well-suited for the provision of youth-related information by many delegations.

Joint working groups, with reports jointly presented by one minister and one young person, were formed in the afternoon to discuss the topics of:

Youth and jobs;

value and significance of informal and non-formal learning;

the future of youth in Europe to the final plenary session.

The participating youth representatives adopted a special Youth Declaration that was welcomed by the Ministers.

To continue the participatory dialogue at EU level, the presidency has submitted a proposal for creating an informal forum composed of the current EU presidency, the two subsequent presidencies, the European Commission and the European Youth Forum. This informal dialogue-based forum should meet regularly, in particular before the Education, Youth and Culture Council in autumn and in spring in Brussels to promote an exchange of views and ideas between young people and the presidency.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Deportation and Removal of Foreign Nationals

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (John Reid): I would like to provide an update on the issue of foreign national prisoners.

The House will understand that I can only provide the information available to me at this time. Very detailed consideration of the casefiles and other records by all agencies continues and further amendments may need to be made to the figures. Thus, it remains subject to change.

I am placing in the Library of the House a detailed note on the data that are now available in relation to the 1,023 prisoners released from prison without the consideration of deportation they should have received.

Progress continues to be made in the operation to deal with the released foreign prisoners. The operation is prioritising the serious cases first.

I have widened the definition of serious offences to include all cases where there has been any conviction for offences involving violence or a sexual element. This includes armed robbery. As the operation has progressed, detailed examination of the casefiles and other records has to date identified 179 offenders who had previously been convicted of a serious offence.

Of these 179 offenders, 35 have been convicted of the most serious offences, defined as murder, manslaughter, rape and child sex offences. Of the four who had committed murder, three are now within our control. Of the other 31 most serious cases which include rapists and child sex offenders, 23 are now within our control or deported. Some eight of these 35 had re-offended since release and had committed crimes that did not involve violence or a sexual element.

Some 55 of the 144 other serious offenders are now under our control or deported. Of these 144, nine are where a person has re-offended following release and committed a crime involving violence or a sexual element. A further 40 of the other serious offenders have also re-offended since release, ten of the offences involving violence or a sexual element.

All of the 1,023 have now been assessed and consideration of the case for deportation has started in 880 of the 1,023 cases, of which there was an initial decision to deport in 649 of these. Some 203 are now under either our control or have been deported or removed.

A number of hon. Members have asked for a detailed breakdown of cases by the prison from which they were released or by constituency. We intend to be able to provide this information in due course but we are currently prioritising the operational work on the consideration of the cases and, where deportations orders have been made, detentions. I hope hon. Members will understand.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Major Hazard Sites

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mrs. Anne McGuire): The Major Incident Investigation Board, set up by the Health and Safety Commission to supervise the investigation into the explosion and fire at Buncefield oil storage depot, published a progress report on 9 May. The investigation will include consideration of off-site and on-site risks, both of which will be taken into account by the board when making recommendations for future action.

Work has been under way, since before the Buncefield incident, to consider the implications of new information about major hazard sites which HSE has gathered in compliance with the Control of Major Accident Hazard Regulations (COMAH). The analysis of this information does not suggest that there is an increased likelihood of an accident occurring at any of these sites. It has, however, allowed HSE to understand the risks with more precision.

The Cabinet Office had been co-ordinating the process. Information and analysis from the Buncefield investigation will be taken account of in this work, which will be the subject of consultation with stakeholders as soon as clear conclusions emerge, which is expected to be later this year.

Benefit Fraud Inspectorate

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. James Plaskitt): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the BFI inspection reports on the following councils were published today: Brentwood borough council, Isle of Anglesey county council, Neath Port Talbot county borough council, Newport city council, North East Derbyshire district council, Rother district council, St. Edmundsbury borough council, London Borough of Tower Hamlets and Woking borough council. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The BFI reports detail a range of strengths and weaknesses in the housing benefit services provided by councils and make recommendations to improve the security and efficiency of benefit delivery.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is considering the reports and may ask the councils for proposals in response to BFIs findings.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Government Indemnity Scheme

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (Mr. David Lammy): The provision for the Government Indemnity Scheme is made by the National Heritage Act 1980. The scheme facilitates public access to loans of works of art and other objects for public display made to museums, galleries and other such institutions by private owners and non-national institutions. It does this by indemnifying lenders against loss or damage to objects they loan. Loans covered by the scheme must be for public benefit. The scheme also covers loans of such objects for study purposes within borrowing institutions where this would contribute materially to the public's understanding or appreciation of the object loaned. Examples of this are enhancing interpretation or explanation to the public of objects, or bringing into the public domain the conclusions of any study.

In the six-month period ended 31 March 2006, a total of 2403 undertakings were given to indemnify objects on loan to national and non-national institutions under section 16. The value of contingent liabilities in respect of undertakings given at any time under section 16 and which remained outstanding as at 31 March 2006 was:

Institution	Number of Indemnities	Loans In (Covered by Section 16 Indemnities)	Loans In (covered by the undertakings to Her Majesty)	Loans Out
English Nationals	1666	1,898,440,957	212,129,902	706,133,554
MLA Administered Indemnities (non-national)	215	1,191,008,384	40,078,500
Government Art Collection	20	3,157,000	25,000	1,394,300
Scottish Executive Education Department (non-national)	4	22,261,500
Scottish Executive Education Department (national)	361	682,337,000
The National Assembly for Wales (non-national)	1	32,000,000
The National Assembly for Wales (national)	136	5,646,254
Grand Total (Section 16 indemnities)	2403	3,837,851,095	252,233,402	707,527,854

The previous report for the six-month period ending 30 September 2005 omitted to include figures for the national museums of Scotland and Wales. These are shown below:

The value of contingent liabilities in respect of undertakings given at any time under section 16 and which remained outstanding as at 30 September 2005 for national museums of Scotland was £864,773,000 and £49,275,710 for national museums of Wales.

A total of 413 undertakings were given to indemnify objects on loan to national Scottish institutions and 223 undertakings for objects on loan to national Welsh institutions under section 16.

DEFENCE

Service Personnel's Health (Iraq)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Tom Watson): I would like to place on record my appreciation for the important work being done by Professor Simon Wessely and his colleagues at King's College, London, on the health of personnel who have served on Operation Telic. Today, two papers by his team have been published in The Lancet summarising the initial findings of a study which the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence, Dr. Lewis Moonie, announced on 7 May 2003, Official Report, column 34WS.

The first paper 'The Health of UK Military Personnel" who deployed to the 2003 Iraq war concludes that the vast majority of personnel who deployed have not so far experienced a statistically significant worse health outcome compared to those who did not deploy. However, the study has found that a small but measurable number of reservists (when compared either with regulars who did deploy or reservists who did not deploy) are showing some increased health effects as a result of deployment—particularly for common mental disorders (such as anxiety, depression and stress), post-traumatic stress disorder and fatigue. It remains the case, though, that the reported rates of indicators of common mental ill-health for both reservists and regulars are broadly of the same order as found in the general UK population.

Professor Wessely's second paper "Is there an Iraq War syndrome?" analyses the patterns of illness reported by UK service personnel following deployment on Operation Telic and compares them with those seen after the 1990-91 Gulf conflict. He concludes that there is no sign of a repeated pattern of the illnesses, often referred to as "Gulf War Syndrome", reported widely after the latter.

The MOD takes the health of service personnel, both regulars and reservists, very seriously indeed and clearly this study is an important piece of work which will help us perform our duty of care to our personnel and their families. Although funded by MOD the study is independent. I welcome the conclusions published today and I am sure too that they will be welcomed by the men and women who have been serving in Iraq. Clearly it is very reassuring to know that the overwhelming majority of service personnel are returning to the UK physically and mentally well after service on Operation Telic. MOD's implementation of health lessons learned during Operation Granby has undoubtedly contributed to this. It is obviously especially important that we act on the key finding from the study in respect of the mental health of reservists. This is an area that we have already been monitoring closely and looking at possible solutions. I am, therefore, pleased to announce today a package of support for these particular service people.

We already offer a comprehensive physical and mental healthcare service to mobilised reservists. I will introduce later this year an enhanced post-operational mental healthcare programme for recently-demobilised Reservists. The programme will offer a mental health assessment, conducted by appropriately qualified members of the Defence Medical Services (DMS). This will be available to any member of the reserve forces who has been demobilised since January 2003 following deployment on any operation overseas and who has a concern about their mental health as a result. If individuals are then assessed as having a mental health problem that is categorised primarily as post-traumatic stress disorder or a related traumatic adjustment disorder, and that is directly related to their operational deployment and of a nature that can be treated within the resources of the DMS, then they will be offered out-patient treatment by the DMS.

If the assessment identifies cases that fall outside the parameters set out above, such as complex multi-disorder diagnoses or acute cases requiring in-patient care, the DMS will refer them—with our assessment results—on to the appropriate NHS providers in order to assist their access to NHS treatment, as well as encouraging contact with the relevant welfare organisations to ensure follow-up.

I will make a further announcement in a few months to confirm the details of the service that will be provided, including the location(s) at which the assessments will be provided, and the date on which the service will commence.

This scheme will complement work we have in hand to improve the understanding of military mental health issues in general across the NHS, and ensure that the necessary services are available for veterans of whatever age suffering from mental illness. This work involves Health Departments, the NHS providers and the charitable sector, and I hope to announce details on the outcome of this work later this year when it is completed.

Given the current findings of Professor Wessely's work, and his view that it would be premature to conclude that there has been no health effect as a result of deployment to Iraq, my Department is considering carefully the recommendation that further follow-up research is required. I understand that Professor Wessely plans to publish further results in due course.

HEALTH

Human Tissue Authority

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Ms Rosie Winterton): Section 29 of the Human Tissue Act 2004 sets out the procedure for approval of certain codes of practice of the human tissue authority. The codes have today been laid before Parliament. The codes give advice and guidance to those carrying out activities covered by the legislation, and deal specifically with:

Consent;

anatomical examination;

the removal, storage and disposal of human organs and tissue;

post mortem examination;

donation of organs, tissue and cells for transplantation; and donation of allogeneic bone marrow and peripheral blood stem cells for transplantation.

Subject to parliamentary approval, the codes will take effect from 1 September when the Act is fully implemented.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Climate Change Adaptation in Africa Research and Development Programme

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for International Development (Mr. Gareth Thomas): I am today announcing an allocation of £24 million for the Climate Change Adaptation in Africa: Research and Development Programme. DFID is supporting this programme in partnership with the International Development Research Centre (IDRC), Canada. We anticipate that other donors will lend support as the programme becomes established.

The total budget, combining contributions from DFID and IDRC, will be up to £31.5 million. The programme will seek to identify ways in which communities, organisations and governments in poor countries across Africa can adapt to the impacts of climate change. Climate change will impact the poorest hardest and is likely to impair growth and poverty reduction efforts. The poor will have to cope with more droughts, more extreme temperatures and sudden and intense rainfall causing greater food and water insecurity, loss of income, higher death rates and more prevalent diseases.

The programme will:

(i) provide support to African-led research in this area;

(ii) help those vulnerable to climate change to learn from actual cases of climate adaptation;

(iii) help develop the capacity of African scientists and organisations to adapt to climate change; and,

(iv) establish a network of international scientists who will provide guidance, mentoring and supervisory inputs in response to requests from African researchers.

DFID is allocating a total of £24 million over five years to fund the new programme, starting in the financial year 2006-07. Funding for the first two financial years, £9 million, is part of the total £255 million DFID announced for all research in these two financial years.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Gas Supply Infrastructure

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Mr. Alistair Darling): I am making a statement today to the House on the interaction of existing Government policy and planning procedures with regard to the need for additional gas supply infrastructure.

This statement reiterates previous public commitments[1] made by this Government on the importance of gas supply infrastructure and will help clarify the Government policy context for planning and consent decisions on gas supply infrastructure projects.

The UK economy faces a major challenge; our indigenous gas supplies are in decline and we are moving towards increasing import dependence on gas. To manage this change, new gas supply infrastructure is needed to increase Great Britain's capacity to import, store and transport gas efficiently. A regulatory environment that enables the development of timely and appropriately sited infrastructure projects is therefore vital.

The need for increased gas supply infrastructure, and a regulatory environment to allow such infrastructure to be delivered to the market in a timely fashion, was set out by the Government in the Energy White Paper of 2003[2]: "Our Energy Future—Creating a Low Carbon Economy". It identified four challenges, one of which was securing the reliability of energy supplies. This remains integral to an energy policy that meets the needs and expectations of all energy consumers. It is being considered as part of the DTI's energy review[3] in the context of the measures that are required to develop the GB market framework for delivering reliable energy supplies. It is clear that any weakness in infrastructure could push up gas prices, or result in interruptions to supply, with harmful consequences for both UK markets and UK consumers.

The decline in our indigenous supplies has serious implications for our gas import infrastructure, storage and domestic transportation needs. The Government welcome all solutions which could help address this need, and favours no particular route. The market is responding to this challenge, with actual and planned investment in gas import infrastructure, storage and related transportation of some £10 billion over 2005-10. The projects have the potential to make a real difference to our gas supply infrastructure; by 2010, our storage capacity could more than double and our import infrastructure is planned to more than triple.

Ultimately, as my hon. Friend the Minister for Energy noted[4] to the House last year, failure to help facilitate such infrastructure will, immediately or over time, create difficulties in balancing supply and demand, reducing the reliability of our energy supply arrangements, with potentially disastrous consequences for the local, regional and national communities and economies.

To meet this challenge we require a regulatory environment that enables the development of timely and appropriately sited new gas supply infrastructure projects. The current consents regime is only now starting to deal with a new tranche of gas supply infrastructure projects; we must consider how avoidable delays can be prevented in the future to ensure that these projects, and those that follow them, can commission on time if approved. This means a planning consent regime that offers more clarity for developers about processes and timescales, thereby contributing to a lower overall level of risk for developers.

Our focus must therefore be on reducing the regulatory barriers to maximising gas supply, a view shared by the Trade and Industry Committee[5], and in line with this Government's focus on better regulation. We are looking to achieve this through a number of measures, as set out by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in a parliamentary debate[6] on security of supply earlier this year.

The measures will cover:

legislation[7] (when parliamentary time permits) to establish an offshore regime to enable innovative projects to go forward—gas storage in salt caverns offshore, and Liquefied Natural Gas (LNG) import projects with offshore unloading;

a review of the onshore consents regimes, aiming towards simplification and streamlining of procedures, in co-ordination with the Energy Review, and with the Barker Review of Land Use Planning into the planning and land use system; and measures to improve public understanding of the need for additional gas supply infrastructure projects, including onshore projects, and to promote best practice among project sponsors when applying for regulatory consents.

This statement forms an integral part of the third action, and my department is actively progressing the other measures.

This Government believe that allowing the free operation of a competitive GB market, within an appropriate regulatory framework overseen by an independent regulator, is the most efficient way to ensure security of gas supply. Government policy establishes broad objectives, which are supported by light touch regulation. The private sector then takes commercial decisions to develop the infrastructure that can maintain and improve the reliability of energy supplies. This Government warmly welcome the potential diversity of solutions that the market is seeking to deliver. Both onshore and offshore, large and small solutions are required to meet our needs.

The storage of gas onshore and offshore is only possible in certain geological structures, which are present in a limited number of locations in Great Britain. Such salt formations must have a certain minimum thickness in order to store gas.

Gas is now also stored in some depleted oil and gas fields[8]. Only one field is currently in operation but there are several others at different stages of development. These provide "ready made" storage structures with seals that have proven to be secure for millions of years. The nature of these structures is well known from the data collected during their development. An additional benefit is that storage in oil-bearing reservoirs can increase the amount of oil ultimately extracted from them. However, the reservoir characteristics needed for storage can be different from those needed to develop the field and not all onshore fields will be suitable for gas storage. Local planning officers should take this into consideration when making or preparing advice on planning consents.

The DTI recognises the importance of local democracy in the decision-making process, and the significant contribution that local involvement makes to the quality of decision making. The views of all stakeholders must be taken into account. But if we are to maintain a rigorous planning system, it must also enable decisions to be taken in reasonable time. A balance must be struck between meeting the concerns of local authorities and those they represent, and the national need for infrastructure that will provide us with secure energy supplies[9].

As my hon. Friend the Minister for Energy set out to the House last year[10], the provision of energy infrastructure is part of a delivery system that provides an essential national service. Business and homes in the UK require a reliable supply of energy free from disruption and interruption. New energy infrastructure projects may not always appear to convey any particular local benefit, but they provide crucial national benefits, which all localities share. In particular, projects add to the reliability of national energy supply, from which every user of the system benefits.

Against the background of the clear national need for new gas storage infrastructure, it is important that developers, where they are not already doing so, start an early dialogue with planning authorities to ensure that appropriate policies are included in Regional Spatial Strategies and Local Development Frameworks. Where developments need to come forward ahead of changes to local planning policy, it will be vital for developers to begin an early dialogue with local planning authorities, and the community more generally, about their proposals. It will be important to ensure that the environmental impacts of their proposals are better understood, and that the national need for these developments is fully taken into account by local planning authorities when making their decisions regarding planning consents.

In summary, we need timely and appropriately sited gas supply infrastructure to be delivered by the market, because:

Great Britain is becoming increasingly dependent on gas imports, and requires new gas supply infrastructure to help ensure security of supply;

new projects enable extra supply and storage options if they proceed without avoidable delays;

there are limited locations currently suitable for much needed gas storage projects;

onshore storage is needed to enable slow-moving gas to be available close to market when consumers require it;

new energy infrastructure projects provide national benefits, shared by all localities.

Winter Energy Supply

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Mr. Alistair Darling): It has been a tight winter for energy supply, and this has led to high energy prices. The energy market had taken steps to prepare for the winter, and Government worked closely with Ofgem and National Grid to ensure that all possible actions were taken to secure energy supplies. Looking ahead to next winter, I am announcing today the creation of a Business Energy Forum to look at strategic energy issues. Looking beyond next winter, I am depositing in the House a parliamentary statement of "Need for Additional Gas Supply Infrastructure". This sets out the economic case for taking action on planning to enable our strong energy market to deliver.

OUTTURN FOR WINTER 05/06

The gas market for winter 2005-06 was tighter than the previous winter. Gas supplies were maintained, but increased gas prices arising from the tight supply-demand balance were a major issue for industry as well as for domestic users. A fire at the Rough gas storage facility on 16 February 2006 led to the facility being taken out of operation, and heightened concerns about supply during the final stages of the winter. There was one Gas Balancing Alert, on 13 March 2006, which followed the loss of the Rough storage facility, but no forcible interruptions due to supply-demand constraints. Adequate supplies of gas and electricity were successfully maintained on every day this winter.

The market had responded to projected increased demand, with additional import infrastructure at the Isle of Grain LNG terminal, the expansion of the Interconnector import capacity, and a new storage facility, Humbly Grove. All these began operation at the start of the winter. DTI played a proactive role, working with developers and regulators to smooth the path for these developments. The Government encouraged offshore producers to be ready to maximise their production capacity in the winter, and supplies of gas direct from the offshore fields held up well throughout the winter.

There was significant demand-side response from the electricity-generating sector. In terms of base-load generation, there was switching from gas to coal. In addition, there was some switching from gas to distillate fuel. The level of coal-fired generation was more significant than had been expected, and this clearly has implications for carbon emissions and climate change. Accordingly, the experience gained here will be taken into account by the Government's Energy Review.

Other energy intensive users also reduced demand significantly in response to high prices. The Government also worked to increase the awareness of energy intensive users of the importance of demand side response, and had facilitated switching from gas to other fuels for power generators and other users, by working with the Environment Agency to ensure this could be accommodated within the regulatory regime.

Price signals would have been expected to be sufficient to incentivise full use of new import facilities. There was, however, under-utilisation of this capacity, despite strong price signals to the market, particularly early in the winter. Lower than anticipated delivery of gas from continental European sources through the interconnector led to further increases in price. Ofgem has estimated this cost UK consumers up to £1.5 billion this year over the winter. The Government are looking into how to resolve this, supporting Ofgem and the European Commission's investigations. The Government also continue to push hard for liberalisation of the European market, including in particular, transparency of gas stocks and movements throughout the EU.

Throughout the winter, the Government worked closely with National Grid and Ofgem to communicate information on the gas market to Parliament, industry and the public, in particular on price. The Government recognise the difficulties faced by industrial users, particularly energy intensive energy users, and also domestic users.

For domestic users, the Government have increased funding for tackling fuel poverty by approximately £300m over the 2005-2008 period. The Government's main way of tackling fuel poverty in vulnerable households in England is Warmfront. Similar schemes, Warm Deal, the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme, and the Warm Homes Scheme also operate Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland respectively. These provide heating and insulation measures to vulnerable households. To help those on low incomes, the Government have committed itself to continued winter fuel payments for the duration of this Parliament.

National Grid's draft "Winter Consultation Document", published today, indicates the supply-demand balance for gas next winter is expected again to be tight. Only a modest increase in demand is anticipated. Production of gas from the UK Continental Shelf, although lower than last winter, will continue to be by far the most important source of supply to the UK. Over the medium term, it will continue to contribute significantly to meeting UK demand. The balance of demand will need to be met through imports and release of gas from storage.

The market is delivering further new import infrastructure that is due to come on line next winter. This includes the completion of the Langeled Pipeline from Norway and the further expansion of the Belgian interconnector. There are also plans for the Balgzand-Bacton pipeline from the Netherlands to be in place this winter, and the new Excelerate LNG ship import facility in Teesside has recently been announced. In addition, the Humbly Grove storage facility should have had the opportunity to fill up with gas over this summer, unlike last year. The Government are monitoring carefully progress on restoring operations at the Rough storage facility.

The availability of adequate import infrastructure is only one aspect of supply. The Government remains committed to the liberalised market as the means of delivering security of supply. Interactions between the UK and other markets are growing, and the Government will be working to ensure that imports through the Interconnector and imports of LNG respond to demand from the UK. We will be meeting key companies over coming months, as we did last winter, to emphasise the importance to the UK of maximising gas supply in the winter. We will continue our efforts with Ofgem and the European Commission to push for greater transparency and liberalisation in continental European markets.

Electricity generation is expected to be similar to last winter, with around one third of electricity generation capacity gas-fired. Last winter showed, however, that during periods of high gas demand, coal generation becomes significant as the base load generator, and some gas-fired generators switch from gas to distillate as an alternative fuel. The Government will be working to ensure that reliability of alternative power generation capacity is enhanced, and to ensure that the environmental regulatory regime allows flexibility for power generators to switch from gas to alternative fuels if necessary.

The Government are taking early action to ensure that security of supply is assured during the coming winter, and to ensure that the impacts of a tight demand-supply balance are mitigated. The Government recognise that all participants in the market have a role to play, including the gas supply industry, including producers, transporters, and suppliers, users including industry, power generators and other energy intensive users, and regulatory bodies.

The Government are working to ensure that the best possible information on supply and demand forecasting is available to the industry. An important part of this includes working closely with National Grid who are producing their Winter Consultation Document, to be published by Ofgem today. The Government are also reviewing energy emergency arrangements, as part of proper contingency and emergency planning, consulting industry and other interested parties. The Government will be working closely with CBI, Ofgem, National Grid, producers, shippers, suppliers and industrial users to ensure that all possible preparations are made for next winter, that these are effectively coordinated, and communicated.

I am therefore announcing today the creation of a Business Energy Forum. This will be high-level group jointly chaired by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Energy (Malcolm Wicks) and Richard Lambert, Director General Designate of the CBI. The group will provide a forum for discussion of a broad range of strategic energy issues, with a focus on security of supply next winter. Its members will include representatives from industry bodies, including the Engineering Employers Federation, the Energy Intensive Users Group, and the Chemical Industries Association, gas producers and shippers, electricity generators and suppliers and representatives of other user groups.

Looking beyond next winter, there is further significant investment in gas supply infrastructure planned. The need for additional infrastructure, and a regulatory environment to allow such infrastructure to be delivered to the market in a timely fashion remains a priority for this Government. That is why today I am also depositing in the House a parliamentary statement of "Need for Additional Gas Supply Infrastructure", which sets out the economic case for our growing need for more infrastructure, and clarifies the Government policy context for planning and consent decisions on gas supply infrastructure projects.

The lessons of last winter are being taken into account. In the light of last winter's experience, gas supplies should be able to meet daily demand, although concerns remain about high prices. The Government remain committed to ensuring that the UK's strong energy market has the opportunity to operate effectively next winter and in the years to come.

TRANSPORT

London Underground and National Railways (LUNR) Passenger Screening Trials

The Secretary of State for Scotland (Mr. Douglas Alexander): We announced in November last year that the Department for Transport will be undertaking a small number of trials at stations on London's surface and underground rail networks, to test the effectiveness of passenger screening equipment in an operational environment.

The first trial took place on the platforms for the Heathrow Express at Paddington station over a four-week period during January and February of this year. The data from the trial have been analysed and will be included in the final trial report.

The next phase of the project will be held at stations on the London Underground and will test equipment that can detect traces of explosives on passengers and their belongings.

Following consultation with London Underground, the British Transport Police and other stakeholders, Canary Wharf and Greenford have been chosen to host the next series of trials.

The trial at Canary Wharf will begin on Wednesday 17 May and will also run for a period of around four weeks. The trial will test the use of a document scanner, a finger scanner and a cabin baggage X-ray machine. Each day a small number of randomly selected passengers will be invited to take part, although any participation will be entirely voluntary. There will be minimal disturbance to the station's operations and the flow of passengers throughout the day will not be affected.

Once the trial at Canary Wharf trial has been completed, a similar trial at Greenford station will begin in which equipment that can analyse explosive traces on clothing and bags using swabbing and air samples will be tested.

Furthermore, in conjunction with the British Transport Police, we shall be trialling the use of explosives-sniffing dogs at a main London station and a major regional station, also for a limited period.

The sole purpose of these trials that we are undertaking is purely to test their application in a genuine rail environment. They are not direct measures to enhance security at these stations. No decisions have been taken on the future use of this equipment, all the data and feedback we can gain during the tests is merely to help inform any future judgments.

The UK's railway system is a network made up of 2,500 stations and 11,000 miles of track. It carries one billion passengers a year. The British public understand that a closed security system on a rail network of this size is unworkable.

However we must still aim to cut down the risks as much as possible, whilst still allowing people to go about their day to day business.

No single security measure is either foolproof or capable of mitigating every threat so we need to keep a range of measures available. It is therefore important that we not only consider both existing and emerging technologies, but that we subject them to vigorous tests in a mix of authentic environments to see just how effectively they can contribute towards keeping our networks as safe and efficient as possible.

Publication for Transport Annual Report 2006

The Secretary of State for Scotland (Mr. Douglas Alexander): I have today published my Department's annual report for 2006. Copies have been laid before Parliament and placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The report sets out the Department's activities and achievements over the last year. It also describes the Department's future expenditure plans for the period of the spending review 2004.

Written Ministerial Statements

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Judicial Diversity

The Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harriet Harman): My noble Friend the Secretary of State and Lord Chancellor has made the following written ministerial statement.

"I am announcing today how the strategy which the Lord Chief Justice, the Chairman of the Judicial Appointments Commission and I have agreed to promote diversity within the judiciary is to be taken forward in the light of the implementation of the Constitutional Reform Act 2005. I am also announcing particular changes that will contribute to delivering my judicial diversity policy.

Increasing the diversity of the judiciary, particularly the number of women and those from black and minority ethnic backgrounds, remains one of my key priorities. The launch of the Judicial Appointments Commission and the new responsibilities of the Lord Chief Justice provide an ideal opportunity to set in place a new strategy to build upon the improvements made in recent years.

The Lord Chief Justice, the Chairman of the Judicial Appointments Commission and I are committed to ensuring the continuation of a judiciary of the highest calibre, with candidates drawn from the widest possible range of available talent. We have agreed an integrated strategy by which we aim to bring about a more diverse judiciary with increased understanding of the communities it serves, in order to ensure a judiciary of the highest quality which contributes to increased public confidence in the justice system.

The key planks of the strategy, which will require a co-ordinated approach by my Department, the Judicial Appointments Commission and the judiciary, are:

to promote judicial service and widen the range of people eligible to apply for judicial office; to encourage a wider range of applicants, so as to ensure the widest possible choice of candidates for selection; to promote diversity through fair and open processes for selection to judicial office solely on merit; and, to ensure that the culture and working environment for judicial office-holders encourages and supports a diverse judiciary and increases understanding of the communities served.

Details of the division of responsibilities between my Department, the Judicial Appointments Commission and the Directorate of Judicial Offices for England and Wales have today been published on the DCA website www.dca.gov.uk.

A comprehensive, co-ordinated and collaborative approach will be adopted by the three bodies to ensure that the diversity strategy is delivered effectively.

This strategy is supported by research commissioned by my Department to better understand the reasons for the under-representation of women and members of black and minority ethnic communities in the judiciary. The research, undertaken by Opinion Leader Research, has today been published on the DCA website www.dca.gov.uk. and copies placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

I am also announcing today further measures to promote greater diversity in the judiciary:

the Judicial Work Shadowing Scheme is to be extended to cover tribunals, with 10 tribunals having signed up to participate in the Scheme, so as to provide potential applicants with an enhanced understanding of judicial opportunities; a working group involving members of the judiciary and magistracy has reported on how experience as a magistrate can be counted in lieu of some sittings as a fee-paid judge, helping to encourage those from different backgrounds to consider a judicial career. The Judicial Appointments Commission will consider how best to take forward this work.

The new strategy will ensure that my Department, the Judicial Appointments Commission and the judiciary build upon the success of recent years and continue to appoint judicial office-holders of the highest possible quality, in whom the public can have the utmost confidence."

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

EU Education Council

The Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning (Bill Rammell): The Scottish Executive Minister for Education and Young People, Mr. Peter Peacock, and the UK Deputy Permanent Representative to the EU, Anne Lambert, will represent the UK during the Council in Brussels. Win Harris (Director of the DWP/DfES Joint International Unit) and Sarah Wingfield (Education Council Team Leader, DFES) will also attend.

This meeting of the Education, Youth and Culture Council will not include any significant youth agenda items, as the new text for the Youth in Action Programme, which was due to be the main item for discussion, is due to be adopted by the Commission on 24 May.

The first item on the agenda of the Education Council is to agree conclusions on the Commission communication on the European Indicator of Language Competence. These conclusions invite the Commission to set up an advisory board, composed of a representative of each member state and one representative of the Council of Europe, to advise on technical matters and the organisational and resource implications for member states of taking part in the survey. The Government support this approach, as we believe it is essential to have further information on how the Indicator would operate in practice as well as costs and burdens before we take a final decision on whether to participate in its implementation. We also support the current compromise position set out in the conclusions, which is to test at the International Standard Classification of Education (ISCED) level 2 (that is, Year 9, ages 13-14 in England), but with the flexibility for member states to test at ISCED level 3 if the second foreign language is not taught before then.

Ministers will then be asked to agree a general approach on the Commission's proposed recommendation on key competences for lifelong learning. The Minister will state that the UK is generally happy with the text but will make it clear that our parliamentary scrutiny reservation still stands. He will suggest that the wording in the description of competence six (social and civic competence) is changed so that the reference to "essential" knowledge of European integration, structures, objectives and values is changed to "highly desirable".

The recommendation for a European quality charter on mobility will then be discussed. I am grateful to the council for recently clearing scrutiny on this recommendation. The Minister will not intervene as we can support the text as it stands.

The main area for discussion will probably be during the exchange of views over the financial aspects of the Lifelong Learning Programme. A partial political agreement on the lifelong programme was reached under the UK presidency at Education Council in November 2005, but this excluded the financial aspects, as the EU budget had not been set. The overall budget was subsequently agreed in April 2006, giving the Lifelong Learning Programme about half the funds the Commission had hoped for. This is the first opportunity that Ministers will have to indicate their priorities for the programme with the reduced funding, and to comment on the balance of how the funding is split. The Officials in the Education Council will then negotiate the detail of the funding breakdown. The Minister will seek to raise the profile of Grundtvig (adult learning) and suggest that this money comes from the much larger Erasmus programme.

The exchange of views will be followed by a policy debate on the review of the EU Sustainable Development Strategy. Member states were invited to submit a written response to the 3 questions which have been tabled at all Councils, which the UK has done. The Minister will contribute to the debate by stating that education has a role to play in ensuring economic prosperity and social inclusion, but that it is important that we achieve these aims through the existing Lisbon agenda.

The morning will conclude with two information points from the Commission:

(i) on the Communication on modernising Higher Education which has just been issued and;

(ii) on the European Credit Transfer System for Vocational Training (ECVET).

I will report back on the outcome of the Council as usual.

Teachers' Pension Scheme

The Minister for Schools (Jim Knight): I am today launching the statutory consultation on a package of reforms to the Teachers' Pension Scheme (TPS).

The reform proposals reflect an agreement that has been reached following several months of negotiations with union and employer representatives. The key reform objectives of long-term affordability and sustainability have been achieved whilst ensuring that the TPS will continue to be an important and valuable element of the total remuneration package for teachers and lecturers. I am committed to the teaching profession continuing to be an attractive career choice with increasingly flexible career paths. Recruitment, retention and motivation will all be supported by a modernised TPS that will provide scheme members with greater choice and flexibility over the ways in which they can plan and save for their retirement.

Tough decisions have had to be taken to ensure that the teachers and lecturers of today—and those that will join the profession in future years—can continue to enjoy the benefits of a high-quality, defined benefit occupational pension scheme. I am, therefore, extremely grateful for the positive and constructive approach taken by all parties during the detailed and complex negotiations that have resulted in an agreement on a comprehensive package of reforms to the TPS.

The reform proposals will reduce by £5.4 billion the long-term costs of the TPS over the next 50 years. This is in line with the agreement reached in October 2005 between Government and the TUC on the framework for the reform of the pension schemes covering teaching, the Civil Service and the NHS. These savings will be delivered through the introduction of a pension age of 65 for new entrants from 1 January 2007; changes to the benefit structure for both existing members and new entrants; and an increase from 6 per cent. to 6.4 per cent. in the contribution rate paid by all members of the TPS.

To ensure the long-term affordability and financial sustainability of the TPS, agreement has also been reached with the unions and employers on a cost-sharing arrangement that will see members and employers meeting an equal share of any future cost pressures rather than them falling entirely on the employers as has been the position up until now. The agreement also provides for a ceiling of 14 per cent. on the employer contribution rate that will apply from the next valuation of the TPS in 2008. This agreement provides for much greater certainty and stability in employer costs that, to a significant extent, ultimately fall to the taxpayer.

I very much welcome this package of reforms. I am confident that it will be recognised by the membership as a very good outcome to the review of the TPS in which their long-term interests have been so well represented by their unions and employers. A copy of the consultation document will be placed in the Library. It can also be accessed on the DFES website at www.dfes.gov.uk/consultations.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Departmental Report

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Margaret Beckett): I am today laying before Parliament the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Departmental Report for 1 April 2005—31 March 2006 (Cm 6823).

The report is a clear and comprehensive account of what the FCO has done under the leadership of my right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs over the last financial year. It sets out our achievements, including how we performed against our public service agreement targets. It gives details of how we spent public funds. And it shows that the FCO has delivered real successes for the Government and for the British public during the period of the report.

The most visible way in which the FCO protects the interests of British people is through our public services. Over the past year, our consular network has dealt with major crises from hurricanes in the United States and Mexico to terrorist bombings in Egypt as well as helping tens of thousands of other British people in distress overseas. We also run the fastest large-scale visa operation in the world.

The FCO has continued to deliver increased prosperity through its support for British business. UK Trade and Investment, our joint operation with the Department for Trade and Industry, helped to attract record levels of inward investment. Our network around the world also made a significant contribution to bringing the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games to London.

In addition to these direct services, the FCO delivers real benefits to British people through active diplomacy. We used the twin UK presidencies of the European Union and of the G8 to help us meet strategic objectives, including starting talks on Turkey's accession to the EU, agreeing the EU budget, and taking concrete action to help development in Africa and to manage climate change. We have engaged bilaterally and multilaterally across the globe, most notably in the middle east. We have supported democracy in Iraq, we have built an international consensus over Iran's nuclear ambitions, and we have led the response to fast-moving developments in the middle east peace process.

The FCO played a central role in making sure there was international co-operation following the 7 July attacks in London and was also active in cementing measures to strengthen the international response to terrorism.

Other important achievements included hosting the London conference on Afghanistan which set the agenda for the next phase of reconstructing the country. During our EU presidency we played a leading role at the UN world summit which, among other things, agreed the formation of a new Human Rights Committee and of a new Peace Building Commission.

The FCO remains strong in traditional skills, but continues to adapt and develop new ones. Our trained consular rapid deployment teams are ready to go anywhere at a moment's notice to help British people in trouble. We are further developing skills in project and programme management. Our overseas network won "Investors in People" accreditation in December 2005, which means that the whole of the FCO is now accredited by the scheme.

We deploy our resources where they can add real value to UK interests and the work of other Government Departments. We use information technology to help us work more flexibly and effectively. We are becoming more diverse as we aim for challenging targets for numbers of women, disabled and minority ethnic staff.

The report makes clear the commitment of FCO staff and records the concrete and specific benefits they have delivered over the past financial year. It also sets out how we are learning lessons for the future. The FCO's White Paper, "Active Diplomacy for a Changing World: The UK's International Priorities", published on 28 March, will provide a firm foundation for maintaining this strong performance for the future. I look forward to the FCO delivering this strong performance under my leadership as Foreign Secretary. I commend this report.

PRIME MINISTER

Cabinet Committee Chairs

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): I have placed an updated list of Cabinet Committees, and of who chairs them, in the Libraries of both Houses.

A full list, including membership and terms of reference will shortly be placed in the Library of the House and on the Cabinet Office website.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Child Care Proceedings Review

The Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harriet Harman): The review of the Child Care Proceedings System in England and Wales is published today. It was commissioned in "A Fairer Deal for Legal Aid" in July 2005 as a joint piece of work between the Department for Education and Skills and the Department for Constitutional Affairs. Its recommendations aim to deliver improvements in the outcome of proceedings, particularly for children, and to ensure that all resources in the system are used in the most timely, effective way.

Recommendations for improvement fall into five main areas: helping families (ensuring families and children understand proceedings); better informed resolution (ensuring applications are only made after all safe, appropriate alternatives to court have been explored); preparation for proceedings (improving the quality and consistency of section 31 applications); during proceedings (improving the quality of case management); and inter-agency working (encouraging closer professional relationships).

The full and timely implementation of the recommendations made is critical. To ensure this takes place, I will be chairing a ministerial delivery group, which will include DfES and Welsh Assembly Ministers. The purpose of this group will be to ensure a high accountability for progress on the implementation of the review and reduction in delay generally in handling care applications. There will also be a delivery board of senior officials, which will deal with more detailed implementation issues.

HEALTH

NHS Dentistry

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Ms Rosie Winterton): I am pleased to announce that we are making £100 million of capital investment funding available to the NHS to take forward infrastructure improvements for NHS primary dental care services. This builds on the four year £80 million capital investment programme already committed to supporting a 25 per cent. expansion in the number of training places for dentists. NHS dental practices and their patients will benefit from a programme of capital investment of £100 million over the two years 2006-07 and 2007-08. This will:

Support dentists in modernising premises and equipment for patients and;

allow primary care trusts to give greater financial support to help dentists establish new dental practices or expand existing surgeries.

The £100 million of capital investment will be made available to the NHS, through SHAs, over the next two years to take forward infrastructure improvements for NHS primary dental care services.

CABINET OFFICE

Cabinet Office Departmental Report

The Minister for the Cabinet Office (Hilary Armstrong): I have today, with my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, laid before Parliament the "Cabinet Office Departmental Report 2006" (Cm 6833).

The departmental report describes the work of the Cabinet Office and includes a performance report for each of our public service agreement targets. The report contains information on the achievements and successes of the Cabinet Office, outlines the priorities ahead and also includes a set of tables showing past outturn and future expenditure plans.

Copies are available in the Vote Office and in the Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Parliamentary Boundary Commission

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Peter Hain): The Boundary Commission for Northern Ireland has today published the "Revised Recommendations for Parliamentary Constituencies in Northern Ireland" prepared by the Northern Ireland Parliamentary Boundary Commission.

The Revised Recommendations follow three public local inquiries which were held into the Commission's Provisional Recommendations (published on 29 April 2004). In reaching decisions on the Revised Recommendations the Commission has accepted, wherever practicable to do so, the recommendations of the Independent Assistant Commissioners who conducted these inquiries.

The Revised Recommendations continue to provide for 18 constituencies and revise the boundaries of 12 constituencies.

The Commission must consider all representations on the Revised Recommendations received within one month of their publication.

I will, of course, report back to Parliament once the Commission has submitted its final recommendations to me.

Criminal Justice Inspection (Avoidable Delay)

The Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office (Mr. David Hanson): The Government have received a thematic inspection report from the Chief Inspector of Criminal Justice in Northern Ireland, Mr. Kit Chivers. The report, "Avoidable Delay: A thematic inspection of delay in the processing of criminal cases in Northern Ireland", has today been published.

The Government accept the core findings of the report that cases are taking too long. The timeliness with which the criminal justice system dispenses justice is an important element in its effectiveness and efficiency and in maintaining and raising public confidence. I therefore welcome this report and its findings.

In line with the findings in the report, we have set up a dedicated inter-agency team to develop a new strategy to deliver improvements to case processing times.

Copies of the chief inspector's report have been placed in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Royal Mail

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Mr. Alistair Darling): I have today proposed the basis of the financial framework for Royal Mail that the Government as shareholder have, in principle, agreed with the company. This will fulfil our commitment to see a publicly owned Royal Mail restored to good health and providing customers with an excellent service and its employees with rewarding employment. It will give Royal Mail the freedom it needs to use its financial resources as it sees fit so that it can invest to succeed in a fully competitive and tightly regulated market.

The Government intend to exercise their powers under section 72 of the Postal Services Act 2000 to release £850 million of reserves that Royal Mail has built up through past profitable performance so those funds can be transferred to a special account, the pension escrow account, upon which the pension fund trustees could draw, should Royal Mail fail as a business. When the pension fund deficit has been recovered and Royal Mail's balance sheet strengthened by successful operation, it is expected that the escrow fund will be released and surplus cash may be returned to the Government as shareholder. This arrangement provides confidence to pensioners and a sustainable financial framework for Royal Mail.

Government have agreed in principle to extend the existing debt package such that £900 million is available for use by the Royal Mail. This will allow the company to embark on an investment programme so that it can transform its effectiveness, secure the efficiency improvements required under the regulatory settlement and successfully compete in a newly liberalised market.

As part of the overall financing arrangements for Royal Mail, Social Network Payments of £150 million per annum for the next two years and any further support for the post office network for the period from 2008 will be met from voted expenditure. The level of any support after 2008 will depend on decisions on the future of the Post Office network and we will be consulting about this.

I am confident that these proposals will enable Royal Mail to implement its ambitious transformation plans to secure a successful future in a competitive market under the regulatory regime.

TRANSPORT

London Underground

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Gillian Merron): I am pleased to announce that Chris Bolt has been re-appointed as PPP Arbiter until December 2010. Mr. Bolt was originally appointed as Arbiter on 31 December 2002 for a four-year term, and this appointment has now been extended for a further four years. This extension will provide continuity in the lead up to, and during, the PPP periodic review that must be completed by October 2010. The periodic review will enable London Underground and the PPP companies to determine the outcomes and prices paid under the PPP contract for the next seven and a half years after 2010.

The PPP Arbiter appointment is made by the Secretary of State under sections 225 to 226 of the Greater London Authority Act 1999. The Arbiter's principal role is to ensure that any differences between the PPP parties, particularly during a PPP review, about the price to be paid to the PPP companies or about economy and efficiency can be resolved independently, swiftly and with certainty.

Chris Bolt was appointed as Chairman of the Office of Rail Regulation on 5 July 2004 for a five-year term.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Freedom of Information Act 2000

The Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harriet Harman): My noble Friend the Secretary of State, has made the following written ministerial statement:

"Today I have deposited copies of The Freedom of Information Act 2000—First Annual Report on the operation of the Freedom of Information Act in Central Government—2005 in the Libraries of both Houses".

This is the Annual Report analysing the performance of central Government in the first full year of Freedom of Information.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Higher Education Applications Process

The Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning (Bill Rammell): I am delighted to announce today the response to the Department for Education and Skill's consultation on Improving the Higher Education Applications Process. This response is issued on behalf of myself and my ministerial colleagues in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

The consultation exercise that has led to today's publication was undertaken following a recommendation in the 2004 report from the Admissions to Higher Education Review group. That Group, chaired by Professor Steven Schwartz (former VC Brunel University), considered the principles that should underpin a fair and transparent admissions process and made a number of recommendations to the sector and to Government. One recommendation to Government was to -

"Set up a high-level implementation group as soon as possible to achieve PQA"

My right hon. Friend the Member for Norwich. South (Mr. Charles Clarke), former Secretary of State for Education and Skills, in a statement to this House on 14 September 2004, accepted that recommendation and put in place the structures to fulfil that recommendation.

For the last 18 months, the Department for Education and Skills has been consulting with key stakeholders in the education sector on how this could be achieved. A public consultation was launched on 9 September 2005 that included a number of proposals for reform to the current application system and offered for consideration two models of post-qualification application (PQA).

Having analysed and considered the response to that consultation, we are pleased to recommend a number of reforms which will make the system fairer for students and more efficient for higher education institutions. Responses identified strong support in principle for a move towards a system of PQA, but also many practical obstacles to implementing such a system.

We believe that the reforms we recommend for 2008-09 will realise some of the key benefits of PQA and lay firm foundations for further steps in that direction. Crucially, the proposed new system for 2008-09 will offer those students who achieve higher grades than required by their first firm conditional offer the chance to seek an alternative place that best matches their aspirations and circumstances. We want to build on the step-change that these early reforms represent and, in light of experience of them, commit to working for the introduction of PQA from 2012. We have recommended a further review in 2010-11 to facilitate that objective.

In summary, the reforms would:

provide more and better information on which HEIs can base their admissions decisions; involve students submitting, and HEIs considering, fewer initial applications, thereby reducing administrative burdens; ensure applications are considered on the basis of a gathered field, creating a more equal chance for all students and reducing the temptation for them to place early, ill-researched applications;

give students better feedback on their applications, allowing them to make better informed decisions about their HE options;

give those who have failed to gain an offer with their initial applications better opportunities to continue applying in search of a place;

result in fewer students needing to enter Clearing; and offer those students who achieve higher grades than required by their first firm conditional offer the chance to seek an alternative place that best matches their aspirations and circumstances.

We have recommended the establishment of a delivery partnership, involving representatives from higher and further education, schools and other interested stakeholders, to introduce these recommendations for the 2008-09 academic year. The delivery partnership will also be tasked with assessing the impact of those changes after they have had time to bed down and to review again a move towards a full PQA system.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Criminal Records Bureau

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Joan Ryan): The Criminal Records Bureau has today published its five-year strategy and business plan 2006-07. Copies of the document will be placed in the Library of the House.

TRANSPORT

Ports Policy Review Launch

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Dr. Stephen Ladyman): I am pleased to announce today, in conjunction with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and Northern Ireland, and with Andrew Davies AM, the Welsh Assembly Government Minister for Enterprise, Innovation and Networks, the launch of a review of ports policy covering England, Wales and Northern Ireland. (Ports policy in Scotland is being progressed separately by the Scottish Executive through its National Transport Strategy and subordinate freight strategy.)

We undertook, in the White Paper "The Future of Transport", to:

"review our policy framework to keep track of wider changes affecting ports and to ensure we continue to have the right basis for their sustainable development", [paragraph 7.28]

That is the intention of this review. We publish today a discussion document, "Ports Policy—Your Views Invited", aimed at stimulating wide debate during a consultation period spanning the coming three months.

The review covers a broad range of policy issues. Based on new forecasts of demand for port facilities, which the Department's consultants MDS Transmodal are publishing alongside the discussion document, our discussion document starts from the broad principles which we see as informing Government involvement in the seaports sector following this review.

It includes coverage of the national, regional and local policy dimensions; expected capacity requirements; inland and coastal connections by road, rail and water; safety, security and environmental issues; competition at national and international level; governance and accountability; how the country's smaller ports can make the most of their opportunities, and whether there is scope for improving ports planning procedures.

The House is aware that our original intention had been to await decisions on the three proposed major container terminals at Felixstowe South, Bathside Bay and London Gateway. The first two have been approved, but the London Gateway decision is taking longer than originally expected to determine. We do not want to delay the review: our view is that we need to press on with addressing important questions affecting ports policy for the longer term.

We shall, in close liaison with our partners in Government, carefully consider all responses to the discussion document. The aim is then to develop a policy statement in the first half of 2007.

Alongside the discussion document, the Department is also publishing the conclusions of the municipal ports review, Opportunities for ports in local authority ownership. This has been developed in close liaison with the Department for Communities and Local Government, with the British Ports Association and with the municipal ports themselves. I am grateful for their contributions. The review highlights opportunities for real improvements in ports' management and performance, and I look forward to its recommendations being taken forward. Copies of all documents will be placed in the House Library, and can be found on the Department's website www.dft.gov.uk.

Written Ministerial Statements

Tuesday 23 May 2006

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Crown Application of the Planning Acts

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Yvette Cooper): The Government, on 17 May, laid before Parliament the statutory instruments subject to the negative resolution procedure required to commence part 7 chapter 1 of the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004 and incorporate the Crown into the planning system.

They are:

The Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act (Commencement No. 9 and Consequential Provisions) Order 2006 (SI 2006 No. 1281 (C. 43));

The Town and Country Planning (Application of Subordinate Legislation to the Crown) Order 2006 (SI 2006 No. 1282);

The Planning (Listed Buildings, Conservation Areas and Hazardous Substances) (Amendment) (England) Regulations 2006 (SI 2006 No. 1283); and

The Planning (National Security Directions and Appointed Representatives) (England) Rules 2006 (SI 2006 No. 1284).

These instruments will commence Part 7 Chapter 1 of the 2004 Act which will end the Crown's immunity from the planning system by applying the planning Acts to the Crown. These will apply existing planning subordinate legislation to the Crown with modifications where necessary; amend the listed buildings and hazardous substances regulations; and provide rules covering the role of special advocates for planning cases with national security implications.

These instruments will come into force on 7 June 2006.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Official Solicitor and Public Trustee Trusts and Estates Cases

The Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harriet Harman): My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs, has made the following written ministerial statement:

"My right honourable and noble Friend, the Lord Chancellor has approved proposals for the Official Solicitor and Public Trustee (OSPT) to retire from the bulk of his existing caseload of trusts and estates work over the next two years. This follows a recommendation in April 2004 in an NAO review of the Public Trustee's stewardship of client funds that he should establish a pro-active strategy for divesting himself of trusts and estates work, particularly in terms of becoming a trustee of last resort and outsourcing his investment activities.

Where cases cannot otherwise be closed during that period, the OSPT proposes to invite expressions of interest from a private sector corporate trustee to take over and administer his cases in accordance with best market regulated practice. The OSPT will work to ensure that the interests of beneficiaries will be secured through this process. The proposals will be designed to deliver the administration of their trusts in the future in accordance with best practice standards. There will be full consultation with those affected, who will be able to put forward any alternative solution more appropriate in their particular case than that which the OSPT proposes. If agreement is reached with a private sector corporate trustee, or on an alternative solution in a particular case, the OSPT will retire from these cases in favour of the new trustee.

As announced in April 2000 in "Making Changes: The Future of the Public Trust Office", since the Official Solicitor was also appointed Public Trustee in 2001 he has only accepted any new trust and estates case where he has been satisfied that, in accordance with strict "last resort" acceptance criteria, a public sector trustee is required. In 2005-06, for example, only 13 cases were accepted by him as Official Solicitor, and one as Public Trustee. He is, however, currently responsible for administering about 1,750 trusts and estates, mainly taken on before the last resort criteria were applied."

Her Majesty's Courts Service

The Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harriet Harman): The following table list sets out the key performance targets* that have been set for Her Majesty's Courts Service for 2006-07:

Relevant PSA	Target 2006-07
PSA 1	To improve the delivery of justice by reducing the proportion of ineffective trials to no more than 15.5 per cent. in the Crown Court and no more than 21 per cent. in the magistrates' courts.
PSA 2	To reassure the public, reducing the fear of crime and anti-social behaviour and building confidence in the Criminal Justice System with compromising fairness.
PSA 4	By 2009-10, increase the proportion of care cases being completed in the courts within 40 weeks by not less than 49 per cent. in the County Court and not less than 61 per cent. in the magistrates' courts.
PSA 5	To achieve earlier and more proportionate resolution of legal problems and disputes by: Increasing the opportunities for people involved in court cases to settle their dispute out of court to 40 per cent.; and Reducing delays in resolving those disputes that need to be decided by the courts by increasing the proportion of small claims hearing that take place within target time by 81 per cent.

Copies of the HM Courts Service business plan for 2006-07 have been place in the Libraries of both Houses.

*More information on these and other key supporting targets are published in the Strategic and Business Plans, which includes how HMCS helps deliver PSA1 and 2 (joint Criminal Justice System targets).

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

HE Student Finances

The Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning (Bill Rammell): This announcement covers repayment arrangements for student loans made from September 2006 onwards for borrowers who move abroad after completing their courses.

Deferred fee loans will be made available in 2006-07 for EU students who are accepted at our universities with the first full cohort eligible to repay from April 2010.

Repayments will be collected directly by the Student Loans Company (SLC) and, as for students who stay in the UK after finishing their course, will remain income contingent with repayments based on 9 per cent. of income over an earnings threshold.

The Government are determined to ensure that all EU students repay fee loans on an income contingent basis. Our policy is for repayments to be fair and affordable and that on leaving their course, all those who can contribute to the costs of their Higher Education, should do so. This will ensure that students returning to countries where average earnings are low, will repay on an income contingent basis.

However living costs and earnings vary from country to country and so we will use an index of price levels to establish fair earnings thresholds based on where borrowers choose to live. This principle will also apply where borrowers move outside the EU.

Countries will be banded according to price levels and the bands will be as follows:

Band	Price level index (UK=100)	Repayment Threshold (UK=£15,000)
A	0<30	£3,000
B	30<50	£6,000
C	50<70	£9,000
D	70<90	£12,000
E	90<110	£15,000
F	110<130	£18,000
G	130+	£21,000

In addition, for student loans paid out from 2006 all borrowers will have entered into an enforceable contract to allow debts to be pursued in the courts as necessary, wherever a borrower may choose to live.

From 2007 students planning to move overseas after finishing their course, will be required to sign a repayment agreement with the SLC that establishes how they will repay their loan once they have moved overseas.

This means the SLC will be able to take action to enforce the debt in the courts both in the UK and abroad if necessary. We intend to make use of EC regulation 44/2001 which will allow the SLC to enforce a judgement made in the UK courts in the rest of the EU.

These arrangements will be enacted in regulations which are expected to be laid before Parliament later in the year.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

General-Affairs and External Relations Council 15 May 2006

The Minister for Europe (Mr. Geoffrey Hoon): My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Sir John Grant (UK Permanent Representative to the EU) and I represented the UK at the General Affairs and External Relations Council (GAERC) in Brussels on 15 May 2006. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence represented the UK at the Defence Ministers discussions.

The agenda items were covered as follows:

Western Balkans

The Council adopted Conclusions on Serbia and Montenegro regretting her non-compliance with the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) and supporting Enlargement Commissioner's Rehn's decision to disrupt the Stabilisation and Association Agreement negotiations, while indicating support for discussions resuming once full co-operation with ICTY is achieved.

The Council also agreed Conclusions on Montenegro reiterating the importance of a free and fair referendum and on Bosnia and Herzegovina, expressing disappointment at the failure of constitutional reform and a readiness to engage with Bosnia and Herzegovina on transition arrangements for the Office of the High Representative.

Preparation of EU-Russia Summit

The Council had a short discussion on the forthcoming EU-Russia Summit on 25 May. We expect the agenda to cover issues such as energy, visa facilitation, economic reforms and commitment to common values.

Iraq

The Council adopted Conclusions welcoming the progress made in Iraq to form a government of national unity; stating that the EU stands ready to engage with the new government to achieve a secure, stable and democratic Iraq.

Iran

The Council was briefed on the Foreign Ministers' E3+3 meeting in New York on 8 May and discussed next steps.

The Council adopted Conclusions which expressed deep regret at the failure of the Iranian authorities to take the steps deemed essential by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) Board and the UN Security Council as well their threats to maintain this failure into the future. The Council called on the Iranian authorities to cooperate fully with the IAEA, suspend all enrichment related and reprocessing activities, including research and development, and to suspend the construction of a reactor moderated by heavy water. It expressed the EU's full support for the Security Council making this mandatory. The Council also underlined its deep concern about the human rights situation in Iran.

The Council was expecting to adopt a common position freezing the assets of President Lukashenko and several key supporters responsible for fraudulent elections. Due to technical problems, this is expected to be formally adopted by the Education Council on 18 May.

EU-Africa troika

The Council discussed the outcome of the EU-Africa troika meeting held in Vienna on 8 May.

Sudan

High Representative Solana congratulated those involved in reaching agreement at Abuja. There was a need to put pressure on those who had not yet signed up to do so.

The Darfur Peace Agreement (DPA) provided an additional basis to enable the UN to take over from the Africa Mission in Sudan (AMIS). The EU needed to support the peace process economically and, until transition, through support to AMIS. Commissioner Ferrero-Waldner said the Commission would provide €100 million in humanitarian and reconstruction aid.

The Council adopted Conclusions welcoming the DPA and calling for its rapid implementation, reiterating the EU's readiness to contribute to the reconstruction and development of Darfur, including through AMIS; and restating the EU's support for transition from AMIS to a UN mission.

Over-the-Counter Medicines Initiative

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Andy Burnham): I am pleased to announce that the first report of the Better Regulation of Over-the-counter Medicines Initiative (BROMI) was published today and has been placed in the Library. Copies are available for hon. Members at the Vote Office.

The report contains the BROMI group's first recommendations to reduce unnecessary regulatory burdens surrounding over-the-counter (OTC) medicines regulation. The recommendations have been accepted.

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) will introduce, with immediate effect, a new scheme for the self-certification of certain changes to the patient information of over-the-counter medicines and a new transparent complaints procedure in respect of patient information.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Deportation and Removal of Foreign Nationals

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (John Reid): I would like to provide an update on the issue of foreign national prisoners. As my predecessor promised, I will set out the latest information I have on the foreign national prisoners released without consideration of deportation having been made since February 1999. I will set out eight priority areas for management action to achieve our long-term policy goals on foreign national prisoners. And I will set out two immediate changes to current guidance which I now believe are necessary to deal with the present serious situation.

I would like first, however, to set the handling of the consideration and deportation of foreign national prisoners into context. The context is the backdrop of mass migration prompted by the end of the Cold War and other global changes. The effects of this can be seen in the huge increases in the past decade in asylum-seeking, in immigration, and generally in the numbers of passenger journeys all over the world.

Against this backdrop, our immigration and asylum systems have secured notable achievements in recent years: the number of asylum seekers has been reduced by 72 per cent from its peak in 2002; we now decide 73 per cent of asylum cases within 8 weeks compared to the 22 months it took to decide asylum cases (including older cases) in 1997; and I can say that February and March were the first months in which we have achieved the target known as the 'tipping point', with removals running at the highest rate ever.

It is in this context that the issue of foreign national prisoners should be considered.

My first priority has been to protect the public by identifying, controlling, considering for deportation and, where appropriate, deporting the foreign national prisoners who were released without due consideration of deportation having been made. I am today reporting on progress since my written statement to the House on 15 May, Official Report, column 40WS.

Analysis of these cases has, as I indicated in an oral answer in the House on 15 May, revealed some duplicate files and the total overall number of these cases currently stands at 1,019, although it is possible that this figure may either reduce further due to the discovery of additional duplicates as the process of analysis is completed; or rise as the Immigration and Nationality Directorate re-checks that it has captured every relevant case.

In sharing information on these cases with the House, I would like to add the caveat that the investigative process has uncovered flaws in data collection, not least the lack of a unique personal number for use by the Home Office, prisons and the police to identify an individual. An additional factor rendering the information subject to change is the continuing examination of the records by all relevant agencies, including for re-offending. I can therefore only give the best information available to me as of today on the 1,019 foreign prisoners.

Subject to these caveats, the figure for the number of offenders convicted of a serious offence, as defined in my statement of 15 May, now stands at 186. As I said at that time, the previous figure of 179 was liable to change since the scrutiny of around 200 of the 1,019 cases was yet to be completed. That has so far resulted in an additional seven cases being identified in this category.

Of these 186, 37 have been convicted of the most serious offences, defined as murder, manslaughter, rape and child sex offences. This is an increase of two since 15 May as a result of the scrutiny of past offences. All four of the murderers are now detained in prison. Of the other 33 most serious cases which include rapists and child sex offenders, two are believed dead and 23 are in prison. We have so far identified that eight of these 37 have re-offended since release (of which six have been convicted) but no offence discovered so far has involved violence or a sexual element.

Of the 149 "more serious" offenders, 66 are now under our control and six have been deported. Of these 149, 13 have re-offended following release (of which 11 have been convicted) with a crime involving violence or a sexual element.

All of the 1,019 have now been assessed and consideration of the case for deportation has started in 999 cases. There has been an initial decision to deport in 778 of these cases. Of these 778,197 are detained, one is electronically tagged, 10 are reporting regularly to the Immigration Service or Prison Service and 37 have been deported or removed.

As police and agencies focus hard on these cases, I believe it is essential to be clear about our long-term policy. My objectives are straightforward: all non-EEA nationals who are given a custodial sentence should face deportation; and deportation should happen as early as possible in that sentence. But to achieve these long-term objectives, I believe management must address eight priority areas.

Firstly, there is today no unique personal number for individuals who come into contact with the criminal justice, immigration and asylum systems. I have instructed management to tell me how this can change.

Secondly, as my predecessor has already set out, there are prisoners within the system whose nationality is not known. There is currently no legal obligation on people who are suspected, charged or convicted to declare their nationality and no sanction against them if they refuse to co-operate or they declare a nationality falsely. I have tasked management to come up with a way of stopping this, even if it needs legislation.

Thirdly, there have almost certainly been foreign nationals whose nationality was known but who were not referred to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate for consideration for deportation. For example, before September 2004, guidance to prisons on which cases to refer to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate covered only those cases which were subject to a court recommendation and omitted to cover other categories of case which should have been considered by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. In addition, a HO Circular to police of December 2004 sets broad criteria by which the police should refer cases to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. It is not clear enough that this Circular has been systematically implemented. I have demanded therefore that management ensure all future instructions are given to all agencies of the criminal justice, asylum and immigration systems and are both consistent and fully implemented.

Fourthly, the criteria governing which individuals should be considered for deportation appear to have been varied over time on authority which is unclear. They have then not been consistently applied. For example, the derivation of the inclusion of those convicted of three or more offences over a five-year period in the criteria, as set out by my predecessor on 3 May, is unclear. I have ordered the policy officials to audit trail all policy criteria and the process by which they ensure that guidance is both clear and consistently applied.

Fifthly, there are foreign national prisoners who were considered for deportation under the current criteria, but where the decision was made not to deport, or where a decision to deport was frustrated by difficulties over return to the home country. I have ordered that all decisions on deportation are now made according to the most robust interpretation of the requirements of our international obligations.

Sixthly, I have instructed managers to work with colleagues in Scotland and Northern Ireland to audit the numbers of foreign national prisoners released in Scotland and Northern Ireland and to establish how many of these were referred to the IND for consideration of deportation. I have demanded clear procedures for dealing with foreign national prisoners held in Scotland and Northern Ireland are written and followed.

Seventhly, historically there have never been systematic arrangements in place for collecting information on the nationality of mentally disordered offenders, referring them to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate and considering them for deportation. This is a hugely difficult group to deal with. But I have tasked officials to construct arrangements for considering deportation where appropriate for people in this group taking account of their very specific circumstances.

Finally, as my predecessor set out in his statement of 3 May, I have demanded enhanced arrangements to facilitate the return of prisoners earlier in their sentence, including Prisoner Transfer Agreements.

These eight management priority areas will form the basis of a long-term 'agenda for change' to deal more effectively with foreign national prisoners.

However, there are also two immediate steps which are forced on me by the urgency of the present problems and the constraints on the system. Those constraints include both the trained caseworking resource available in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate to consider cases for deportation, despite the steps we have taken to reinforce the Criminal Casework Team, and detention capacity.

To enable them to deal effectively with the current flow of cases, I have agreed two immediate changes to the system.

The first change is to prioritise cases for consideration according to the degree of risk a person poses to the public. At present the criteria for consideration for deportation includes people who have committed several minor and non-violent offences, but excludes those who have had two custodial sentences of under a year for, say, actual bodily harm. This is a perverse outcome in public protection terms. I have therefore authorised that instead of considering for deportation those with three convictions regardless of seriousness or risk, the Immigration and Nationality Directorate will now consider for deportation all non-EEA nationals who have been given 12 months prison sentence, either in one sentence or as an aggregate of two or three sentences.

The second immediate change is to tighten the guidance given to caseworkers in deciding whether or not an individual should be deported. Rule 364 of the Immigration Rules, which sets out the criteria which officials should weigh in the balance against a person's crime in taking the decision whether to deport and which dates back to 1994, currently goes wider than the requirements of the Human Rights Act and the European Convention on Human Rights would stipulate. It is not right that the system should tilt the exercise of discretion in favour of the criminal rather than public safety in this way. I have therefore approved the issuing of new guidance to caseworkers which interprets the decision-making criteria much more tightly.

I believe that these immediate measures will help to ensure that more of those offenders who pose a risk to public safety are dealt with fairly and efficiently, and will face deportation where that is appropriate.

None of the reforms set out above, in particular the long-term agenda for change, will be delivered unless the right leadership is in place across the system. I have therefore instructed the new Permanent Secretary of the Home Office to address the following issues as a matter of urgency: performance; weak services, because not every field of our operations matches the standard of the best; leadership and skills, where we have under-invested; fragmentation and silos, exacerbated by communications which are too weak; and systems and processes, which simply need to be stronger.

And finally, I announced yesterday that the Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality, my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham Hodge Hill (Mr. Byrne), will be taking overall responsibility for this reform agenda, reporting to me. I have told him I want to consider any option he believes feasible, however radical it may be. I intend to report back to the House on progress and proposals for change before the summer recess.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Visit to Uganda

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): I visited northern Uganda on 15 and 16 May to look at the situation on the ground and to discuss the conflict and other issues affecting our development partnership with President Museveni and his Foreign Minister, Sam Kutesa.

The security situation in northern Uganda has improved over the last year, as Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) numbers have declined in the face of better performance by Uganda's army and less freedom of movement for the LRA in southern Sudan. LRA attacks have fallen, and some of those displaced by conflict in the eastern part of the region have started to return home. But there are still 2 million people displaced, 1.7 million of whom are living in camps. Fear of the LRA remains strong, especially in the Acholi districts of Kitgum, Gulu and Pader. One young girl I spoke to still walks four hours every day there and back to sleep at a night centre as she has done since 2003 for fear of abduction. People will not go home until they are quite certain it is safe to do so. A significant number of the LRA are now active in Garamba national park in the north-eastern part of the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), including leaders who have been indicted by the International Criminal Court (ICC). This adds to regional insecurity.

The humanitarian effort, including the £20 million provided by DFID in 2004-05, has improved conditions in the camps. But the camps are crowded and there are major challenges in providing essential services. I visited Padibe camp in Kitgum district where 35,000 displaced people still live. In the Health Centre, there were only a handful of health workers, no doctor present, beds had no mattresses to hand, there was a shortage of drugs, and no ARVs for HIV-positive patients. Less than six litres of water are available per person per day compared to a humanitarian target of 15 litres per person per day. There is a cholera outbreak in the region. The humanitarian situation continues to demand our attention.

In my discussions with President Museveni and his Foreign Minister, I emphasised that greater effort was needed to address the humanitarian situation and as security allows to help people return home. We agreed that the Joint Monitoring Committee recently established by the Government and including the core group of bilateral donors (UK, US, Netherlands and Norway), the UN and civil society should help achieve this provided there was an agreed and effectively monitored plan. I made a commitment to continued substantial humanitarian assistance from the UK and for help with recovery when this becomes possible.

I welcomed President Museveni's discussions with the government of southern Sudan about tackling the LRA, but emphasised that ICC's warrants against the LRA leadership had to be enforced. I also emphasised that the regional integrity of the DRC must be respected. We agreed that a Special Envoy could have an important role to play in achieving the regional cooperation required to deal effectively with the LRA.

I also emphasised the importance of the government working with the opposition in the new Parliament to strengthen political pluralism and to help achieve an effective and accountable parliamentary process. I raised the care of Dr Kiiza Besigye and President Museveni assured me that due process will be followed in his High Court trial. I also discussed the President's commitment in his election manifesto and subsequent public statements to tackle corruption. Promoting good governance in Uganda is an important priority for the UK.

Visit to Somalia

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): On 17 May 2006, I visited: Wajid, the United Nations' logistics hub for the drought relief operation in Southern Somalia to which DFID has contributed £12 million; and Baidoa, the temporary seat of the Somalia Transitional Federal Parliament (TFP) and Government (TFG).

In Wajid, I saw at first hand the effect of the drought: firstly in an Action Contre Le Faim (ACF) therapeutic feeding centre for malnourished children brought from distances of up to 50 km, and then in a camp occupied by about 11,000 people who were living in terrible conditions under very basic shelters, and being fed by the World Food Programme. Now that some rain has arrived, the menfolk have returned to their homes to begin cultivation. However, the harvest will not come for several months, and the families in the camps will need to be cared for in the meantime. I was also able to visit a UNICEF-organised tent school in the camp, where about 300 children and an equal number of boys and girls are enjoying very basic primary education for the first time in their lives. UN agency and Non-Governmental Organisation representatives told me that despite the logistical and security problems of working in Somalia, the relief effort had averted a humanitarian disaster, and while I was there I committed a further £2 million to support what I hope will be post-drought operations.

In Baidoa, I called on President Abdulahi Yusuf Ahmed, Prime Minister Ali Mohamed Gedi, and Parliamentary Speaker Sharif Hassan Sheik Adan, the leaders of the Transitional Institutions. I was struck by the warmth of their welcome, and how, having earlier this year buried their differences, they are trying to build a new administration from absolutely nothing, working from loaned properties including a warehouse converted into a parliamentary chamber. Despite their great fragility, these transitional institutions represent the best hope for taking Somalia forward from over 15 years of internal conflict, which sadly has continued with recent fighting in Mogadishu. The President and Prime Minister emphasised the urgent need for support to education—not currently available to the vast majority (about 80 per cent.) of children—and I was able to announce plans for a new £6 million DFID partnership programme with UNICEF and others over three years.

Building the new institutions, and the systems to bring internal reconciliation, security and stability as pre-requisites for development, will take time, but some progress is being made. I committed a further £1.5 million to the UNDP-led institutional support programme to the Transitional Institutions.

We must all hope that the political transition in Somalia, fragile though it still is, will start to bring the stability and security for which the ordinary people of that country have been yearning for so many years. The UK will continue to provide support to the Somali Transitional Institutions to that end.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Prosecution Guidelines

The Solicitor-General (Mr. Mike O'Brien): My right hon. Friend the Attorney General has made the following written ministerial statement:

"Treasury Counsel is appointed by the Attorney General. In the light of the increase in the complexity of cases prosecuted by Treasury Counsel and the need to ensure that appointments are open and fair, I commissioned a review of the current Treasury Counsel arrangements. The review team, comprising Dru Sharpling, the Chief Crown Prosecutor for Crown Prosecution Service, London; Mohammed Aziz, Commissioner at the Commission for Racial Equality; Philip Oliver, a non-executive director of the Crown Prosecution Service and Richard Ferguson QC, has delivered a report to me that includes 23 recommendations, which I have accepted.

In the course of their work, the review team consulted widely, including members of the judiciary, Treasury Counsel, chairman of the Bar Council and the Crown Prosecution Service and other barristers. Additionally, the CPS conducted, on behalf of the review team, an independent consultation exercise from an equalities perspective. I am placing a copy of the review team's report in the Library of the House.

The recommendations should ensure that Treasury Counsel is appointed in accordance with open and fair competition rules that promote equality and diversity, whilst maintaining the high standards of service provided by them. Other important recommendations address new ways of monitoring the performance of Treasury Counsel, which delivers a valuable service to the public.

The addendum to the report sets out proposals for the appointment of Treasury Counsel outside London and an alternative approach for dealing with serious criminal cases that would not be conducted at the Central Criminal Court."

TRANSPORT

Transport Innovation Fund

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Dr. Stephen Ladyman): In July 2004 the Secretary of State for transport announced the creation of the Transport Innovation Fund (TIF). The Fund will support:

"the costs of smarter, innovative local transport packages that combine demand management measures, such as road pricing, with measures to encourage modal shift, and better bus services; local mechanisms which raise new funding for transport schemes; and regional, inter-regional and local schemes that are beneficial to national productivity."

Today I am publishing further guidance on our approach to the first of these objectives, setting out the criteria we intend to use to assess bids for a second round of pump priming to support scheme development. Copies of the guidance are available from the Department for Transport (DfT) web site at www.dft.gov.uk and in the Library of the House.

The TIF represents a new approach by the Department for Transport (DfT) to the allocation of some of its budget. Through the TIF, resources will be directed towards the achievement of two high priority objectives—specifically tackling congestion and improving productivity. The principle underlying the TIF is that resources should be allocated on the basis of an assessment of how these objectives can be most effectively and sustainably met. The provision of pump priming funding only applies to congestion TIF schemes.

"The Future of Transport" White Paper identified the risk that, despite effective policies to promote smarter choices and network management, without radical measures, including more effective demand management, road congestion will spread over time to longer periods in the day, and to more road users. This would have negative impact on both quality of life and on the economy. Local road pricing schemes are also important in order to pilot technology and systems and to inform the decisions on the development of national road pricing in the longer term.

We recognise that the development and appraisal of such packages will be a complex and costly process for many local authorities. That is why the Government decided to offer a limited number of local authorities some financial assistance with scheme development in advance of substantive congestion TIF funding. In July 2005 it was announced that up to £18 million was set aside between 2005-06 and 2007-08. The first allocations were made to seven areas in November 2005. The guidance published today covers the second allocation of funding.

It explains the basis on which DfT intends to allocate this pump priming funding for the second round and sets out the information that will be required from local authorities intending to bid. The guidance applies both to authorities considering putting forward new proposals and to authorities who successfully obtained funding in the first round of pump priming and who wish to apply for further funding. Eligibility for funding is restricted to local authorities in England.

The process for allocating pump priming funding is separate from the process of allocating the main TIF. Full guidance on the TIF was published in January 2006. It is not necessary to have had a successful pump-priming bid in order to apply for funding to the TIF through the congestion entry point. Nor does a successful pump-priming bid offer any guarantee of success in a bid for main TIF scheme funding.

West Coast Route Modernisation

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Derek Twigg): The Department for Transport have this morning published a progress report describing the substantial amount of work carried out in renewing : nd upgrading this key railway route, along with the commitments due for completion by the end of 2008.

Copies of this report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and will be available on the DFT website www.dft.gov.uk.

Community Budget

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Ed Balls): The statement on the 2006 budget of the European Communities (EC budget), entitled "European Community Finances" (Cm 6770), has today been laid before Parliament. This White Paper is the 26th in the series. As in the past, it covers annual budgetary matters and includes details of recent developments in European Community financial management and in countering fraud against the EC budget. It also describes the EC budget for 2006 as adopted by the European Parliament, and details the United Kingdom's gross and net contributions to the EC budget for calendar years 2000 to 2006 and financial years 2000-01 to 2007-08.

HEALTH

Legal Services (Regulation)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Bridget Prentice): On 17 October 2005, I informed this House of the publication of the White Paper "The Future of Legal Services: Putting Consumers First" setting out the Government's proposals for the regulatory reform of legal services in England and Wales. I am pleased today, just seven months later, to be publishing the draft Legal Services Bill for pre-legislative scrutiny, as the first step in delivering on those proposals. Copies of the draft Bill and accompanying regulatory impact assessment will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The draft Bill sets out our detailed plans for the creation of a strong independent oversight regulator the Legal Services Board which will ensure that front line regulators discharge their duties effectively. In addition, legislation will provide the LSB with a wide range of powers including those to authorise and de-authorise front line regulators and to quickly bring unregulated legal services under its remit through secondary legislation to best protect consumers interests. Our proposals also provide for the creation of an independent office for legal complaints, which for the first time will remove the handling of legal complaints from the legal professions. The OLC will help to foster greater consumer confidence and result in quick and fair redress.

The draft Legal Services Bill also sets out arrangements to facilitate alternative business structures, which would enable different kinds of lawyers, and lawyers and non-lawyers, to work together on an equal footing. These structures will allow legal services to be delivered in new ways, promoting greater competition and innovation and enabling providers to better respond to the demands of consumers. A range of safeguards will be put in place to protect consumers and demand high standards.

In taking forward these proposals the Government have continued to engage with key stakeholders. The consumer advisory panel, comprising representatives of main consumer bodies, has contributed significantly to informing and shaping the proposed reforms. In addition to the consumer panel we have, throughout the process, maintained effective engagement with all stakeholder groups including the legal professions, consumer organisations and the general public.

The draft Legal Services Bill will be subject to pre-legislative scrutiny by the Joint Committee that has been constituted for that purpose, which will report by July 2006. This timeframe provides an opportunity for Parliament to take evidence and consider the detail of the proposals and make recommendations through the Joint Committee's final report.

These proposals are complex and important and I believe it is right that Parliament should have the opportunity to scrutinise them in draft form. I look forward to receiving the Joint Committee's report.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Marine Environment

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mr. Ben Bradshaw): I am pleased to announce the Government's response to the 25th report of the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution: "Turning the Tide—Addressing the Impact of Fisheries on the Marine Environment".

The Royal Commission's report, which was presented to Parliament in December 2004, was an important contribution to thinking on how we can better protect the marine environment. The RCEP report made over 70 recommendations covering a wide range of fisheries activity and their impact on the marine environment.

We have for the most part accepted the RCEP's recommendations. The key recommendation in the RCEP report was the need for a new framework for marine management. Our response reflects developments on the Marine Bill, in particular the public consultation launched in March this year. The response also reflects Government's recent decisions on decommissioning, and progress made since publication of "Securing the Benefits", the Fisheries Departments' response to the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit landmark report, "Net Benefits".

Key elements of the response, structured around seven themes, are:

Improved management of the marine environment

Improved management of fisheries

International fisheries management

Research

Public participation

Jurisdictional issues

Reducing the environmental impacts of aquaculture

The Government's full response will be published on the DEFRA website shortly.

Copies of the response are being placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Great Britain - China Centre

The Minister for Trade (Mr. Ian McCartney): I am pleased to announce the Government's continued support for the Great Britain-China Centre (GBCC), through a grant-in-aid by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, after a recent review.

The GBCC has been a centre of expertise on China, with a particular focus on human rights, labour reform and improving the rule of law in China, since 1974. It can contribute unique skills and access to fulfilling these important functions. The Centre also provides support for parliamentary and other exchanges with China. The GBCC is a Non-Departmental Public Body (NDPB) sponsored by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office through an annual grant-in-aid of £300,000.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office commissioned a review of the GBCC in mid-2005. The aim of the review was to examine whether the function provided by the GBCC was required, and whether the Centre's existing form as a NDPB was the best option for delivery.

During the consultation period following the review, many hon. Members expressed their views to the Government on the valuable role of the GBCC in promoting sensitive issues such as labour reform and the rule of law in China. It was judged that the arm's-length approach of the GBCC brings value-added benefit that cannot be achieved by Government. In light of these responses and subsequent work by the GBCC and officials of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to correct the management and control weaknesses identified in the Review, the Government have decided to maintain the GBCC's NDPB status.

The follow-up work to the review has ensured that the GBCC now has stronger financial controls, a better alignment of the Centre's work with Government policy on China and improved management oversight. Ministerial agreement to these new measures brings to an end the process initiated by the review. The GBCC now looks forward to further consolidating and expanding its position as a centre of expertise on China, widening its project base and diversifying its funding sources, including from the EU, UN and the private sector.

Throughout this period, we have appreciated the constructive and co-operative approach of all members of the Executive Committee and staff of the GBCC. The Government welcome the conclusion of the review and looks forward to continuing to work in partnership with the GBCC on China.

TRANSPORT

M6 Toll

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Douglas Alexander): The M6 toll road was privately financed, built, and is now operated by Midland Expressway Ltd (MEL) under a concession agreement signed by the then Secretary of State for Transport in 1992.

Having borne all the financial and development risk associated with the construction of the £900 million M6 toll, Macquarie Infrastructure Group (MIG)—the owners of MEL—are proposing to refinance MEL's debt, recognising the revised risk MEL now bears as operator of the road, which has been open to traffic since December 2003.

I am pleased to record that MIG have agreed to fund £112 million of road improvements in the West Midlands from their total refinancing resources.

This re-investment will fund improvements to the slip road access from the M42 to the southern end of the M6 toll, and will cover the costs of construction, operation and maintenance of a new road from the M54 and Telford to the M6 and the M6 toll.

The need for this link was identified in the west midlands area multi-modal study (WMAMMS), to improve access to and from the M54 corridor and Telford, and the Highways Agency has been undertaking detailed work with a view to developing a scheme for entry to the targeted programme of improvements.

The new road should open to traffic around 2012 (subject to the usual statutory processes), helping to free up current bottlenecks and to improve road travel through the region.

TREASURY

Civil Registration Reform

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (John Healey): I announced to the House on 16 November 2005, Official Report, col 51WS the publication of the consultation paper 'Registration Modernisation' containing proposals for giving local authorities greater responsibility and accountability for the delivery of the local registration service in England and Wales. The consultation paper also included other proposals to modernise civil registration.

Around 150 responses were received to the consultation paper from local authorities, registration officers, specific interest groups, national and regional groups, and representative organisations. There was overwhelming agreement from the full range of respondents that a new governance framework is long overdue and almost unanimous support from local authorities and regional local authority groups to the proposed revised framework.

The Government intend to push ahead with the new governance arrangements and other changes which can be taken forward under existing legislation. The General Register Office will work with the Local Authority Coordinators of Regulatory Services and the Society of Registration Officers to agree national standards and over the next two months aim to finalise the guidance to be issued to local authorities. The guidance will also seek to deal with the concerns about the employment position of registration officers raised in response to the consultation. The Government will keep under review the need for legislation on other aspects civil registration.

I have placed a copy of the report on the response to the consultation paper in the Libraries of both Houses.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

City of London Franchise Report

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Bridget Prentice): My noble Friend the Secretary of State and Lord Chancellor has made the following written ministerial statement:

"I have today laid before Parliament the City of London corporation report on the City of London (Ward Elections) Act 2002, hereafter referred to as "The Act". The Act reformed and modernised the business element of the franchise for local elections in the City of London.

The City of London corporation submitted the report on the working of its new franchise arrangements to me pursuant to Section 7(1) of the Act.

I am inclined to think that a further report will be required following the 2009 elections, however I will make a final decision on whether to ask the city to submit one, under section 7(2) of the Act 2002, at the time".

DEFENCE

Equal Opportunities Commission Action Plan

The Secretary of State for Defence (Des Browne): The action plan forms phase three of an agreement signed by the MOD and the EOC in June 2005 that outlined the MOD's commitment to tackling sexual harassment.

To inform the action plan, MOD commissioned independent research into the nature and extent of sexual harassment in the Armed Forces, including a survey of all service women. The action plan demonstrates the MOD's commitment to tackling the serious issues highlighted by this research. It provides a clear undertaking to create an environment, through strong leadership, in which harassment is recognised as inappropriate and preventable.

The full text of the action plan and the survey report is at www.mod.uk/DefenceIntenet/AboutDefence/Issue/DiversityAndEquality/EqualOpportunitiesInTheArmedForces.htm

and copies are also available in the Library of the House.

Gurkhas

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Tom Watson): On 11 January 2005, the then Secretary of State for Defence, announced to the House that we were undertaking a comprehensive review of the terms and conditions of service under which Gurkhas serve in the British Army, which would subsume an earlier review on married accompanied service for Gurkhas.

I am pleased to be able to confirm that improved married accompanied service arrangements are being implemented from 1 April this year, and I hope our Gurkha soldiers will benefit from the much better opportunities to have their families with them at their permanent station. We have also been able to introduce national insurance contribution records for Gurkhas, so that they can qualify for the associated benefits, and they now pay food and accommodation charges, and are eligible for refunds, on the same basis as British soldiers.

But the then Secretary of State for Defence warned that the review would be a major piece of work, and it has raised some very substantial and complex issues which I do not intend to press to hasty conclusions. Therefore, although at the time of the last statement it was hoped that the review could be completed by late autumn 2005, it is now unlikely that I will be able to make any further announcement until later this year.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Departmental Report

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (David Miliband): My 2006 Departmental report which contains information on progress against the Department's aims and Public Service Agreement Targets, the challenges ahead and summary expenditure plans for 2005-06 to 2007-08 will be laid before Parliament today.

Drought Order Applications

The Minister for Climate Change and the Environment (Ian Pearson): My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, on the application by the companies concerned, has today granted drought orders that empower Mid Kent Water and Southern Water to limit or prohibit the uses set out in the Drought Direction 1991 (as modified in the Orders). The Mid Kent Water order affects its entire supply area. The two Orders granted to Southern Water apply to the company's Medway, Thanet, Hastings and Sussex Coast/Sussex North supply areas but not to the company's Hampshire and Isle of Wight supply areas. These follow the Order granted last week to Sutton and East Surrey Water.

We have seen 18 months of below average rainfall. In these circumstances, the Government's priority is the protection of consumers and of the environment during this exceptional drought. By reducing non-essential uses, through the sensible implementation of this type of drought order, essential supplies to communities can be better maintained should the drought continue. Taking precautionary action now is the responsible thing to do.

In taking these decisions, we have carefully considered the reports by the independent Inspectors. The reports concluded that there has been an exceptional shortage of rain and that without the proposed non-essential use bans there is a substantial threat to water supplies in the companies' supply areas. In reaching their conclusions the Inspectors examined the companies' performance in terms of leakage, and noted that both are meeting the long-term targets set by the economic regulator, Ofwat. I am persuaded that the restrictions allowed by these Orders are necessary over and above any further improvements on leakage they are able to make in the short term. I have made clear that we expect to see continued efforts from all the companies to improve leakage. But reducing leakage alone does not solve the problems of low rainfall.

We are granting these Orders as a precautionary measure, to allow the companies to take the actions proportionate to the evolving threat to supplies. While the exercise and use of the powers conferred through the Orders is a matter for each company concerned, I expect each company to implement the restrictions in a manner that achieves the most in the way of water savings with as little impact as possible on businesses and in the light of changing circumstances. I have asked each company to keep me informed about the way that they are implementing those restrictions that prove necessary and their overall position on supplies. In addition to this my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I will be meeting next week with both the Regulator, Ofwat, and all of the water companies to discuss the management of water resources.

Many people have reacted positively to the message that in addition to action by the companies, we have collective responsibility for managing water as a shared resource. I hope that today's decisions will help everyone focus on the key message that in the areas affected it is their actions now, and in the months to come, which will help all of us to avoid more extreme sanctions should the drought continue into the summer and beyond.

Recent rainfall will temporarily boost river flows and help to maintain reservoir stocks, but will do little for overall supplies because the region relies heavily on groundwater (water that seeps through the soil into porous rocks, such as chalk) for 70 per cent. of its supply; in the case of Mid Kent Water that rises to 85 per cent.

In its report to Ministers last week, the Environment Agency advised that the winter recharge season for groundwater is now over, yet groundwater levels remain critically low. The rain we are seeing now and any we see over the rest of the summer will have little impact on groundwater levels, because at this time of year the effects of evaporation and the uptake of water by growing plants and trees means that most of the rain does not reach the aquifers. In winter we usually get more rain than in other seasons, and a higher proportion gets down to the aquifers. But even though we have passed the recharge season we are still taking hundreds of thousands of tons of water every day from the aquifers in the areas concerned.

There are no further drought orders under consideration. I will keep the House informed of any further decisions, should more applications for drought orders be made.

HEALTH

MHRA

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Andy Burnham): My predecessor my right hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool and Wavertree (Jane Kennedy), informed the House of progress made by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) in investigating the incident that occurred with the phase 1 clinical trial for a drug in development known as TGN1412, 19 April 2006, Official Report, cols 13-14WS. The MHRA is today publishing the final report of its investigations. A copy of the report has been placed in the Library and copies are available for hon. Members in the Vote Office.

The report indicates that the adverse incidents did not involve errors in the manufacture of TGN1412 or in its formulation, dilution or administration to trial participants. The report does reference a number of procedural shortcomings that were brought to light by the MHRA's inspection. None of these was judged to have led to the adverse incidents suffered by the volunteers in this trial, but they are being followed up in the normal way through regulatory action with the company.

The MHRA therefore confirms its conclusion set out in its interim report of 5 April that an unpredicted biological action of the drug in humans is the most likely cause of the adverse reactions in the trial participants. Monoclonal antibodies are a relatively new type of biological drug, although there are a number of them already licensed and in use. However, TGN1412 is a new class of monoclonal antibody which has a stimulatory mode of action affecting certain types of cell in the immune system. In this case the resulting activity seen in humans was not predicted from apparently adequate pre-clinical testing. This is a complex scientific issue which raises important scientific and medical questions about the potential risks associated with this type of drug and how to make the transition from pre-clinical testing to trials in humans.

In the earlier written ministerial statement it was also announced that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State had agreed to the establishment of an expert working group to consider what this incident reveals about the underlying science, and how clinical trials involving these types of products should be managed and authorised in the future. My right hon. Friend has appointed Professor Gordon Duff to chair the expert group. Professor Duff has now identified, and appointed on behalf of the Secretary of State, the members of his group which have today been announced.

The terms of reference of the expert group are to consider what may be necessary in the transition from pre-clinical to first-in-man phase 1 studies, and in the design of these trials, with specific reference to:

biological molecules with novel mechanisms of action;

new agents with a highly species-specific action; and new drugs directed towards immune system targets.

To provide advice in the form of a report to the Secretary of State for Health for the future authorisation of such trials with an interim report to be provided within three months.

We will then provide a further report to the House when the expert group provides its interim report.

The members of the group are as follows;

HOME DEPARTMENT

Bichard Inquiry

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (John Reid): Copies of the Government's third progress report on implementing the recommendations of the Bichard Inquiry have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses today. Our last report was made in November 2005 and there have been many positive developments over the last six months. Twenty one of Sir Michael's 31 recommendations have been substantially delivered and clear work plans are being taken forward in relation to those which remain outstanding.

The IMPACT programme is at the heart of achieving fundamental improvements in police information management. It is delivering against Sir Michael's recommendations in this area as one aspect of ensuring the police have the facilities, procedures and skills to make best use of information to safeguard the vulnerable and combat all forms of crime. This latest reporting period has seen the introduction of the Impact Nominal Index, which is facilitating the sharing of information across all forces. A statutory code of practice on police information management has come into force, together with extensive operational guidance and a programme of training and support to ensure improved national standards are embedded in day-to-day policing.

Sir Michael rightly emphasised the importance of sharing information between the relevant delivery agencies and once again there is much positive progress to report. In particular, the recent publication of the revised "Working Together to Safeguard Children" provides the national guidance recommended by Sir Michael on notifying the police and children's social care, and sharing information among agencies, where there are suspected criminal offences against children.

Our intensive programme of work to develop a central vetting and barring scheme covering all those wishing to work with children or vulnerable adults is continuing. The introduction of the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Bill at the end of February was a very important milestone. In parallel with the legislative process, we are pressing on with a set of interim changes to systems to help ensure those unsuitable to work with vulnerable persons are prevented from doing so. The Criminal Records Bureau has made a key contribution to this work by putting in place a number of specific changes which Sir Michael highlighted as necessary.

We are giving increasing emphasis to the new online training for head teachers and school governors which focuses on the critical importance of being aware of safeguarding issues when recruiting staff. We are also exploring ways to extend the safer recruitment training more widely in schools and other sectors of education, the wider children's workforce, the voluntary sector, and other work sectors such as healthcare.

Finally, and in addition to all the work to implement its specific recommendations, the Bichard Inquiry continues to provide all of us with a strengthened focus on protecting children and those adult members of our society who are especially vulnerable. The safeguarding agenda is becoming increasingly coherent and prominent and that is a process which must and will continue.

Foreign Nationals (Deportation and Removal)

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (John Reid): I would like to correct an error contained in my written statement of 23 May, Official Report, column 77WS and to apologise for inadvertently misleading the House.

In my statement I reported that four murderers and 23 other "most serious" offenders, including rapists and child sex offenders (who were among the 1,019 cases who were not considered for deportation before their release from prison) were detained in prison. I was subsequently informed that of these one murderer, one rapist and one child sex offender who had been detained have in fact since been released on bail by the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal. In addition, I have been informed of eight other cases where the individual has been bailed, including four in the "more serious" category. I have been told that these bail applications were heard over the past two weeks and that more hearings are due to take place in the coming days.

I have asked the Department to recheck all the figures provided to the House in my statement.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Community-based Restorative Justice

The Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office (Mr. David Hanson): On 5 December 2005 I initiated a consultation on draft guidelines which were aimed at putting in place important safeguards recommended by the Criminal Justice Review as prerequisites for community-based restorative justice schemes playing a part in dealing with low-level crime. The consultation period closed in March. There were 56 responses from a range of organisations and individuals.

The issues raised in the consultation merit careful consideration. Any guidelines which eventually emerge must deal effectively with the concerns many have reflected to me in their submissions and in meetings on this issue. It is important that any relationship which the schemes may develop with the criminal justice system helps to promote and not undermine public confidence in the system. I regard it as essential that the guidelines should set the necessary high standards expected of any organisations seeking to play a role within the criminal justice system.

I am now considering the issues and concerns raised in the consultation and will make a further statement on the way ahead when that process has been completed shortly.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Iraq Legal Advice (Freedom of Information)

The Solicitor-General (Mr. Mike O'Brien): The information Commissioner has today published an enforcement notice under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in relation to requests for information relating to the advice given on the legality of military intervention in Iraq in 2003.

The Cabinet Office and the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers have issued a disclosure statement which the information commissioner is satisfied meets the requirements of his enforcement notice. The disclosure statement draws very heavily on material already in the public domain.

Copies of the enforcement notice and disclosure statement are annexed to this statement and have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Committees of the Cabinet

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): I have today placed a copy of the current list of Cabinet Committees, their full membership and terms of reference in the Libraries of both Houses. Details have also been updated on the Cabinet Office website.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. James Plaskitt): The Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council will be held on 1 June in Luxembourg. My hon. Friend the Minister for Disabled People (Anne McGuire) will be representing the UK except for the item on the Working Time Directive where the UK will be represented by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and my hon. Friend, the Minister for Employment Relations and Minister for London (Jim Fitzpatrick). Health and Consumer Affairs issues are being taken on 2 June.

The first item is a policy debate on the review of the EU Sustainable Development Strategy. Member states were invited to submit a written response to three questions which have been tabled at all Councils. Additional questions have been posed about social inclusion to Employment and Social Policy Ministers. The Minister will contribute to the debate by stating that the most relevant link between the work of this Council and the Sustainable Development Strategy is through its focus on generating economic prosperity, more and better jobs and increasing social inclusion.

The second item is on Social Services of General Interest. The Commission will give a presentation on its recent Communication which addresses the area of the legal uncertainty arising from the situation whereby the European Court of Justice is developing the law on social services on a case-by-case basis. The Social Protection Committee has drafted an Opinion on the Communication and the revised draft Services Directive. It generally welcomes both documents.

The Council will reach partial general approach on both the Proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council implementing Regulation (EC) No 883/04 on the co-ordination of social security schemes and the Proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council amending Regulation (EC) No 883/2004 on the co-ordination of social security systems, and determining the content of Annex XI.

Ministers will be expected to endorse political agreement on the amended proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council establishing a European Institute for Gender Equality. The proposal provides for the creation of a European Gender Institute to produce objective, reliable and comparative information on gender equality and data at national and European levels and to give visibility to gender equality. Its aim is to increase the opportunities for sharing knowledge, data and information on best practice, and facilitate networking.

There will be Council conclusions on the Review of the implementation by the Member States and the EU institutions of the Beijing Platform for Action. Following the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women held in Beijing in 1995, the Council asked Member States to undertake an annual review of the implementation of the resulting Platform for Action. Each Presidency concentrates on different areas. The Austrian Presidency is looking at 'Women and Health' and has produced a report and a set of indicators.

There will be an endorsement of the joint contribution of the Employment Committee and the Social Protection Committee on Flexicurity.

There will be a Progress Report from the Presidency on the proposal for a Directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on improving the portability of supplementary pension rights. This is intended to make it easier for workers with occupational pensions to move around the EU.

The Council is being asked to reach political agreement on the amended proposal for a Decision of the European Parliament and of the Council establishing a Community Programme for Employment and Social Solidarity – PROGRESS. This is the EU-level spending programme for the period 2007-13, which will provide financial support for the implementation of the Community's objectives for employment and social affairs and the achievement of the Lisbon goals.

The Council is being asked to reach political agreement on the annual Employment Guidelines on the proposal for a Council Decision on Guidelines for the Employment Policies of the Member States. The Guidelines set out the framework of common priorities for Member States' employment policies. In 2005 the Council agreed that the Guidelines should run for three years under the refocused Lisbon Strategy for Jobs and Growth. Member States will report on their employment policies in relation to the Guidelines as part of the new National Reform Programmes, to be published in October.

The Council is also seeking political agreement on the amended proposal for a Directive of the European Parliament and of the Council amending Directive 2003/88/EC concerning certain aspects of the organisation of working time. The Working Time Directive, adopted in 1993, regulates maximum working hours and entitlements to rest breaks for workers. It sets out a maximum average working week of 48 hours although the UK retains an individual opt out from this provision.

Under Any Other Business the Presidency will give a report on Proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council establishing the European Globalisation adjustment Fund. There are six written items on Presidency conferences and information from the Portuguese delegation on the Council of Europe Ministers Conference on Family Matters: "Changes in Parenting". The Commission is providing information on its recent Communications on "Guidance on the posting of workers in the framework of the provision of services", "Implementing the partnership for growth and jobs: Making European a 'pole of excellence' on corporate social responsibility", and "Decent Work" and "European Year of Equal Opportunities for all 2007". I do not expect any debate on these items.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 8 May 2006

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

European Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on recent progress on the establishment of a European vocational qualifications framework. [67218]

Bill Rammell: The UK conducted a national consultation on the European Commission's proposal for a European qualifications framework between September and December 2005, and submitted its response in January 2006. UK experts participated in a conference in Budapest in February 2006 to discuss the issues emerging from the consultation. The Commission is currently consulting an expert group containing technical representatives from all EU member states in order to finalise its proposal. We anticipate that a final proposal will be produced in autumn 2006. The final proposal will cover the full spectrum of education and training, including both academic and vocational qualifications.

Level 3 Qualification

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many 19 to 25-year-olds in Coventry South are studying for a first level 3 qualification. [67863]

Bill Rammell: In the academic year 2004/05 there were 269 19 to 25-year-olds in Coventry South studying for a full NVQ level 3 or equivalent qualification* in further education and work-based learning.

This does not include access to HE qualifications or wholly privately funded study aims.

Teachers Pension Scheme

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) contribution rates and (b) proposed contribution rates to the Teachers' Pension Scheme are for (i) teachers and (ii) employers; and from when the proposed rates will take effect. [66278]

Bill Rammell: The pension contributions currently paid by teachers and employers to the Teachers' Pension Scheme (TPS) are 6 per cent. and 13.5 per cent. of salary respectively. The 2004 valuation of the TPS is reporting a net pressure on the contribution rate of 0.8 per cent. of salary. This is on the assumption that the change in contribution rate would take effect from 1 January 2007.

As part of the negotiations between DfES, unions and employer representatives on a package of reforms to the TPS, discussions are continuing on how current and any future pressures arising from scheme valuations should be handled between employers and scheme members. The expectation is that a formal consultation on reform proposals will be launched during May. This will include details of how the 0.8 per cent. net pressure arising from the 2004 valuation will be dealt with in the contribution rate paid by employers and scheme members; and the respective contribution rates that will apply from 1 January 2007.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the projected annual increase in cost is to local education authorities of the proposed increase in the employers' contribution to the Teachers' Pension Scheme. [66778]

Bill Rammell: The proposed increase in employer contributions from January 2007 will add a maximum of 0.8 per cent. to the paybill of local authorities for all those teachers in membership of the Teachers' Pension Scheme. This cost increase has been more than covered in the levels of the minimum funding guarantee for 2006-07 and 2007-08, and by the increases in dedicated schools grant of 6 per cent. in 2006-07 and 6.4 per cent. in 2007-08.

Under-performing Colleges

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether under the proposals in the further education White Paper (Cm 6798) a local education authority would be permitted to take over responsibility for an under-performing college. [67565]

Bill Rammell: Local authorities and the LSC have crucial roles to play in delivering the reforms set out in the White Paper 'Further Education: Raising Skills, Improving Life Chances', and must work together to drive progress through a shared strategy. The White Paper makes clear that we want local authorities to play a strategic leadership role, consistent with their leadership role in children's services overall, ensuring the integration of 14-19 reform with the wider agenda for children and young people in the locality. The Learning and Skills Council will be the primary partner for the local authority, and will use its funding and powers to secure high quality provision which meets the needs of learners and employers in every area. This will include providing opportunities for new and existing high quality providers to openly compete for provision.

The White Paper sets out a robust approach to tackling underperformance which could culminate in the Learning and Skills Council ceasing to fund provision which does not improve; or requiring changes to governance or executive management.

If a change in governance or leadership is required, this might include a stronger role for the relevant local authority at the invitation of the existing governing body.

If funding is withdrawn, replacement provision is likely to be sourced by competition. No one model is expected to arise out of a competition to secure a replacement provider. It would be open to a local authority to participate in a competition if it wished to do so.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Aid Projects

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the Government takes to ensure that aid-sponsored projects are clearly demarked as donor sponsored and not claimed by recipient governments as domestic government funded. [68151]

Hilary Benn: Information on the support provided by DFID to partner countries is publicly available (including on DFID's website www.dfid.gov.uk) and is disseminated in partner countries by DFID offices and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) missions.

We believe that aid is more effective when used to support developing countries' own plans, and to strengthen their own capacity to deliver. So where possible, DFID works in partnership with developing country governments, and integrates our support with their programmes. In such partnerships, our aim is to ensure public understanding of our combined efforts rather than to separately identify donor funded work.

Where however, governments do not share our commitment to reducing poverty reduction, human rights and good financial management, it is important to ensure that our aid is visibly separate from government programmes. For example, in Zimbabwe, no DFID funding is channelled through the Government. All our assistance, which focuses on humanitarian need and the HIV/AIDS crisis, is provided through non-governmental organisations and UN agencies. This substantially reduces the scope for the government to claim credit for assistance provided by DFID

Development Funding

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding the Government have allocated to the (a) Comprehensive Africa Agriculture Development Programme, (b) UN Economic Commission for Africa and (c) Pan-African Parliament for each of the next three years; what funding has been provided in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [66839]

Mr. Thomas: The Comprehensive Africa Agriculture Development Programme (CAADP) sets out Africa leaders' priorities to help boost agricultural growth and food security at continental, regional and country levels. As the UK and other G8 countries only responded firmly to CAADP during 2005, no funds were explicitly allocated to it over the last three years. However, the response below identifies where DFID funding was consistent with the CAADP.

At the country level, the CAADP commits African countries to spend 10 per cent. of their budgets on the agriculture sector. DFID's support to African country budgets will help them do this. However, detailed information on how budget support is allocated to sectors by Africa governments are not held centrally and to gather it would involve incurring a disproportionate cost.

At the regional and continental levels, DFID provided around £80 million over the last three years for agricultural research, one of CAADP's four priorities. In the next three years, DFID has allocated around £85 million to agricultural research in Africa as part of its response to CAADP.

In financial year 2005-06, DFID committed an additional £200,000 to design a programme of additional regional support under CAADP. This will clarify DFID's plans for additional regional work on CAADP over each of the coming three years. DFID has provided a total of £2,348,000 to the UN Economic Commission for Africa (UN-EGA) over the last three financial years (£1,000,000 in 2003-04, £673,121 in 2004-05 and £675,000 in 2005-06). DFID has recently been considering a contribution for the next three years with the Commission. However, this has been delayed whilst the UN-ECA re-examines its role in conjunction with the African Union and the African Development Bank, under the new leadership of Abdoulie Janneh. We expect the UN-ECA to be in a better position to discuss its future needs with donors after its Annual Meeting in May.

No support has been given to the Pan African Parliament to date. However, DFID is currently discussing priorities for support with the Pan African Parliament. We hope to complete the design of a Pan African Parliament support programme over the coming months.

HIV/AIDS

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to increase the percentage of HIV positive pregnant women in Africa with access to (a) information, (b) drugs and (c) antenatal treatment to prevent transmission of the virus to their child. [68160]

Mr. Thomas: Access to prevention of mother-to-child transmission of HIV (PMTCT) services is unacceptably low in many sub Saharan African Countries where often less than 5 per cent. of pregnant women are able to access these services. The recent Secretary General's report to the UN reporting on progress for the past five years on AIDS, highlights that only 9 per cent. of HIV positive pregnant women in low and middle income countries have access to PMTCT services.

DFID has been actively engaged in building international consensus, and as co-chair of the Global Steering Committee for the June 2006 HIV/AIDS UNGASS will be pressing for agreement on actions required to scale up services towards universal access to a comprehensive programme of prevention, treatment and care, including access to PMTCT by 2010 with a "Road Map" for future action.

DFID believes that PMTCT is an important prevention measure which should form part of a comprehensive response to HIV prevention, and has encouraged partner countries to integrate PMTCT plans into maternal and child health and sexual & reproductive health services.

DFID funds are not earmarked for PMTCT, but integrated within AIDS programmes. DFID also works through UN agencies at country level. For example, DFID is currently providing £4 million to

"a universal access to HIV prevention programme with the Joint United Nations Programme for HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) in Rwanda".

DFID is the second largest donor to UNICEF which is the lead UN agency responsible for PMTCT services under the global task force (GTT) arrangements.

Maternal Health

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he expects his Department to meet its public service agreement targets on maternal health. [68164]

Hilary Benn: I expect the 2005-08 public service agreement target on maternal health in Asia to be met by 2008. I do not, however, expect the target on maternal health in Africa, to be met by 2008. Progress against this target after 2008 will therefore be subject to further discussion during the next spending review.

The target for Asia is to achieve an increase of 15 percentage points in the proportion of births assisted by skilled birth attendants. The latest estimate is 43 per cent. using data from 2001 to 2003, compared to 38 per cent. in 2000. If the current rate of progress continues, it is estimated that the target should just be achieved by 2008.

The target for Africa is to achieve an increase in the proportion of births assisted by skilled birth attendants by 11 percentage points. The latest estimate is 47 per cent. and increases before 2008 are unlikely. DFID has not yet estimated when this will be achieved.

Further detail on the latest progress against these and all public service agreements will be presented in the 2006 Departmental Report which will be laid before Parliament in the next few days.

Millennium Development Goals

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what contribution the United Kingdom has made towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals; and what recent assessment his Department has made of the time scale for the goals to be achieved. [67888]

Hilary Benn: The UK's contribution towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals is summarised in DFID's reports of progress towards the 2003-06 and 2005-08 public service agreements (PSAs). Those PSAs are based on the Millennium Development Goals. Progress was last reported in the 2005 Autumn Performance Report which was laid before Parliament in December 2005. Copies of this report are available in the Libraries of the House on the DFID website (www.dfid.gov.uk). Progress will also be reported in DFID's 2006 Departmental Report. This will be laid before Parliament within the next few days.

DFID has not yet made an assessment of the time scale for each of the goals to be achieved in the period after 2008. The departmental report will however, summarise progress in the key countries in which DFID works.

Public Service Agreements

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which of its public service agreement targets his Department is furthest from meeting. [68166]

Hilary Benn: The most recent assessment of progress towards the public service agreements was outlined in DFID's Autumn Performance Report, which was laid before Parliament in December 2005. Progress will also be reported in DFID's departmental report. This will be laid before Parliament in the next few days.

The six targets in the 2005-08 public service agreement that are currently furthest from being met are:

an increase in the ratio of girls to boys enrolled in primary school by five percentage points in Africa;

an increase in the proportion of births assisted by skilled birth attendants by 11 percentage points in Africa;

an increase in net primary school enrolment by eight percentage points in Asia;

a reduction in under-five mortality rates for girls and boys by 24 per 1000 live births in Asia;

a tuberculosis case detection rate above 70 per cent. in Asia;

a greater impact of EC external programmes on poverty reduction and working for agreement to increase the proportion of EC official development assistance (oda) to low income countries from its 2000 baseline figure of 38 per cent. to 70 per cent. by 2008.

Sexual Violence

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to work with Governments in Africa (a) to improve the status of women, (b) to reduce the incidence of sexual violence, particularly during conflict, and (c) to prosecute cases of sexual violence. [68168]

Hilary Benn: There is growing political consensus among member states of the African Union on promoting gender equality and empowerment. A Protocol to the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights on the Rights of Women in Africa was ratified in November 2005. A key element is the elimination of discrimination against women. DFID seeks to encourage and support African Governments in their work at country level to put this into practice. DFID has provided financial support to the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa (UNECA), who has developed an African Gender and Development Index which shows specific gaps in the status of women at country level.

DFID provides financial support for work to reduce violence against women and to provide support for legal assistance in a number of countries in Africa. For example, in Sierra Leone, DFID has provided support for Sexual Assault Referral Centres for victims of sexual assault and gender based violence; in Ethiopia it has provided core support to the Ethiopian Women Lawyers Association, who provide legal aid and assistance for issues affecting women; in Uganda DFID supports UNICEF's protection work in northern Uganda, one component of which aims to address sexual and gender based violence; and in Uganda and Ghana DFID provides support to programmes aimed at tackling domestic violence. DFID also provides financial support to the UN Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) which supports the Trust Fund for the Elimination of Violence Against Women and the Women, Peace and Security Programme.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to assist the government of Liberia (a) in reducing the incidence of rape and (b) to prosecute rape cases effectively. [68169]

Hilary Benn: DFID funding to Liberia is mainly channelled through multilateral organisations, such as UN agencies, and the European Commission. To contribute to better public safety, and in response to a request from the UN Secretary General, DFID has recently provided £2.1 million to the United Nations Development Programme Trust Fund for Crisis Prevention and Recovery in Liberia for support to the deactivation of unqualified Liberian National Police (LNP) Officers. The LNP is responsible for maintaining law and order, investigating crime, collecting evidence and arresting and remanding suspects pending trial. Effective reform and rebuilding of the LNP would be a significant step towards providing more security for people, including women. DFID has also contributed £6 million to the disarmament, demobilisation, rehabilitation and reintegration process since 2003, improving safety and security for the population.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the trend in the number of severely malnourished children in Darfur over recent months. [67873]

Hilary Benn: The massive international response to the Darfur crisis led to a significant improvement in the humanitarian situation last year, including in rates of malnutrition. Since January, however, rising levels of violence, lawlessness and displacement, together with a shortfall in donor funding for this year, threaten to reverse the progress that has been made.

UNICEF has recently warned of a risk of rising malnutrition. They have also reported instances of increasing rates of children being admitted to feeding centres, in line with what would be expected at this time of year because of the changing seasons. However, with the exception of localised pockets, malnutrition rates currently remain below the emergency threshold, and are significantly better than this time last year.

UNICEF's warning underlines the urgent need to end the violence in Darfur, to allow humanitarian agencies unrestricted access, and for donors to increase their funding for the 2006 appeal. The UK has been one of the few donors providing early and reliable funding to the crisis in Darfur in 2006. We continue to press our international donor partners to contribute more, and we are also working with the UN to find ways of mitigating the impact of the current shortfall of funding.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of recent statements by the UN Under-Secretary General for Humanitarian Affairs regarding the state of the relief operation in Darfur. [68233]

Hilary Benn: We share the concerns raised by Jan Egeland, UN Under-Secretary General for Humanitarian Affairs. As he noted, the security situation has deteriorated dramatically since January, with increasing levels of banditry, armed clashes and attacks on civilians and UN and NGO staff. This rising level of insecurity threatens to reverse progress made in 2005. Over the last four months alone, 200,000 people have been driven from their homes by the violence. The ability of the UN and NGOs to access the most vulnerable people is becoming a critical issue with no or very limited access to up to 650,000 people in Darfur.

As Mr Egeland rightly identified, these problems are compounded by the increase in restrictions and administrative delays imposed on humanitarian agencies by the Government of Sudan. We continue to press the Government for unimpeded and safe access for the humanitarian agencies. We hope that a conclusion to the Abuja peace process will aid this process.

The UK has played a leading role in the international community's response to Darfur, including support to the Abuja process. The UK is one of the few donors providing early and reliable funding to the humanitarian effort in 2006. We continue to press our international donor partners to contribute more, and we are also working with the UN to mitigate the impact of the current funding shortfall and security-related issues.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of trends in the incidence of malnutrition in Darfur. [68234]

Hilary Benn: The massive international response to the Darfur crisis led to a significant improvement in the humanitarian situation last year, including in rates of malnutrition. Since January, rising levels of violence, lawlessness and displacement, together with a shortfall in donor funding for this year, threaten to reverse the progress that has been made.

UNICEF has recently warned of a risk of rising malnutrition. They have also reported instances of increasing rates of children being admitted to feeding centres, in line with what would be expected at this time of year because of the changing seasons. However, with the exception of localised pockets, malnutrition rates currently remain below the emergency threshold, and are significantly better than this time last year.

UNICEF's warning underlines the urgent need to end the violence in Darfur, to allow humanitarian agencies unrestricted access, and for donors to increase their funding for the 2006 appeal. The UK has been one of the few donors providing early and reliable funding to the crisis in Darfur in 2006. We continue to press our international donor partners to contribute more, and we are also working with the UN to find ways of mitigating the impact of the current shortfall of funding.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Avian Influenza

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what preparations have been made for civil contingency planning in the event of an avian influenza epidemic. [68050]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has robust disease control plans and instructions to address an avian influenza epidemic in birds. These are set but in our Exotic Animal Disease Generic Contingency Plan, which is available on the Defra website:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/diseases/notifiable/disease/avianinfluenza-contplan.htm.

These plans and procedures are kept under closer review. They were tested recently during the national avian influenza exercise 'Hawthorn'. They were also used effectively to deal with the case of H5N1 avian influenza in a swan in Cellardyke, Scotland and the recent outbreak of H7N3 avian influenza in Norfolk. We also continue to work very closely with operational partners including the Civil Contingencies Secretariat (CCS), the Department of Health, the Health Protection Agency, the Food Standards Agency, and the devolved administrations.

In addition, my Department has been actively involved in Department of Health-led planning in the event of an influenza pandemic. This is to ensure consistency and the sharing of expertise and experience.

Carcase Transportation

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will seek to legislate to require animal carcases to be transported in (a) sealed and (b) refrigerated lorries. [67614]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Animal By-Products Regulation (EC) No. 1774/2002 lays down strict rules for the collection, transport, storage, handling, processing and use or disposal of all animal by-products, which includes the carcases of fallen stock, in order to safeguard public and animal health.

Animal by-products must be collected and transported in leak-proof, covered vehicles or containers in accordance with Annex II of the EU Regulation. Local authorities, usually Trading Standards, are the enforcement authority for animal by-products legislation and are responsible for ensuring the conditions of the Regulation are complied with.

Transportation in a refrigerated vehicle is not a specific requirement of Annex II of the Regulation, unless the material is unprocessed Category 3 material destined for the production of feed material or pet food, when it must be transported chilled or frozen unless it is processed within 24 hours of departure. In other cases the transportation of animal by-products must take place at an appropriate temperature to avoid any risk to public or animal health and take place without undue delay. In all cases vehicles must be maintained in a clean condition, and be clean and dry before use, and washed and disinfected after use.

In addition, under section 79 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, local authorities have a duty to check their areas periodically for existing and potential statutory nuisances, and to take reasonably practicable steps to investigate complaints of statutory nuisances, including any dust, steam, smell or other effluvia arising on industrial, trade or business premises and being prejudicial to health or a nuisance. A "premises" may be a dwelling, place of business, land, beach, vessel or sea.

Once satisfied that a statutory nuisance exists or may occur or recur, a local authority must issue an abatement notice requiring that the nuisance be ceased or abated within a specified timescale. It is an offence to breach or fail to comply with an abatement notice, which carries upon summary conviction through the courts a maximum fine up £5,000 for domestic premises and £20,000 for industrial, trade and industry premises.

Some plants and processes that have the potential for emissions of offensive odours are regulated under the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations, which are enforced by either the Environment Agency or local authorities depending on the type of installation. Plants and processes that are covered by these regulations are not subject to the statutory nuisance regime, in order to remove double jeopardy.

Vehicles on public highways are not "premises" within the statutory nuisance regime on odour. However, vehicles driven in a careless or antisocial manner (that is causing or likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress) may be seized by the police under section 59 of the Police Reform Act 2002.

Cetaceans

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with (a) the European Commission, (b) France and (c) other EU member states regarding actions necessary to reduce cetacean by-catch. [67034]

Mr. Bradshaw: A European Commission Technical Working Group met on 20 April to discuss the problems member states had been having with implementing the use of acoustic devices (pingers) in gillnet and entangle net fisheries and possible ways forward. The Commission will report back to the Council Internal Fisheries Group.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding his Department has (a) allocated and (b) spent on scientific research into preventing cetacean strandings in UK waters since 2003. [67035]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK Government has spent £734,000 on researching by-catch mitigation measures and monitoring by-catch on vessels from 03/04 to the end of 05/06. Strandings data is obtained separately under the Defra-funded Cetacean and Turtle Stranding Scheme, carried out by the Natural History Museum in partnership with the Institute of Zoology and Scottish Agricultural College.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 17 March 2006, Official Report, column 2506W, on cetacean by-catch, when he expects the Sea Mammal Research Unit to publish its report on observer schemes investigating cetacean by-catch. [67076]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Sea Mammal Research Unit is due to present a report to the Department on observer schemes investigating cetacean by-catch on completion of the research contract in spring 2007. However, results of observer schemes will be used to fulfil the obligations of Council Regulation (EC) 812/2004 and the first information will be available when the UK Government reports to the Commission on 1 June 2006 on by-catch monitoring in specified fisheries.

Incinerators

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the (a) frequency and (b) potential health consequences of the emission from municipal incinerators of PM2.5 particles. [67172]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 2 May 2006]: Following the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit report Waste not, Want not, published in 2002, Defra commissioned an independent body to bring together information on waste management facilities, including municipal incinerators, currently used in the UK and Europe, and the currently available scientific evidence on their environmental and health effects.

The resulting Review of Environmental and Health Effects of Waste Management: Municipal Solid Waste and Similar Wastes report; was peer reviewed by the Royal Society and published in May 2004. Among the other conclusions drawn, the report showed that risks to human health from incineration are small in comparison with other known risks to health.

Emissions from municipal incinerators of PM2.5 particles (estimated at 0.029 thousand tonnes in 2004) are proportionally lower than the contribution from other sectors, at around 0.03 per cent. of the national total of 104 thousand tonnes. The major sources of PM2.5 are thought to be road transport (27 per cent.), domestic combustion (14 per cent.), agriculture, (8 per cent.) industrial off road machinery (7 per cent.) power stations (4 per cent.) and small scale waste burning (4 per cent.). However, this fraction of national emissions will not represent the level of human exposure arising from each source sector as a result of the different heights and conditions of release.

Defra recently launched a consultation on measures to review the Air Quality Strategy for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. This consultation suggests a much more wide ranging approach for pollutants such as fine particles (PM 2.5), which is cost effective, geared towards improving public health in the UK and will lead to further improvements in air quality. Further details on this consultation can be found on the Defra website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/consult/airqualstrat-review/index.htm

Resource Efficiency

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations she has received on improving resource efficiency. [67182]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department receives a range of representations on the subject of improved resource efficiency.

One of the main Government initiatives encouraging resource efficiency s the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste (BREW) Programme, which is returning £284 million from additional landfill tax to businesses over three years. The Programme helps to ensure that advice and assistance are available to help businesses achieve waste reductions and other resource savings in the most effective ways.

The Programme is being developed in full consultation with stakeholders. The Department is currently consulting with stakeholders on the third year of the Programme's delivery, beginning with a stakeholder event on 5 May. A selection of funding options will then be put forward for a full 12 week public consultation in August.

Sakhalin II Development

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the compatibility of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development's funding for Shell's proposed Sakhalin II development with the Government's proposed resolutions at the International Whaling Commission on protecting the Western Gray Whale from anthropogenic impact. [67240]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government are fully aware of the environmental issues associated with this project including any potential impact on the Western Gray Whale. The European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD), Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD) and other members of the lender group are treating these issues very seriously and the group's concerns have been reflected in improvements made by the project operators to the project's social and environmental standards.

In December 2005 EBRD Management agreed that all documentation required for beginning a public consultation process was "fit for purpose". A 120 day public consultation period ended on 28 April. EBRD Management is now considering all written responses received and additional representations from public consultation meetings.

If EBRD Management recommends to its Board that the project should receive EBRD funding, then the UK Government will decide in the light of the case made by EBRD on the project operators' response to concerns raised, whether or not to support an EBRD loan. In reaching its decision, the Government will carefully assess all aspects of the project, bearing in mind its commitment to other International organisations.

Waste (Statutory Bodies)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will introduce legislation to establish a statutory body with responsibility for waste. [68043]

Mr. Bradshaw: In compliance with Article 6 of the Waste Framework Directive (75/442/EEC as amended), the "competent authorities" which we have designated to be responsible for the implementation of the Directive's waste management controls are set out in paragraph 3 of Schedule 4 to the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994 (as amended). We have no plans to amend the current list of designated competent authorities.

Wind Farms

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Wales on (a) the proposal (i) to delay and (ii) to cancel the issuing of a licence for the development of the offshore wind farm at Scarweather Sands and (b) the effect of a wind farm for breeding harbour porpoises; and if she will make a statement. [67600]

Mr. Bradshaw: There has been no discussion with the Secretary of State for Wales. Licensing of the proposed offshore wind arm at Scarweather Sands is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

My officials in the Marine Consents and Environment Unit, which is administering the licence application under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 on behalf of the Assembly, are in discussion with officials in the Welsh Assembly Government.

No decision has yet been taken by the Assembly to grant a licence partly because of the decision taken by the developer to postpone construction for commercial reasons until 2008 and to allow further data currently being collected about the local population of harbour porpoises to be properly assessed.

TRANSPORT

A27 (Chichester)

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on (i) the Highways Agency's plans for improvements to the A27 around Chichester and (ii) alternative methods of easing congestion. [68607]

Dr. Ladyman: The Secretary of State for Transport commissioned the South Coast Corridor Multi-Modal study (SoCoMMS) to investigate congestion, safety and environmental problems of transport on the South Coast between Southampton and Thanet.

In July 2003, the Secretary of State rejected the recommended improvements to the A27 Chichester Bypass. The Highways Agency was asked to work closely with the principal local authorities and the statutory environmental bodies to identify and develop less environmentally damaging options for easing congestion, including management measures, which reduce the need for major road construction, and report back.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment was made of alternative methods of easing congestion before the Highways Agency published its proposals to improve the A27. [68608]

Dr. Ladyman: The Secretary of State for Transport commissioned the South Coast Corridor Multi-Modal study (SoCoMMS) to investigate congestion, safety and environmental problems of transport on the South Coast between Southampton and Thanet. At Chichester the report recommended two alternatives for addressing congestion on the A27. The Secretary of State rejected both these options on environmental grounds and asked the Highways Agency to work closely with the principal local authorities and the statutory environmental bodies to identify less environmentally damaging options, including management measures, which reduce the need for major road construction.

A key requirement of any options identified was that they should be capable of delivering planned housing and economic growth. It was agreed that any options identified would be reported back to Ministers before more widespread local consultation was undertaken.

A number of alternative junction improvement strategies were considered as part of developing the proposal put to public consultation but they did not meet the objectives set.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the Highways Agency's plans for improvements to the A27 around Chichester. [68609]

Dr. Ladyman: A joint Public Consultation exercise, between the Highways Agency and West Sussex county council was held in late 2004 and early 2005. To date the Highways Agency have received over 9,000 responses to their proposals, including many alternative suggestions for dealing with traffic problems in the Chichester area. Once I have received the Public Consultation Report from the Highways Agency later this year, I will announce my decision on the way forward.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on alternative methods for easing congestion around Chichester since the Highways Agency published proposals to improve the A27. [68671]

Dr. Ladyman: Since the Highways Agency's proposals were published I have received a petition from Mr. Pieter Montyn, signed by over 2,000 residents of the Manhood Peninsula, requesting an A27 northern bypass solution as a method for easing congestion around Chichester. Subsequently, I have received a copy of his presentation to the Highways Agency on his proposed A27 northern alignment route. All alternative suggestions made will be considered before I make my decision on the way forward later this year.

Aircraft Noise

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the Government's definition is of excessive noise from aircraft; and what the World Health Organisation guidelines are on aircraft noise. [68298]

Derek Twigg: We have stated in consulting on our proposals for night flying restrictions at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted that one of our broad aims is

> "to strike a fair balance between the protection of local communities from excessive aircraft noise levels at night and the provision of air services at night where they are of benefit to the national, regional or local economy".

The expression 'excessive noise' does not apply to a specific level of aircraft noise. Based on research, the Government use various measurements of aircraft noise as indicators of disturbance or of potential annoyance, or as criteria for mitigation measures, including advice for land use planning purposes.

The World Health Organisation has produced 'Guidelines on Community Noise'. The guideline values have regard to specific environments and effects rather than the source of noise, so there are no specific guidelines on aircraft noise. For each environment and situation, the guideline values take into consideration the identified health effects and are set based on the lowest levels of noise that affect health. Guideline values typically correspond to the lowest effect levels for general populations.

The 'Guidelines on Community Noise' document, which sets out the full range of guideline values, is on the internet at the following address http://www.who.int/docstore/peh/noise/guidelines2.html

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department (a) is taking and (b) plans to take in the Civil Aviation Bill to bear down on aircraft noise. [68332]

Derek Twigg: The 'Future of Air Transport' White Paper set out the combination of measures by which the Government aim to limit and, where possible, reduce the number of people in the UK significantly affected by aircraft noise. These include promoting research and development into new low noise engine and airframe technologies. We have incorporated the key elements of the International Civil Aviation Organisation's balanced approach to controlling noise at airports into UK law; EU directive 2002/49/EC requires periodic noise mapping at many airports from 2007 to identify day and night noise problems and, from 2008, action plans to deal with them.

The Government have powers to regulate noise at airports designated for the purposes of section 78 of the Civil Aviation Act 1982 (Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports are currently so designated). This regulation includes departure noise limits and restrictions on night flying. We will also consider exercising similar powers at other airports if there is evidence that a major noise problem is not being dealt with adequately through local controls.

The Civil Aviation Bill will give airports clear powers to impose penalties on airlines who fail to follow noise preferential routes and other procedures designed to avoid, limit or mitigate the effects of aircraft noise. In the case of airports designated for the purposes of section 78 of the Civil Aviation Act 1982, where the Secretary of State has specified noise controls, he will have the power to direct that a penalty scheme be made, amended or revoked to enforce those controls. It will be for the managers of non-designated airports to decide whether to use these powers in the light of their local circumstances.

Climate Change

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has (a) made and (b) plans to make of the effects of (i) regional transport strategies in England and (ii) the transport schemes listed as number one priorities in the regional funding allocations submitted by the regional assemblies on the Government's public sector agreement target for greenhouse gas emissions. [64479]

Dr. Ladyman: Regional transport strategies are subject to strategic environmental assessment, and the implications for greenhouse gas emissions will be carefully considered before strategies are approved. Advice put forward by regions on regional funding allocations sets out their proposals for affordable programmes of schemes. Decisions on each new scheme will remain subject to normal approval processes which take account of climate change impacts alongside other environmental, economic and safety factors.

Congestion (Greater Manchester)

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of traffic congestion in Greater Manchester; and if he will make a statement. [67256]

Dr. Ladyman: The 2002 survey of traffic speeds in urban areas estimated that the average vehicle delay, comparing actual speeds with those that would be achievable by a car in the absence of other traffic, for the routes surveyed in Greater Manchester was 17.8 seconds per vehicle kilometre. The average for all the urban areas surveyed was 24.9 seconds per vehicle kilometre. We have been developing new measures of congestion that are more meaningful in urban areas. Greater Manchester will publish a new local transport plan congestion target by July, along with a baseline for the new indicator.

Departmental Advertising Costs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies spent on advertising for job vacancies in each of the last five years. [65965]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 25 April 2006]: The Department for Transport was established in May 2002.

The Department uses the most appropriate publication for recruitment advertising, be it national, regional, trade magazine or website depending on the nature of the vacancy.

The following table lists the costs incurred by DFT(Central) in recruitment advertising in all grades together with advertising senior civil service jobs with executive agencies:

Departmental Initiatives

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the departmental initiatives for each year since 2000 which required bids for funding from (a) voluntary organisations and (b) local authorities together with the total resource allocated to each initiative in each year; how many successful bids there were in each year; what proportion this figure represents of the total bids received; and what assessment he has made of the costs of (i) preparing bids for each initiative and (ii) assessing those bids. [66013]

Dr. Ladyman: A table setting out the information on the major capital funding initiatives, for which bids were required, provided by the Department since 2000, has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Driving Instructors

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many driving instructors have been removed from the Register of Approved Driving Instructors due to convictions for sexual assault in each year since 1988; and how many days elapsed between conviction and removal in each case. [68420]

Dr. Ladyman: The Driving Standards Agency's records only show the number of Approved Driving Instructors (ADIs) removed from the register since 1996-97, as shown in the following table.

	Number of ADIs removed following:
	Registrar's decision/resigned etc.	Registrar's decision
1996 to 2002
1996-97	2,633	?
1998-99	3,787	?
1999-2000	2,356	?
2000-01	2,301	?
2001-02	3,017	?
2002 to 2006[1]
2002-03	?	109
2003-04	?	103
2005-06[1]	?	84

[1] Up to 28 February 2006.

The reason for removal from the Register following a decision by the Registrar is not recorded, nor is the time elapsed between any conviction and removal.

The figures from the year 1996-97 to 2001-02 show both removal from the register following a decision by Registrar and those who chose to leave the register. The figures from 2002-03 show only those who were removed as a result of the Registrar's decision.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Authority

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many applicants with only one fully functioning eye have successfully applied to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency for a driving licence in each of the last five years. [68403]

Dr. Ladyman: These data are not available. However, the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency has estimated that it deals with in the region of 1,000 to 1,500 cases per year in which a loss of vision in one eye is either declared on a driving licence application form, or notified during the currency of a driving licence.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passports sent to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Authority (DVLA) were subsequently reported missing in each of the last 10 years; and how many owners of passports lost by the DVLA have claimed compensation. [68707]

Dr. Ladyman: Original documents (including passports) have been required to support applications for first photocard driving licences since April 1999. Statistics are only available for the past five years.

Over this period the total number of passports reported as missing by drivers was 20,660 (14,968 UK and 5,692 foreign). To date 7,740 (5,282 UK and 2,458 foreign) have become the subject of claims for compensation. Approximately 25 per cent. can be attributed to a DVLA error in keying the address, with 75 per cent. due to non-delivery by Royal Mail. Over 12,500,000 applications for first photocard driving licences (ie those requiring the submission of identity documents) were processed during this period.

Drivers are requested to wait for a minimum of 15 working days before contacting DVLA about non-delivery of documents, but in many cases they do not follow this advice. DVLA officials will investigate every report, but it is a fact that many drivers do not bother to ring back if the documents later turn up.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the additional average cost to each customer would be of secure delivery of passports returned by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Authority. [68708]

Dr. Ladyman: Holders of UK passports do not have to enclose them with their applications. Those who hold digitised passports only need to quote the passport number so that DVLA can check identity on line with the UK Passport Service. All other UK passport holders can have their applications checked at some 750 mainline post offices, and DVLA's local offices, for a small charge, with immediate return. Holders of EU passports, and those from certain designated countries, can take them for checking at three DVLA local offices (Glasgow, Nottingham, Wimbledon) and DVLA's Reception at Swansea.

To introduce a standard system of charging for the return of passports (and other identity documents) would be viewed as unfair to those members of the public who have no need to submit them. If offered as an individual service on request this could amount to £10 at the very least (£4.10p special delivery/£2.50p courier service plus additional clerical involvement at DVLA).

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passports returned by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Authority have been delivered by (a) standard mail and (b) recorded delivery in the last 10 years. [68709]

Dr. Ladyman: Original identity documents (including passports) have only been required to support applications for first photocard licences since April 1999. No historical data exists to distinguish between the use of standard and special/recorded mail, but current issue per day is 8,500 and 200 (97.7 per cent. and 2.3 per cent.).

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many appeals were made (a) to magistrates courts in England and Wales and (b) to sheriffs' courts in Scotland against rulings of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency under the terms of section 92 and 100 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 in each of the last five years. [68417]

Dr. Ladyman: Statistics are available only from April 2003 onwards and relate to both applications refused under Section 92 of The Road Traffic Act 1988 and driving licences revoked under Section 93 of the Road Traffic Act 1988. The details are given as follows.

	Appeals lodged to magistrates courts in England and Wales	Appeals lodged to sheriffs' courts in Scotland	Total
April 2003-March 2004	92	41	133
April 2004-March 2005	126	45	171
April 2005-March 2006	127	41	168

Ethanol

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the potential for the widespread use of ethanol as a fuel in the UK. [68222]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government strongly support the use of high quality biofuels in the road transport sector. In the short term, we estimate that bioethanol has the potential to make up some 5 per cent. of total petrol sales in the UK. The Renewable Transport Fuels Obligation (RTFO) which we announced last year is designed to ensure that this happens by 2010, and is likely to mean that sales of bioethanol will amount to over a billion litres a year by that time.

We have made clear that we intend that biofuels should account for more than 5 per cent. of total transport fuel sales after 2010 so long as infrastructural requirements and fuel and vehicle technical standards allow, and subject to the costs being acceptable to the consumer. We would also want to put in place robust carbon saving and sustainability assurance schemes to ensure that the biofuels sold in the UK were from sustainable sources and were delivering the maximum possible carbon savings.

European Aviation Safety Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects agreement to be reached on a programme of work designed to make the European Aviation Safety Agency fit for purpose. [66170]

Derek Twigg: The Civil Aviation Authority, together with officials in the Department, continues to work closely with the agency, other National Aviation Authorities and the Commission to put in place effective strategies to improve the agency's performance. The work that must be done to help EASA become fully fit for purpose has many different strands.

The EASA management board on 26 April examined the agency's draft action plan for implementing recommendations made by external consultants to improve the agency's financial, administrative and IT processes. The board expects to approve the plan at its next meeting on 2 June.

Railways

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the implications of the First Great Western Trains timetabling proposals for December 2006 for (a) intervals in service provision between Cardiff and Swansea during the evening peak time, (b) overcrowding on Arriva Trains Wales services and (c) train connection options for passengers travelling to Swansea on the proposed 1515 London Paddington to Cardiff service. [60821]

Derek Twigg: The number of other services, operated by Arriva Trains Wales (ATW), between Cardiff and Swansea will remain unchanged. Newer rolling stock is expected to be transferred to this route for December 2006. The Greater Western franchise specification was designed to improve the overall operational and financial performance of the train service and to ensure resources were used to best meet market needs. The timetable on each route, including London to Swansea, is derived from these requirements. The Department is discussing overcrowding with ATW.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions within the past three months the Heathrow Express service has been (a) delayed by more than 15 minutes and (b) cancelled. [68424]

Derek Twigg: Heathrow Express is not a franchise operating company. The Department of Transport does not therefore hold such information.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people are employed by the British Railways Board (Residuary); and what that body's budget was in 2005-06. [68477]

Derek Twigg: BRBR had 21 full-time and 6 part-time employees as at 31 March 2006. In addition during the 2005-06 financial year the company was supported by additional resources from the Strategic Rail Authority and the Department for Transport.

BRBR's budget for 2005-06 was as follows.

Operating costs (stated net of property sales)—£25.6 million

Capital expenditure (relating to lease payments)—£7.8 million.

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what the total projected public expenditure is for all forms of national rail services for (a) London, (b) each of the English Passenger Transport Executive areas and (c) each of the English regions in each of the next six financial years; [68658]

(2) what the public expenditure was on all forms of national rail services for (a) London, (b) each of the English Passenger Transport Executive areas and (c) each of the English regions in each of the last 10 years. [68659]

Derek Twigg: The Department of Transport does not hold information on Government spending and investment at a regional level. This is primarily because franchise areas often encompass two or more regions and Network Rail is structured on a route by route basis which also serves more than one region.

Historic Government support to individual franchises is contained in the Annual Reports of the Strategic Rail Authority and in National Rail Trends, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State, made a written statement to Parliament on 10 February 2005, Official Report, columns 93-96WS setting out Government spending plans for rail as a whole to 2008-09.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will reconsider his decision on announcement boards on South-West Trains as a matter of urgency. [69134]

Derek Twigg: Continuing improvements to the availability and reliability of the existing Class 450 Desiro fleet, which have been introduced to replace Class 458s and the Mark One fleet, mean that by the end of July, when the exemption in question expires, there will be no rolling stock availability implications for the ability of South West Trains to deliver their current timetable.

Road Construction

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which construction companies have (a) tendered for and (b) been awarded road construction contracts by his Department since 1997; and how much each contract was worth. [68097]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The information requested regarding which construction companies have tendered for road construction contracts with the Highways Agency since 1997 can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

A list of the major road construction contracts over £5 million awarded by the Highways Agency has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the estimated carbon dioxide emissions from each (a) motorway and (b) trunk road scheme approved since 1997 were in each year of the operation of each such scheme; and what estimate he has made of the annual carbon dioxide emissions from each motorway and trunk road which is being assessed for inclusion in the roads programme. [68107]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 3 May 2006]: Carbon dioxide emission estimates for the Highways Agency motorway and trunk road schemes, in the Targeted Programme of Improvements, which was first launched in 1998, are given where data is currently available. A copy of the table showing this information has been placed in the Libraries of the House. Schemes that have not yet entered into the Targeted Programme of Improvements (TPI) do not have this information as the proposals are still at an early stage.

Road Schemes (Carbon Impact)

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what requirement there is under the New Approach to Appraisal to quantify the carbon dioxide impact of each road scheme he approves. [68054]

Dr. Ladyman: As part of assessing the impact of new proposals on the environment New Approach to Appraisal (NATA) requires scheme promoters to assess the impact of their proposals on greenhouse gas emissions. As carbon dioxide (CO_2) is considered to be the most important greenhouse gas, changes in CO_2 emissions are used as the key indicator for assessing the impacts of new proposals' on climate change.

For all schemes that cost in excess of £5 million, which must be approved by the Secretary of State, the Department's guidance requires scheme promoters to estimate the level of carbon dioxide emissions in the current year and in the opening year of the scheme, both with and without the scheme in place. The change in carbon dioxide emissions in the opening year of the scheme is then used to provide an overall assessment of the scheme's impact on greenhouse gases. At present only carbon emissions associated with fuel consumption are considered in appraisal.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of the speed camera sites identified in the Review of Sites 2004 where casualties had not been reduced remain in place; at how many sites the speed cameras have been removed and alternative measures introduced to reduce casualties; and at how many of these sites the camera has been removed and no further action taken. [68759]

Dr. Ladyman: Following the publication of the site lists in 2004, the Department amended its Handbook of Rules and Guidance for the Safety Camera Programme to require safety camera partnerships to review existing sites as well as those areas where new sites might be appropriate.

Sites are selected locally as the right solution to a particular casualty problem and it is therefore appropriate for these reviews to be undertaken locally and the Department is not involved. We do however require sites operated as part of, or removed from, the safety camera programme to be recorded.

From the information held by the Department, 141 safety camera sites have been decommissioned between 1 January 2004 and 31 March 2006. The Department does not hold information relating to why these sites have been decommissioned or whether alternative measures have been introduced at these sites.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in how many cases speed camera partnerships have had their applications for the siting of speed cameras (a) accepted and (b) rejected; what average time has been taken to make a decision on an application; for what average number of days cases that have not had a decision have been waiting; in how many cases the decision has been appealed; and how many of these appeals have been (i) successful and (ii) unsuccessful. [68760]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department requires that applications for new speed camera sites comply with the site selection criteria provided in the Handbook of Rules and Guidance for the Safety Camera Programme.

For 2006-07, all sites submitted as proposed camera sites were approved as they fully met the site selection criteria. These sites were submitted during February 2006 and were approved by the end of March 2006.

Transport Improvements (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what transport improvements for which his Department is responsible have there been in Tamworth constituency in the past 12 months; what further improvements are planned; and if he will make a statement. [68356]

Dr. Ladyman: The Tamworth constituency is benefiting from the Burntwood bypass local major road scheme, which was funded by the Department and completed in May 2005. In addition, local highway authorities receive integrated transport block funding which can be used for local highways or public transport capital projects. It is for Staffordshire county council, as the highway authority, to determine how that allocation has been spent, in line with its local transport plan and its priorities.

In the last 12 months, the following Highways Agency schemes have been completed in the area:

A5 Weeford-Fazeley Improvement

A5 Tamworth bypass—replacement of porous asphalt

A38 Milliards Cross to Swinfen—renewal of existing road surfacing

A38 Swinfen—lay-by resurfacing and improvements

A5 through Hints—renewal of anti skid surface

A38/A5148 southbound free-flow link to alleviate congestion

A5 Hints bypass—major new road scheme to improve safety and journey time reliability

A38 Little Hay footbridge—new footbridge constructed as part of Hints bypass

The following Highways Agency schemes are either presently under construction or scheduled to begin in 2006-07:

A38 Bassett's Pole—junction improvement (traffic signals) to improve safety and journey time reliability, including signalisation of the island

A5 Tamworth bypass Phase 2—replacement of porous asphalt surface, including the slip roads at Stoneydelf and Glascote

A38 Swinfen—resurfacing of the northbound entry slip road

A38 Swinfen Gap—closure of the central reservation gaps to improve safety

A5 Tamworth bypass—improvements to the slip roads at Ventura Park and Fazeley to improve safety

A5 Tamworth bypass—ecology improvements to an adjacent drainage area to enhance the habitat for great crested newts

A38 Canwell—installation of interactive signs and other signing improvements to improve safety

The following Highways Agency schemes are also planned:

A38 Weeford Quarry to Canwell—Resurfacing works

Additionally, a number of Section 278 development schemes are being undertaken by external organisations with consent from the Highways Agency. These are as follows:

A38 Swinfen Prison—provision of acceleration lane at prison access

A5 Bitterscote, Tamworth—provision of new roundabout junction at existing Bitterscote junction to access development site

A5 Wall—potential alterations to existing roundabout junction

A38 Weeford—Potential improvements to the access at Blackbrook Farm

On rail, the Trent Valley four tracking scheme on the West Coast Main Line which falls within Tamworth and started in 2003 will provide 19km of an additional two tracks at a cost of £327 million. This is expected to be complete in 2008.

Transport Subsidies

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 713W, on transport subsidies, how much subsidy for public transport was allocated by his Department to (a) Hampshire county council, (b) Portsmouth city council and (c) Southampton city council in each of the last five years in (i) cash and (ii) real terms. [67377]

Dr. Ladyman: The amount of subsidy for integrated transport allocated by the Department to Hampshire county council; Portsmouth city council; and Southampton city council in the last five years is shown in the following tables. Integrated transport funding is used by the local authorities to fund all non-maintenance transport investment schemes costing less than £5 million—small road projects, road safety schemes, bus priority schemes, walking and cycling schemes, as well as transport information schemes. It is for the councils concerned to decide how much should be allocated to public transport.

In addition Hampshire county council and Portsmouth city council have received funding for the A3 bus corridor as shown in the table.

Vehicle Registration

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of the number of vehicles registered (a) with false details and (b) to a (i) false and (ii) non-existent address. [61404]

Dr. Ladyman: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) would refuse to record any details on the basis of information that it knew to be false, and therefore the information requested is not available. However, a recent survey estimated that 97.4 per cent. of vehicles can be traced directly or indirectly from the records held at DVLA.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Byers: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will review the basis on which the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) decides whether to bring a prosecution with a view to encouraging the CPS to be less risk averse when making such decisions. [68925]

The Solicitor-General: Each case the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) receives from the police is reviewed in accordance with the Code for Crown Prosecutors. Application of the Code means that a case is prosecuted when there is sufficient evidence for a realistic prospect of conviction (the 'evidential test') and that the prosecution is in the public interest (the 'public interest test'). The Code is issued by the Director of Public Prosecutions under Section 10 of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 and it is periodically reviewed by the CPS. The last review occurred in 2004 and included a public consultation exercise. The current edition of the Code was published in November 2004.

Her Majesty's Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate (HMCPSI) reviews CPS performance regarding the application of the Code. HMCPSI's 2004-05 annual report records that CPS average percentage compliance with the evidential test at initial review over the 2002-04 inspection cycle is at 98.6 per cent.; and the equivalent compliance with the public interest test is at 99.9 per cent. There are no current plans for a review of the Code.

DEFENCE

AWOL

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers on operational tour in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan went absent without leave in each quarter since January 2003. [68523]

Mr. Ingram: There have been no reports of soldiers on operational tour in Iraq or Afghanistan going absent without leave (AWOL) over the period in question. However, this does not include those individuals who may have gone AWOL while returned partway through their tour of Iraq on rest and recuperation or for other reasons. This level of data is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Crown Dependencies

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on defence for each of the Crown Dependencies in each of the last 10 years. [67087]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom is responsible for the defence of the Crown Dependencies. There are no military forces specifically allocated to the provision of this task and, therefore, I am unable to identify separately the costs incurred in maintaining their defence.

Deepcut Review

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service and ex-service personnel were given advice by the Army Directorate of Personal Services on how to handle press inquiries following publication of the Deepcut review; how many individuals attended the lunch and briefing on 29 March; and if he will place a copy in the Library of the letter of invitation signed by Colonel N. C. C. Freeman, dated 20 March. [66931]

Mr. Ingram: A total of 43 service and ex-service personnel received advice from the Directorate of Personal Service (Army) on how to handle media attention following the Deepcut review. Five of these individuals attended the briefing on 29 March 2006. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many individuals face disciplinary action following the report of the Deepcut Review. [66932]

Mr. Ingram: The Army is currently examining the Deepcut Review report and associated documentation to see whether there is any evidence to suggest that a disciplinary offence may have been committed. In addition, the Army is examining the report for any indication of professional misconduct or negligence that might make administrative action appropriate.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost of the Deepcut Review was, broken down by main budget heading. [66933]

Mr. Ingram: The total cost for the Deepcut Review currently stands at £919,718. Further costs are still expected, mainly concerning the recent publication of the report. The expenditure so far can be broken down into the following main areas:

Legal fees	810,309
Facilities/support	85,417
Press costs	23,992

Defence Logistic Organisation

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations there have been with the recognised trade unions on Defence Logistic Organisation collocation proposals; and what responses have been received from the trade unions. [68291]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Logistics Organisation (DLO) meets regularly with industrial and non-industrial national level trade unions for discussions on both a formal and informal basis. Discussions in these forums have included DLO collocation proposals.

Formal Trade Union consultation can only begin once I have made an initial decision on DLO collocation proposals. I expect to be in a position to do this in the summer of this year. The DLO will then begin formal trade union consultation and would expect to receive the trade unions' formal responses as part of that process. The DLO is committed to working with the trade union and has recently offered closer engagement on collocation.

Defence/ACPO Protocol

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the date was of implementation of the September 2005 Protocol between his Department and the Association of Chief Police Officers on the investigation of deaths on lands or premises owned, occupied or under the control of the Ministry of Defence; what the conclusions of the first annual review of the Protocol were; and what subsequent amendments were adopted on the (a) content and (b) operation of the Protocol. [66937]

Mr. Ingram: The protocol was signed on behalf of my right hon. Friend, the then Secretary of State for Defence and a representative from the Association of Chief Police Officers on 7 November 2005 and was implemented immediately thereafter. The content and application of the protocol will be reviewed 12 months post implementation, in November 2006.

Departmental Publications

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of (a) The Mole, (b) Compass and (c) Lynx publications issued since 2002. [65240]

Mr. Ingram: The Compass publication ceased in February 2000 and "Lynx" is an internal MOD website not a publication. To place in the Library copies of The Mole issued since 2002 would incur disproportionate cost.

Eurofighter

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what ground attack missile capability the Eurofighter will have. [66608]

Mr. Ingram: The initial ground attack capability being planned for RAF Typhoon will use the Enhanced Paveway precision guided bomb. Integration of subsequent weapons is being considered under the Typhoon Future Capability Programme. From a ground attack missile perspective these include the Storm Shadow cruise missile and the Brimstone air-launched anti-armour weapon.

Hercules Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, columns 6-7W, on Hercules aircraft, what his definition is of (a) directional infra-red defensive counter-measures and (b) lamp infra red counter measure; what the purposes are of each measure; and if he will make a statement. [68737]

Mr. Ingram: The lamp infra red counter measure provides omni-directional protection against infra red guided missiles by projecting broadband jamming energy. The directional infrared counter measure utilises attack warning sensors to focus the jamming system towards the threat.

Iraq

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what delays there have been in delivering Warrior armoured personnel carriers to British forces in Iraq over the last four months; what the reasons were for the delays; and what alternative arrangements have been made to safeguard the security of the troops affected. [67238]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 2 May 2006]: There have been minor delays over the past few weeks to the delivery of replacement Warrior Armoured Fighting Vehicles for the Operation Telic 8 roulement. This has been due to technical difficulties experienced by the merchant vessel carrying these vehicles while in transit. This delay has had no impact on the security of British forces or Warrior capability in Iraq; existing vehicles were retained in service until the replacement vehicles were ready.

Iraq/Afghanistan

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times UK personnel have undertaken unarmed aerial vehicles strikes in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan since military operations began; and if he will make a statement. [63805]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 20 April 2006]: UK personnel have been involved in five unmanned aerial vehicle strikes in Iraq, and one in Afghanistan.

Joint Strike Fighter

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether an (a) memorandum of understanding and (b) exchange of letters between the United States and the United Kingdom on the joint strike fighter programme includes a provision guaranteeing the transfer of technology. [65958]

Mr. Ingram: The Memorandum of Understanding for the current phase of the programme contains provisions for the exchange of information to enable the participants to meet their respective requirements. In addition the Exchange of Letters (EoLs) signed in 2001 articulates the areas of military and industrial capability that are necessary to satisfy UK sovereign requirements. The EoLs do not contain a provision on guaranteeing transfer of technology. The UK remains committed to working closely with the US administration to resolve the issue of technology sharing and we are optimistic that our ongoing discussions will be successful.

Kieran Heggarty

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the result was of the Royal Military Police investigation into the death of Kieran Heggarty in Moscow Army Barracks on Sunday 19 February 2006. [67687]

Mr. Ingram: The Royal Military Police have not carried out any investigation into the death of Kieran Hegarty at Moscow Camp, Belfast on 19 February 2006 as the Police Service of Northern Ireland has jurisdiction in this matter.

Merchant Fleet

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 16 February 2006, Official Report, column 2208W, on the merchant fleet, what the (a) year of use and (b) type of vessel was in each case. [65526]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is shown in the following table. The list also shows the financial year in which each vessel was chartered. Some vessels will have been chartered towards the end of one financial year, with use continuing into the following financial year.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost was of chartering merchant vessels for activities connected with (a) the Falklands War 1982, (b) the Gulf war 1991 and (c) the Iraq war 2003. [65525]

Mr. Ingram: The cost of chartering merchant vessels for the initial deployment for Operation Telic was approximately £31 million. Records are no longer held for the charter costs for Operation Corporate (Falklands) and Operation Granby (Gulf).

Military Discipline

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions a unit's commanding officer has been overruled by the chain of command on a decision not to prosecute an offence against a member of that unit in each year since 1997. [68094]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 3 May 2006]: None. When a commanding officer exercises his power to dismiss a charge, that decision is final, it cannot be overruled, and the charge cannot be tried in the military justice system.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by his Department in each of the last five years. [67020]

Mr. Ingram: With the exception of the Secretary of State's vehicle which is provided by the Government Car and Despatch Service, estimated fuel costs for the Ministry of Defence's ministerial cars are between £8,000 and £10,000 per annum over the last five financial years, based on an average mileage of 15,000 and an urban fuel consumption of 25mpg.

Ministry of Defence Stores

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information his Department holds on the value of its stores lodged with its contractors and subsequently found either to be lost or otherwise unavailable for his Department's purposes in each of the financial years since April 1999. [65459]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The only information centrally available over the period since April 1999 is the value of financial recoveries notified to the Ministry of Defence's Asset Accounting Centre. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 20 January 2006, Official Report, columns 1650-51W.

Further information is held by asset owners and other branches dispersed throughout the Department but could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost of dealing with nuclear waste arising from defence projects in each of the last five years; and from which budgets these costs are met. [64435]

Mr. Ingram: The following table details the costs incurred against the running cost element of the defence budget in each of the last five years, in dealing with nuclear waste arising from defence projects.

Financial years	Cost (£ million)
2000-01	213
2001-02	201

Porton Down

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which experiments at Porton Down are undertaken only on animals; and if he will make a statement. [66420]

Mr. Ingram: Dstl Porton Down only undertakes research involving the use of animals when other "in vitro", physical and computer modelling methods are unsuitable. All research is conducted in accordance with the principles of the 3R's and under the provisions of the Animal Scientific Procedures Act 1986.

In the last year research involving animals has been undertaken as part of the following areas of the MOD's research programme, novel haemorrhage control; burn protection; treatment of acute lung injury; and medical counter-measures.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many animals have been used in experiments at Porton Down in each of the last five years, broken down by (a) breed and (b) procedures carried out. [66421]

Mr. Ingram: Dstl Porton Down submits annual returns to the Home Office detailing the number of procedures undertaken which involve the use of animals as defined in the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

In the years 2000 to 2005 the annual returns to the Home Office, broken down by species are detailed in the following table.

	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005

Project Hyperion

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will announce his decisions on Project Hyperion. [66975]

Mr. Ingram: Work to consider the benefits of rationalisation and collocation of the two main Army HQs—HQ LAND and HQ Adjutant General is still ongoing. I intend to inform the House about the final size and structure of the new HQ towards the end of this year. I hope that a formal announcement about the future location for the new headquarters may be made in the summer.

RAF

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many combat fighter aircraft are in service use by the RAF, broken down by type. [66605]

Mr. Ingram: The following table shows the number of air defence aircraft that are planned to be in service with the RAF at the end of the present Financial Year.

Aircraft type	Total fleet
Tornado F3	82

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many ground attack aircraft are in service with the RAF, broken down by type; and what plans he has to replace them. [66607]

Mr. Ingram: The following table shows the number of offensive support aircraft that are planned to be in service with the RAF at the end of the present financial year.

Aircraft type	Fleet number
Jaguar GR	13
Harrier GR	73
Tornado GR	139

These offensive support aircraft will be progressively replaced by Typhoon and the Joint Combat Aircraft over the next two decades.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many RAF (a) Harrier GR7 and (b) Jaguar aircraft are (i) in service and (ii) fit for purpose. [65446]

Mr. Ingram: The following table shows, for end-March 2006, the numbers of Harrier GR and Jaguar aircraft that were planned to be in service and that were fit for purpose.

Aircraft type	Total fleet	Numbers of aircraft fit for purpose (average Financial Year 2005-06)[1]
Jaguar[3]	45	20

[1] Figures have been rounded to the nearest whole number.
[2] Harrier GR7 FFP figures are not held separately hence the total fleet and FFP numbers shown are for both GR7 and GR9 aircraft.
[3] Jaguar numbers include training aircraft.

Aircraft are deemed fit for purpose if they are capable of undertaking the required task on a given day. Aircraft are not available for tasking if they are undergoing scheduled maintenance, modification programmes or any other unforeseen rectification work that can arise on a day to day basis. The figures do not reflect the fact that an aircraft assessed as not fit for purpose may be returned to the front line at very short notice to meet the operational need.

Robert Nairac

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will release the full files relating to the death of Robert Nairac in Northern Ireland in 1977. [66347]

Mr. Ingram: Due to the date of this incident the relevant files are stored in archives. It will take some time to identify, retrieve and subsequently consider the material for release. I will write to the hon. Member with an update at the earliest opportunity and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Type 45 Destroyers

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate the naval staff have made of the total number of Type 45 destroyers required by the fleet. [67917]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 3 May 2006]: Requirements are set by the Ministry of Defence's Central Staff. The 2004 Defence White Paper 'Delivering Security in a Changing World: Future Capabilities' stated our requirement for eight Type 45 destroyers. However, the delivery of this is dependent on industry demonstrating an affordable solution.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Type 45 destroyers would be (a) required to relieve and (b) likely to be in upkeep in order to sustain the availability of four Type 45 destroyers for front-line service. [67919]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 3 May 2006]: That would depend on many factors. The 2004 Defence White Paper 'Delivering Security in a Changing World: Future Capabilities' stated a requirement for eight Type 45 destroyers. From a fleet of this size six ships would be available for operations at any one time.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will announce the total number of Type 45 destroyers to be built. [67921]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 3 May 2006]: In July 2004, my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State announced plans for a class of eight Type 45 destroyers, of which six are on order. Formal approval, and a subsequent order, for ships seven and eight will be made at the appropriate time.

Warships

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what progress he has made with the disposal of surplus ex-Ministry of Defence vessels; what Government policy is on the disposal of such vessels; and what the position is regarding the disposal of (a) HMS Intrepid and (b) the (i) Newcastle, (ii) Glasgow and (iii) Cardiff Type 42 frigates; [65086]

(2) what discussions have taken place between his Department and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on facilitating the de-equipping and dismantling of surplus warships in the United Kingdom. [65087]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence officials have had a number of discussions with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on the preparation of the UK Ship Recycling Policy. This policy will include clear guidelines for the recycling of ex-MOD vessels and is currently subject to consultation with stakeholders.

Current MOD policy is that once any possibilities for sale for further use have been exhausted, ships are then considered for recycling in accordance with environmental regulations.

At present there are no yards which meet UK Environmental Agency standards for recycling. A number of UK yards have, however, applied for Waste Management licences. The MOD continues to explore options for recycling at yards within the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development. In the meantime, Intrepid, having been identified as being suitable only for recycling, remains at Portsmouth Naval Base.

A range of disposal options are under consideration for the Type 42 ships Newcastle, Glasgow and Cardiff.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Act of Union

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what activities the Government are planning to mark the 300th anniversary of the Act of Union. [69202]

Mr. Lammy: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans at present to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the Act of the Union.

BBC Licence Fee

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what consideration her Department will give to the interests of the commercial broadcasting sector when examining the BBC's licence fee bid. [68067]

Tessa Jowell: The Government are currently conducting a funding review to determine the level of the television licence fee from April 2007. All relevant issues will be taken into account as part of this review. The process has been designed to include an opportunity for stakeholders, including commercial broadcasters, to comment on the BBC's bid as part of a public seminar on May 5 chaired by Lord Burns, who has served as my independent advisor on Charter Review.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what consultation process will be carried out in advance of her making a decision on the level of the BBC's licence fee; and who will be included in that consultation. [68068]

Tessa Jowell: Lord Burns, the independent adviser on the BBC Charter Review, will be chairing a public seminar on the BBC licence fee on 5 May 2006 to which other broadcasters have been invited including ITV, Channel 4, Five and BSkyB. The debate generated by this seminar will form part of the evidence base for setting the future level of the licence fee. In preparation for this seminar, we have invited written submissions on the future funding of the BBC from interested parties. We are also commissioning survey research on the public's willingness to pay for the BBC.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will invite (a) the National Audit Office and (b) the Public Accounts Committee to assess the cost-effectiveness of the BBC's licence fee bid. [68072]

Tessa Jowell: In line with the commitment in the Green Paper, "A strong BBC, independent of government", to take independent advice as part of the review of the BBC's future funding needs, the Government commissioned PKF to examine the assumptions underlying the BBC's future funding proposals. On 26 April the Government published PKF's report "Review of the BBC Value for Money and Efficiency Programmes"—subject to genuine issues of confidentiality. We see no need to duplicate that work.

Children's Services

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many nursery and crèche places are provided for people working in her Department; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for children of employees of her Department. [67371]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport provides a range of support for people with childcare needs.

The Department participates in the Westminster Holiday Playscheme, costing £25 per day per child, of which the Department subsidises half. There is not a set number of allocated places to the Department and places for this scheme are offered on a first come, first served basis.

The Department offers childcare vouchers through a salary sacrifice scheme to provide parents with maximum flexibility in choosing the childcare most suited to their needs. DCMS meets the cost of administration which is 5.5 per cent. of the value of vouchers taken by staff. Currently there are nine members of staff who take advantage of this scheme.

The Department has also introduced the Family Life Solutions service for all staff (a free and confidential telephone helpline service offering support to people with caring responsibilities and information on a range of issues, including childcare). The cost of this for the Department is approximately £1,500 per year for 520 staff.

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on how many occasions she has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67524]

Mr. Lammy: Paragraph 5.28 of the ministerial code sets out the rules on the registration of hospitality.

Departmental Staff

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) women and (b) men are employed in the Department; what the average pay was for (i) women and (ii) men in the Department in (1) 1997 and (2) 2006; what women's average pay is as a percentage of men's average pay; and how many (A) women and (B) men the Department employed in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [67788]

Mr. Lammy: The following table present the average salary for men and women in DCMS and women's salary as a percentage difference to men's for the years 2002 and 2006. Data for 1997 is unavailable.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people in her Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years. [67981]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has not disciplined or dismissed any staff for inappropriate use of the internet at work in the last five years. Access to premium rate numbers is barred.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) EU foreign nationals and (b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in her Department in each of the last five years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether these include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68017]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has employed one EU foreign national since September 2004 and one non- EU foreign national since July 2005. Both individuals underwent national security vetting up to counter terrorist check (CTC) level, which includes liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. In addition identity checks were made on their arrival to the Department.

The non EU-foreign national was appointed under an aliens' certificate under sections 1 (1) (b) and 1 (2) (a) of the Aliens Employment Act 1955, which is valid for five years.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in her Department. [69126]

Mr. Lammy: The minimum retirement age at which all staff can retire with full superannuation benefits is 60, but all staff below the senior civil service may, if they wish, work until age 65. Retirement age for the senior civil service is currently age 60 but heads of Departments have the flexibility to retain staff beyond age 60 if they judge it to be in the public interest.

Football

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with (a) the Football Association, (b) the Premier League, (c) the League Managers' Association, (d) the Professional Football Association and (e) individual football clubs on tackling homophobia in football. [67200]

Mr. Caborn: Further to my written answer of 20 April 2006, Official Report, column 755W, there have been no ministerial discussions with any football authorities or clubs on tackling homophobia in football. The Government believe that there is no place for homophobia in football or in wider society and we fully support the campaign being led by the Football Association against homophobic abuse in football in England.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the Minister for Sport's statement of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 70WH, on football players (behaviour), what her response is to the hon. Member for Nottingham North's proposal on the relaunch of sportsmanship on the first day of the next season. [67562]

Mr. Caborn: I am keen to see all those involved in professional football—football authorities, club chairmen, managers and players—play a part in ensuring that sportsmanship is given the utmost priority both for the remainder of this season and during future seasons.

Although this is ultimately a matter for the football authorities to determine, I will carefully consider whether to write to all 92 Premier and Football League club chairmen, as I have done at the beginning of previous seasons, to remind them of their responsibilities in acting as role models to young football supporters.

Gaming Machines

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she plans to increase the level of stakes and prizes permitted for gaming machines; and if she will make a statement. [68301]

Mr. Caborn: The maximum stakes and prizes that will apply to gaming machines once the Gambling Act 2005 is implemented were published alongside the draft Bill. These include commitments to increase the maximum stake on Category C gaming machines (currently all cash amusement with prizes machines) from 30p currently to 50p, and to increase the maximum stake on Category B3 and B4 gaming machines (currently jackpot machines in bingo premises and registered clubs respectively) from 50p currently to £1.

Sport Funding

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what central Government funding has been allocated to sport in Tamworth constituency in each of the last eight years. [68355]

Mr. Caborn: Funding for sport is primarily channelled through Sport England and UK Sport, the two DCMS sponsored bodies which award lottery grants and dispense Exchequer funds for sport from DCMS. Not all data by distributing bodies is kept at constituency level.

However Sport England and UK Sport have made a number of grants to the Tamworth constituency since 1997.

Sport England awarded Exchequer funding of £20,000, £20,000 and £17,500 in 2001, 2002 and 2003 respectively. Lottery funding provided by Sport England to the Tamworth area since 1997 includes £10,000 for the Green Spaces programme, 169,183 Awards for All and £403,780 for the development of the Anker Valley.

UK Sport has also provided Exchequer funding for UK Competitors in the Tamworth area: £60,000 in 1999-2000, £40,000 in 2000-01 and £20,000 in 2001-02.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support her Department has provided to (a) football, (b) cricket, (c) tennis, (d) rugby, (e) athletics and (f) other sports in (i) the Tees Valley and (ii) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland. [67198]

Mr. Caborn: Financial support for sport from public sources is primarily channelled through Sport England and UK Sport, the two DCMS sponsored bodies which award lottery grants and dispense Exchequer funds for sport from DCMS.

Sport England

The following table summarises the lottery funding which Sport England has awarded to the sports specified in the Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland and Tees Valley areas since 1997.

		Award (£)
Sport	Tees Valley	Middlesbrough South and Cleveland East
(a) Football	7,068,041	90,450
(b) Cricket	1,044,263	886,348
(c) Tennis	38,059	[1]—
(d) Rugby	775,019	[1]—
(e) Athletics	1,792,008	160,000
(f) Other sports	28,443,215	4,433,570
Total	39,160,605	5,570,368

[1]This information is not available in the format requested.

Note:

Sport England has defined the Tees Valley area as the local authorities of: Darlington, Hartlepool, Middlesbrough, Redcar and Cleveland, and Stockton-On-Tees.

It was only possible to identify Space for Sport and the Arts and Green Spaces figures by local authority area which do not coincide exactly with constituency boundaries. As such they are included in the overall Tees Valley figures but not the Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland figures. The report will therefore slightly understate the amount of funding benefiting Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland.

The other sport category includes those projects classified as multi sport. It is likely that some of the individual sports listed in the table also benefited from these awards.

It is not possible for Sport England to determine an amount of Exchequer funding allocated to individual sports in these two areas as its Exchequer funding is awarded to the National Governing Bodies of sports who then distribute this funding to projects in different areas. However, the total Exchequer funding awarded by Sport England to the Tees Valley area since 1997 is £902,928.

For this purpose, Sport England has defined the Tees Valley area as the local authorities of: Darlington, Hartlepool, Middlesbrough, Redcar & Cleveland, and Stockton-on-Tees.

UK Sport

It is not possible for UK Sport to determine an amount of lottery or Exchequer funding allocated to these two areas as its funding is not directed to specific regions. However, UK Sport has identified two athletes with a declared address in the Middlesbrough South & Cleveland East area who have benefited from lottery funded Athlete Personal Awards of approximately £63,000.

Note:

This figure shows the funding awarded since 2001, the date which UK Sport took over management of Athlete Personal Awards from Sport England.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support her Department has provided to increase (a) female and (b) ethnic minority participation in (i) football, (ii) rugby and (iii) cricket. [67199]

Mr. Caborn: The Department has a PSA target to increase participation in sport from priority groups by 3 per cent. by 2008. These priority groups include women and ethnic minorities.

Through their Whole Sport Plans and other initiatives, Sport England provides the national governing bodies of football, rugby and cricket with significant funding to contribute towards achieving this target.

Staff Development

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total cost was of (a) staff away days and (b) staff team building exercises in her Department in each of the last three years. [69125]

Mr. Lammy: The Department encourages Divisions to undertake staff away days and staff team building exercises as part of its commitment to the development of its staff and to improving performance. It does not record the costs of these separately from other forms of training and development.

The Public (West Bromwich)

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps were taken by Arts Council England to prevent the arts organisation The Public in West Bromwich from going into administration. [68421]

Mr. Lammy: Despite efforts to strengthen the organisation's capacity through the provision of an additional £12 million by the funders in June 2005, and the advice of Arts Council England's stabilisation unit, the public informed funders that it was likely to breach its funding envelope in January 2006.

At this point, the Arts Council commissioned a stock take report and options appraisal and the funders agreed upon one of the recommended options and to make short term cash flow funds available.

However, in spite of close working between all stakeholders, the Board of The Public acted on legal advice and registered for insolvency on 3 March 2006 this year.

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps the Arts Council are taking to ensure that the objectives of its charter are being met in discussions on the future of The Public's arts building in West Bromwich. [68422]

Mr. Lammy: As a result of the administration process for The Public, Arts Council England has been working closely with the administrators to ensure the artistic vision continues and is realised.

All the funders recognise and continue to support the central place of creative activity within this landmark building. The Arts Council is leading on evolving a new artistic model and programme for the dedicated arts spaces within the building. A number of the visitor attraction "exhibits" have been commissioned and it is expected these will be placed within the gallery as originally intended.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Energy Provision

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of UK energy was generated from (a) nuclear, (b) oil, (c) gas, (d) coal and (e) renewables sources in each of the past 30 years. [68028]

Malcolm Wicks: Data over a 30 year period are only available in terms of fuel used for electricity generation. Percentages calculated from the published data are as follows:

[1] Other fuels include coke and breeze, coke oven gas, blast furnace gas and waste products from chemical processes and non-biodegradable wastes.
[2] Data for all generating companies are only available from 1987 onwards, and figures for 1987 to 1989 contain a high degree of estimation. Before 1987 the data are for major power producers, transport undertakings and industrial hydro and nuclear stations only.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what quantity of (a) carbon dioxide and (b) other emissions were generated by (i) nuclear, (ii) oil, (iii) gas, (iv) coal and (v) renewables generation in each of the past 30 years. [68033]

Malcolm Wicks: Data on carbon and other emissions from electricity generated by major power producers from coal, oil and gas since 1970 are shown in the table. The data have been obtained from the National Atmospheric Emissions Inventory. There is no information available on emissions from nuclear or renewable electricity generation.

Energy Review

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made as part of the Energy Review of the project to construct a new nuclear power plant in Finland, with particular reference to (a) the financial commitment of the state in the project and (b) the time taken to construct the station compared to the construction schedule. [68471]

Malcolm Wicks: As part of an assessment of a range of generating technologies, the Energy Review is taking note of experience from other countries.

This includes the example of new nuclear build in Finland, and the costs and time scales involved in the project.

Non-fossil Fuel Obligation Fund

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date his Department (a) indicated its agreement to HM Treasury that the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation Fund constituted hereditary revenues of the Crown and (b) discovered that the fund had been conclusively so determined by HM Treasury; by what means and by whom the Treasury's determination was communicated to his Department; and if he will place copies of all relevant communications in the Library. [67596]

Malcolm Wicks: The DTI and HM Treasury agreed in October 2004 that the element of the Non Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO) surplus, representing the profit made by the Non Fossil Purchasing Agency because it is able to auction electricity (together with the associated Renewable Obligation Certificates) for more than it pays for the electricity under the NFFO contracts, should be paid into the Consolidated Fund after receiving legal advice that the monies are hereditary revenues of the Crown.

I am withholding the legal advice requested, as it is confidential and subject to legal professional privilege. There is a strong public interest in Government Departments receiving high quality legal advice to ensure the effective conduct of business, that advice needs to be given in confidence and with a full appreciation of the facts.

Nuclear Power Stations

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list serious breaches of safety procedures in each nuclear power station in each of the past 30 years. [67820]

Malcolm Wicks: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) publishes quarterly statements for incidents at nuclear installations, which meet ministerial reporting criteria. Quarterly statements of nuclear incidents at nuclear installations from 1 October 2000 are available on the HSE website at: http://www.hse.gov.uk/nuclear/quarterly-stat/index.htm

Hard copies of quarterly statements from 1 April 1977, when ministerial reporting arrangements began, and September 2000 have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Arlene Pearson

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when Mr. Gerry Keenan of the Northern Ireland Social Security Agency will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Upper Bann regarding Arlene Pearson. [68984]

Mr. Hanson: Mr. Keenan replied to the hon. Gentleman's letter on 5 May 2006.

Child Support Agency

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 315W, on the Child Support Agency, what progress has been made in converting all old scheme cases in Northern Ireland to the new system. [69234]

Mr. Hanson: Since 3 March 2003, 17,181 cases previously assessed under child support old rules have been reassessed as new rules cases as a direct result of their link to a new scheme application.

On 9 February 2006 the Great Britain agency's Operational Improvement Plan was announced in Parliament. The Northern Ireland Child Support Agency is now considering its ways of working in light of these proposals. Ministers have considered the findings of the work carried out by the chief executive of the Great Britain agency and have concluded that they should continue to keep the conversion decision under review.

In the meantime, the work to redesign future policy and delivery arrangements for child support has begun. Sir David Henshaw will lead this work and he will deliver his findings to my hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions this summer.

Home Ownership

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many homes were purchased in Northern Ireland through the co-ownership scheme in each of the last three years. [69269]

Mr. Hanson: The information is as follows:

Financial year	Number of co-ownership purchases
2005-06	504

Housing Executive

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed by (a) housing associations and (b) the Housing Executive in Northern Ireland. [69187]

Mr. Hanson: The number of staff employed is as follows:

(a) Housing Associations[1]—1,910;

(b) Northern Ireland Housing Executive[2]—3,437

[1] Excludes staff on career break, seconded out or employed through an agency

[2] Excludes temporary, casual and agency staff

Post-primary Education

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why the ongoing consultation on changes to post-primary education in Northern Ireland is not listed on the Northern Ireland Office website list of current consultations. [46780]

Mr. Hain: I am sorry for the delay in replying, this was due to an administrative error.

A central website exists on which NI Departments register all public consultations past and present. Details of all public consultations are not therefore routinely published on the NIO website. Details of the consultations on changes to post-primary education in Northern Ireland were published on the Department of Education website.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Algeria

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Algeria about the use of torture. [68194]

Dr. Howells: During his visit to Algeria in February, my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary (Jack Straw) discussed regional and bilateral issues with the Algerian Government. In the context of deportation with assurances, the discussions included assurances against ill-treatment.

Biological and Toxin Weapons

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the EU action plan on biological and toxin weapons. [68632]

Dr. Howells: The EU adopted an Action Plan on biological and toxin weapons on 27 February 2006 in parallel with, and to complement, a Joint Action on the same issue. The Action Plan sets out all EU member states' agreement to submit annual Confidence Building Measures (CBM) returns under the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention. This is a step towards revitalising this mechanism and will enable the EU to have a firmer base for encouraging other States Party to submit annual CBM returns. The Action Plan also sets out member states' agreement to consider and/or update as appropriate the expertise or use of laboratories that they can volunteer to the United Nations Secretary-General, should he be called upon to undertake an investigation into the alleged use of biological weapons.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the countries her Department has classified as having an offensive biological warfare capability in the last 30 years, indicating in each case whether that capability is assessed to be (a) current, (b) dormant and (c) destroyed; and whether, in each case, the country in question is a signatory to the Biological Weapons Convention 1972. [69451]

Dr. Howells: The dual-use nature of virtually all the know-how, materials and equipment used in biology means that most industrialised countries have such a capability.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the capacity of Russia to produce biological weapons; and what stores of such weapons she assesses Russia holds, with particular reference to (a) smallpox and (b) genetically modified smallpox. [69452]

Dr. Howells: The Government keep under review the potential military capability of other States, but it is not our practice to divulge the details.

Colombia

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Colombian government regarding its human rights record. [68219]

Dr. Howells: Through our Embassy in Bogota and in contacts with visiting Colombian officials, we make frequent representations to the Colombian government over human rights issues. We also regularly raise specific cases of concern with them. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, most recently did so with Vice President Santos on 28 November 2005, and our Embassy most recently did so in the week beginning 24 April. Human rights form a significant strand of our policy towards Colombia. We consistently urge the Colombian government to implement recommendations arising from successive annual reports of the United Nations Commissioner for Human Rights and have offered to help them to do so.

Iran (Nuclear Programme)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she first learnt of the Iranian Government's claim that it had successfully enriched a certain quantity of uranium to 3.6 per cent.; and if she will make a statement. [69168]

Dr. Howells: This claim was first made by Gholamreza Aghazadeh, the head of the Atomic Energy Organisation of Iran on 11 April. He said that Iran had 'started enriching uranium to the 3.5 per cent. level, and thus has passed the stage of pilot production'.

President Ahmadinejad repeated the claim later the same day.

In his 28 April report, the Director-General of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), Dr. Mohammed El-Baradei, said that

'on 18 April the Agency took samples at the Pilot Fuel Enrichment Plant (in Natanz), the results of which tend to confirm as of that date the enrichment level declared by Iran'.

We understand that the Agency is still investigating. On 2 May, Mr. Aghazadeh said that the highest level to which Iran had enriched was 4.8 per cent.

As my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary (Mr. Straw) has said, Iran's continuation of enrichment-related activities, contrary to repeated requests by the IAEA Board and the United Nations Security Council, is of serious concern. The Security Council is presently discussing next steps.

Iraq (Nuclear Contamination)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she has received representations regarding the risk of nuclear contamination affecting civilians in Iraq; and if she will make a statement. [69165]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) on 14 June 2005, Official Report, columns 327-28W. I have received no recent representations on the issues.

Middle East

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the UK has provided to Israel to obtain a nuclear weapon; and if he will make a statement. [68592]

Dr. Howells: There are a large number of publications available on the history of Israel's nuclear programme. The Government are content that at no time has the United Kingdom breached its international obligations regarding the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with (a) the United States and (b) other states on a Middle East nuclear weapons free zone. [68515]

Dr. Howells: The UK continues to support the principle of establishing a Middle East nuclear weapon free zone. Concerns surrounding Iran's nuclear programme have renewed international interest in the establishment of such a zone and, in the context of wider regional security, the issue has formed part of our regular discussions with many countries, including the other permanent members of the UN Security Council. The UK has also raised this issue in numerous high-level bilateral contacts in the run-up to last year's Non-Proliferation Treaty Review Conference.

Mockbul Ali

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what capacity Mr. Mockbul Ali is employed to advise the Foreign Office; what level of security clearance he has; and what vetting procedures were undertaken before he was offered employment. [69286]

Dr. Howells: It is not Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) policy to comment publicly on named civil servants. The level of security clearance each member of the FCO holds is commensurate with the work the officer carries out. Normal vetting procedures are undertaken before employment is offered.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice her Department sought from (a) the Cabinet Secretary and (b) other senior civil servants on the employment of Mr. Mockbul Ali following his employment by the Labour Party. [69289]

Dr. Howells: It is not Foreign and Commonwealth Office policy to comment publicly on the employment contracts for individual members of staff, nor on advice sought or not sought before offering a member of staff employment. Staff are recruited according to strict guidelines under free and fair, open competitions.

Morocco

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Morocco about the treatment of migrants. [68197]

Dr. Howells: The UK regularly holds discussions at ministerial and official level with the Government of Morocco about migration. For instance, I discussed migration with Taib Fassi Fihri, the Moroccan Minister Delegate to the Minister of Foreign Affairs and Co-operation during our meeting on 30 March 2006.

The UK Presidency established a framework of action by the EU to better manage migration from Africa and the Mediterranean, including addressing the treatment of migrants. Within that framework, on 10-11 July Morocco will host a regional conference on migration and development, addressing migration flows within countries on the West Africa migratory route. The UK is playing an active role in the preparations for the conference.

Rendition

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 88W, on rendition, whether a state is required to make a separate request for permission for each individual rendition flight through UK airspace or using UK airbases. [68684]

Dr. Howells: Yes. We would expect a state to seek permission for each individual rendition flight through UK airspace and UK airbases, including Overseas Territories. We would decide whether or not to grant permission taking into account all the circumstances. We would not assist in any case if to do so would put us in breach of UK law and our international obligations.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 20 March 2006, Official Report, column 86W, on Rendition, if he will list the international obligations with which a request for permission to make a rendition flight must accord if the UK is to grant permission. [68686]

Dr. Howells: The relevant international obligations would depend on the details of each request.

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 30 March 2006, Official Report, column 1184W, on rendition allegations (inquiries), whether Mohammed Rashid has been sentenced. [68300]

Dr. Howells: Mohammed Rashid was sentenced on 24 March 2006 for his part in the bombing of a Pan Am aircraft in 1982. He will remain in prison in the United States until 20 March 2013 and pay restitution to the parents of the teenager killed in the bombing. We learned of the sentence just after publication of my written reply to my hon. Friend on 30 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1183-84 W.

Small Arms

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which (a) Ministers and (b) officials from his Department will be attending the United Nations conference to review progress made in the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects taking place in New York from 26 June to 7 July 2006. [67838]

Dr. Howells: UK Ministerial participation at the Review Conference of the United Nations Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects is currently under consideration. John Duncan, our Ambassador to the UN Conference on Disarmament will lead the team of officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Ministry of Defence and the Department for International Development.

West Bank/Gaza (UK Personnel)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations she has received regarding the safety of UK personnel operating in the West Bank and Gaza. [69167]

Dr. Howells: We take the safety of UK personnel working in the West Bank and Gaza and visiting British nationals very seriously.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Milton Keynes, South-West (Dr. Starkey) on 21 March 2006, Official Report, columns 339-40W. Since then, we have not received any further representations.

Western Sahara

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact of oil exploration offshore of Western Sahara on the stability of the region. [68173]

Dr. Howells: There has been limited exploration for oil off the coast of Western Sahara. The Government believe the exploration that has taken place has not affected regional stability.

PRIME MINISTER

Mortgage

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister whether he has made a declaration to the Cabinet Secretary in respect of his mortgage repayments. [68476]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) on 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1674W.

Suicide Bombings (Israel)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with Arab states about suicide bombings in Israel; what response he has received; and if he will make a statement. [67937]

The Prime Minister: I have regular discussions with leaders of Arab states on a wide range issues, including Israel. My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Straw) and my hon. Friend the Minister for the Middle East (Dr. Howells) have also raised these matters with leaders of Arab states. Most recently my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary discussed the suicide bombing in Tel Aviv on 17 April in a meeting with the Saudi Foreign Minister, Prince Saud al Faisal, during his visit to Saudi Arabia last month.

HEALTH

Choose and Book System

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the latest estimates are for the cost of setting up the (a) computer software, (b) computer hardware, (c) staff, (d) other administrative infrastructure and (e) other elements of the new Choose and Book system for making hospital appointments. [65774]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 25 April 2006]: The choose and book computer system was delivered on time and to budget on 2 July 2004. The costs incurred to date by the Department's NHS Connecting for Health agency for software delivery and service changes amount to £26.4 million on a total contract cost of £64.5 million over five years. The costs of hardware, and the prime contractor's staff costs in application development, are included in this amount. The staff and other administrative infrastructure costs of NHS Connecting for Health's choose and book programme team could only be separately identified within those of the agency as a whole at disproportionate cost.

The choose and book system is one of many systems that sends messages through the care record spine. However, the cost of spine services associated with choose and book messaging is not separately identified from that for other spine messages, and to do so would incur disproportionate cost.

Dentistry

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was allocated to Morecambe Bay primary care trust for dentistry services in each year since 1997. [68769]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The main element of national health service dental services are the primary dental care services provided by dentists working within the general dental service (GDS), or personal dental service (PDS) pilots. Until April 2006, when primary care trusts (PCTs) became responsible for commissioning all primary dental care services, the GDS was a non- discretionary service funded from a national budget. Expenditure was mainly determined by the volume of NHS work that dentists chose to undertake. Local budget allocations were not assigned to individual PCTs.

The level of expenditure on hospital and community dental services is decided at local level by PCTs. The tables show the most readily available core data on expenditure on GDS and PDS services for the Morecambe Bay PCT. The difference between gross and net expenditure is the contribution to costs from dental charges collected directly from patients. As the notes explain, this data does not capture certain elements of GDS and PDS expenditure, and reliable local PDS data based on practice level details is only available from the financial year 2004-05. Full data for 2005-06 is not yet available.

Notes:

1. Gross GDS payments include adult fees, including item of service and continuing care payments, child fees, including item of service and capitation payments, commitment payments and point of treatment check payment training (in 2001 only), seniority payments, maternity/paternity/adoptive leave payments, long term sick leave payments, continuing professional development allowances including travel hours, reimbursement of business rates, vocational training grants and clinical audit payments. The following costs are excluded from this data: employer's superannuation costs, vocational trainee salaries and national insurance contribution costs, clinical audit convenors, clinical audit secretarial support costs and travel expenses, and costs associated with any salaried general dental practitioners and emergency dental services.
2. PDS payment data is included for 2004-05 only and relates to baseline payments or the agreed regular monthly payments made to PDS practices. Reliable PDS data at practice level are not available prior to 2004-05. The data cannot identify the cost of any PDS services that are directly managed by local NHS trusts, such as certain dental access centres.
3. Payments are assigned to areas on the basis of practice postcode data.
4. Net payments represent the balance of payments due after taking account of NHS dental charge income collected from patients by dental practices.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis her Department calculates the amount of funding allocated to primary care trusts each year for dentistry services. [68770]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Under the new dental service framework which took effect on 1 April 2006, primary care trusts (PCTs) received revolved budgets to support the commissioning of local primary dental services. These services were previously provided as general dental services (GDS), for which expenditure was demand-led, that is depending on the volume of national health service work that dentists chose to do, and personal dental services (PDS) pilots.

Allocations for 2006-07 were based on the costs of all GDS and PDS services delivered between October 2004 and September 2005 (the most recently available data for each area), adjusted where necessary to reflect the full year costs of newly opened contracts, together with provision for approved growth plans for local schemes proposed by PCTs. Appropriate upratings to fully reflect annual earnings adjustments as recommended by the doctors and dentists review body were also considered.

These allocations reflected the commitment that all dentists previously providing NHS services were entitled to maintain their previous level of earnings in return for an agreed level of NHS commitment. This was intended to provide a smooth transition to the new contract arrangements and to provide a stable base for the future development of dental services.

PCTs may direct additional funding to dentistry from their general NHS resources if they judge this to be an appropriate local priority.

Eye Tests

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to review the eye examination sight test fee payable by the NHS to registered opticians for (a) under-16s, (b) those in full time education, (c) those on income support, (d) those over 60 and (e) others. [67615]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 4 May 2006]: Negotiations on the sight test fee for 2006-07 are under way.

Hospital Transport

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what obligations her Department places on (a) acute hospital trusts, (b) GP practices, (c) primary care trusts and (d) strategic health authorities to ensure that patients are able to access transport from their home to NHS appointments; and how much was spent by the NHS on support for such transport in the last year for which figures are available. [68237]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 4 May 2006]: The publication "Ambulance and other patient transport services: Operation, use and performance standards" provides guidance on the eligibility criteria for patient transport services (PTS) and is available in the Library. This document states that medical need for non-emergency patient transport must be determined by a doctor, dentist or midwife and will depend upon the medical condition of the individual patient, the availability of private or public transport and distance to be travelled. The principle which should apply is that each patient should be able to reach hospital in a reasonable time and in reasonable comfort, without detriment to their medical condition.

Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible for ensuring that there is provision of ambulance services, which could include patient transport services, to such extent as they consider necessary to meet all reasonable requirements. Therefore, it is for the local national health service to decide who provides patient transport services for eligible patients in their area. PCTs should apply the principles outlined in the aforementioned publication to consider each case on its merits or to develop local criteria for patient transport services use. The White Paper "Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services" signals our intent to broaden eligibility to patients referred for treatment in and out of hospital settings and during 2006-07 we will update guidance on eligibility for PTS to reflect the changes outlined in the White Paper.

PCTs are responsible for ensuring that patients who travel to receive their traditional hospital care receive reimbursement of reasonable travel expenses where the patient can prove they require financial assistance. "Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services" also signals our intent to extend eligibility for the hospital travel costs scheme (HTCS) to include people who are referred by a health care professional for treatment in a primary care setting, providing that they meet the existing low-income criteria.

For 2004-05, NHS ambulance trust expenditure on non-emergency PTS was approximately £228 million. Itemised data on expenditure by other NHS organisations on non-emergency patient transport is not available centrally. Information on HTCS expenditure is not collected centrally.

Infant Formula

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had on the European Union Directive on infant formula and follow-on formula. [67414]

Caroline Flint: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) has represented the views of the United Kingdom during discussions within the European Commission's infant formula working group as it has policy responsibility for the directive. The FSA has regularly consulted and updated the Department about progress and Ministers have been kept informed. The draft revised directive will be submitted to the standing committee on the food chain and animal health for further discussion and a possible vote in June. If the committee adopts the draft directive, it will become European Union law and will subsequently be implemented in UK legislation.

Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire Strategic Health Authority

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ensure that the views of local people are taken into account when she makes her decision about the new primary care trust boundaries within the Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire Strategic Health Authority area. [68931]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In managing the local consultation on primary care trust (PCT) reconfiguration in Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire, the strategic health authority (SHA) consulted a wide range of stakeholders in the region. This included local Members of Parliament, national health service staff, NHS organisations, local clinical committees, voluntary organisations and trade unions.

The consultation included 80 stakeholder meetings, of which 16 were open to the public, and were attended by over 900 people. The SHA received 539 letters, 1,609 completed questionnaires and 10,934 petition signatures in response to the consultation.

It was made explicitly clear to all SHAs that when preparing the summary of consultation responses, all views generated as a result of the consultation had to be taken into account.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ensure that the formal integration of adult social care into the NHS primary care trust structure in Peterborough is taken into account when deciding on the new primary care trust boundaries within the Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire strategic health authority area. [68927]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In managing the local consultation on primary care trust (PCT) reconfiguration in Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire, the strategic health authority (SHA) consulted a wide range of stakeholders in the region including those in social care.

In making decisions about the optimum configuration of PCTs to recommend, the SHA will have considered the eight 'Commissioning a Patient-Led NHS' criteria which include improving coordination with social services through greater congruence of PCT and local Government boundaries.

Primary Care Trusts (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) doctors, (b) nurses and (c) other staff were employed in each primary care trust covering Portsmouth in each of the last three years; what the planned figures are for (i) 2006-07 and (ii) the next three financial years; and if she will make a statement. [67374]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is shown in the table.

It is the responsibility of PCTs and strategic health authorities to analyse their local situation and develop plans, in liaison with their local NHS trusts and primary care providers, to deliver high quality NHS services and take action to recruit the appropriate staff required to deliver these services.

WALES

Children's Services

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many nursery and crèche places are provided for people working in his Department; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for the children of employees of his Department. [67368]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office is a small organisation, with 54 staff based in Cardiff and London. It draws its staff from other bodies, namely the National Assembly for Wales and Department of Constitutional Affairs. While it is not practical for the Wales Office to provide its own on-site crèche or nursery places, staff can access subsidised childcare places or childcare vouchers through their employing bodies.

These schemes support parents' own choices about what child care they want for their child.

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions he has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67521]

Mr. Hain: Paragraph 5.28 of the Ministerial Code sets out the rules on the registration of hospitality.

Equal Pay

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) women and (b) men are employed in the Department; what the average pay was for (i) women and (ii) men in the Department in (A) 1997 and (B) 2006; what women's average pay is as a percentage of men's average pay; and how many (1) women and (2) men the Department employed in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [67783]

Mr. Hain: Staff serving in the Wales Office are either on loan from the National Assembly for Wales or employed by the Department for Constitutional Affairs. Their pay is set by their employing bodies rather than by the Wales Office. Information on staff pay by gender is not avnilable, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Wales Office Departmental Report 2005 (CM6545) provides data on staff including staff numbers, ethnic groups, grades and gender. A copy of the report can be obtained from the Library of the House.

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in his Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [67994]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office is committed to improving work/life balance. It values diversity and accommodates different work patterns including home working.

Over the past three years a number of staff have followed a flexible working pattern, working the occasional day or half day at home, either to suit personal circumstances or to assist in the completion of a specific task. Information on the number of staff that have worked form home in the last three years is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

One member of Wales Office staff has a more formal arrangement for home working.

Occupational Pensions

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with Ministers in the Welsh Assembly Government on the number of pensioners in Wales potentially affected by the recommendations of the Parliamentary Ombudsman on occupational pensions. [68051]

Mr. Hain: Responsibility for occupational pensions lies with the UK Government and information is collected at UK level only.

On this basis, an estimated 125,000 people in the UK are covered by the Ombudsman's recommendations on occupational pensions.

Wind Farms

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the environmental impact of the construction and operation of the Scarweather Sands offshore wind farm on breeding harbour porpoises; what discussions his Department has had with the Department of the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on this subject; and if he will make a statement. [67601]

Mr. Hain: I have had no such representations. I refer the hon. Lady to the answer the Under-Secretary of State for Wales, my hon. Friend the Member for Carmarthen, West and South Pembrokeshire (Nick Ainger) gave to her on 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 1630W.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum/Immigration

Mr. Tom Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applicants whose applications have been rejected were detained pending removal from the UK but subsequently released before removal in the last three years for which figures are available. [67891]

Mr. McNulty: The exact information requested is not available; it would only be available by examination of individual case files. Period statistics covering those leaving from detention during July to September 2005 have been published. This information has been broken down by the reasons for leaving detention, which includes removed from the UK, granted leave to enter/remain, granted temporary admission/release, bailed and other. Statistics on the total number of persons leaving detention during this period are published in the Quarterly Asylum bulletin. It is not possible to say which stage of the asylum process people are at when they are detained. Published editions of this bulletin and other information on immigration and asylum are available on the Home Office's Research Development and Statistics website at:http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applicants whose applications and subsequent appeal rights have been exhausted have fresh applications being considered by his Department. [68125]

Mr. McNulty: We are progressing the cases of approximately 6,000 failed asylum seekers who have submitted further representations which they claim amount to a fresh asylum application, following exhaustion of all their appeal rights. This information is based on internal management information and as such is not published within official statistics.

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) exceptional leave to remain, (b) asylum and (c) indefinite leave to remain applications under consideration by his Department are the subject of involvement by hon. Members. [68126]

Mr. McNulty: Statistics are not routinely recorded on the numbers of each type of application to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) which are under consideration and which are also the subject of inquiries by right hon. and hon. Members.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of families with children have absconded while awaiting removal following the failure of their asylum applications in each of the last five years. [68224]

Mr. McNulty: The number of families with children that have absconded while awaiting removal following the failure of their asylum applications is not readily available. This information could be obtained by examination of individual case files only at disproportionate cost.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of families with children have been detained prior to removal following failed asylum applications over the last five years. [68225]

Mr. McNulty: The data on the number of families with children that have been detained prior to removal following failed asylum applications over the last five years is not readily available. This information could be obtained by examination of individual case files only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many EU citizens settled in the UK in (a) 2005 and (b) 2004. [67694]

Mr. McNulty: Statistics on EU nationals issued residence documentation showing settled status in 2004 were published in table 4.3 of the Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 2004". This publication is available from the Libraries of the House and from the Home Office website http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html2005 data are due to be published in August. EU nationals are not obliged to seek documentation in order to reside lawfully in the United Kingdom; the figures relate to those who chose to do so and do not represent the total number of EU nationals remaining permanently in the UK.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with EU counterparts in controlling illegal immigration into the EU; and if he will make a statement. [67307]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 2 May 2006]: The Home Secretary regularly discusses illegal immigration with his EU counterparts. Since January 2005, he has attended numerous meetings, specifically eight EU Justice and Home Affairs Councils at which this issue has been raised. In addition, he has also had numerous bilateral meetings with his EU counterparts, in smaller groups, and non EU counterparts in the margins of these meetings and in visits they have made to the UK at which discussion of illegal immigration has played a prominent part. More particularly during the UK Presidency in the second half of 2005, he ensured that specific EU attention was given to illegal immigration including organised immigration crime. An EU action plan on human trafficking was agreed as well as a new approach to migration, both legal and illegal, with partner countries and regions, in particular Africa, which the European Council endorsed. Implementation of both of these programmes of work has begun and the UK is playing its full part in ensuring the EU delivers against the commitments made. The presidency also focused on measures to strengthen the EU's borders and, as part of work to strengthen the security of EU travel documents, reached intergovernmental agreement on non-binding common minimum security standards and issuing procedures in ID cards.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal immigrants are thought to be in the UK. [67460]

Mr. McNulty: No government has ever been able to produce an accurate figure for the number of people who are in the country illegally. By its very nature it is impossible to quantify accurately, and that remains the case. Although it is impossible to determine accurately how many people are in the UK illegally, the Home Office published a report which included an estimate of the size of the illegal migrant population in the UK in 2001. A copy of the RDS On-line report 29/05 Sizing the unauthorised (illegal) migrant population in the United Kingdom in 2001 can be found at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/notes/june_summaries.html#rdsolr2905.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people living in the UK are seeking permission to remain because they do not have up to date paperwork granting them residence. [67461]

Mr. McNulty: IND is currently meeting its service standards for in-country applications for leave to remain. These are shown on the IND website. We do not keep records of individual reasons for applications.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what definition of audited accounts he uses in relation to stipulations for indefinite leave to remain as a business person in the United Kingdom. [67496]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 1 May 2006]: Under the Immigration Rules an applicant applying for indefinite leave to remain in the United Kingdom as a person established in business is required to submit audited accounts. For operational purposes these are defined as business accounts that have been officially inspected by an independent qualified accountant.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information is given to spouse applicants for entry into the UK on (a) their legal rights and (b) their entitlement to recourse to public funds. [67903]

Mr. McNulty: Information about the requirements for leave to enter as a spouse is available on the IND and UK visas websites and from entry clearance posts abroad. No information is provided to applicants about their legal rights in the UK. Applicants granted leave to enter on the basis of marriage are required to demonstrate that they are able to maintain and accommodate themselves without recourse to public funds and will be given a visa stating that they have no recourse to public funds. They will only be entitled to access public funds once they have been granted indefinite leave to remain.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances public funds are made available to support a spouse entrant to the UK within the probationary period who alleges domestic abuse or violence. [67904]

Mr. McNulty: There is provision under the Immigration Rules for a person subject to immigration control whose marriage has broken down during the probationary period due to domestic violence to apply for indefinite leave to remain. Whilst their application is pending, an applicant will not be entitled to access public funds. However, local authorities may be able to provide financial support and can assess such cases under Section 47 of the NHS and Community Care Act 1990 or Section two of the Local Government Act 2000 or, if they have children, under the Children Act 1989 to determine whether they are eligible for Community Care assistance.

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children have been detained in each UK immigration detention centre in each of the last five years; and for how long each was detained. [68079]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not available. The accompanying table shows the number of minors detained solely under Immigration Act powers who were removed or released from detention during the third quarter of 2005, broken down by length and place of detention. Period statistics covering those leaving detention during July to September 2005 have been published. Statistics on the total number of persons under 18 years of age at the time of leaving detention during this period, broken down by length of detention are published in the Quarterly Asylum bulletin. Published editions of this bulletin and other information on immigration and asylum are available on the Home Office's Research Development and Statistics website at:http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many families detained at Yarl's Wood were referred to a health visitor in (a) 2005 and (b) the first quarter of 2006. [68226]

Mr. McNulty: One family detained at Yarl's Wood was referred to a health visitor in 2005 and two families in the first quarter of 2006.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons the Statement of Changes in Immigration Rules, HC 974, has been withdrawn from the Vote Office of the House. [67265]

Mr. McNulty: The Statement of Changes in Immigration Rules, HC 974, was withdrawn in order to be replaced by HC 1016. The replacement Statement of Changes included all of the key policy changes in the previous statement, but with a couple of minor amendments. As explained in the Explanatory Memorandum, there were two main amendments that needed to be made. These were as follows:

The existing arrangement was preserved whereby applicants coming to the UK under ancestry provisions are given leave to enter for the entirety of the settlement qualifying period rather than being granted one period of two years and having to apply for a three-year extension before qualifying for settlement (as required in the first statement);

Prospective students hoping to remain in the UK as a student must obtain an entry clearance prior to entry (this requirement was inadvertently omitted from the first statement); since the statement was being re-laid, we took the opportunity to clarify the provisions for postgraduate doctors and dentist to make it clear that an applicant seeking leave to enter in this capacity need not have completed their degree in the previous 12 months if they have been granted leave in this capacity on an earlier occasion.

British Citizens

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people became British citizens in the 2005 calendar year. [67766]

Mr. McNulty: The requested information is due to be published on 23 May in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Persons granted British Citizenship United Kingdom, 2005". It will be available from the Libraries of the House and from the Home Office website http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Business Rates/Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been for offences in relation to the non-payment of (a) business rates and (b) council tax in each year since 1997. [56295]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

Non-payment of council tax or business rates is not a criminal offence. If the appropriate reminder notices have been sent and a debt remains unpaid, a local billing authority may apply to the magistrates court for a Liability Order which formally establishes that there is a debt. The Liability Order enables enforcement action to be taken.

The Government do not collect information on the number of taxpayers against whom billing authorities take enforcement action for non-payment of council tax or business rates.

Colnbrook and Harmondsworth Detention Centres

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action his Department has taken to ensure the adequate treatment of detainees with tuberculosis in (a) Colnbrook and (b) Harmondsworth detention centres. [67759]

Mr. McNulty: Any detainee at Colnbrook and Harmondsworth diagnosed as having a confirmed case of tuberculosis will be referred to Hillingdon hospital chest clinic for management relating to drug treatment. The detainee would then be nursed in isolation in the centre's healthcare unit for a two week period. Once this period is over, the detainee would be returned to their normal location. Regular follow up would be undertaken at Hillingdon hospital on their instructions. All removal centres liaise and work with their local health authorities who would provide any necessary advice and support in the event of a major health risk in a centre.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many detainees have gone on hunger strike in (a) Colnbrook and

(b) Harmondsworth detention centres since January 2005; how many are on hunger strike; and what action has been taken to address the grievances of those who are on hunger strike. [67760]

Mr. McNulty: After the evening meal on 3 May 2006, there were five detainees recorded at Colnbrook as not having eaten the meals provided for three days or more and one such detainee at Harmondsworth.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times since January 2004 have external units been deployed in (a) Colnbrook and (b) Harmondsworth detention centres to deal with disturbances by detainees. [67761]

Mr. McNulty: Since January 2004, no external units have been deployed at Colnbrook to deal with disturbances by detainees. External units have been deployed on one occasion at Harmondsworth since January 2004. This was on 19 July 2004 when there was a serious disturbance at the centre.

Correspondence

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Director of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate will reply to the letter of 7 February 2006 from the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood on behalf of Gertrude Chiduku, Home Office reference C1083301, acknowledgement reference B3690/6. [67767]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood on 3 May 2006.

Deportations

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights about the use of Memoranda of Understanding in respect of the return of deportees to certain countries. [68223]

Mr. McNulty: My right hon. Friend, the former Home Secretary, has met the High Commissioner, including a bilateral meeting on 16 February this year at which they discussed the difficulties faced in balancing the prevention of terrorist attacks with the maintenance individual human rights. They did not discuss deportation Memoranda of Understanding specifically. My right hon. Friend did discuss the matter with the UN Special Rapporteur on Torture last October. The issue was also discussed when senior officials met the UN Special Rapporteur for Human Rights who visited the UK in November. My right hon. Friend is, of course, also aware of the High Commissioner's statement on this subject, issued on Human Rights' day last year.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support Agency

16. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on progress with his plans for reform of the Child Support Agency. [68283]

Mr. Plaskitt: Reform of the Child Support Agency is progressing along two tracks. The agency published its Operational Improvement Plan in February 2006 which sets out how the agency will make significant improvement to performance over the next three years. In the meantime Sir David Henshaw is developing a redesign of the child support system for the longer term and has been asked to deliver his findings to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions before the summer recess.

22. Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the latest estimate is of the backlog of cases at the Child Support Agency. [68289]

Mr. Plaskitt: As published in the Quarterly Summary of Statistics, as of March 2006 the agency has 333,000 uncleared potential applications across both the old and new child support schemes.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many absent parents in the past year the Child Support Agency has threatened with legal action involving a possible custodial sentence for non-payment of maintenance; and how many were convicted and given a custodial sentence. [65908]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many absent parents in the past year the Child Support Agency has threatened with legal action involving a possible custodial sentence for non-payment of maintenance; and how many were convicted and given a custodial sentence.

Commitment to prison or disqualification from holding a driving licence is the ultimate sanction available to the Agency for recovery of arrears of Child Support maintenance. The power to withdraw driving licences was brought into effect on 2 April 2001 (under the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Act 2000). If the non-resident parent is found guilty of willful refusal or culpable neglect the court will decide which of the available sanctions is the most appropriate.

Prior to the Secretary of State making an application to the court, a warning letter is issued to the non-resident parent advising of the intention to apply to the courts for committal to prison or disqualification from holding or obtaining a driving licence.

During the year ending 31 March 2006 the Agency issued 1,155 warning letters to non-resident parents. Of these it was necessary to make 920 applications to court for committal or disqualification proceedings.

The information provided below relates to the number of cases for which applications were made to court for committal or disqualification from holding or obtaining a driving licence proceedings. These numbers may include multiple actions against individual non-resident parents who continually fail to pay.

Therefore, although several applications can be made in respect of individual debts the Court will incorporate these into the same hearing with one outcome.

The following table details the number of cases referred to court and the outcomes for committal and disqualification proceedings over the same period.

Committal and disqualification proceedings year ending 31 March 2006	Cases
Total of cases prepared for court with initial hearing date set	920
Number of suspended committal sentences	376
Number of actual committal sentences	15
Number of suspended driving licence disqualification sentences	35
Number of actual driving licence disqualification sentences	5

Notes:
1. Of the 920 cases prepared for court with an initial hearing date set, in a small number of hearings, the actual hearing date will occur after 31 March 2006.
2. The fact that the number of suspensions and actual penalties is less than half the number of referrals is explained by the number of debtors who enter into agreements to pay rather than attend court. Similarly, only a very small number of debtors actually go to prison or lose their driving licences because the courts normally suspend a sentence on condition that the defendant commits to pay.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average application processing time was for (a) disability living allowance, (b) income support and (c) the Child Support Agency in the last period for which figures are available. [66849]

Mrs. McGuire: Details of the average actual processing times for disability living allowance claims are in the table.

Disability living allowance (DLA) average actual clearance times (AACT)

	March 2006	2005-06
DLA (normal rules) claims	33.1	34.5
DLA (special rules) claims	5.1	5.5
DLA renewals	33.0	31.5
DLA reconsiderations	31.4	29.1
DLA supervisions	50.0	43.6
DLA appeals	34.7	31.8

In March 2006, income support claims were processed in an average of 12.2 days. For the full operational year from April 2005 to March 2006 the figure was 11.3 days.

Information on processing times for child support applications can be found in the Agency's Quarterly Statistical Summary (QSS), published on 27 April 2006; a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Pensions

18. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on his plans to reform the pension system. [68285]

Mrs. McGuire: The Government have welcomed the Pension Commissions' report and believes it has provided the right framework for delivering a long-term settlement for tomorrow's pensioners.

The key to delivering sustainable reform must be that any change promotes personal responsibility, introduces greater simplicity, and is fair, affordable and sustainable.

That is why we have taken steps to build consensus through the National Pensions Debate, engaging with all interested parties and individuals in communities across the country.

We will publish our proposals for pension reform by the end of the month.

19. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his response is to the Parliamentary Ombudsman's report on occupational pension funds; and if he will make a statement. [68286]

Mr. Plaskitt: I refer to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Ayr, Carrick and Cumnock (Sandra Osborne) on 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1603W.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the basis was of his calculations of the cost of fulfilling the requirements of the recommendations of the parliamentary ombudsman's report on pension schemes. [69373]

Mr. Timms: We will publish a full, formal response to the parliamentary ombudsman's report shortly. As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State explained during the debate in this House on 16 March, the response will set out the details of our costings for implementing the measures suggested in the report.

Post Office Card Account

21. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners use a Post Office Card Account to receive their pension. [68288]

Mr. Plaskitt: Around 2.3 million.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps were taken by his Department to inform the public that the Post Office card account was time-limited; and if he will make a statement. [68032]

Mr. Plaskitt: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Clwyd, West (Mr. Jones) on 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 721W.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what consultation he has conducted with customers and sub-postmasters on the ending of the use of the Post Office card account for payment of pensions and benefits. [68276]

Mr. Plaskitt: We will be holding discussions about our payment strategy with customer representative groups.

We know that many of our customers want the option of still being able to collect their benefit or pension at the Post Office and others like being able to use easy to operate accounts. And they will be able to do both these things—25 or so bank accounts can already be used at the Post Office, and we hope there could be more in future. Post Office Ltd. has already introduced one new savings account, and is developing other savings and banking products which are likely to be more attractive to many of its customers than the current Post Office card account.

Sub-postmasters are agents of Post Office Limited. Officials have met with Colin Baker—the General Secretary of their National Federation—on a number of occasions, and I will be meeting Mr. Baker in the summer.

All of these discussions will be informed by evidence gathered in the recent pilots.

Carers Benefits

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the levels of carers' benefits were as a proportion of average income in 1997; what they were in the last period for which figures are available; and what changes in the level of carers' benefits have occurred since 1997. [68734]

Mrs. McGuire: Depending on their personal circumstances, carers have access to the full range of social security benefits. In 1997-98, the average weekly amount of income maintenance benefits paid to working age carers entitled to carer's allowance was £59.74[1] or 22.6 per cent. of median income[2] in that year. In 2004-05, the latest year for which information is available, the corresponding figure was £82.08[1], or 23.5 per cent. of median income[2].

We have increased the benefits available to carers in line with the movement in prices in every year since 1997-98. In 2001, we increased the carer premium in income support, and other income-related benefits, by an extra £10 a week. We have also increased the availability of carer's allowance by abolishing, in 2002, the age limit which precluded carers aged 65 and over from claiming carer's allowance. This change also gives older carers access to the additional amount for carers in pension credit. By linking the carer's allowance earnings limit to the level of the national insurance lower earnings limit , we have significantly increased the amount carers entitled to the benefit can earn from paid employment.

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on how many occasions he has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67516]

Mr. Hutton: Paragraph 5.28 of the ministerial code sets out the rules on the registration of hospitality.

Financial Inclusion

Mr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures he is taking to promote financial inclusion. [68279]

Mrs. McGuire: We continue to promote financial inclusion through improved access to banking and the supply of affordable credit as well as money advice.

The £36 million allocated to the Growth Fund, which DWP is administering, will result in more affordable credit becoming available via, for example, local credit unions to people who might otherwise turn to "doorstep lenders" and loan sharks charging exorbitant rates of interest.

Health and Safety at Work

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will take steps to make individual (a) directors and (b) senior managers legally responsible (i) for health and safety and (ii) in cases when an employee is killed due to negligence by such an individual; and if he will make a statement. [66422]

Mrs. McGuire: Individual directors and senior managers are already liable under the existing law of manslaughter, where their gross negligence has led to the death of an employee, and under existing health and safety law. The Government have asked the Health and Safety Commission to undertake further evaluation to assess the effectiveness and progress of the current measures in place, legislative and voluntary, on directors' responsibilities for occupational health and safety. The Health and Safety Commission is due to discuss the issue at their May 2006 meeting, following which the Commission will provide advice to Ministers.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Health and Safety Executive has issued guidelines on carrying cans of paint on buses. [66378]

Mrs. McGuire: No. HSE sees no safety reason why an odd can of emulsion should not be carried on a public bus.

Housing

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the Answer of 27 March 2006, Official Report, column 717W, whether current problems sorting out administration remains the reason for not taking forward the options for simplifying non-dependant deductions set out in paragraph 10.54 of The Way Forward for Housing; and if he will make a statement. [67216]

Mr. Plaskitt: As with all aspects of the benefit system, the provisions for non-dependants in housing benefit will continue to remain under review. Indeed, changes to the non-dependant deduction rules were made both in October 2003 and April 2005.

Our Green Paper "A New Deal for Welfare: Empowering People to Work" (Cm 6730) was published on 24 January 2006. The consultation period ended on 21 April 2006 and we are considering carefully the responses we have received on how best to reform housing benefit to meet with our wider welfare reform objectives.

Older People (Cross-Government Strategy)

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress he is making on the cross-Government strategy for older people. [68269]

Mrs. McGuire: Opportunity Age, the Government's strategy for older people and an ageing society, was published last March. Since then we have:

legislated against age discrimination in employment—the law will come into force in October 2006. Age Positive week, launched 8 May 2006, will raise awareness of the changes that need to be made;

rolled out Link Age services: joining up local services and increasing benefit take up; prepared for the launch of the Link Age Plus pilots, part of the wider Link Age programme. These pilots aim to build a robust evidence base for the case for joined up services delivering better outcomes for older people. From July, up to eight locations will be selected as pilots to test ways of delivering fully integrated local services for older people: from health and leisure to work and learning. The pilots will draw on the approach in the Social Exclusion Unit's report, A Sure Start to Later Life: Ending Inequalities for Older People published on 26 January 2006. The report proposes a new model for delivering services to older people based on the Sure Start model for children and families. The Department for Work and Pensions project team will work with key partners and older people themselves to develop and deliver these holistic services. The programme will run over two years with funding of up to £10 million for the project; extended from April 2006, the existing statutory minimum requirement to guarantee people aged 60 and over in England free off-peak travel on their local area bus services, with no charge for the pass. This will benefit an estimated nine million people. The Government are providing an extra £420 million to implement this measure; published on 19 April 2006 A new ambition for old age, setting out plans to promote the dignity of older people in care and hospital settings as well as a programme of work to promote 'Active Ageing' to keep people healthy for longer; piloted individual budgets for disabled people and older people in 13 local authorities. The central idea behind individual budgets is to place users of care and support services, at the centre of the process and to give them the power to decide the nature of their own services; and supported people who want to work longer—for example, by improving pension deferral options from April 2005, and from October 2006 making it unlawful for employers to require someone to retire before 65 unless it can be shown to be appropriate and necessary. The legislation will create a default retirement age of 65, but will also create a right for employees to request working beyond a compulsory retirement age which employers will have a duty to consider.

We will publish our White Paper on pensions reform by the end of the month.

This is a major programme of action which will make a real difference to the wellbeing of older people and address the challenges of the ageing society.

Workplace Health Connect Scheme

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made in establishing the West Midlands pathfinder of the Workplace Health Connect scheme. [66277]

Mrs. McGuire: Workplace Health Connect, including Workplace Health Connect West Midlands (the West Midlands 'pathfinder) launched on 23 February 2006 and is now up and running. The service provides free, impartial and practical advice and support on workplace health, safety and return to work issues to smaller businesses.

The collaborative service, set up in partnership with the Health and Safety Executive offers an adviceline for England and Wales, and workplace visits from qualified Workplace Health Connect advisers. The workplace visits are available now, in the West Midlands and also the North East, North West, South Wales and Greater London.

Human Focus Return to Work Limited operates Workplace Health Connect West Midlands and they have begun carrying out the workplace visits. They have also established a Regional Stakeholder Council which includes among others, representatives of small business, trade unions, the insurance industry, local authorities and a primary care trust.

The West Midlands Stakeholder Council met for the first time on 24 February. The area covered by Workplace Health Connect West Midlands includes all unitary authorities and county districts as defined by the Government Office Region for West Midlands.

93 per cent. of callers to Workplace Health Connect say they are satisfied or very satisfied with the service they have received. Smaller businesses (those with between five and 250 workers) and their workers can access the service by calling the adviceline on 0845 609 6006.

Further information on the service can be found at: www.workplacehealthconnect.co.uk and www.hse.gov.uk/workplacehealth

TREASURY

Broadcasting

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the contribution to the economy of each public sector commercial broadcaster. [68081]

John Healey: HM Treasury has made no assessment of the contribution to the economy of the public sector commercial broadcasters.

Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the net revenue from council tax receipts was in (a) England and (b) Great Britain in each year since 1997-98; and if he will estimate what the revenue will be in 2006-07. [66453]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The net revenue receipts (in £ million) from council tax in England each year since 1997-98 are shown in the following table.

	Net receipts (£ million)
1997-98	9,562
1998-99	10,596
1999-2000	11,493
2000-01	12,410
2001-02	13,359
2002-03	14,624
2003-04	16,574
2004-05	17,592
2005-06	18,354
2006-07	19,067

The data for the net revenue receipts from council tax in Wales and Scotland are available from the Welsh Assembly Government and the Scottish Executive respectively.

The data for 1997-98 to 2004-05 are taken from QRC4 forms and are outturn figures; this is gross council tax due less council tax benefit paid.

The data for 2005-06 and 2006-07 are taken from BR1, BR2 and BR3 forms and are budget figures for council tax requirement less the amount council tax benefit expected to be paid in the year.

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in his Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [67978]

John Healey: The Treasury encourages home working in appropriate circumstances and many staff work from home from time-to-time. Information relating to the number of staff who have worked from home is not available.

Income Tax

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost would be to the nearest £100 million of raising the personal tax allowance to £10,000 per annum. [68045]

Dawn Primarolo: The cost of increasing to £10,000 all personal allowances, including age-related personal allowances, in 2006-07 is £28.0 billion.

The income tax information is based upon the 2003-04 Survey of Personal Incomes (SPI) and projected forward to 2006-07 in line with 2006 Budget HM Treasury assumptions.

The figures exclude any estimate of behavioural response to the tax change which could be significant given the scale of the change.

Markets (Developing Nations)

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the (a) International Monetary Fund and (b) World Bank on its policy on opening up markets in developing nations. [68535]

Ed Balls: As the Chancellor set out in his statement to the International Monetary and Financial Committee on 22 April 2006, the international community must grasp the opportunity presented by the Doha Development Agenda of world trade talks to achieve an ambitious outcome, by the end of 2006, that will make a real contribution to poverty reduction. Concrete action is needed to provide significant increases in market access for developing countries. Effective special and differential treatment for developing countries is key to increasing growth in developing countries, integrating the most vulnerable countries into the world economy, and maintaining the credibility of the multilateral trading system.

And as the Chancellor and the Secretary of State for International Development set out in their joint statement to the Development Committee on 23 April 2006, developing countries should have the flexibility to decide, plan and sequence trade reforms within their own plans for development and poverty reduction.

Additional support is also needed to help developing countries to build the physical, human and institutional capacity to trade. There is a key role for the Bank, working jointly with the Fund, in taking this agenda forward.

Treasury Ministers and officials have conversations and discussions with a wide range of organisations and individuals as part of the process of policy development, analysis and delivery, including with the IMF and the World Bank.

Tax Debts

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the merits of using private debt collection agencies to collect written off tax debts. [68041]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) has no power to outsource the recovery of written off tax debts to private debt collection agencies. However, HMRC will always consider wider developments and compare its recovery operations against best practice in the private sector and other Government Departments.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria the Valuation Office Agency uses to decide whether or not to classify a domestic residence as a composite hereditament. [66234]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The criteria applied by valuation officers of the Valuation Office Agency (VOA) are set out in the council tax manual published by the VOA on its website at www.voa.gov.uk.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations the Valuation Office Agency has received on whether the London congestion charge zone (a) represents a national change in circumstances for the valuation of and (b) justifies amended valuations of inner London businesses for business rate purposes. [66260]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I have been asked to reply.

Valuation officers of the Valuation Office Agency in central London have received approximately 10,500 proposals from ratepayers or their agents to alter the rating lists, making representations that the Congestion Charge Zone has affected the rating valuation of their business premises.

Whether a reduction in rateable value is justified will depend on the facts and circumstances of individual cases. These are matters for the valuation officers or—in the absence of agreement—for the independent valuation tribunal or ultimately for the courts to decide.

Most of the proposals made have been withdrawn with no amendment made to the assessments.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations the Valuation Office Agency has received on whether the acts of terrorism of 7 July 2005 (a) represent a material change in circumstances for the revaluation of and (b) justify amended valuations of inner London businesses for business rate purposes. [66771]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

Valuation officers of the Valuation Office Agency in central London have received approximately 400 proposals from ratepayers or their agents to alter the rating lists on the grounds that they consider the terrorist bombings of 7 July 2005 to have affected the rating valuation of their business premises. However whether any reductions in rateable value are justified will depend on the facts and circumstances of individual cases. These are matters for valuation officers or—in the absence of agreement—for the independent valuation tribunal or ultimately the courts to decide.

Burial Spaces

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance she plans to issue to local authorities in the sustainable communities growth areas on the provision of adequate burial spaces; and if he will make a statement. [66648]

Ms Harman: I have been asked to reply.

The need for guidance for all local authorities on the provision of burial space is one of the matters we are considering in the course of our current review of burial law and practice. As I explained in my statement on 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 3WS, the Government will inform the House of its plans to bring forward proposals for burial law reform later this year.

Business Growth (Staffordshire)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much (a) Tamworth borough council and (b) Staffordshire county council received under the Local Authority Business Growth Incentive in 2005-06; and what proportion of the amount retained by each local authority has been allocated to supporting business growth to date. [68366]

Mr. Woolas: Tamworth borough council received £284,163 and Staffordshire county council received £1,091,656 under the Local Authority Business Growth Incentives scheme (LABGI) in 2005-06.

All monies awarded under the LABGI scheme are not ring-fenced and we do not hold information on their use. It is for local authorities to decide how their LABGI reward is spent. Some may invest in further business growth while others may choose to invest in better public services for their communities or to keep down council tax pressures.

Children's Services

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many nursery and crèche places are provided for people working in his Office; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for the children of employees of her Office. [67363]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is a member of the Westminster Holiday Playscheme that runs every school holiday. The ODPM funds 50 per cent. of the cost of places and the cost to staff is £12.50 per child. For the latest scheme (30 May 2006 to 2 June 2006) 42 places were available for the entire scheme although the number allocated to OPDM staff has not yet been confirmed. For previous schemes the following number of places were allocated:

	Places
Easter 2005	13
June 2005	8
Summer 2005	16
October 2005	3
April 2006	7

The ODPM also runs a Childcare Vouchers Scheme. Full time staff are eligible to receive vouchers to a maximum value of £23 per week (part time staff will receive vouchers pro rata in relation to the numbers of hours they work). To be eligible for these vouchers staff must be employed by the Crown and work as a civil servant in ODPM on a permanent or fixed-term contract. Unless they are a single parent or their partner is disabled or in full time education, the member of staff's partner must be in full time employment The member of staff or their partner must not be receiving support for the same child from another employer or another government department.

The child that they are claiming child care vouchers for must:

(a) Be living with the member of staff

(b) Be under five years old

(c) Not be in full time education;

The child carer must be registered.

Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many households pay council tax, excluding those on 100 per cent. council tax benefit. [66391]

Mr. Woolas: The number of chargeable dwellings liable for council tax in England as at November 2005 was 21,267,000. This figure includes any dwellings entitled to discounts but excludes any exempt dwellings. 401,000 of these chargeable dwellings were either second homes or long-term empty homes.

In 2004, the latest date for which figures are available, there were an estimated 3,148,500 households in England receiving council tax benefit for 100 per cent. of their council tax liability.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much the average council tax per dwelling in each Government office region was in England in each year since 1997-98. [66443]

Mr. Woolas: The requested information is tabled as follows:

Deprivation (Somerset)

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the local authority wards in (a) Yeovil constituency and (b) Somerset which are in the top 30 per cent. of wards in England by multiple deprivation indicators; and if she will make a statement. [68496]

Mr. Woolas: The Index of Multiple Deprivation 2004 (IMD 2004) was constructed at lower layer super output area (SOA) level and not at ward level. The new geographical unit was introduced to overcome the problems associated with wards—frequent boundary changes and differences in population sizes. With an average population of 1,500 people, SOAs are far better than wards at picking up small pockets of deprivation.

The following table includes the list of SOAs in Yeovil constituency and Somerset that fall within the 30 per cent. most deprived SOAs in England. The data shows that of the 74 SOAs in Yeovil constituency only seven (9.5 per cent.) fall within the 30 per cent. most disadvantaged SOAs in England and all seven of these are located in the borough of South Somerset. In total there are 327 SOAs in the local authorities that make up Somerset (including Yeovil). Of these 40 (12 per cent.) are among the 30 per cent. most deprived in England. The most deprived SOA (E01029106) is located in Bridgwater Sydenham in Sedgemoor.

Disability Equality

Roger Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what advice she has issued to local authorities on how they should implement their disability equality duty under the Disability Discrimination Act 2005. [68590]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not issued advice to local authorities on how to implement their disability equality duty—that is a matter for them. The Disability Rights Commission has produced a code of practice on how to implement the duty.

E-Government

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what targets the Government have set local authorities in each Implementing Electronic Government round with regards to the (a) National Land and Property Gazetteer and (b) Local Land and Property Gazetteer; and what the outturn results have been in each relevant year. [66224]

Mr. Woolas: There are no statutory Implementing Electronic Government (IEG) targets for the National Land and Property Gazetteer and Local Land and Property Gazetteer, although information is collected through the IEG return to inform national policy. In December 2005, 87 per cent. of local authorities in England had established a regularly-maintained link from their Local Land & Property Gazetteer (LLPG) to the National Land & Property Gazetteer (NLPG), with 13 per cent. in the process of implementing this link.

Fire Stations

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the fire stations where (a) closures and (b) appliance reductions are currently planned, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [68500]

Jim Fitzpatrick: These are matters decided locally through a fire and rescue authority's integrated risk management plan and as Ministers have no role to play in the determination of appropriate fire cover and the level of service in any fire and rescue authority, this information is not held centrally.

GLA Precept

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what was the Greater London Authority precept, and its predecessor fire/police precepts in London, on an average band D property in each year since 1996-97; and what the figure is for 2005-06. [60132]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Greater London Authority precept, and its predecessor fire/police precepts in London, on an average band D property since 1997-98, are shown in the following table.

	Metropolitan police	London Fire and Civil Defence	£ GLA
1996-97	56	21	—
1997-98	63	25	—
1998-99	76	26	—
1999-2000	83	28	—
2000-01	—	—	123
2001-02	—	—	151
2002-03	—	—	174
2003-04	—	—	224
2004-05	—	—	241
2005-06	—	—	255

The data are as reported on BR2 and BR3 forms submitted by the respective authorities to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister each year.

Homelessness

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many homeless households were accepted by local authorities as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need in the East of England in 2004-05; and how many such households contained (a) (i) one, (ii) two and (iii) three or more children and (b) an expectant mother but no other children. [60204]

Yvette Cooper: The total number of households accepted during 2004-05 by local authorities in the East of England Government office region as being eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need was 10,150, of which 5,020 contained dependent children. Of these 5,020, 2,820 had one child, 1,370 had two children and 830 had three or more children. An additional 1,410 households contained an expectant mother, but no other dependent children.

Local Government (Representation)

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment has been made of the merits of introducing single member wards in the metropolitan districts in England. [67255]

Mr. Woolas: We have launched a public debate about the governance arrangements for local areas. We are listening to all views on governance arrangements, some of which may have implications for electoral arrangements in local authorities. We plan to publish a White Paper on the future of local government in the summer.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what consideration has been given to altering the elections by thirds pattern of democracy in the metropolitan districts of England. [67667]

Mr. Woolas: We have launched a public debate about the governance arrangements for local areas. We are listening to all views on governance arrangements, some of which may have implications for electoral arrangements in local authorities. We plan to publish a White Paper on the future of local government in the summer.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much additional income has been raised as a result of local authorities using their discretionary power to abolish the council tax discount on empty homes since 2004; to whom has this additional income been allocated; and on what it has been spent. [66286]

Mr. Woolas: The amount of additional revenue raised by local authorities using their discretionary powers to reduce the council tax discounts on long-term empty homes was:

£49 million in 2004-05; and

£72 million in 2005-06.

This additional revenue raised is retained by local authorities. The increase in council tax base is taken into account in calculating formula grant. Any net increase in revenue for a local authority is not ring-fenced for spending on any particular activity.

These figures are estimates based on information reported by local authorities on the CTB1 and CTB1 (S) forms.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average council tax per (a) dwelling and (b) Band D in each local authority in England was in each year since 1997-98. [66308]

Mr. Woolas: Details of the average council tax per dwelling and Band D in each local authority in England are published on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website. The details can be found under "Information For Taxpayers" at "Council Taxes" at: http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/ct.htm.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which billing authority has the (a) highest and (b) lowest Band D council tax in England for 2006-07. [66323]

Mr. Woolas: Details of the Band D council tax in each local authority in England in 2006-07 are published on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website. The details can be found under "Information For Taxpayers" at "Council Taxes" at: http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/ct.htm.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much and what percentage of (a) council tax and (b) business rates was not collected by each of the 10 metropolitan districts in the county of Greater Manchester in each of the past five years; and if she will make a statement. [67247]

Mr. Woolas: The following tables provide amounts of (a) council tax and (b) non-domestic rates in each of the last five years not collected in-year, and expressed as a percentage of the amount collectable in year.

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much was spent on average in real terms by (a) district councils and (b) shire county councils on employing staff in (i) 1998 and (ii) the latest year for which figures are available. [67400]

Mr. Woolas: Average expenditure on employees by district councils and shire county councils in England in 1998-99 and 2004-05 at 2004-05 prices are shown in the following table.

	District councils	Shire county councils
2004-05	11.3	448.5

Total expenditure on employees is reported by local authorities to ODPM on Revenue Outturn (RO) forms. This includes all direct and indirect employee expenses and contributions to employee-related provisions, including national insurance contributions, pensions and employee related expenses.

The 1998-99 prices have been re-valued at 2004-05 prices using the latest ONS/HMT GDP deflators.

The large difference in employee expenditure between district and shire county councils is due to the different responsibilities different types of councils have.

Figures for 2004-05 are not directly comparable with figures for 1998-99. This is because the outturn data for 1998-99 have been calculated on a non-FRS (Financial Reporting Standard) 17 basis while the outturn data for 2004-05 have been calculated on a FRS 17 basis.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the total expenditure of local authorities was in each of the last five years. [67836]

Mr. Woolas: Total revenue expenditure of local authorities in England in each of the last five years can be found in table 4 of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) Statistical Release: "Local authority revenue expenditure and financing England: 2004-05 final outturn". This release is on the ODPM website at: http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/stats/natstats.htm#rev.

Figures in this table are presented on a non-financial reporting standard 17 (FRS17) basis.

Local Referendums

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether (a) fire authorities, (b) police authorities, (c) parish councils and (d) the Greater London Authority have powers to organise and hold local polls or referendums on local issues. [66300]

Mr. Woolas: Fire authorities and police authorities have no powers to hold local referendums. Parish councils do not have powers to organise and hold local referendums, but electors can demand a referendum on a question arising at a parish meeting, which is carried out by the district council. The Greater London Authority has powers to organise and hold referendums on local issues.

Local Strategic Partnerships

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) whether members of local strategic partnerships are subject to the Local Government Code of Conduct; [68044]

(2) whether a local authority is permitted to provide information to a local strategic partnership which it has not given to local councillors; [68046]

(3) what provision there is for local councillors to put (a) oral and (b) written questions to the local strategic partnership; [68047]

(4) whether there is a requirement for local strategic partnerships to report (a) verbally and (b) in writing to the local authority. [68048]

Mr. Woolas: Outside of Neighbourhood Renewal Fund areas local strategic partnerships are currently voluntary partnerships governed by non-statutory guidance issued in 2001, as such there is no requirement for the partnership collectively to report verbally or in writing to the local authority or a centrally-specified formal mechanism for local councillors to put (a) oral and (b) written questions to the local strategic partnership.

The 2001 guidance 'Local Strategic Partnerships' states that > 'Individual local authorities working within LSPs need to determine which elected members are involved and what role they should play'.

The guidance also states that:

> 'It should be ensured that councillors are properly included in the process'.

It is therefore for each area to determine the way in which LSPs and councillors interact.

The local Government Act 2000 provides for a code of conduct to apply to members and co-opted members of every relevant authority. The Standards Board of England policies this code. Non-local authority members would conduct themselves with reference to their own professional or corporate code of conduct and comply with any advice that accompanies this.

We have recently consulted on the future role of LSPs and are considering responses to this.

Local Vision Forum Website

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many unique visitors the http://www.localvisionforum.net/ website has received in each month since its establishment. [66264]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The visitor statistics for www.localvisionforum.net are as follows.

	March	April
Visits to the forum homepage	2,052	2,270
Unique visitors to the forum	977	1,194

As at 25 April 2006, 538 individuals have registered to use the forum, who between them have made 114 written contributions to the consultation through the forum.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much the Government spent on creating the http://www.localvisionforum.net/ website. [66265]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was not charged for the local vision forum. It was created as part of the DCA-funded Digital Dialogues project, evaluated by the Hansard Society, to investigate Government use of ICT to promote digital democracy.

Non-domestic Hereditaments

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many non-domestic hereditaments were shown in the rating list for England, under the description of communication stations, in the local authority area of (a) Brentwood and (b) Epping Forest in (i) 1998 and (ii) 2005. [66304]

Mr. Woolas: This information is not held centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what funds have been allocated to the Social Exclusion Unit for each of the last eight years. [67014]

Mr. Woolas: The expenditure of the Social Exclusion Unit for the last eight years is set out as follows.

2005-06	2,697,300

Social Services Funding

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what account is taken in local government social services funding formulae of the proportion of (a) over-65s, (b) over-75s and (c) over-85s in the local population. [68391]

Mr. Woolas: The basic amount for the social services for older people relative need formula is based on the number of household and supported residents aged 65 years and over. A further top-up is provided based on the proportion of such residents aged 90 and over. The full formula is described in section 4 of the Local Government Finance Report (England) 2006-07.

Supporting People Programme

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much was paid to each relevant local authority in Buckinghamshire and Milton Keynes in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06 under the Supporting People programme; how much she plans to allocate to each in (i) 2006-07, (ii) 2007-08 and (iii) 2008-09; and if he will make a statement. [67664]

Mr. Woolas: Supporting People is administered through top-tier local authorities and, for the area in question, the relevant authorities are Buckinghamshire county council and Milton Keynes council. The grants paid or due to those authorities for the years 2004-05 to 2007-08 are as set out in the following table.

Buckinghamshire county council
Supporting People Programme Grant	5,882,637	5,586,354	5,489,753	5,215,265
Supporting People Administration Grant	331,994	265,595	265,595	265,595
Milton Keynes council
Supporting People Programme Grant	5,616,818	5,333,923	5,241,687	4,979,603
Supporting People Administration Grant	211,126	143,301	143,301	143,301

In line with my announcement of 5 December 2005, the programme grant allocations given in the aforementioned table for each authority for 2007-08 are minimum allocations, set at 95 per cent. of the allocations for 2006-07. This approach has been taken to allow us to consider, following the recent consultation on the development of a Supporting People strategy, how best to approach future programme grant allocations. Full programme grant allocations for all Supporting People authorities will be confirmed before the 2006 summer recess.

Similarly, the administration grant allocations given in the table for each authority for 2007-08 are indicative allocations, and allocations will be confirmed before the 2006 summer recess.

Allocations for all authorities for 2008-09 to 2010-11 will be set following the conclusion of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the letter written by the Valuation Office Agency (VOA) to local authority chief executives on their statutory obligations referred to in the Summary of VOA and Authorities Liaison Group Meeting of 2 July 2003. [66314]

Mr. Woolas: The letter referred to in the Summary of VOA and Local Authorities Liaison Group meeting of 2 July 2003 was a draft prepared by the VGA's head office. It was made available on 4 July 2003 for local valuation officers to send to chief executives of those local authorities that were not fully undertaking their statutory obligations to supply information to valuation officers. It reminded them of their responsibilities and sought meetings to improve co-operation. A copy of the draft letter has been placed in the Library as requested.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the Valuation Office Agency's policy is on the council tax or business rates liability of live-work units; and what changes have been made to this policy since 1997. [66390]

Mr. Woolas: The criteria applied by valuation officers of the Valuation Office Agency (VOA) are set out in the Council Tax Manual published by the VOA on its website at www.voa.gov.uk. The guidance was last updated on 4 March 2004 to reflect the decision of the Lands Tribunal in the case of Tully v. Jorgensen (VO) 2003 RA 233.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Armed Forces (Inquests)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many inquests remain to be heard in relation to members of the armed forces who (a) lost their lives as a result of military duties in Iraq since 2003 and (b) lost their lives as a result of such duties in (i) 2004 and (ii) 2005; and in how many such cases an inquest has not been concluded a year after death. [66543]

Ms Harman [holding answer 27 April 2006]: Bodies from military personnel who died in Iraq are returned to the UK via RAF Brize Norton within the jurisdiction of the Oxfordshire coroner. I understand from the Oxfordshire coroner that 31 inquests remain to be heard from 2003, nine from 2004 and seven from 2005. Information about the number of such inquests being concluded within 12 months of the death is not available.

Children's Legal Centre

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much has been paid in legal aid to the Children's Legal Centre in each of the last three years. [67206]

Ms Harman: The legal aid paid to the Children's Legal Centre in each of the last three years is as follows

2003-04	98,896

These figures represent payments to the Children's Legal Centre for legal services provided to publicly funded clients.

Civil Courts (Enforcement of Judgments)

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what progress her Department has made in drafting a Bill to improve enforcement of judgments in the civil court system; when she expects the Bill to be ready to introduce into Parliament; and what measures her Department is planning to include in the Bill. [67145]

Ms Harman: The Bill is currently being drafted and we are hoping to publish in draft this session.

The Bill will then be formally introduced when Parliamentary time allows, and will include provisions for charging orders, attachment of earnings and information sharing.

Community Justice

Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps the Crown Prosecution Service is taking in order to facilitate the creation of community courts and community justice panels in Nottingham and elsewhere; and if she will make a statement. [66200]

Ms Harman: In Nottingham the Chief Crown Prosecutor has held discussions with local agencies about developing the concept of Community Justice.

Elsewhere the CPS is involved in two Community Justice projects—the Community Justice Centre, North Liverpool and the Salford Community Justice Initiative. Both of which were launched at the end of last year.

We will consider the lessons learned from the Liverpool and Salford projects and work with local agencies to determine ways the concept can be applied elsewhere.

Court Funds

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which classes of (a) litigants and (b) former litigants are entitled to have money in the Court Fund Special Account; and if she will make a statement. [67309]

Ms Harman: Those entitled to have money in the Special Account are:

Adults who lack mental capacity whose funds are either controlled by the Court of Protection or who have had monies awarded to them which are held under the jurisdiction of a county court, the High Court or a district registry

Children who have received an award as a result of litigation

There are also a very small number of instances where monies were placed in the Court Funds Special Account prior to 1 April 1983 and have not yet been paid out or transferred to the Unclaimed Balances account. The main component of these is widows' funds. There are twenty-nine widows' accounts remaining and most of these result from industrial fatal injury cases originating in the 1950s and 1960s where the judges paid the money into court rather than direct to the surviving spouse.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of the possible alternatives to the Court Fund Special Account available to litigants and Court of Protection clients; and if she will make a statement; [67310]

(2) what the cost was of the (a) consultants and (b) departmental staff used to conduct the investment and banking review within her Department; and if she will make a statement; [67312]

(3) what representations she has received on the future of the Court Funds Office and the Court Fund Special Account; and if she will make a statement; [67314]

(4) when she expects to publish the outcome of her Department's Investment and Banking Review; and if she will make a statement; [67323]

(5) who conducted her Department's Investment and Banking Review; how he was appointed; what qualifications he holds; when he reported to Ministers; and if she will make a statement; [67324]

(6) what plans she has to change the Court Funds Special Account; and if she will make a statement. [67385]

Ms Harman: A review of the Banking and Investment activities within the Department for Constitutional Affairs was completed in October 2003. Within this report the role of the Court Funds Office was considered. The review was carried out by an independent reviewer who is a Member of the Securities Institute. They were engaged as a result of a requirement to provide expert advice for a review of DCA's investment and banking operations that was not available 'in house'. The review required detailed knowledge of the regulation of financial services and the investment market and they were selected for their comprehensive knowledge of the investment and banking industry.

The report was commissioned at a cost of £60,000 which included all departmental staff costs.

The Department has in place an Investment and Banking Programme. The Programme is looking at the operations of the Court Funds Office, its constituent parts and any alternatives, within the context of Departmental policy and priorities. This work is still in progress and propositions for change may be developed. If that is the case the Government will engage with interested parties.

There are no plans to publish the internal report which has informed Government policy and other than the activity described in this question I have received no representations about the future of the Court Funds Office and the Court Funds Special Account.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many accounts on behalf of (a) individual litigants and (b) clients of the Court of Protection are held in the Court Funds Special Account; what the average balance was of the fund over the last 12 months; how many transactions the Account administered in that period; and if she will make a statement. [67376]

Ms Harman: The average balance of funds held in the CFO Special Account for 2005-06 was £3.12 billion. There are 83,195 accounts held on behalf of individual litigants and 18,895 accounts held on behalf of clients of the Court of Protection. During the course of the last year there have been 912,075 transactions.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what rate of interest has been payable on the Court Funds Special Account over the last 12 months; how much above base rate this rate was; and if she will make a statement. [67386]

Ms Harman: The Special Account has paid interest at a rate of 6 per cent. throughout the last 12 months. The base rate set by the Bank of England was at 4.75 per cent. from March until August 2005 when it changed to its present rate of 4.50 per cent. Interest rates on Court Funds accounts are kept under regular review.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans she has to upgrade the IT available to the Court Funds Office; and if she will make a statement. [67313]

Ms Harman: The IT infrastructure for the Court Funds Office is kept under regular review. The processing power of the system is currently being upgraded at minimal capital cost.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many staff are employed in the Court Funds Office; what the (a) salary and (b) on-costs are; and if she will make a statement. [67318]

Ms Harman: The Court Funds Office staffing level has remained constant over the past reporting year with 195 staff employed as of 31 March 2006. The salary cost for staff for the financial year 2005-06 was £4.96 million, and on-costs were £0.6 million. The total cost for staff was therefore £5.52 million.

Courts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the (a) magistrates courts, (b) Crown courts and (c) county courts which have closed in each year since January 1995, broken down by parliamentary constituency; and what (i) the date of and (ii) reason for each closure was. [66861]

Ms Harman: The information available to my Department on the county, Crown and magistrates courthouses that have closed since 1995 (broken down by parliamentary constituency) is set out in the following tables.

It has not been possible to include individual reasons for closure against each building. However, the reasons for closures include:

under-utilisation cost effectiveness
lack of secure custody facilities to meet Human Rights Act requirements lack of separate waiting area for witnesses and victims away from defendants facilities being outdated and not meeting Disability Discrimination Act requirements alternative, improved provision of access to justice (including where the courthouse is being replaced with a new building containing modern and fit for purpose facilities)

Since 1995 a number of new courthouses have been built which has improved the standard of facilities provided to court users.

Deaths in Custody

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what legal aid is available to the families of people who die in state custody. [67266]

Ms Harman: Any party who qualifies for legal aid under the standard means and merits criteria can obtain legal advice and information on a variety of matters under the Legal Help scheme. In addition although most civil claims arising from death are outside the scope of civil legal aid, funding can be provided for claims concerning serious wrongdoing by a public authority or significant breach of human rights.

Legal aid for the family of the deceased for representation at an inquest is not normally available, but it can be granted in exceptional circumstances, subject to strict criteria. The Lord Chancellor also has the power to waive the legal aid financial eligibility limits in cases where Article 2 ECHR is likely to require it, providing it is reasonable to do so in all the circumstances of the case.

Disabled People

Tom Levitt: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps the Department has taken to meet its statutory obligation as a public body in promoting the rights of disabled people. [65813]

Bridget Prentice: The Department for Constitutional Affairs is mindful if its responsibilities under the Disability Discrimination Act 2005. It has put into place a programme to establish a Disability Equality Scheme which will be operative by December 2006. General action plans are in preparation for the Department for Constitutional Affairs and regional action plans are being prepared regarding specific duties. The Department has sought assistance from the Disability Rights Commission and Greater London Authority regarding its Disability Equality Scheme.

In order to obtain views from disabled staff on the Disability Equality Scheme, questionnaires were sent to all staff with a disability seeking their views/ suggestions as to what should be included in the Scheme. The Disability Rights Commission has yet to define the Secretary of State's areas of responsibility for reporting on the Disability Equality Duty.

The Department's Disability Network has been influential, in conjunction with Human Resources, in arranging a specific training course for frontline staff designed to assist customers with disabilities to access its services more effectively. The Network has put together a step-by-step guidance manual for m: agers and staff detailing how the Department's services might be utilised.

European Small Claims Procedure

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what progress has been made in negotiations with other EU member states on the European Small Claims Procedure in relation to (a) the proposed €2,000 limit and (b) the rule that the losing party would have to pay the losing party's costs. [67138]

Bridget Prentice: While the Government would prefer the limit in the European Small Claims Procedure to be higher than €2,000, we recognise that different member states with varying costs of living have different needs. Although a fixed limit remains on the table, other options have also been raised. They include a range within which each member state will be able to set its own limit. The question has not yet been settled and negotiations continue.

The principle that the losing party normally pays their own costs as well as those of the winner has been agreed by member states. The Government have secured agreement that costs should be proportionate and discussions continue as how this is to be achieved.

Gender Recognition Act

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much has been spent on implementation of the Gender Recognition Act 2004. [67092]

Bridget Prentice: The Gender Recognition Act received Royal Assent in July 2004, and came into force in April 2005. During that period, a team in the Department for Constitutional Affairs oversaw the implementation process, including the setting up of the statutory Gender Recognition Panel. Other departments and agencies, including particularly the Office for National Statistics, also worked on the implementation process. As accounting structures do not precisely equate expenditure to individual Bills, and because of this multi-agency effort, I cannot provide precise figures for the implementation process; I can however provide these indicative numbers.

The budget for the Gender Recognition Project for financial year 2004-05, including costs to other departments, was £908,000; however, this also included the later stages of the parliamentary passage of the Gender Recognition Bill. Of this, between £300,000 and £400,000 was allocated for policy administration and staff costs. In the start-up budget for the Gender Recognition Panel, administrative start-up costs were estimated at £81,000,capital start-up costs were estimated at £128,000, programme start-up costs were estimated at £51,000, and rent start-up costs were estimated at £9,000.

The estimated cost for implementation by the Office for National Statistics was £200,000; this includes the establishment of the statutory Gender Recognition Register and preparing for the issue of new birth certificates to successful applicants as required by the Act. Costs to the Court Service were estimated at £34,000; this includes updating computer and other systems to allow for the new grounds for the annulment of marriages and the issue thereafter of full Gender Recognition Certificates, as well as appeals to the High Court against decisions of the Gender Recognition Panel. These amounts are included in the total.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the salaries are of each of the individuals who sit on the Gender Recognition Panel. [67093]

Bridget Prentice: The President of the Panel is His Honour Judge Harris, who is also President of Appeal Tribunals. The Deputy President is Mr. Jeremy Bennett, who is a Regional Chairman of Appeal Tribunals. Legal members of the Panel are salaried District Chairmen of Appeal Tribunals. None of these office holders receives any additional salary on account of his or her responsibilities in connection with the Panel. Medical members of the Panel are remunerated at the rate of £340 per day.

Hague Convention 1996

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which Government Ministers have had discussions with Spanish Ministers on the ratification of the Hague Convention of 1996 on the International Protection of Children; and on what dates such discussions took place. [62847]

Ms Harman: My right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary raised the matter in a letter to the current Spanish Foreign Minister, Miguel Angel Mbratinos, on 12 October 2004.

In addition to this, my right hon. Friend the Member for Rotherham (Mr. Macshane) raised the issue in a meeting with the then Spanish Europe Minister on 13 November 2003, when Minister for Europe. On 24 November 2003 Baroness Scotland also discussed the issue with Ana Palacio, the then Spanish Foreign Minister.

High Sheriffs

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the process is for appointing county selection panels for the selection of High Sheriffs in England and Wales. [67375]

Bridget Prentice: All Counties are encouraged to have Consultative Panels to provide consistency and continuity in the selection of future High Sheriffs. The panels are non-statutory. Guidance on membership is issued by the Association of High Sheriffs of England and Wales.

Inquests

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the criteria are by which a decision is taken as to whether an inquest should be heard by a senior judicial office-holder. [67278]

Ms Harman: Any decision whether to appoint a judicial officer as assistant deputy to hear a particular inquest is entirely a matter for the individual coroner.

Juvenile Detention

Dr. Vis: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the role is of magistrates in achieving the Youth Justice Board target of reducing the use of custody for juveniles by 10 per cent. [68120]

Ms Harman: Magistrates deal with young people convicted of crime within the statutory sentencing framework which Parliament has set. They also have regard to relevant decisions of the higher courts, guidelines issued by the Sentencing Guidelines Council, and, where these have been prepared, pre-sentence reports by Youth Offending Teams. Sentencing decisions have a bearing on the Board's targets but the role of magistrates is to sentence within the framework described.

Legal Aid

Mrs. James: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether complaints have been received at her Department about legal aid claimants who (a) are suspected of and (b) have been convicted of benefit fraud. [65077]

Ms Harman: The Department does receive some complaints about claimants' entitlement to legal aid but they are referred to the Legal Services Commission for investigation. However, information is not collected by the Legal Services Commission specifically about legal aid claimants who have been convicted of benefit fraud.

Party Funding

Lady Hermon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list leaders of political parties represented at Westminster to whom the Lord Chancellor has written seeking views on elements of a reporting regime of loans received further to the Lord Chancellor's statement in the House of Lords on 20 March. [68781]

Bridget Prentice: The following leaders of political parties represented in Westminster were written to on 20 March: The Rt. Hon. David Cameron MP Leader of the Conservative Party, The Rt. Hon. Sir Menzies Campbell MP Leader of the Liberal Democrat Party, Gerry Adams MP Leader of Sinn Fein, Mark Durkan MP Leader of the Social Democratic and Labour Party, George Galloway MP Leader of Respect the Unity Coalition, Elfyn Llwyd MP Leader Plaid Cymru, The Rt. Hon. Ian Paisley MP Leader of the Democratic Unionist Party, Lord Rogan Leader of the Ulster Unionist Party, Alex Salmond MP Leader of the Scottish National Party and Richard Taylor MP Independent Kidderminster Hospital and Health Concern.

The Lord Chancellor also wrote at the same time to Lord Beaumont of Whitley of the Green Party.

Personal Injury Cases

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when her Department will publish its response to the consultation findings on damages in personal injury cases. [68090]

Bridget Prentice: The Law Commission published a number of reports on issues relating to the civil law on damages, including Claims for Wrongful Death, Liability for Psychiatric Illness, and Damages for Personal Injury: Medical, Nursing and Other Expenses; Collateral Benefits. The Government intends to publish a consultation paper on the proposals contained in these reports and other issues relating to the law on damages in summer 2006.

Small Claims

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps are being taken to expand the type of small claims hearings that can be dealt with by telephone. [67146]

Bridget Prentice: Telephone hearings are already used on a limited basis for civil hearings in respect of certain applications in England and Wales.

From April 2006, the scope of hearings that can be dealt with by telephone has been extended to cover many of the preliminary stages of the proceedings in civil cases, including e.g. allocation hearings, listing hearings and case management hearings. This provision includes small claims preliminary hearings.

Hearings that could result in the final determination of the whole or part of the proceedings, such as small claims final hearings, cannot be dealt with by telephone hearing.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Animal Welfare

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list her Department's (a) advisory bodies and (b) committees concerned with animal health and welfare; and if she will make a statement. [67178]

Mr. Bradshaw: DEFRA is the Department with the lead responsibility for animal health and welfare. Partnership working with animal owners, the farming industry and others is at the heart of the approach set out in the Government's Animal Health and Welfare Strategy.

The current advisory bodies and committees are:

Advisory Committee on Dangerous Pathogens
Advisory Committee on Organic Standards
Cattle Compensation Advisory Group
Defra Antimicrobial Resistance Co-ordination Group
England Implementation Group for the Animal Health and Welfare Strategy for Great Britain
Farm Animal Welfare Council
Human and Animal Infections and Risks Surveillance Group
Independent Scientific Group on Cattle Tuberculosis
Science Advisory Council
Bovine Tuberculosis Vaccine Programme Advisory Group
Bovine Tuberculosis Vaccine Steering Group
UK Zoonoses Group
Veterinary Products Committee
Veterinary Residues Committee
Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee
Surveillance Group on Diseases and Infections in Animals Zoos Forum

Avian Influenza

Albert Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the impact on the poultry industry of cases of avian influenza being identified in the UK. [68542]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 May 2006]: We are monitoring the effect of these cases closely but it is too early to say what the wider impacts on industry will be. Our present objective is to manage the situation effectively and to minimise adverse impacts by encouraging wide public understanding of the issues and an evidence-based and proportionate response.

At present the disease is confined to three premises. Unless there is a significant spread of disease we do not expect a significant impact on local economies. Trade from the UK to other member states can carry on as normal and we are continuing to work with exporters and British embassies regarding imminent exports of poultry to third countries.

Albert Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what support has been given to assist the poultry industry in the UK to deal with the effects on sales as a result of avian influenza. [68547]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The Government are working closely with the poultry industry to respond effectively to the challenges posed by avian influenza.

Market impacts of animal disease are a risk carried by the industry. But the Government seek to minimise that risk by encouraging wide public understanding of the issues and an evidence-based and proportionate response. In particular, the Food Standards Agency, the Health Protection Agency, the chief medical officer and the chief veterinary officer have all made clear statements to the effect that avian influenza does not pose a food safety risk for domestic consumers.

Biological Diversity

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 24 April 2006, Official Report, columns 813-4W, on biological diversity, what contribution she expects the UK to make towards each of the recommendations; what her timetable is for the delivery of such contributions; and if she will make a statement. [66985]

Barry Gardiner: The Government were closely involved in developing many of the initiatives agreed upon at the Eigth Conference of Parties (COP 8) to the Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD), including in it's EU presidency role in the latter half of 2006. We will continue to support the EU in forthcoming international negotiations, including on the conservation of marine biodiversity and genetic resources in areas beyond national jurisdiction, and on the development of an international regime on Access and Benefit Sharing of Genetic Resources.

Many of the decisions from the conference include a call for regional responses and we expect these to be discussed at the next meeting of the Working Party on International Environmental Issues (Biodiversity) in June.

Once the definitive versions of the Decisions taken at COP 8 are available on the website of the Convention on Biological Diversity, my officials will review with other Departments the devolved Administrations and the Nature Conservation Agencies how to ensure that the decisions taken, including the new programme of work on Island Biodiversity, and the decisions on climate change and biodiversity, invasive alien species, business and biodiversity, forest biological diversity and agricultural biodiversity are reflected in our policies, programmes and research for the United Kingdom. This exercise will be completed over the next six months.

One of the key delivery mechanisms for these policies are the National Biodiversity Strategies and Action Plans (NBSAPs), required under article 6 of the Convention. The COP decision to review the implementation of NBSAPs is opportune in the light of plans already in place within the UK to refresh the UK Biodiversity Action Plan, which is both a delivery mechanism for the CBD and a link from CBD to the devolved country biodiversity strategies.

The decision on business and biodiversity arose from a joint UK Brazil initiative in partnership with the Secretariat of the CBD, Insight Investments and ILJCN—the World Conservation Union. We will be discussing with these and new partners how to take forward the elements of the decision requiring international development.

I will be discussing the integration of biodiversity into official development assistance with the DFID Under-Secretary of State at the next meeting of the Inter-Departmental Ministerial Group on Biodiversity.

We will continue to work closely with colleagues in Europe and the Secretariat to the CBD to support work on indicators and the development of improved outcome focussed reporting.

Elements of some decisions will be implemented through existing EU measures, for example the recently concluded Regulation on Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade which strengthens efforts to promote sustainable forest management. In addition, existing EU legislation, in particular directive 2001/18/EC, already ensures a precautionary! Approach to the use of Genetically Modified Organisms (including Genetically Modified Trees and Genetic Use Restriction Technologies).We will continue to provide additional financial resources to support countries rich in biodiversity in the implementation of the CBD through the UK's substantial contribution to the Global Environment Facility (currently £118 million for 2002-2006, of which approximately 30 per cent. goes to Biodiversity projects) and through the Darwin Initiative.

We will also support capacity building efforts over the inter-sessional period leading up to COP 9 in 2008 through DEFRA's World Summit on Sustainable Development Implementation Fund and through DEFRA's support for the Convention's Trust Funds. We will be focusing such efforts particularly on Africa and on support for implementation, particularly through national biodiversity strategies and action plans.

Game Rearing Farms

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 16 June 2005, Official Report, column 553W, on game rearing farms, what the reasons are for the difference between the figure for the number of game rearing farms given in that answer and that given in the partial draft regulatory impact assessment on the control of avian influenza. [65430]

Barry Gardiner: Figures provided in the answer of 16 June 2005, Official Report, column 553W, represent the industry's own best estimate for the UK as a whole; no specific figures are held. That answer also referred to 200 established game farms, while the partial RIA drew on the Game Conservancy Trust's estimate that there are more than 10,000 holdings where pheasants are reared. The use of these different classifications accounts for the difference in the figures quoted.

More recently, DEFRA has established the Great Britain Poultry Register to gather essential information about certain species of birds only held on commercial premises in Great Britain. This is to support rapid communication with poultry keepers and help to manage disease outbreaks by targeting resources where they are needed most. Further information can be found on the DEFRA website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/diseases/vetsurveillance/poultry/index.htm

John Pointon and Sons

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which body is responsible for regulating the activities of animal rendering plants, with particular reference to John Pointon and Sons, Felthouse Lane, Cheddleton near Leek, Staffordshire. [67580]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 May 2006]: If the aggregated net thermal rated input of the appliances on a rendering site exceeds 50 MW, the rendering plant falls under part A(1) of section 1.1 of schedule 1 to the Pollution Prevention and Control (England and Wales) Regulations 2000 (PPC Regulations) and thereby is regulated by the Environment Agency. This is the case with the rendering plant operated by John Pointon and Sons near Leek. Rendering plants with less than 50 MW aggregated net thermal rated input falls under part A(2) of section 6.8 of part 1 of schedule 1 of the PPC Regulations and thereby is regulated by the relevant local authority.

The Animal By-Products Regulation (EC) No. 1774/2002 requires all premises on which animal by-products are handled or processed to be officially approved or authorised. In England the implementing Regulations (the Animal By-Products Regulations 2005) prescribe the Secretary of State as a 'competent authority' for the purpose of granting animal by-product approvals. The Secretary of State fulfils this role via the state veterinary service. Approval is only granted or maintained if the competent authority is satisfied that the regulation is complied with.

Natural England

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of hectares of land which would be owned by Natural England; what percentage of this land is dedicated for open air recreation under section 16 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000; and what plans exist for dedicating the remaining land. [69530]

Barry Gardiner: We envisage that the majority of Natural England's land holding will comprise National Nature Reserves (NNRs). NNRs cover approximately 89,800 hectares, of which 62,300 hectares are managed by English Nature, the remainder being managed by Approved Bodies. Of the land managed by English Nature, 19,641 hectares are owned and hence qualify for owner-dedication under section 16 (s16) of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000. Some 27,935 ha of all NNRs (whether managed by English Nature or by an Approved Body) are already mapped as access I and under the CRoW Act. No NNRs are currently dedicated under s16 of CRoW, although the first such dedication will follow shortly, prior to the vesting of Natural England. The board of Natural England has not yet considered its policy on s16 dedication.

Poultry Farmers (Subsidies)

Albert Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with his EU counterparts on financial support for poultry farmers in other EU countries; and if he will make a statement. [68543]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 May 2006]: A proposal to extend the current provision for exceptional measures in the eggs and poultry market was adopted at the EU Agriculture and Fisheries Council on 25 April. This allows exceptional market support measures to be taken where there is serious market disturbance because of concerns about avian influenza. Member states would need to specifically request any individual measures, and these would need to be 50 per cent. co-financed. The Commission has made clear that measures adopted by member states before 25 April may be considered for co-financing on a case-by-case basis, and that serious market disturbance is defined at EU—not member state—level.

The UK view is that these kind of measures must be directly linked to exceptional circumstances and must not be used to distort the normal competitive nature of the EU market. It is long-standing UK policy that public funds should not be used to underpin changes as a result of normal market evolution.

Voluntary Shops

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what Government support is available to develop voluntary shops in village communities. [67772]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 3 May 2006]: Village shops are important to rural communities in providing goods and services, as well as crucial social contact. An increasing number of village shops are operating as social enterprises and able to sustain the business through volunteer action and earned income.

For social enterprises generally, local Business Links are a good source of advice and support. The Business Link website includes a selection of useful sources of information and business support. More specifically, DEFRA's rural enterprise scheme, which is part of the England rural development programme (ERDP), can provide support to social enterprise projects such as community run shops, where they have strong community backing and a business plan which establishes the need for a grant. The current ERDP ends on 31 December 2006 and the rural enterprise scheme will close to new applications on 30 June 2006. DEFRA is currently consulting on priorities for the new rural development programme for England.

The Government have also assisted local services by extending mandatory rate relief at 50 per cent. to include sole village public houses, petrol stations and village food shops under the village shop scheme. Qualifying premises are entitled to a 50 per cent. reduction in their business rates bills, and local authorities have the discretion to top-up all other non-domestic premises up to 100 per cent. provided the rateable value is £14,000 or less.

TREASURY

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer under what statutory authority the Registrar General retained the 1921 decennial census for England and Wales in his Department between 1 January 1959 and 16 January 1985; and if he will make a statement. [67180]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell dated 9 May 2006:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking under what statutory authority the Registrar General retained the 1921 decennial census for England and Wales in his Department between 1 January 1959 and 16 January 1985. (67180)

In 1958 the Public Records Act was passed and Section 3(4) specified a requirement to transfer records to the Public Record Office not later than 30 years after their creation. However advice received at that time was that the statutory prohibition on disclosure prescribed by the Census Act 1920 overcame the requirement.

Subsequently the Registrar General wished the retention of the returns in his custody to be covered by formal approval and this was obtained from the Lord Chancellor in 1985.

Birth Statistics

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what forecast he has made of the number of live births per 1,000 of population in (a) East Sussex and (b) Eastbourne in each of the next five years. [68389]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding the forecast of the number of live births per 1,000 of population in (a) East Sussex and (b) Eastbourne in the next 5 years. (68389)

The attached table provides the projected crude birth rate in East Sussex and Eastbourne from 2005 to 2010. These projections are based on mid-2003 population estimates and are the latest projections available. They assume that local trends in fertility, mortality and migration over the reference period 1999 to 2003 will continue into the future.

	Births per 1,000 population
	Eastbourne	East Sussex
2005	9.8	9.5
2006	9.6	9.3
2009	9.1	8.8
2010	9.0	8.7

Notes:
1. Based on the 2003-based sub-national population projections, the latest set of projections currently available.
2. These population projections show an increase in the size of the population and increasing ageing of the population. These factors lead to a projected decrease in birth rates per 1,000 population.
3. All detailed numbers on which rates are based are available on the National Statistics website.

Bowel Cancer

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) incidence and (b) survival rate was for bowel cancer in each (i) goverment office region and (ii) strategic health authority area in each of the last three years, broken down by sex and age. [68704]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell dated 9 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the (a) incidence and (b) survival rate was for bowel cancer in each (i) government office region and (ii) strategic health authority area in each of the last three years, broken down by sex and age. [68704]

The most recent available figures for newly diagnosed cases of colorectal (bowel) cancer registered in England are for the year 2003. Incidence rates by Government Office Region and by sex, in each year between 2001 and 2003, are published in Table 5 of the Annual Reference Volume, Cancer statistics: Registrations, Series MB1. These are available on the National Statistics website:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=8843&Pos=1&ColRank=2&Rank=272

Numbers of newly diagnosed cases and indirectly standardised ratios (SRRs) are available by Strategic Health Authority and by sex for the years 1993 to 2002. These can be found on the Clinical and Health Outcomes Knowledge Base website:

http://www.nchod.nhs.uk/.

The latest available one-year and five-year survival rates by Government Office Region and Strategic Health Authority for cancer of the colon, are for adult patients diagnosed during 1995-1997 and followed up to the end of 2002. These were published on the National Statistics website on 21st April 2005, and are available at:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=11991&Pos=4&ColRank=1&Rank=272.

Figures are not available for colorectal (bowel) cancer or cancer of the rectum. Figures by age are only available at England level.

Finance (No.2) Bill

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what (a) research and (b) other information was used to inform his conclusions regarding the number of people affected by Clause 157 and Schedule 20 of the Finance (No. 2) Bill; [68157]

(2) if he will place in the Library the cost impact assessment of Clause 157 and Schedule 20 of the Finance (No. 2) Bill prepared by his Department. [68212]

Dawn Primarolo: The Red Book contains estimates of the Exchequer consequences of Budget proposals.

HMRC Premises

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what requirements have been placed on HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) in relation to accessibility of its customer-facing offices to public transport; and what assessment HMRC made of the number of buses passing within 100 yards of (a) the existing St. James's street office and (b) the proposed St. Cross office each hour during the working day in respect of the transfer of the Newport, Isle of Wight, office to new premises. [69483]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC considered—and balanced—a number of factors when considering the new location for the Newport, Isle of Wight inquiry centre. Among the factors considered were accessibility for customers and the availability of suitable accommodation.

Pensions (Public Sector)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many public sector employees were covered by final salary pension schemes in (a) 1997 and (b) 2005. [69457]

Mr. Timms: We do not have data for the exact years requested. However, for the years 1995 and 2004, the number of employees covered by public service final salary schemes, which include the civil service, NHS employees, teachers, armed forces, police officers, fire fighters and local government employees were 3.9 and 5 million respectively. These figures do not include employees in public corporations, as information about their schemes is not centrally held.

Increases in public sector employment have been concentrated in priority areas and focused on frontline delivery. However, there are other factors such as increases in the proportion of part-time employees opting to join public service schemes.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the number of cases of prostate cancer in each English county for each year from 1990-91 to 2006-07; and if he will make a statement. [68495]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 9 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the estimate is of the number of cases of prostate cancer in each English county for each year from 1990-91 to 2006-07. [68495]

The most recent available figures for newly diagnosed cases of prostate cancer registered in England are for the year 2003. I am placing a table in the House of Commons Library, which gives figures by local authority for the years 1990-2003.

Reptiles

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many reptiles were imported into (a) the UK and (b) the EU each year between 2000 and 2005; and how many were of (i) wild-caught, (ii) captive-bred, (iii) ranched and (iv) farmed origin in each year. [67040]

Barry Gardiner: I have been asked to reply.

Data are only available for imports of species listed under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES). Under CITES, there is no source defined as farmed; only wild-caught, captive-bred and ranched.

The following number of wild-caught, captive-bred and ranched live reptiles were imported into the UK under CITES:

2000	3,157	2,089	1,600
2001	2,618	4,013	2,164
2002	3,544	1,393	2,356
2003	5,149	1,988	5,347
2004	4,793	2,925	5,436
2005	3,636	2,382	7,527

Member states release data about the previous year's CITES imports annually in June. Until the June 2006 reporting round is complete, data for imports into the EU are only available up to 2004. The available data show that the following numbers of wild-caught, captive-bred and ranched live reptiles were imported into the EU under CITES:

	Wild-caught	Captive-bred	Ranched
2000	41,374	143,735	34,405
2001	51,642	123,217	34,611
2002	43,885	155,561	46,637
2003	57,753	192,541	54,999
2004	46,198	176,383	49,617

Staff Discipline

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in his Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years. [67977]

John Healey: Prior to 2005, the Treasury only kept records of disciplinary cases that were proven. Information on disciplinary cases that were initiated but not proven is not available. The number of people who were (a) disciplined for inappropriate use of the internet while at work in each of the last five years was as follows:

	Disciplined
2001	1
2002	—
2003	—

No employees were dismissed for this reason.

The number of people who have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years is nil.

Suicide

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have committed suicide in each year since 1997, broken down by method used. [68637]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 9 May 2006:

Vehicle Excise Duty

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of vehicle excise duty collected was spent on (a) the maintenance of roads and (b) public transport in each of the last five years. [67187]

John Healey: The Government do not hypothecate revenue from vehicle excise duty into transport expenditure.

Details of Government expenditure on roads and public transport is available on the Department for Transport website http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_transstats/documents/page/dft_transstats041489.pdf

White Papers

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many White Papers were published by his Department in 2005; and if he will make a statement. [68248]

John Healey: A list of Command Papers published by the Treasury is to be found on the website of the Office of Public Sector Information (www.opsi.gov.uk). Information relating specifically to White Papers and to Green Papers—terms which are not formally defined—is not available.

PRIME MINISTER

Journalists' Air Travel

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Prime Minister (1) pursuant to the answer of 4 May 2006 to question 67852, how charges to journalists are calculated for their air travel when accompanying him on overseas trips; [69570]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 4 May 2006 to question 67853, if he will list the names of the journalists who have accompanied him on each foreign visit since 2001; and which news organisations have been invited to accompany him on such visits. [69571]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on Wednesday 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1675W.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Centre for the Development of Enterprise

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the establishment of the Centre for the Development of Enterprise. [68633]

Hilary Benn: The Centre for Development Enterprise (CDE) was established over 25 years ago under the terms of the Partnership Agreement between the Africa, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) countries and the European Community and its member states. The CDE's mission is to foster socio-economic development by providing advisory and non-financial services to companies and businesses in ACP countries.

The CDE employs 57 staff. It is primarily funded from the European Development Fund (EDF) which has provided €108 million for 2000-06. The United Kingdom contributes 12.67 per cent. of that amount. Additional funding comes from donors including Sweden, France, Belgium, Luxembourg, Portugal, Italy and Spain.

Developing Countries (Corruption)

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to tackle corruption in developing countries. [68670]

Hilary Benn: DFID is committed to tackling corruption. It is a problem in most countries, and is a result of failures in governance and accountability. The best check against corruption is to strengthen governance, supported by regular monitoring. We need to focus on building policies and institutions that prevent and deter corruption before it undermines development. DFID programmes include support for a range of governance reforms which are aimed primarily at improving accountability, transparency and the improved financial management of public resources. DFID is also promoting work internationally to develop better indicators that will help track progress over time.

A key part of DFID's work with developing country governments is to support the improvement of strategic planning and public financial management. For example, DFID supports public-financial management reform in Zambia, Rwanda, Malawi, Ghana, Tanzania, Uganda, Sierra Leone, Ethiopia, Mozambique, Nigeria, Lesotho and the Gambia. Procurement reform is particularly important and DFID works closely with other bilateral donors and multilateral institutions (especially the World Bank) to improve countries' procurement capacity. Many DFID programmes are also supporting reform of public service pay, conditions and performance management, in order to reduce the incentives for public officials to act corruptly.

DFID also provides support to a wide range of institutions in developing countries, working to tackle corruption and improve the effectiveness of aid and domestic resources to maximise service delivery and benefits to poor people DFID has provided technical and financial support to dedicated anti-corruption commissions, for example in Sierra Leone, Malawi, Uganda and Zambia. In addition work is under way to help improve citizens' capacity to hold governments to account for the way funds are used, by strengthening institutions such as parliaments, parliamentary committees and supreme audit institutions.

Corruption is not just a developing country problem. Developed countries carry an equal responsibility. The UK Government are strongly committed to combating overseas corruption and have taken a number of steps including action to reform the UK domestic legal framework and providing support to developing countries to strengthen their own systems. DFID, working with other government departments, has launched the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative to improve the transparency of oil and mineral revenues. The UK also played an important role in negotiations to develop the United Nations Convention Against Corruption (UNCAC), the first global agreement on the action that needs to be taken to combat corruption. The UK formally ratified the convention on 9 February this year and became only the second G8 country to have done so.

Family Planning

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with the US Administration about (a) condom use, (b) maternal health, (c) access to safe abortion and (d) its Mexico City policy on family planning assistance in developing countries. [68243]

Mr. Thomas: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development has not had recent discussions with the US Administration on these issues. The UK does have a different view from the US in a number of areas, including on promoting condom use, and on access to safe abortion. But we do, as we always have, continue to work with the US as closely and constructively as we can to promote country-led, evidence based and effective approaches to sustainable development.

The UK and the US are the largest bilateral donors involved in the supply of condoms and have a shared view on a range of key issues. We are working closely together, for example with the Reproductive Health Supplies Coalition to help develop long-term sustainable responses to reproductive health commodity needs.

DFID and the US have regular discussions on maternal health, and we both support for example, the recently launched Partnership for Maternal, Newborn and Child Health, as well as joint research on improving ways to measure maternal health.

The US is fully aware of our views on the Mexico City policy; that we do not agree with it.

Malaria

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being made by his Department (a) to treat and (b) to reduce the incidence of malaria in developing countries. [68229]

Mr. Thomas: UK support to malaria control is provided through global partnerships, multilateral agencies, and bilateral country programmes. Most of these channels support both treatment of malaria and reduction of incidence including through more widespread use of insecticide treated mosquito nets (ITNs). DFID also supports public-private partnerships for the research and development of new tools and technologies (PDPs).

The UK is a key donor to the Global Fund to fight AIDS, TB and malaria (GFATM), and has pledged £359 million to the fund through to 2008. Approximately 27 per cent. of GFATM funds go to malaria treatment and prevention?including both treatment (through provision of anti-malarial drugs) and prevention. DFID has provided £48.5 million from 1998-2005 to the global Roll Back Malaria (RBM) Partnership, who work at global level, including by running the malaria medicines and supplies service which works to support countries to access supplies of effective malaria drugs and ITNs. DFID also provides core funding to the World Health Organisation (£12.5 million in 2004-05), and funds the World Bank and European Commission who also provide support to malaria treatment and prevention.

At country level DFID supports malaria control through bilateral programmes. Our priorities for malaria control focuses on giving support to countries to develop strong and sustainable health systems that are able to scale up the coverage of treatment including artemisinin combination therapy (ACT) and ITNs. In Kenya?DFID has committed £47.4 million to social marketing of ITNs. The aim is to increase the use of nets among pregnant women and children under five. DFID has also committed £8.5 million to develop a sustainable market for ITNs in Mozambique, through community-based and public health centres and retail shops.

DFID has pledged £10 million over five years (2005-10) to the Medicines for Malaria Venture (MMV), which aims to discover, develop and deliver new affordable anti-malarial drugs. This is a joint commitment with the Wellcome Trust, who will match our support. DFID will also give £6.5 million over the next three years to the Drugs for Neglected Diseases Initiative (DNDi), which includes funding for work on developing a more effective artimisinin combination drug for treatment of malaria.

Palestinian Territories

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on increased funding to the Palestinian territories through the United Nations Relief and Works Agency. [68893]

Hilary Benn: DFID provided £15 million to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) in April 2006. This will help UNRWA continue to provide health, education, job creation and other essential programmes for Palestinian refugees in the West Bank, Gaza, Syria, Lebanon and Jordan. We provided a similar level of assistance through UNRWA in 2005.

Since 2004, DFID has provided a total of £47.2 million for UNRWA's work to support the basic needs of Palestinian refugees.

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the merits of (a) non-governmental organisations and (b) private sector initiatives funding as a means of sustaining international aid to the Palestinian territories. [68898]

Hilary Benn: Supporting the basic needs of the Palestinian people is a high priority for DFID's programme of assistance. Non-governmental organisations (NGOs) and the private sector play a vital role in meeting the needs of some Palestinians. However, NGOs and the private sector do not have the capacity to substitute for the Palestinian Authority (PA) which, together with the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA), provides the vast majority of basic services to people in the West Bank and Gaza. We hope that the new Palestinian government will comply with the Quartet principles. If this happened, DFID funding would continue through the PA.

DFID and Her Majesty's Treasury are continuing work that began before the Palestinian elections to take forward the Chancellor of the Exchequer's initiative on the contribution of private sector development and growth to sustained peace in the region. The business environment is clearly very difficult, but we are assessing what opportunities there might be.

Pygmies (Congo Basin)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to provide support for pygmies in the Congo basin who have been affected by conflict. [68232]

Hilary Benn: In 2005-06, DFID provided £29.5 million in assistance to meet humanitarian needs in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) out of a total programme of £55 million. We do not earmark our assistance specifically for particular ethnic groups so cannot say what proportion of this would have benefited pygmies. In addition to humanitarian assistance, the majority of our programme is focused on successful completion of the transition process and peace-building activities aimed at reducing the risks of conflict. These activities along with a major diplomatic effort are aimed at seeing a permanent end to the conflict in the DRC that has had such a devastating impact on the people including pygmies.

In 2004-05, we also provided £500,000 in assistance to meet humanitarian needs in the Republic of Congo (Congo Brazzaville), also not targeted to any particular ethnic groups.

Recruitment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies spent on recruitment, search and selection agencies in each of the last five years. [68338]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not make use of recruitment, search and selection agencies when recruiting staff to the home civil service.

In accordance with The Civil Service Commissioners code, external appointments are made on merit on the basis of fair and open competition.

Our job advertisements are placed in the national press or specialised magazines in addition to appearing on DFID's own website www.dfid.gov.uk. Since 2003, all of our vacancies have also been placed on the civil service recruitment Gateway website www.careers.civil-service.gov.uk

Sex Tourism

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to work with developing countries to tackle sex tourism, with particular reference to that involving children. [68174]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) is working with Governments of developing countries to reduce poverty. Poverty can make poor people vulnerable to exploitation in local and international sex tourism. DFID has committed approximately £12 million to support countries' efforts to combat trafficking of poor women and children, many of whom are trafficked for work in the sex industry.

DFID's commitments include support through the International Labour Organisation's (ILO) International Programme for the Elimination of Child Labour to help eliminate labour exploitation of women and children in the Greater Mekong basin in South East Asia. This six year programme began in 2003 and works with the Governments of Cambodia, Laos, Thailand, Vietnam and the province of Yunnan in China to combat trafficking of women and children. DFID is also supporting a Save the Children Fund programme, which works with communities and is specially designed to complement the ILO's interventions on trafficking at national level.

Sexual Violence

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department (a) to reduce the incidence of sexual violence in Democratic Republic of the Congo and (b) to improve the status of women in society. [68230]

Hilary Benn: We are concerned about the continuing reports of wide-scale sexual violence in the DRC, primarily against women, though also against significant numbers of children and men too. Rape seems to have become a weapon of war among armed groups. The prevailing culture of impunity, which creates the conditions for ongoing human rights violations, persists in the great lakes region.

The UK is working with the international community at different levels to deal with causes and symptoms of this, and has raised the issue with the Congolese authorities at all levels on many occasions, reminding them of the need to protect the rights of all vulnerable groups and for judicial action to be taken to bring the perpetrators of such abuses to justice. Specifically, as a member of the International Committee to Support the Transition (CIAT), the UK has joined the international community in highlighting abuses perpetrated by the Congolese army against the civilian population.

To end the cycle of human rights violations in Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), there needs to be an end to conflict in the country and the whole great lakes region. Conflict reduction is a major focus of the UK's engagement in DRC, and at a local level in the East we support NGOs who are promoting dialogue and peace building work between communities previously in conflict, with a total commitment of £3.3 million.

In addition, all the projects within this peace building programme try to tackle many of the underlying causes of sexual violence and to enhance women's status in society by working with women's organisations. One example of this type of work is International Alert's support for the South Kivu Women's Forum, which brings together women's organisations from community groups to women politicians to work for women's empowerment and peace.

Other areas of our work aim to address other aspects of women's empowerment. For example we are providing support of £800,000 to the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) to ensure women's full participation in the electoral process, both as candidates and voters.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to provide (a) psychological counselling for rape victims, (b) education for communities to reduce the stigma associated with rape, (c) medical treatment for victims including repair of fistula, (d) support for women made pregnant as a result of rape and (e) other support for victims of sexual violence in Democratic Republic of the Congo. [68231]

Hilary Benn: The high incidence of sexual violence in Eastern Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) is of great concern to the Government, particularly as recent evidence that suggest that levels are increasing. Providing support to the victims of such violence is a key part of humanitarian work in the DRC and DFID is a major donor to humanitarian programmes in the country, through the DRC Humanitarian Action Plan.

The Action Plan identifies 'protection' as a key sector for support, which includes ensuring that special measures are implemented to protect women and girls from violence in emergency situations and providing adequate assistance for survivors of gender-based violence.

Many of the individual humanitarian projects that we fund include providing support, especially medical assistance to victims of sexual violence, particularly in Eastern DRC. We are providing £440,000 to the Norwegian non-governmental organisation (NGO,) Christian Relief Network to set up and run a hospital wing in South Kivu treating women suffering from fistula—which is one of the most serious and devastating consequences of sexual violence. Their programme includes some of psychological support for patients as well as medical treatment. We are also supporting the International Committee of the Red Cross, who have recently launched a gender-based violence pilot programme in the East.

We have recently agreed to the addition of medical and psychosocial support for victims of sexual violence to an existing humanitarian health programme implemented by the health NGO, Merlin.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate he has made of the percentage of the population of Sierra Leone which (a) lives below the poverty line and (b) lives on (i) $1 and (ii) $2 a day. [68150]

Hilary Benn: The Sierra Leone Integrated Household Survey of 2003-04 (the latest available figures) found that:

Approximately 70 per cent. of the population therefore lives on less than a dollar a day, and this figure is cited by the UN in 2005;

Approximately 75 per cent. of Sierra Leoneans live on less than two dollars a day according to data cited by the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC) in 2006.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department has taken to help Sierra Leone develop policies to enable its Government to generate income from (a) diamonds and (b) fishing. [68152]

Hilary Benn: DFID is supporting the objectives set out in the Government of Sierra Leone's Core Mineral Policy. It has two main aims: to maximise the economic and social benefits of the diamond sector to both the Government and the people of Sierra Leone; and to ensure that the benefits accrued from the sector are divided more equitably among those involved. I refer the hon. Member for Cotswold to the answer I previously gave on 7 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1395-6.

DFID is committed to ensuring that the Government of Sierra Leone maximise the revenues it can accrue from its mineral resources, including the diamond sector. As part of this commitment, DFID is recruiting a Director General (DG) for the Ministry of Mineral Resources (MMR), whose principle task will be to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the Ministry. The DG's responsibilities will include overseeing a work plan that the MMR will develop in close consultation with the Office of the President. The DG will also liaise closely with other ministries, such as the National Revenue Authority and the Ministry of Finance to ensure that the policies developed maximise the revenue potential available to the Government from its extractive sector.

DFID officials are currently assessing options for providing support to fisheries policy development and more effective fisheries management by the Sierra Leone Ministry of Fisheries and Marine Resources. The European Commission (EC) is currently supporting a fisheries stock assessment in Sierra Leone and DFID's assistance would aim to build on this. At the same time, the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) has shown an interest in engaging with Sierra Leone on issues relating to illegal, unregulated and unreported fishing. Our combined objective is to ensure the wealth of this highly prized fishery accrues to Sierra Leone for use by Sierra Leoneans. It is commonly recognised that currently Sierra Leone and neighbouring countries Liberia and Guinea, are together losing $140 million in fish that is stolen by illegal foreign fleets operating beyond the reach of national policing. A recent DFID assessment mission noted that this would have important benefits for the many small-scale fishers and processors and help them access new markets for their produce.

The mission was undertaken as part of the development of a new Joint EC/DFID Country Strategy Paper for Sierra Leone, which will be published in the autumn.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of the population of Sierra Leone has access to (a) free education and basic healthcare and (b) fresh water; and what steps he is taking to increase the percentage in each case. [68153]

Hilary Benn: There is currently no accurate or reliable data on the percentage of the population that have access to free education and basic health care services. The Ministry of Health estimates for 2005, indicate that approximately 60 per cent. of the population has access to health services of some kind. I refer the hon. Member to the information on 'gross school enrolment rates' in my answer of 13 March 2006, Official Report, column 1941W.

On the percentage of the population who have access to safe water, estimates from the Sierra Leone National Energy and Water Policy Planning Unit vary from 21 per cent. to 46 per cent. (Updated water data from a household survey will be available soon and DFID is supporting ActionAid to undertake a water user survey in the Freetown area.)

At the end of the conflict in 2002, DFID agreed a country assistance programme with the Government of Sierra Leone (GoSL) which focused on promoting peace and security, and good governance. This, with poverty reduction budget support, has formed the core of DFID support to date. As part of the development a new Joint Country Strategy, DFID, the GoSL and the European Commission (EC) are reviewing existing country programmes. This will include an assessment of needs in the education, health and water sectors. A draft of the Joint Country Strategy will be available for wider consultation in July.

In the meantime, DFID is funding a number of separate initiatives across all three sectors. These include:

providing support to implement a Malaria Outreach programme; undertaking preparatory work with the National Energy and Water Policy Planning Unit to support the National Water and Sanitation Policy. DFID is also financing a programme aimed at improving the effectiveness of state-owned enterprises, including in the water sector; through DFID contributions to the EU Water Facility a number of NGO programmes for rural water supply and sanitation are underway in Sierra Leone—with a total value of some €5.4 million.

White Papers

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many White Papers were published by his Department in 2005; and if he will make a statement. [68247]

Hilary Benn: No White Papers within the Commands Paper series were published by DFID in 2005.

TRANSPORT

Aircraft (Air Supply)

John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Civil Aviation Authority has started an investigation into the chronic neurotoxic effects of exposure to pyrolised engine oils via inhalation from aircraft engines into the cabin air supply on various types of aircraft; and if he will make a statement. [67802]

Derek Twigg: We have commissioned for the independent Committee on Toxicity (COT) to conduct a comprehensive evidence review of any health risks in cabin air and the CAA are contributing to this process. The formal COT meeting will be held in public later this year.

Cabotage Directive

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact of the EU Directive relating to cabotage on the UK haulage industry. [69528]

Dr. Ladyman: Based on figures published by Eurostat, it is estimated that, in 2004, cabotage operations by foreign hauliers accounted for about 1.2 per cent. of all road haulage operations in the UK (the cabotage penetration rate for the EU as a whole was also about 1.2 per cent.)

We are working with industry, through the Haulage Industry Task Group, to gather further evidence on the range of challenges facing the haulage industry, including competition from overseas, but also a number of other important issues.

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions he has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67529]

Derek Twigg: Paragraph 5.28 of the Ministerial Code sets out the rules on the registration of hospitality.

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65200]

We published 187 new documents on the Department's main website (www.dft.gov.uk) in March 2006.

All major activity will be published in both forms and promoted to stakeholders and the press for wider dissemination. In contrast, some publications, particularly those aimed at niche/specialist audiences, may be published in electronic format only.

It is the Department's policy to make documents available in paper and alternative formats on request. The DfT website also complies with Web Accessibility Initiative (WIA) AA accessibility standards.

Disabled Access

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department is taking to enforce the disability equality duty on train operating companies. [64483]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport is currently assessing its policies and functions, including those of the Rail Group, in preparation for producing its own Disability Equality Scheme and Action Plan which will be published later this year.

We have already achieved a great deal to ensure that our railways are more accessible to disabled people, for example:

All new rail vehicles must be accessible to disabled people, including wheelchair users. Over 4,400 accessible vehicles have already entered service.

All TOCs, and Network Rail, are now required to publish a Disabled People's Protection Policy which describes how they will provide a service to disabled passengers and make information about the accessible features of each of the stations they operate publicly available.

As service providers, TOCs are obliged to remove any barriers that make it impossible or unreasonably difficult for disabled people to access their services. This duty applies to infrastructure including stations and services such as booking facilities.

In addition, we have launched our "Railways for All" Strategy which sets out how we will improve the accessibility of rail travel in Great Britain. The strategy is complemented by a £370 million Access for All fund to target improvements to the accessibility of stations through to 2015.

Powers in the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 will also have an effect in this area. In particular, they will give disabled people a "right of access" to transport vehicles?including rail vehicles, enable the setting of an "end date", of no later than 1 January 2020, by which time all rail vehicles will become regulated, enable accessibility regulations to be applied to older rail vehicles when they are refurbished and other measures such as the introduction of compliance certification. These provisions will be in place by the end of this year.

GNER (Leeds/London)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with GNER concerning its plans to increase the number of Leeds to London trains; and if he will make a statement. [68672]

Derek Twigg: Network Rail has been required by the Office of Rail Regulation to undertake further timetabling work to establish how many additional GNER Leeds to London trains can be accommodated in addition to the extra Grand Central and Hull Trains services for which ORR recently granted access rights. The impact on GNER's timetable plans will be assessed when the result of Network Rail's work becomes available.

Humber Sea Terminals

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the Harbour Revision Order for Humber Sea Terminals (Phase 3) to be signed; and if he will make a statement. [67882]

Derek Twigg: I expect a decision on the order to be made within the next six weeks.

London Underground

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make representations to Transport for London to ensure that (a) underground stations are not closed and (b) services are not subject to significant restrictions unless planned work is carried out; and if he will make a statement. [68601]

Derek Twigg: The closure of stations and suspension of services for maintenance works is an operational matter for London Underground, which transferred from central Government to Transport for London and the Mayor of London on 15 July 2003.

MOT Computer System

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provisions he has made to compensate garage owners for technical difficulties with the new MOT computer system. [69551]

Dr. Ladyman: There are two back-up provisions available to all garages in the MOT scheme designed to enable continuity of service to motorists in the event of technical difficulties to the MOT computer system. In addition to these, all of the 18,300 garages currently in the MOT scheme have been contacted and advised to write to the MOT service management team if they believe they have suffered financial loss as a result of disruptions to the MOT service. Each claim will be considered on its respective merits.

Night Flight Restrictions

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to announce a decision in relation to the Night Flights Restrictions at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted Consultation; and if he will make a statement. [68108]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 3 May 2006]: We have been considering the responses to the consultation on night flying restrictions at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports and will announce our final conclusions by the end of the month. However, in order to remove uncertainty on an element which has given rise to concerns, we announced yesterday that we have decided not to increase night-time movement limits at Heathrow during the period 2006 to 2012.

Railways

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had since the beginning of 2005 with (a) directors and (b) employees of Network Rail to discuss extra rail capacity for open access operators; and if he will make a statement. [67271]

Derek Twigg: The Secretary of State meets regularly with senior directors of Network Rail to discuss a range of issues, including improving the capacity of parts of the network for all train operators, both franchised and open access.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with (a) the Office of the Rail Regulator, (b) potential bidders, (c) Network Rail and (d) Passenger Focus about the network capacity and financial implications of an open access operator operating on the route as part of the franchise specification process for the (i) South West, (ii) East Midlands, (iii) West Midlands and (iv) Cross Country franchise areas. [67272]

Derek Twigg: The Department has regular discussions with the ORR, Network Rail and Passenger Focus on issues relating to franchise specifications, and a briefing session for potential franchise bidders was held in April 2006.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the rail franchise contracts that have been awarded in the last two years; and what the (a) premium or subsidy payable and (b) length of the contract is in each case. [67268]

Derek Twigg: The franchises awarded, their contract lengths, and details of their subsidy or premium are as follows:

Franchise	Started	Term (years)	Subsidy or premium
One	April 2004	10	£0.5 billion premium
ScotRail	October 2004	10	£1.9 billion subsidy
Northern Rail	December 2004	8.75	£2.434 billion subsidy
ICEC	April 2005	10	£1.36 billion premium
Integrated Kent	April 2006	8	£585 million subsidy
Greater Western	April 2006	10	£1.131 billion premium
Thameslink/GN	April 2006	9	£808 million premium

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the award of franchises on the East Coast rail line. [68049]

Derek Twigg: The following franchises have part of their operation on the East Coast Main Line: Virgin Cross Country, Northern Trains, Trans Pennine Express, First Capital Connect, ScotRail, Central Trains and GNER. Periodically these franchises will fall due for renewal. Replacement franchises will be awarded in accordance with DfTs guidance which is published on the Department's website.

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information a bidder is required to give about its services for disabled people within the tender evaluation process for rail franchising; and what weight is given to that information in awarding the franchise. [68469]

Derek Twigg: The evaluation of each bid incorporates assessing the evidence provided of how the franchisee intends to comply with the requirements of the Disability Discrimination Act (1995) in delivering station and train services including provision of assistance to and consultation with impaired passengers, provision of tickets and training of staff.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that Ivybridge has a rail service and timetable that is viable for (a) commuters and (b) students. [67608]

Derek Twigg: Under present plans Ivybridge will have five trains in each direction each weekday with effect from December 2006, at times to meet the needs of the majority of users. We are considering whether there are options for providing additional services.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to be able to announce how much will be available from the savings made by the reduction in the Sunderland-Newcastle rail service to help fund improvements to Sunderland railway stations. [67811]

Derek Twigg: Discussions between the Department for Transport and Nexus, the Tyne and Wear PTE, who are sponsoring proposed improvements to Sunderland railway station, are continuing. An announcement will be made in due course.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much (a) GNER trains, (b) Virgin trains, (c) Northern trains and (d) First trains have been fined for late running of trains in each year since the introduction of the fines. [67188]

Derek Twigg: The penalties for poor performance paid by franchised train operators, together with bonuses paid where performance has been better than each company's benchmark, are itemised in the following table.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when HM Railway Inspectorate last visited Llansamlet railway station; and what conclusions were drawn from the visit. [60818]

Derek Twigg: The Health and Safety Executive's HM Railway Inspectorate (HMRI) last visited Llansamlet station on 27 January 2006. HMRI inspected work being undertaken by a Network Rail contractor, to upgrade railway signalling and telecommunication infrastructure near the station. HMRI concluded that no action needed to be taken.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps are being taken at Llansamlet railway station (a) to improve passenger security, (b) to reduce vandalism, (c) to improve passenger facilities, (d) to provide on station ticketing machines and (e) to provide CCTV as part of the Arriva Trains Wales franchise. [60826]

Derek Twigg: There are no current plans by Arriva Trains Wales (ATW) for improvements to passenger facilities and security at Llansamlet railway station. ATW do have a regular programme of station patrols and graffiti removal.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to incorporate the Westcountry coast line between Exeter and Plymouth in the Trans European Network. [68330]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The line between Exeter and Plymouth is already defined as part of the Trans European Railway Network.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the electrification of the Wrexham to Bidston railway line. [68890]

Derek Twigg: The Borderlands Rail Study assessed electrification of all or parts of the Wrexham to Bidston line and integrating it with the Merseyrail Electrics network. It also considered the case for extensions to the existing diesel operation and new stations at Beechwood, Woodchurch and Deeside Park. Merseytravel, together with neighbouring authorities and the North Wales local authority consortium Taith, are considering the results of the study.

Subject to all available funding sources and discussions with interested parties, Merseytravel will consider whether a scheme is suitable to promote for major scheme funding as part of the second local transport plan for Merseyside covering the period 2006-11. The specification and funding of the Arriva Trains Wales service between Wrexham and Bidston is a matter for the Welsh Assembly Government.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the maximum speed regularly attained by (a) passenger and (b) freight trains is on the North Wales coast line between Chester and Holyhead. [69430]

Derek Twigg: The maximum line speed for passenger train services along the North Wales Mainline is 90mph and for freight trains it is set at 60mph.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) incidents of objects thrown at or dropped on moving railway vehicles, (b) derailments, (c) incidents of livestock wandering onto the track, (d) collisions between moving railway vehicles and (e) suicides were recorded on the North Wales coast line between Chester and Holyhead in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [69431]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport does not hold this information. This is an operational matter for Network Rail and I have asked them to reply directly to my hon. Member.

Sea Defences

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been allocated to maintain the sea defences along the stretch of railway track at Dawlish in each of the next three years; and how much was spent in each of the last three years. [69129]

Derek Twigg: This is an operational matter for Network Rail. I have asked Network Rail to reply directly to the hon. Member.

Ship-to-ship Oil Transfers

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the plans to regulate ship to ship oil transfer are on schedule; and if he will make a statement. [68945]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, North and Leith (Mark Lazarowicz) of 30 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1118-19W. My officials are still working towards the deadline outlined therein, ie to consult in the summer with a view to secondary legislation which will regulate ship-to-ship transfers within the limits of the UK's territorial sea coming into force later in the year.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the economic effects of ship to ship oil transfer on (a) HM Treasury, (b) ports authorities and (c) surrounding local communities. [69203]

Dr. Ladyman: In accordance with the Cabinet Office guidance, the Department will prepare a regulatory impact assessment, which will address economic factors, to accompany the secondary legislation which will regulate ship-to-ship transfers within the limits of the UK's territorial sea.

Taxi Access (Disabled People)

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the Government will publish taxi access regulations under Part 5 of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [68470]

Derek Twigg: We do not yet have a timetable for introduction of taxi accessibility regulations but the current situation is that local licensing authorities remain free to introduce their own accessibility policies and many have done so already. We are currently developing a technical specification to set the design parameters for accessible taxis. To assist this process, the Department held a seminar in June 2005 for stakeholders from industry, organisations representing disabled people and licensing authorities to discuss the complex issues around taxi accessibility. The views expressed at the seminar will be used to shape a consultation package.

Transport Regulations

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the operation of (a) Regulation 16, (b) Regulation 18 and (c) Schedule 3 of the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986; and what recent representations he has received about the operation of these Regulations. [69635]

Dr. Ladyman: The Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986 as amended, including Regulations 16, 18 and Schedule 3, are operating as normal and I have received no representations about their operation. I occasionally get enquiries or suggestions for amendments to the Regulations. Each request is considered on its merits and may result in changes to the Regulations. The most recent amendments to the specific Regulations mentioned were made in 2001 and came into force on 1 May 2002.

It has been suggested that consolidation of the Regulations would be useful. The Department has sympathy with this view but does not see such a consolidation as a high priority at present.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the operation of the Road Vehicle Lighting Regulations 1989; and what recent representations he has received about the operation of this Act. [69636]

Dr. Ladyman: The Road Vehicle Lighting Regulations 1989, as amended, are operating as normal and I have received no representations about their operation. I occasionally get suggestions or enquiries about amendments or additions to the Regulations. Recent enquiries have included requests for the Regulations to include special retro-reflective markings for the emergency services' vehicles, to permit red lights to be used by emergency and recovery vehicles and to require the fitment of retro-reflective tape to trucks. Each request is considered on its merits and this may result in changes to the Regulations; the latest amendments were made last year.

The Department is at present planning further amendments to the Regulations. These would permit the distinctive retro-reflective liveries on vehicles used by the emergency services, such as the blue and yellow block pattern used by the police, which are not allowed under the existing Regulations. This change would remove the need for the individual temporary exemptions that are currently issued to each service.

SCOTLAND

7. Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Joint Ministerial Committee last met. [67713]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Joint Ministerial Committee is the policy responsibility of the Energy

9. Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to ensure that the energy review takes account of the views of the energy industry and energy consumers in Scotland. [67716]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: A wide range of Scottish interests have contributed to the consultation process in connection with the Energy Review. My hon. Friend, the Energy Minister, and his review team are in regular contact with the devolved Administrations.

12. John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with Ministers in the Department for Trade and Industry on the commercial development of tidal energy in the Pentland Firth; and if he will make a statement. [67719]

David Cairns: Scotland Office Ministers and officials have discussions with their counterparts in the Department of Trade and Industry on a wide range of energy-related topics.

Government support development of tidal and other marine energy technologies by assistance for the European Marine Energy Centre in Orkney and through the £50 million Marine Renewables Development Fund.

Personal Debt

10. John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on levels of personal debt in Scotland. [67717]

David Cairns: Personal debt data is collected on a UK basis by the Bank of England. The UK Government, in partnership with the Scottish Executive, is however committed to addressing problems that may arise from over-indebtedness, particularly for vulnerable groups.

Barnett Formula

11. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the socio-economic effects of the Barnett formula in Scotland. [67718]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I have received no representations on the socio-economic effects of the Barnett formula. The Government are content with current arrangements and have no plans to replace or to review the Barnett formula, which has delivered fair, stable and transparent settlements for Scotland under successive administrations for almost 30 years.

Voting Rights

13. Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the voting rights of hon. Members representing Scottish seats on issues which do not affect Scotland. [67720]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Wellingborough (Mr. Bone) during Scottish oral questions on 28 February 2006.

TV Licences

14. Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with the BBC and Cabinet colleagues on television licences in Scotland. [67721]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I intend to have regular discussions with Cabinet colleagues on a range of issues affecting Scotland. TV licensing is a matter for the BBC.

Loan Sharks

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on the work of the loan sharks pilot scheme in Scotland. [67715]

David Cairns: My right hon. Friend and I have regular discussions with Ministerial colleagues in the Department of Trade and Industry. I recently met the manager of the Scottish Illegal Money Lending Unit, based in Glasgow, to discuss this groundbreaking initiative that tackles the problem of illegal loan sharks.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Sexual Offences (Anonymity)

22. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Home Department on anonymity during court proceedings for those accused of sexual offences. [68822]

Ms Harman: I have had many discussions with Home Office Ministers about sexual offences since I became Solicitor General in 2001 and since 2005 in my role as Minister of State in the Department for Constitutional Affairs. There are no plans to change the rules to provide anonymity for those accused of sexual offences.

Compulsory Voting

23. Ann McKechin: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether her Department has considered recent studies on the merits of compulsory voting; and if she will make a statement. [68823]

Bridget Prentice: The Government have noted with interest the findings of the report just published by the Institute for Public Policy Research on this subject, and will wish to give them careful consideration.

Electoral Fraud

24. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent estimate she has made of the incidence of electoral fraud. [68824]

Bridget Prentice: Although instances of fraud often get prominent coverage in the media, it should be put in context, as actual proven cases are few and far between. That is not to say we are complacent, as the legislative and other action we have taken in recent years demonstrates.

Court Houses (Private Finance Initiative)

25. Bob Russell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many court houses have been built by means of a private finance initiative in the last five years. [68825]

Ms Harman: There have been 15 courthouses built under the private finance initiative in the last five years.

Court Modernisation (East Anglia)

26. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she next expects to meet representatives of the lay magistracy to discuss the modernisation of courts in East Anglia. [68826]

Ms Harman: I have no current plans to meet representatives of the local magistracy in East Anglia to discuss the modernisation of courts in East Anglia. I am of course ready to do so if that would prove useful.

Asylum Seekers (Local Franchises)

27. Jim Cousins: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what criteria the Legal Services Commission will use to award local franchises for services to asylum seekers. [68827]

Vera Baird: The Commission may award a contract where a supplier has obtained its Specialist Quality Mark, has an accredited supervisor and intends to provide legal services in an area of unmet need. Next year the Commission may introduce a contract performance requirement for 40 per cent. success rate at appeal.

Electoral Turnout

28. Julie Morgan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps his Department is taking to increase voter turn-out. [68828]

Bridget Prentice: The Government have embarked on a number of initiatives to promote participation in democracy. It is the role of The Electoral Commission to promote participation in elections and we fully support them in this work.

Human Rights Act

29. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what guidance his Department has issued on the applicability of the Human Rights Act 1998 to residential homes for the elderly in the context of private providers of public functions. [68829]

Bridget Prentice: As recommended by the Joint Committee on Human Rights, the Government issued guidance last year to local authorities on the use of contractual conditions to ensure that services delivered on behalf of the local authority are provided in a way that takes account of the Human Rights Act 1998.

NGOs (Financial Initiatives)

Mr. Love: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what initiatives his Department and its non-departmental bodies support to promote (a) financial education, (b) financial advice, (c) financial inclusion and (d) financial capability; which organisations are involved in delivering each initiative; and how much funding is provided for each by (i) his Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (ii) other Government Departments, (iii) the private sector and (iv) the voluntary sector. [66579]

Bridget Prentice: The Legal Services Commission (an NDPB of the Department for Constitutional Affairs) is working with the Department of Trade and Industry and Department for Work and Pensions as part of a national agenda to tackle rising levels of debt. The Commission is currently piloting a number of innovative new advice services to help people facing financial exclusion, following a £6 million grant from the Treasury's Financial Inclusion Fund.

During 2004-05 the Legal Services Commission spent approximately £17.5 million on specialist debt advice through its contracts with both solicitors and not for profit agencies.

The Public Guardianship Office is an Agency of the Department for Constitutional Affairs responsible for ensuring the financial well-being of people who lack the capacity to manage their own financial affairs. It does this by supporting the Court of Protection (CoP) in the appointment of Receivers, and through the registration of Enduring Powers of Attorney (EPA). The PGO also undertake checks to establish that appointed Receivers are carrying out their duties in an appropriate manner.

Exceptionally, when no suitable relative or friend wishes to act as a Receiver, the PGO try to find someone else to take on this role, or as a last resort, the Chief Executive of the PGO may be appointed.

In carry out its role the PGO provides practical guidance for people appointed by the CoP to make financial decisions for people who lack mental capacity to do so themselves. The PGO also undertakes awareness initiatives to inform the public on how to make provision in the event that someone may lose their mental capability—due to dementia, illness or accident—and may no longer be able to make their own decisions.

The PGO currently recovers 82 per cent. of its full costs from fees, which results in approximately a net cost to DCA of £5 million of which £1 million is in respect to fee remission. This work is not an 'initiative' as such, as it is part of the core work of the Agency.

Recruitment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies spent on recruitment, search and selection agencies in each of the last five years. [68347]

Bridget Prentice: The answer is as follows:

Recruitment below the senior civil service

My Department does not hold this information centrally and it is, therefore, not possible to collate this without incurring disproportionate costs. For DCA recruitment below the SCS we do not routinely use search or selection agencies. All recruitment is managed in house in accordance with the civil service commissioners code.

Senior civil service recruitment

No central information is held about the costs of campaigns as individual business areas pay their own recruitment costs. However, during the last five years we ran 24 campaigns to recruit 39 Senior Civil Servants. The average cost for each of these campaigns would be approximately £40,000, which includes the advertising and assessment centre costs.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Portcullis House

34. Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what plans the Commission has to review the use of voice messages in the lifts in Portcullis House. [68811]

Nick Harvey: There is currently a programme to ensure that all lifts on the parliamentary estate comply with disability best practice. The voice messages in the lifts in Portcullis House are being reviewed as part of this programme. Messages will cover the opening and closing of the doors, the direction of travel and the floor at which a lift stops.

House Expenditure

35. Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what the procedures are for approving expenditure by the House of between £100,000 and £1 million; and if he will make a statement. [68812]

Nick Harvey: Approval procedures and financial delegations to officials are set out in the House of Commons Resource Framework, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. Significant investment decisions?over £500,000 on works and £150,000 on non-works?require a full business case and formal approval by the Clerk of the House. Decisions on overall funding and on major individual expenditure proposals are overseen by the Commission, advised as appropriate by the Finance and Services Committee.

Recycling

36. Mr. Hollobone: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what steps the Commission has taken to increase the recycling of office waste on the House estate. [68813]

Nick Harvey: Since the beginning of the year recycling of glass, cans and plastic bottles is being introduced on a trial basis in Portcullis House (Atrium and photocopier rooms), outside the Terrace Cafeteria and in 7 Millbank. These trials will highlight any issues and allow them to be addressed before the scheme is rolled out, first into outbuildings and then into the Palace.

All small offices should now have two waste bins; one for general waste and another for paper only. Larger offices and open-plan offices have general waste bins and a large cardboard bin for paper only. General waste and paper is collected separately, with the general waste sent for incineration and the paper sent for recycling.

In addition, a new waste management contract is currently being let. The specification of this contract sets targets for continuous improvement in recycling throughout the life of the contract.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Back-Bench Debates

33. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Leader of the House if he will bring forward proposals to allocate parliamentary time on the floor of the House for debates on motions to be chosen by Back-Bench hon. Members. [68810]

Mr. Straw: There are no current plans to do this but the Procedure Committee is looking at the handling of Early Day Motions at the moment and I will of course consider their report with interest.

Parliamentary Questions

37. Ben Chapman: To ask the Leader of the House what recent discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues regarding tabling of parliamentary questions during recesses. [68814]

Mr. Straw: I remain open to representations on this issue.

English Teaching

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of posts for teaching English in secondary schools are (a) vacant and (b) held by someone without a first degree in English. [67439]

Jim Knight [holding answer 2 May 2006]: Provisional information on teacher vacancies in secondary schools by subject for January 2006 was published in table 6 of the School Workforce in England Statistical First Release, on 27 April 2006. This publication is available on the department's website at the following URL: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000653/index.shtml

This shows that the provisional vacancy rate for English in January 2006 was 0.8 per cent. down from 0.9 per cent. in 2005. The overall secondary classroom vacancy rate in secondary schools was 0.7 per cent. in January 2006.

Information on the number of teachers teaching English in secondary schools by post A level qualification was last collected in November 2002. This was published in Statistics of Education, School Workforce in England Volume, 2005 edition, on 26 January 2006. Tables D8 and D9 refer. This publication is available on the department's website at the following URL: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DBA/OL/v000633/index.shtml

This showed that an estimated 73 per cent. of secondary teachers teaching English held a degree-level [1] qualification in the subject. However, they delivered an estimated 83 per cent. of the curriculum time.

Copies of these publications have been placed in the House of Common's Library.

[1] Degree level qualification includes degree, B.Ed and PGCE.

Examination Results

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) GCSE, (b) A-level and (c) key stage results were for the 100 (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools with the (A) highest and (B) lowest percentage of children receiving free school meals in each of the last three years. [66090]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Extended School Provision

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding is available for extended school provision for children in (a) Tameside metropolitan borough and (b) Stockport metropolitan borough. [67889]

Beverley Hughes: Over 2003 to 2008 we are making available £840 million nationally to support the development of extended services accessed in or through schools. £110 million of this was allocated in 2005-06. Tameside local authority received £500,135, and Stockport local authority received £539,129.

Of the £680 million to be allocated across 2006 to 2008, £250 million will go direct to schools through the School Standards Grant. The formula for announcing each school's allocation for 2006-07 was announced on 7 December. The remaining £430 million will be distributed to local authorities through the Standards Fund and the General Sure Start Grant. Of this, Tameside local authority will receive £821,066 in 2006-07 and £1,006,162 in 2007-08. In the same period, Stockport local authority will receive funding of £908,857 in 2006-07 and £1,056,525 in 2007-08. Funding will be released to schools in accordance with each local authority's strategy for extended services.

Foreign Languages

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many unfilled vacancies there are for teachers of modern foreign languages in secondary schools. [67438]

Jim Knight [holding answer 2 May 2006]: Provisional January 2006 figures released in Statistical First Release 18/2006 show that there were 40 language vacancies in local authority maintained secondary schools in England. This equates to a vacancy rate of 0.3 per cent., down from 0.5 per cent. in 2005. The overall provisional January 2006 vacancy rate for secondary schools (all subjects) is 0.7 per cent. compared to 0.9 per cent. in January 2005.

This publication is available on the Department's website at the following URL:
http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000653/index.shtml

GCSEs

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of children educated at home achieved five GCSEs graded at A* to C by the age of 16 in each of the last five years. [67406]

Jim Knight [holding answer 2 May 2006]: The Department is unable to distinguish the GCSE results of children educated at home.

Head Teachers

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools did not have a permanent head teacher in the course of each of the past 10 years; [66034]

(2) how many temporary head teachers have been in post in each of the past 10 years. [66038]

Jim Knight: Information is not collected on the number of schools that were without a permanent head at any time during a year.

Some information on full time temporary filled head teacher posts is available from the annual survey of teachers in service and teacher vacancies held in January each year. This only covers posts that were temporarily filled on the date of the survey.

Table 9 of Statistical First Release 18/2006 provides a snapshot of temporarily filled head teacher posts as at January for each year available. This publication is available on the department's website at the following URL: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000653/index.shtml

A copy has been placed in the House of Common's Library.

Information Sharing

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what estimate he has made of the proportion of the UK population aged 15 years and under that will be registered on the Information Sharing Index; [67115]

(2) at what age children will be (a) added to and (b) removed from the Information Sharing Index; [67025]

(3) for what period data on children will be held on the Information Sharing Index; [67026]

(4) at what age children will be registered on the Child Population Register; [67039]

(5) what the earliest date is on which the Child Population Register could be established; [67044]

(6) what recent discussions his Department has had with the Home Office on (a) information sharing, (b) technology sharing and (c) information transfer between current and future databases operated by the Departments; [67045]

(7) who will be responsible for providing data to the Child Population Register; [67047]

(8) whether registration on the Child Population Register will be compulsory; [67048]

(9) at what age individuals' data will be removed from the Child Population Register; [67049]

(10) what estimate he has made of the likely change in the (a) set-up cost and (b) annual running costs of the Information Sharing Index to upgrade it to a Child Population Register; [67050]

(11) what funds his Department has spent to date in connection with the Child Population Register, broken down by main budget heading; [67051]

(12) what estimate he has made of the proportion of the population aged 15 years and under that will be included on the Child Population Register. [67052]

Beverley Hughes: In relation to questions 67115, 67025 and 67026, the Information Sharing Index will contain records of all children in England. Current estimates from the Government Actuary's Department, giving 2006 projections based on 2003 figures, indicate that there are approximately 9.5 million children in England aged 15 and under, and approximately 11.5 million children in the UK aged 15 and under. We estimate therefore that the England index will contain records of approximately 82 per cent. of children aged 15 and under in the UK. Decisions on whether to establish an index in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are for the devolved Administrations.

An index record will be created for each child at birth and maintained until the child's 18th birthday. To help ensure that the transition from youth to adult services is managed smoothly, it may also be desirable to make provision to retain information on the index on an individual basis for young adults with multiple needs, (for example care leavers and young people with disabilities), beyond their 18th birthday, with their consent.

In line with the Data Protection Act, information will be retained on the index for as long as it is accurate and relevant, for example, practitioner contact details will be available for the period they are involved with the child and for a year beyond the end of that involvement. This will enable contact to be made with those practitioners currently and most recently involved with a child.

In relation to questions 67039, 67044, 67046, 67047, 67048, 67050, 67051 and 67052, the objectives of the index remain as agreed by Parliament when the Children Act 2004 was passed. These are to support the duties on local authorities and other partners to co-operate to promote the well-being of children and to safeguard and improve their welfare. There is, therefore, no provision for a Child Population Register in the funding we have made available for the index.

We have accepted the recommendation in the final report of the Citizen Information Project that we should consider the scope for a Child Population Register. That consideration will be informed by an assessment of whether there are sufficient additional efficiency and effectiveness benefits. No decision has been taken to establish such a register. A Child Population Register would have wider objectives than the index and would therefore require new primary legislation. A clear case would have to be made for it.

My Department has not undertaken scoping or design work in relation to a Child Population Register. There are therefore no proposals for the ages at which children might be registered and their details removed, when a register might be established, who would be responsible for providing data, whether registration would be compulsory or voluntary, or what proportion of the population aged 15 and under would be included. My Department has so far spent and allocated no funds in relation to a register.

In relation to question 67045, officials from my Department and the Home Office are in regular contact on a range of information sharing issues with the aim of improving efficiency and the effectiveness of public services. These include:

the cross-Government guidance for practitioners in children's services on information sharing in respect of children and young people, published on 6 April 2006; securing cross-Government agreement to the way forward for implementing the Information Sharing Index on the basis of the objectives set out in the Children Act 2004, and confirming that there are no operational dependencies between plans for the index and for the National Identity Register;

how ID cards and the National Identity Register might be used to support business processes and improve customer services in the education and skills sector;

the establishment of the new vetting and barring scheme for people working with children and vulnerable adults which is set out in the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Bill currently before Parliament;

how customer service in the student loans system could be improved through confirming the identity of students directly with the Identity and Passport Service; and how projects in each Department are addressing the common technical challenges of large data systems, with a view to sharing learning.

Pupil Exclusion

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much each local education authority spent on (a) excluded pupils and (b) pupils in (i) pupil referral units, (ii) behaviour support implementation programmes, (iii) inclusion, administration, assessment and co-ordination programmes, (iv) behaviour support plans and (v) other programmes intended to avoid exclusion of pupils in the last period for which figures are available. [67214]

Jim Knight: The DfES does not hold the information requested, as details of expenditure on behaviour-specific measures are not collected centrally. However, the following table details planned spend for each local authority in 2005/06 on: excluded pupils; pupil referral units; behaviour support services; behaviour support plans; support for inclusion; and, SEN administration and assessment. The data are taken from Section 52 budget collections.

RU Thinking About It?

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much his Department has given to the RU Thinking About It? website in each month since its inception; and if he will make a statement. [66864]

Beverley Hughes: The Department's expenditure on the RU Thinking website since taking over responsibility for it from the Department of Health is as follows:

Financial year	Expenditure (£)

These figures break down to average monthly costs of £4,366 and £7,727 respectively and include reporting, hosting and maintenance, design and development and the creation/addition of new articles and features. Figures are exclusive of VAT.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions he has had with the organisers of the RU Thinking About It? website about (a) the type of material and (b) the accuracy of the information contained on the website; if she will request that the abortion section be amended to read that doctors can only offer an abortion if the criteria in the Abortion Act 1967 (as amended) are complied with; and if she will make a statement. [66865]

Beverley Hughes: The information is as follows.

(a) As Minister for Children and Young People, I have discussed the approach and role of the website within the campaign strategy. However, it is the role of departmental officials to liaise with the website providers over the detail of the content, which I would expect to be consistent with the key messages of the campaign.

The RU Thinking website provides information to support the key messages of the national campaign to reduce teenage pregnancy: encouraging young people to resist peer pressure and delay early sex; raising awareness of risks of unprotected sex; and highlighting the importance of seeking early advice, The breadth of information on the site reflects the full range of issues on which young people contact the service.

(b) I am confident that the governance of the site adheres to high standards on clinical and legal accuracy and that it is endorsed by officials from both the Department of Health and DfES. All medical information is checked for accuracy with sexual health professionals.

The website makes clear that an abortion can only be performed with the agreement of two doctors. We believe that it is more appropriate to explain the further eligibility criteria for an abortion under the Abortion Act 1967 (as amended), in the medical consultation.

School Finance

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of the overall budget for schools was spent on (a) departmental administration and contractors and consultants and (b) local authority administration in each year since 1997. [68082]

Jim Knight [holding answer 2 May 2006]: The Department does not collect the information in the way it has been requested at (a). However, the following table gives a breakdown of the available data for (b) local authority administration. Similar data are not available before 1999-2000.

[2] 1999-2000 saw a change in data source when the data collection moved from the RO1 form collected by the ODPM to the Section 52 form from the DfES, directly comparable figures are not available from this source. The closest comparison available would give percentages of 3.2 per cent. for both 1997-98 and 1998-99. 2002-03 saw a further break in the time series following the introduction of Consistent Financial Reporting (CFR) and the associated restructuring of the Outturn tables. The change in sources is shown by the blank row. Up to 2001-02 figures were taken from the net current expenditure before recharges row, management and support statutory / regulatory duties column. For 2002-03 onwards the net current expenditure column for the central administration line has been provided.

[3] Since 2003 the Schools Budget has been separate from the LEA Budget.

Note:

Cash terms figures as reported by local authorities as at 28 April 2006.

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the education budget for schools was in each year since 1997. [68083]

Jim Knight [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The available information is contained within the following table. Similar data are not available before 1999-2000.

Notes:

1. Total schools budget and budgeted education revenue expenditure is drawn from local authorities Section 52 Budget Statements submitted to DfES. This is calculated as the gross elements of any grant lines plus the net elements of the remainder of the budget.
2. Budget education revenue was split to show local authority and schools' budget separately from 2003-04 onwards.
3. Cash figures are rounded to the nearest £1,000. As reported by local authorities as at 2 May 2006.

School Sports Partnerships

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he expects all schools to be part of a school sports partnership; what progress has been made towards this target; and if he will make a statement. [67416]

Jim Knight: All maintained schools will be within a school sport partnership from this September (2006). There are currently 411 school sport partnerships encompassing 80 per cent. of maintained schools in England.

Sure Start

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many new Sure Start centres his Department plans to open by the end of 2008. [69351]

Beverley Hughes: The Government have set a target of 2,500 Sure Start children's centres being open by March 2008 and 3,500 centres by 2010.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the budget for Sure Start will be in 2008-09, expressed in terms of funds (a) per Sure Start centre and (b) per head of anticipated child users. [69352]

Beverley Hughes: Funding for Sure Start for the period 2008-09 to 2010-11 will be subject to the outcome of the 2007 Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR). Details of the budget allocated to Sure Start for 2008-09 will not be available until the CSR has been completed.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many under-fives entitled to free nursery places on the Sure Start scheme are on waiting lists in Tamworth constituency; [68349]

(2) how many available places there are in Sure Start schemes in Tamworth constituency. [68350]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the availability of places and the number of children on waiting lists for Sure Start services are not collected centrally.

However, Sure Start Tamworth has the potential to deliver a range of integrated services to 448 children under four and their families.

Sure Start Tamworth is set to become a children's centre during phase 2 of the children's centre programme (2006 to 2008) bringing Sure Start services to children under five and their families in the area. Staffordshire local authority is in the process of finalising proposals for the future development of children's centres.

Teachers

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary and (b) secondary (i) head teacher and (ii) deputy head teacher posts in England had been vacant for more than three months in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [67403]

Jim Knight [holding answer 2 May 2006]: Information is not collected in the form requested.

Provisional information on teacher vacancies and temporarily filled head teacher posts for January 2006 was published in tables 4, 5 and 9 of the School Workforce in England Statistical First Release 18/2006, on 27 April 2006. The SFR provides a snapshot of vacancies and temporarily filled posts as at January and is available on the department's website at the following URL:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000653/index.shtml

A copy has been placed in the House of Common's Library.

Truancy

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the truancy levels were in schools in (a) Carlisle constituency, (b) Cumbria and (c) England in each year since 1996. [65752]

Jim Knight: The Department does not hold data on the levels of truancy. However, the figures for the percentage of half days missed due to unauthorised absence (of which truancy forms a part) in maintained mainstream schools can be found in the following tables:

Percentage of half days missed in maintained primary schools due to unauthorised absence

	1997/98	1998/99	1999/00	2000/01	2001/02	2002/03	2003/04	2004/05

Percentage of half days missed in maintained secondary schools due to unauthorised absence

	1997/98	1998/99	1999/00	2000/01	2001/02	2002/03	2003/04	2004/05

Cumbria	0.6	0.6	0.6	0.7	0.75	0.82	0.94	0.97
England	1.40	1.07	1.04	1.07	1.09	1.07	1.13	1.23

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total cost of truancy programmes has been since 1997; and what assessment has been made of the effectiveness of each programme. [68605]

Jim Knight: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 6 March 2006, Official report, column 1235W to the hon. Member for South-West Hertfordshire (Mr. Gauke).

As a result of our investment and reforms, school absence has fallen for four consecutive years and is now at a record low, with 10,000 fewer pupils absent from school every day compared to last year and 60,000 fewer than in 1996/97. Overall absence in 193 secondary schools, targeted with extra Government support because of their high levels of absence, reduced in 2004/05 by 6.45 per cent. compared to 1.98 per cent. in other schools.

We plan to publish a report on the effectiveness of electronic registration systems in secondary schools at the end of May.

Trust Schools

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he plans (a) to establish a separate team and (b) to employ consultants to promote trust schools. [64683]

Jim Knight: There is a dedicated unit in the Department, comprising existing DfES staff, looking at the overall implementation of the trusts schools policy. We employ a consultancy firm to build and develop relationships between the Department and business across a range of education projects including trust schools. Once appointed the schools commissioner will undertake a wider matching role in relation to trust schools.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what specific powers will trust schools have in determining and shaping their own curriculum. [67196]

Jim Knight: Trust schools will be required to deliver the National Curriculum in exactly the same way as other maintained schools in England.

The national curriculum sets out what must be taught, not how it is to be taught. Within this statutory framework, trust schools—like other maintained schools—will have considerable freedom to develop and shape a curriculum that responds to the personal learning needs of their children and to introduce new approaches to teaching and learning.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Problem Gamblers (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the number of problem gamblers in Tamworth constituency. [68354]

Mr. Caborn: The current estimate is that 0.6 per cent. of the adult population of Great Britain are problem gamblers. This figure is drawn from the most recent authoritative research: Kerry Sproston, Bob Erens and Jim Orford (2000) "Gambling Behaviour in Britain: Results from the British Gambling Prevalence Study" (National Centre for Social Research, June 2000). This research was conducted using a sample of addresses selected at random. It is not possible therefore to give figures by constituency.

Sport England North West

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what role Ministers had in (a) devising and (b) approving the scheme for Sport England North West to distribute lottery funds to firms and organisations to enable them to encourage their employees to be healthier. [68533]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 8 May 2006]: Ministers had no role in devising or approving the Sport England North West "£1 million Challenge" workplace health initiative. Sport England is a lottery distributor independent from government.

Ministers do, however, have a role in setting broad policy priorities through policy directions. Sport England's lottery policy directions, coupled with their strategic objectives, provide a focus on increasing participation in sport and physical activity.

References to my having been "fully involved in that [decision]" (Sunday Telegraph 23 April) inaccurately inferred a role in devising or approving initiatives rather than the role I do have in setting the broad policy priorities.

Decisions on regional lottery investment are taken by the Regional Sports Boards, according to identified regional priorities.

The investments through the workplace health initiative form part of a targeted pilot programme in the North West to encourage employers to put more emphasis on sport and physical activity.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what involvement (a) the Minister for Sport and (b) other Ministers in her Department have had with Sport England North West's pilot project to distribute funds to improve the fitness of employees. [68792]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The North West Sports Board has been proactive in trying to engage with the private sector in support of our drive to increase participation in sport. The North West Sports Board organised "private sector forums" to discuss sport and physical activity in the workplace with employers and the private sector. In order to attract some of the regions' major business leaders to the forums, I was invited to help host two of these events.

The aim of the first meeting on 6 September was to address:

what would encourage the private sector to invest in sport;

the benefits to industry of a fit and healthy workforce.

There was no discussion on specific programmes or initiatives, but over the following eight months, in the light of this debate, the North West Regional Sports Board devised and developed the workplace health initiative, which was launched in May 2005.

I attended a further meeting of this forum on 14 November 2005 where Sport England updated the guests present on the progress that had been made in this area. Ministers had no role in devising or approving the Sport England North West "£1 million Challenge" workplace health initiative.

Decisions on regional lottery investment are taken by the Regional Sports Boards, according to identified regional priorities.

CABINET OFFICE

Guide to Legislative Procedure

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) whether he plans to issue an updated version of the Guide to Legislative Procedure; when it was last updated; whom he consulted prior to publication; and if he will make a statement; [67163]

(2) what assistance (a) his Department and (b) the Legislative Programme Committee gives to departmental Bill teams; and if he will make a statement. [67165]

Hilary Armstrong: The "Guide to Legislative Procedures" is available on the Cabinet Office website and is intended to provide departmental officials with detailed guidance on all aspects of a Bill's preparation and parliamentary passage. A revised version was published by the Legislative Programme Committee Secretariat in the Cabinet Office in October 2004 following consultation with key official stakeholders within Government and parliamentary officials. Small and urgent updates are made from time to time, and another comprehensive revision is planned over the summer recess in time to publish before the beginning of the next session.

The Legislative Programme Secretariat, along with Parliamentary Counsel, works closely with the National School of Government in running a programme of seminars for Bill teams which cover the legislative process from policy formulation to Royal Assent.

Legislative and Regulatory Reform Bill

John Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received on the Legislative and Regulatory Reform Bill. [68220]

Hilary Armstrong: As at Thursday 4 May, since the introduction of the Legislative and Regulatory Reform Bill to Parliament on Wednesday 11 January, over 325 representations have been received from the private and public sectors as well as from individuals.

Recruitment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies spent on recruitment, search and selection agencies in each of the last five years. [68348]

Hilary Armstrong: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

DEFENCE

Civilian Guard Force

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the civilian guard force have suffered gunshot injuries in (a) Northern Ireland, (b) Scotland, (c) England and Wales and (d) while serving overseas in the last 12 months. [67688]

Mr. Des Browne: The term ' civilian guard force' has been taken to include both the Ministry of Defence police, who are authorised to be armed, and the MOD's 'in house' guard services. The MOD's guard services in Germany and in Northern Ireland are authorised to be armed, but in England, Scotland and Wales Ministry of Defence guard service personnel are unarmed.

In the last 12 months one member of the Northern Ireland guard service was involved in a fatal shooting incident. In the same period in England and Wales one member of the Ministry of Defence police sustained a minor gunshot injury during firearms training. There have been no such incidents in Scotland or overseas.

Iran (Military Operations)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his assessment is of the advances in military technology claimed by Iran during recent military operations in the straits of Hormuz; and if he will make a statement. [69164]

Mr. Des Browne [holding answer 8 May 2006]: We continuously assess developments in military technology, including in relation to Iran, in order to draw any lessons that may be relevant to the capability and tactics of our own forces.

Iraq

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the level of infiltration by militias into the Iraqi security forces in Multi-National Division South East. [65443]

Mr. Des Browne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Member for Airdrie and Shotts (John Reid) gave on 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 672-73W to the hon. Member for North Devon (Nick Harvey).

Trident

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has spent on the development and production of the Mark 98 Mod 7 Fire Control System for Trident; when the system is due to enter service; what the reason is for the upgrade; and if he will make a statement. [66678]

Mr. Des Browne: To date, the Ministry of Defence has spent £28.4 million on the acquisition of the Mk 98 Mod 7 Fire Control Subsystem update programme. The system is due to enter service in 2010. The Mk 98 Mod 7 programme is being undertaken to avoid equipment obsolescence.

WALES

Dentistry

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales pursuant to the oral answer from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 957, on NHS dentistry, if he will clarify the sums spent on NHS dentistry in Wales in 2005-06 and 2006-07. [69484]

Nick Ainger: Pursuant to my oral answer on 3 May 2006, the net spend on NHS dentistry in Wales was £81 million in 2004-05 and an estimated £88.2 million for 2005-06. An additional £30 million is being invested in NHS dentistry in 2006-07, bringing the total forecast spend to £118.5 million.

Ascension Island

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer to question 63679, on Ascension Island, what the focus of discussions was on each of the seven meetings on issues related to Ascension Island to which reference was made. [66873]

Mr. Hoon [pursuant to the reply, 20 April 2006, Official Report, c. 778W]: The meetings with the hon. Member's constituent and Richard James International were to hear representations from those concerned about UK policy on Ascension Island.

The remaining meetings considered a variety of issues relating to the administration of the Island. The timing reflected the fact of a routine (leave) visit to the UK by the Administrator. Similarly, the Director of Finance paid a call on the Department during a leave visit to the UK.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much has been spent by the UK Government on infrastructure and services on Ascension Island in each year since 1997. [66960]

Mr. Hoon: The Government do not contribute directly to infrastructure and services on Ascension Island.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office programme funds have, however, contributed to a number of projects on the Island encompassing environmental issues (with the Department for International Development), economic diversification and prospects to enhance good government including law and order, as follows:

1998-99	9,200
1999-2000	57,410
2000-01	196,356
2001-02	887,520
2002-03	115,000
2003-04	231,390
2005-06	161,696

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the standard amount of time is that people who have ended their work contract with one of the main users on Ascension Island are given to leave the island. [66961]

Mr. Hoon: The Workmen's Protection (Ascension) Ordinance, Regulations Section 12, Paragraph 3, requires employers to repatriate any worker and their dependants within 30 days of the expiry of their contract of service.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how and where vacancies with the main users on Ascension Island are advertised; and whether (a) (i) current and (i) previous Ascension Island residents and (b) other groups are particularly encouraged to apply. [66962]

Mr. Hoon: We understand that vacancies are advertised as widely as possible, depending on the type and status of the job. Ascension and St. Helenian newspapers, Falkland Island newspapers, local notice boards on all three islands, UK press, Ascension Island Government website, employment agencies and UK job centres may be used.

Posts are equally open to everyone, including people currently working and living on Ascension, and people who have previously worked and lived there.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 14 March 2006, Official Report, column 2047W, on Ascension Island, what plans she has for further expenditure on researching animal, plant and geological features on Ascension Island. [67085]

Mr. Hoon: The Overseas Territories Environment Programme, which is a joint Department for International Development/Foreign and Commonwealth Office fund, has this financial year (2006-07) approved £49,910 for the continuation of the Ascension Environment Information Operations Utility, a project which began last year, and £29,500 for a new project to improve access to Green Mountain National Park.

Burma

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will take steps to place the situation in Burma on the agenda of the UN Security Council; and what assistance the UK Government offer to pro-democracy groups in Burma. [68643]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 8 May 2006]: We fully support any action in the UN, including in the UN Security Council (UNSC), which would help to promote reform and positive change in Burma. Members of the UNSC last discussed the situation in Burma during informal consultations on 16 December. At present there is no consensus within the UNSC, including among the permanent members, to add Burma to the Council's formal agenda. We remain in regular contact with permanent members of the UNSC on this issue.

UK assistance in Burma includes programmes aimed at building the capacity of civil society groups and individuals who are working to build a democratic society.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) EU foreign nationals and (b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in her Department in each of the last five years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether these include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68023]

Margaret Beckett: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) is a British nationals-only employer. However, some foreign nationals are employed in a small number of service provision roles, in line with the requirements laid down in the Aliens Restriction (Amendment) Act 1919 on the employment of aliens. The figures on those employed are:

2003-04	16	8
2006 (to date)	16	7

The vetting procedures in place for all category of staff employed in the FCO are in line with the policy laid down in the Cabinet Office Manual of Protective Security. The FCO recruit individuals to work in jobs which generally require those individuals to be cleared to security check or developed vetting level. However, in some cases we recruit contracted workers to work at a lower level where counter terrorist check clearance is more appropriate. Where necessary, this will include a check of time spent overseas. The FCO has its own vetting section.

EU Finance

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the reason is for the difference between the figures for the European Union's budget for administration costs over the next financial framework in the publication of the United Kingdom presidency proposal on 14 December and the publication of the UK's final proposals on 19 December. [66157]

Mr. Hoon: A number of changes, including the change to the budget for administration costs, were necessary to the UK presidency proposal of 14 December in order to generate political consensus for an agreement on the 2007 Financial Perspective at the European Council on 15 December.

Export Licensing

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 24 April 2006, Official Report, column 860W, on arms exports, on how many occasions since 1997 the Government have received information from (a) their overseas posts and (b) a non-governmental organisation that British defence exports have been diverted that has led to the Government revoking an export licence from a UK defence manufacturer; and if she will make a statement. [68263]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 8 May 2006]: Due to the way data are recorded it is not possible to establish whether information leading to revocations originated from overseas posts, or non-governmental organisations.

Reasons for refusals and revocations are listed in each Annual Report for Strategic Exports. A copy of each of the annual reports has been placed in the Library of the House. As all export licence applications are judged rigorously against the Consolidated EU and National Export Licensing Criteria with an assessment made against the risk of diversion by all four Government Departments (Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Department of Trade and Industry, Ministry of Defence, Department for International Development) involved in the export licensing process, there are few revocations.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 24 April 2006, Official Report, column 860W, on arms exports, with what frequency reviews of risk assessments specific to an export licence are carried out by the UK Government after an export licence is granted to a UK defence manufacturer; how many staff are engaged in carrying out such reviews with regard to (a) Israel and (b) Saudi Arabia; and if she will make a statement. [68264]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 8 May 2006]: All export licences are assessed on a case by case basis against the consolidated EU and National Export Licensing Criteria. The risk assessment takes place at the time of application and is carried out by dedicated export licensing teams in all four Departments (Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), Department of Trade and Industry, Ministry of Defence, Department for International Development) involved in the export licensing process. Each team is staffed appropriately for existing workloads, but levels may change.

In addition to the process of assessing licences against the criteria and prevailing circumstances, the FCO will review extant licences for all destinations when subsequent reporting from post, media, non-governmental organisations or other sources gives rise to human rights or diversion concerns.

Honours (Non-UK Citizens)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the individuals who are not UK citizens who in the period 1 January 2004 to 30 April 2005 were awarded honours; and what (a) the date of announcement, (b) the honour and (c) the reason for the award was in each case. [68480]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 8 May 2006]: As the information requested is lengthy, I will arrange for the information to be placed in the Library of the House, and will send a copy directly to the hon. Member.

As honorary awards, ie to citizens of countries where HM the Queen is not Head of State, are not formally announced, the date of the Queen's formal approval of such awards has been given.

Indonesia

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations the UK Government have made to the Indonesian authorities about the situation of Christians in Indonesia. [69131]

Mr. McCartney: We regularly raise human rights issues with the Government of Indonesia, both bilaterally and through the EU. We have made clear our view that freedom of religion is an important component of the democratic life of the country.

Through the EU, we have made representations to the Indonesian Government concerning the death penalty handed down to three Christians convicted of masterminding violence in Central Sulawesi in 2000. On 14 November 2005, as EU presidency, we expressed to the Government of Indonesia the EU's regret at the decision to carry out the executions, and urged the Indonesian government not to do so and to consider the abolition of the death penalty altogether. The current EU presidency, Austria, followed this up with the Government of Indonesia in January in separate meetings with the Minister of Law and Human Rights and the Attorney-General, and in a note to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The EU presidency raised this again during the EU-Indonesia Ministerial Troika meeting in Vienna on 27 March.

We understand that the Indonesian Supreme Court had recently re-opened the case and that there may be further police inquiries.

Iran

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the possible effects of economic sanctions on Iran on the world economy, with particular reference to the price of oil. [67241]

Dr. Howells: The United Nations Security Council has not yet considered imposing sanctions against Iran, though this cannot be ruled out at some point if Iran continues not to take the steps regarding its nuclear programme that the International Atomic Energy Agency Board of Governors has deemed essential. The effects of any sanctions on the world economy would depend critically on the kinds of measures imposed; at this stage, speculation is premature.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 304W, on Iran, what assessment she has made of Iranian financial support to Hamas since the January 2006 Palestinian legislative elections; and if she will make a statement. [69305]

Dr. Howells: On 16 April, the Iranian Foreign Minister pledged that Iran would give $50 million to the Hamas-led Palestinian Authority (PA); he did not say when or how this would be delivered.

We remain deeply concerned by Iran's support for groups undermining peace in the Middle East and by President Ahmadinejad's calls for the destruction of the state of Israel. We believe it would not be in the interests of peace in the region, for the PA to depend on funding from Iran. The PA needs to engage with the whole international community to find a lasting solution to its funding needs on the basis of commitments to recognising the state of Israel, commitment to non-violence and acceptance of previous agreements and obligations, including the roadmap.

Israel

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of Israel's Security Fence is outside Israel's borders as they existed in 1967; and if she will make a statement. [67246]

Dr. Howells: In March 2005, the UN Office for Co-ordination for Humanitarian Affairs reported that 20 per cent. of the completed section of the barrier ran along the green line. The remainder of the barrier is routed on Occupied Territory.

We fully recognise Israel's right to self-defence. A barrier is a reasonable way to achieve this. But the barrier's route should be on or behind the green line and not on occupied territory. The territory beyond the green line which Israel occupied in June 1967 is occupied territory. We will continue to raise our concerns over the barrier with the Israeli Government at all levels.

Memoranda of Understanding (Deportees)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment the Government have made of comments by the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights that the practice of seeking memoranda of understanding regarding the return of deportees to certain countries is fundamentally flawed in several ways. [68189]

Dr. Howells: We respect the views of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights. However, individuals who are not British nationals, and who pose a threat to the national security of the United Kingdom, should not have the right to remain here indefinitely. The Government continue to believe that memoranda of understanding providing for the deportation with assurances of particular individuals enable us to safeguard the rights of individuals being returned in a manner consistent with, and in respect of our international human rights obligations.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights about the use of memoranda of understanding regarding the return of deportees to certain countries. [68190]

Dr. Howells: I met the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights on 16 February 2006. We discussed, among other issues, the use of memoranda of understanding regarding the return of deportees to certain countries.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assurances the Government have received in relation to whether countries with which the UK has memoranda of understanding regarding the return of deportees are complying with both the spirit and the letter of the terms of the agreement. [68191]

Dr. Howells: The Government are confident that the countries concerned will abide by the spirit and letter of the memoranda of understanding (MOU) which they have signed. MOUs on deportation with assurances have so far been signed with Libya, Lebanon and Jordan. No deportations have yet been made under the terms of the MOUs. The deportations are subject to the courts.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by the Government to monitor the treatment of people sent to countries with which the UK has a Memorandum of Understanding regarding the return of deportees. [68192]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Berwickshire, Roxburgh and Selkirk (Mr. Moore) on 13 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1910-11W.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment the Government have made of the decision of the Council of Europe not to develop guidelines for the acceptable use of diplomatic assurances for extraditing people to countries where they might be at risk of torture; and what the implications are of that decision for the UK's use of Memoranda of Understanding. [68193]

Dr. Howells: We have noted the decision of the Council of Europe's Steering Committee on Human Rights not to draft a legal instrument on minimum standards for the use of diplomatic assurances in the context of expulsion procedures and, in the framework of the fight against terrorism, in cases where there is a risk of torture or inhuman or degrading punishment or treatment. The decision has no implications for the Government's policy on the use of Memoranda of Understanding for the purpose in question.

Middle East

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mechanisms the EU is considering for the delivery of aid to health and education projects in the West Bank and Gaza Strip; and if he will make a statement. [68201]

Hilary Benn: I have been asked to reply.

Until the Hamas-led government complies with the conditions laid out by the Quartet on 30 January, direct aid to the Palestinian Cabinet and its Ministries will not be possible. The UK government, European Commission and other international partners are, therefore, looking at other ways to support the basic needs of the Palestinian people. A mechanism has not yet been agreed. However, neither the UK government nor the European Community will fund organisations where there is a risk of resources being diverted to terrorism.

The United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) provides health, education and other basic services to Palestinian refugees. The UK and European Community provide substantial financial support to UNRWA's work, including £15 million from DFID in April this year.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funds have been provided by the EU to build the institutional fabric of the Palestinian Authority in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [68202]

Hilary Benn: I have been asked to reply.

Between 2000 and 2004, the European Community (EC) provided £450.3 million in overall assistance to Palestinian administrative areas. In 2004 and 2005 this included a total of £140 million in direct aid to the Palestinian Authority (PA), aimed at building the institutional capacity of the PA and increasing stability by assisting with budget shortfalls. This was in addition to the EC's contribution to humanitarian assistance, including support to Palestinian refugees through the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA).

Until the new Palestinian government complies with the conditions set out by the Quartet on 30 January, direct aid to the Palestinian Cabinet and its Ministries will not be possible. Like the UK, the European Commission is looking at other ways to support the basic needs of the Palestinian people.

Nepal

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of human rights in Nepal. [68179]

Dr. Howells: Nepal has a deplorable human rights record. Both Maoists and security forces have carried out gross abuses, both against combatants and civilians. Our annual Human Rights Report (chapters 2 and 5) covers this in detail. The report can be found on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) website at: http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1119526503628

The UK has regularly spoken out against such abuses and has taken a number of measures to reduce them, including providing human rights training, bomb disposal equipment and funding for the Office of the High Commissioner of Human Rights in Kathmandu.

Since the beginning of the year we have been deeply troubled by the escalation of violent Maoist attacks, which have resulted in large numbers of deaths and injuries among the Royal Nepalese Army, the police and civilians. We have also been gravely concerned by human rights abuses carried out by the security forces and by the Government's infringements of civil liberties and democratic freedoms.

With our EU partners we condemned all such abuses in a statement on 27 January 2006. In that statement we strongly condemned the escalation of Maoist violence and the Government's use of force to suppress the Nepalese people's fundamental rights. We also underlined the obligation of all parties to fully respect international humanitarian law.

In response to the nationwide demonstrations in April, I issued a public statement condemning the excessive violence that the Nepalese people have suffered. The full text of the statement is available on the FCO website: http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1007029391629&a=KArticle&aid=1144253679044%20&year=2006&month=2006-04-01&date=2006-04-21 The EU also issued a statement calling on all concerned to exercise restraint and resolve the problems by restoring democracy and by initiating a dialogue for peace. The statement can be found on the EU website at: http://www.eu2006.at/en/News/CFSP_Statements/April/2504Nepal.html For this reason we are greatly encouraged by the King's restoration of Parliament. This is a tribute to the Nepalese people's desire for democracy and peace. We hope that all those concerned will now work together to restore peace, democracy and human rights in Nepal and we will continue to assist them in their efforts.

Nuclear Weapons Convention

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the feasibility of a further nuclear weapons convention; and if she will make a statement. [68514]

Dr. Howells: The Government consider the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) to be the cornerstone of the global nuclear non-proliferation regime and the framework for nuclear disarmament. The UK has an excellent record in implementing its disarmament obligations under Article VI of the NPT and, in this regard, continues to press for multilateral negotiations towards mutual, balanced and verifiable reductions in nuclear weapons. The Government do not support any new process, including a Nuclear Weapons Convention, which could risk cutting across the existing NPT regime.

Palestinian Authority

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her Quartet counterparts regarding Russia's decision to fund the new Palestinian Authority; and if she will make a statement. [69177]

Dr. Howells: We value Russia as a member of the Quartet (EU, US, UN and Russia). Russia has made clear its support for the Quartet's three principles of commitment to non-violence, recognition of Israel and acceptance of previous agreements and obligations, including the roadmap. We are aware that Russia has pledged US$10 million to the Palestinian Authority (PA). Funding to the PA is one of a range of issues that we discuss with our Quartet partners. We discussed funding issues at an informal meeting of international donors on 27 April in London, which all the Quartet members attended.

Peru

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Government of Peru about (a) the re-emergence of the Shining Path guerrilla group and (b) their links to the drug trade. [68171]

Mr. Hoon: Through our embassy in Lima and contact with visiting Peruvian officials in London, the UK has regular discussions with the Peruvian authorities about terrorism and drugs, including the alleged links between remnants of the Shining Path guerrilla group and the illegal drugs trade.

RAF Wideawake

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the US Administration has paid for the use of RAF Wideawake in each year since 1997. [66959]

Mr. Hoon: Wideawake Airfield, constructed by the US government in 1942, forms part of the US Long Range Proving Ground Base sites on Ascension Island. Under the terms of the Bahamas Agreement, the US government uses these sites on Ascension Island free from rent and charges.

Rendition

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 88W, on rendition, whether the derivation of the legal requirement for permission to fly through UK territory and airspace, including overseas territories, is affected by the purpose of the flight to which the request for permission relates. [68685]

Dr. Howells: The legal requirement for a state to seek permission to render detainees via UK territory of airspace, including overseas territories, applies regardless of any other purpose of the flight to which the request for permission relates.

Son Jong Nam

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will meet representatives of Christian Solidarity Worldwide to discuss the case of Mr. Son Jong Nam, sentenced to death in North Korea. [68644]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 8 May 2006]: My officials have raised Son Jong Nam's case with the Democratic Peoples Republic of Korea authorities. Due to diary commitments, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is unable to meet representatives of Christian Solidarity Worldwide, but my hon. Friend the former Minister of State for Trade, Investment and Foreign Affairs (Ian Pearson) met the President of its Board of Trustees to discuss the issue.

Turkey

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when her Department last lodged an official complaint about human rights abuses in Turkey; and if she will make a statement. [66645]

Mr. Hoon: The Government closely monitor the human rights situation in Turkey and raise concerns as appropriate with the Turkish Government. Our ambassador in Ankara raised concerns about freedom of religion, the south-east and freedom of expression with senior Turkish Ministers and politicians on 13 April. Our ambassador also raised freedom of expression, especially Article 301 of the Turkish Penal Code, in an EU Heads of Mission meeting with the Turkish Foreign Minister on 19 April.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of the treatment of detainees held following recent protests in south-eastern Turkey; and if she will make a statement; [66943]

(2) if she will draw the attention of the Turkish Government to the European Union's Guidelines on Children and Armed Conflict in relation to the Turkish Government's response to the peaceful demonstrations in south-eastern Turkey in recent weeks; and if she will make a statement; [66945]

(3) if she will make representations to the Government of Turkey on methods used to deal with recent peaceful demonstrations in south-eastern Turkey. [66946]

Mr. Hoon: According to official, media and non-governmental organisation reports, the recent demonstrations in south east Turkey were not peaceful in nature. The Government condemns the violence and subsequent terrorist attacks in Istanbul. Our ambassador in Ankara has raised this issue with the Turkish Foreign Minister, but Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers have not discussed these recent events with the Turkish Government. We have not raised the EU's Guidelines on Children and Armed Conflict and have no plans to do so at present.

We will continue to monitor developments and will raise specific allegations of human rights abuse, including any related to the methods used and treatment of detainees, as appropriate.

Turkmenistan

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her EU counterparts about (a) human rights in, (b) trade with and (c) gas reserves in Turkmenistan. [68188]

Mr. Hoon: As with all of the countries of Central Asia, we continue to have a close dialogue with our EU partners on Turkmenistan. In November 2005, together with our EU partners, we supported a resolution on Turkmenistan in the UN's Third Committee. This resolution comprehensively covered the points of progress and of continuing concern and encouraged the Government of Turkmenistan to ensure full respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms.

The next EU-Turkmenistan Joint Committee Meeting, including an Ad-Hoc Meeting on human rights, is due to take place on 1 June 2006. Prior to this, we will be consulting closely with our EU colleagues on the issues to be covered. These will inevitably include human rights issues and questions relating to trade and economic co-operation.

Earlier this year Jan Kubis, the EU Special Representative for Central Asia, visited Turkmenistan and met President Niyazov with whom he was able to discuss the full range of EU-Turkmen issues including energy and human rights. After this visit, on 8 March 2006, my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Europe (Mr. Alexander) had a discussion with Kubis about Central Asia, including Turkmenistan. I am hoping to meet Kubis later this month.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Attracta Harron

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions between September 2003 and 11 December 2003 the person subsequently convicted of the murder of Attracta Harron received a home visit without advance notice from those responsible for ascertaining his whereabouts. [66113]

Mr. Hanson: The Probation Board for Northern Ireland has been requested to prepare a pre-sentence report on Trevor Hamilton who was convicted of the murder of Attracta Harron.

The Probation Board for Northern Ireland is unable to comment on the details of the case or its handling until sentence has been imposed, to avoid any risk of prejudicing the matter. I will write to the hon. Gentleman once sentence has been passed.

Cancer

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children received cancer treatment in Northern Ireland in (a) 1999, (b) 2001, (c) 2003 and (d) 2005, broken down by (i) council district and (ii) age group. [69377]

Paul Goggins: The number of children who received cancer treatment in Northern Ireland is not available, however the number of children admitted[1] to hospitals in Northern Ireland with a primary or secondary diagnosis of cancer related illnesses is available by local district council and age groups and is shown in the following tables. The full 2005 calendar year's information is currently unavailable therefore 2004 information has been provided.

[1] The figures presented are for the number of individual children admitted (discharges and deaths are used as an approximation for admissions) to hospitals in Northern Ireland. It should be noted that if a child is admitted to more than one hospital in any year or over a number of years he/she will be counted more than once in the tables.

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions (a) he and (b) the other Ministers in his Department have accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67515]

Mr. Hain: In the course of their duties, Ministers attend functions and events some of which are hosted or sponsored by companies. Such details are not recorded separately from other diary records. All hospitality received is in accordance with the Ministerial Code.

Dental Services

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will collect and collate statistics on (a) the incidence of childhood dental caries, (b) childhood and adult obesity and (c) the number of child care places in Northern Ireland at (i) ward and (ii) sub-ward level. [67933]

Paul Goggins: The capture of information at small area level such as ward or below, is usually dependent on the existence of an administrative system containing individual records with a reliable geographical identifier attached such as postcode. Even in the event that such systems are maintained by Boards or Trusts, there can be issues around data quality and personal disclosure, that mitigate against the central collation and publication of data for small areas. Alternative data collection methods such as sample surveys can yield useful information at Northern Ireland or Health and Social Services Board level. However, cost constraints usually prevent achieving a 4 representative sample which would be large enough to provide reliable results at sub-Board level. For these reasons, the routine central collection and collation of the requested data items at ward or sub-ward level is not being considered.

DXA Scanning Machines

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many DXA scanning machines are available in Northern Ireland. [69188]

Paul Goggins: There are six DXA scanning machines available in HPSS Trusts in Northern Ireland.

Eating Disorders

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 476W, on eating disorders, how many people in Northern Ireland were estimated to be suffering from (a) anorexia nervosa and (b) bulimia nervosa in each of the last five years. [69241]

Paul Goggins: Pursuant to PQ answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 476W, the figures quoted were estimates of the prevalence of these two conditions. Relatively little epidemiological data is available with respect to eating disorder incidence or prevalence in Northern Ireland. However, it is unlikely that local epidemiology differs markedly from indicative levels and trends reported within the UK in general. The figures quoted are calculated on the estimated national prevalence applied to Northern Ireland's population.

It is difficult to assess the true scale of the prevalence of eating disorders. Most patients are treated as psychiatric outpatients and outpatients' diagnosis is not routinely recorded for statistical purposes.

Education Minister

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many days the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for the Department of Education has spent in Northern Ireland to date in 2006. [67201]

Mr. Hain: I advise the hon. Member that the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for the Department of Education has spent a total of 37 days in Northern Ireland to date in 2006. In addition to those 37 days the Minister also performs duties as Education Minister at the NIO in Millbank as well as in Parliament.

Fair Employment

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he plans to implement the findings of the Exception of Teachers from the Fair Employment and Treatment (Northern Ireland) Order 1998 report published by the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland in December 2004. [68114]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Education is currently considering the Equality Commission's investigation findings and recommendations in the context of the wider change programme in the education sector.

General Practitioners

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average number of patients registered per general practitioner in Northern Ireland was in (a) 1995 and (b) 2005. [68425]

Paul Goggins: The information is as follows: (a) The Central Services Agency only holds computerised archived data on registrations with a general practitioner from 2001; reliable data for 1995 are therefore not available. However, we can provide the data for 2001 for comparison.

As at May 2001	Number
Total number of patients registered with a general practitioner[1]	1,768,473
Total number of general practitioners[2]	1,050
Average number of patients per general practitioner	1,684

(b) The information requested for 2005 is provided in the following table. However it is important to note that from the introduction of the new General Medical Services contract in April 2004, patients have been registered with a general practice and not with the general practitioner.

As at April 2005	Number

Herceptin

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients with early stage breast cancer in Northern Ireland are receiving Herceptin on the NHS. [69184]

Paul Goggins: My hon. Friend, the Member for St. Helen's, South (Mr. Woodward) in his role as Minister with responsibility for Health Social Services and Public Safety, announced in November 2005, that the cancer drug Herceptin may be made available to women with early stage breast cancer where this is clinically appropriate.

I have been advised that approximately 53 women in Northern Ireland are receiving Herceptin for the treatment of early stage breast cancer.

Housing Council

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost was to the public purse of the Northern Ireland Housing Council in each of the last three years. [69465]

Mr. Hanson: The information is as follows:

2005-06	45,735

Mr. Hain: Due to ministerial changes and redistribution of portfolios during the period requested the information sought by the hon. Member can be provided only at a disproportionate cost. I can however give the hon. Member the details he seeks for the present ministerial team since they took office and this is provided in the following tables:

Ministerial Working Hours

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what average number of hours per week each Minister in his Department spent working in each of the Departments for which they are responsible in the last 12 months. [67513]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

MRI Scanners

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many MRI scanners are operating in NHS hospitals in Northern Ireland; where they are located; and what their average monthly usage was in each of the last 12 months. [68556]

Paul Goggins: There are nine MRI scanners in Health and Personal Social Services hospitals. Details of the hospitals in which they are located and their average monthly usage, as provided by the Health and Social Services Trusts, are given in the following table.

Hospital	Number of MRI scanners	Average number of hours per month scanner is in use
Altnagelvin Hospital	1	183
Antrim Hospital	1	170
Belfast City Hospital	1	106
Belfast City Hospital Cancer Centre	1	[1]81
Craigavon Hospital	1	160
Musgrave Park Hospital	2	532
Royal Victoria Hospital	1	264
Ulster Hospital	1	121

[1] New cancer centre operational from April 2006. Belvoir Park Hospital MRI scanner was in use for an average of 85 hours per month prior to closure.

Nuisance Hedges

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the proposal for legislation to tackle nuisance hedges was first raised with his Department by an hon. Member; and if he will make a statement on progress made since that time. [68554]

Maria Eagle: Following suspension of the Northern Ireland Executive, the proposal for legislation to tackle nuisance high hedges was first raised with the Department of the Environment by the hon. Member for North Down in January 2004.

The Department subsequently completed a public consultation in October 2005 to assess the scale of the high hedge problem and has recently published a summary of the responses to that consultation on the Planning Service website. The Department accepts, on the basis of that consultation, that legislation is necessary but this cannot be brought forward due to a number of pressures on the legislative programme. It is now unlikely that consultation on the draft legislation will take place prior to the end of 2007.

Nursing

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of nurses in the Province who have left the NHS in each of the last 10 years; and what assessment he has made of the reasons why nurses in the Province leave the NHS before the age of retirement. [49322]

Paul Goggins: The number of qualified nurses[1] leaving the HPSS in the last 10 years is provided in the following table:

1 April to 31 March	Headcount	Whole-time equivalent
1996-97	1,104	925.37
1997-98	1,297	1,090.22
1998-99	1,120	906.73
1999-2000	725	609.63
2000-01	955	814.01
2001-02	896	741.84
2002-03	739	625.42
2003-04	913	765.48
2005-06	890	758.54

Information on the actual reasons for leaving is not collected. However, in addition to retirees, leavers may include staff taking a career break, those transferring to the independent/private sector or to the NHS in England, Scotland or Wales, and those leaving for other reasons such as family commitments.

[1] Qualified nurses include midwives and health visitors.

On-the-runs

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure that any future proposals which deal with the issue of 'on-the-runs' will be subjected to equality impact assessments. [66395]

Mr. Hain: Any future proposals to deal with on-the-runs would be subjected to the procedures contained in the Northern Ireland Office's Equality Scheme. The scheme requires that all policies should be subjected to an equality screening exercise; and that, if the screening demonstrates that there might be an adverse impact or that the impact is unknown, the Department should then to proceed to consider whether a full equality impact assessment is necessary.

Route Development Fund

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent from the Route Development Fund on flights into and out of Northern Ireland in 2005. [69469]

Maria Eagle: Total funding for the nine routes supported by the Air Route Development Fund during the 2005-06 financial year was £1,458,634.

School Funding

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average funding per child was in each (a) grammar school and (b) other secondary school in Northern Ireland in each of the past 10 years. [67817]

Maria Eagle: Detailed information at individual school level for Education and Library Board schools is available from the published Outturn Statements for 1999-2000 to 2003-04 which are available in the House of Commons Libraries. Similar outturn information on voluntary grammar and grant-maintained integrated schools is not available as this is prepared by individual schools.

The following tables show per pupil funding, by sector, for grammar and other post-primary schools, between 1995-96 and 2004-05 (the last year for which this information is readily available). Figures are based on information provided by each of the Education and Library Boards for their controlled grammar and other non-grammar schools, and by the relevant branches within my Department for voluntary grammar and grant-maintained integrated schools. Figures include both delegated and centre recurrent funding, but exclude special schools, capital funds and other costs such as milk and meals and transport, which are not allocated at individual school level.

Sure Start

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of children are on Sure Start schemes in each (a) ward, (b) county and (c) constituency in Northern Ireland. [68035]

Paul Goggins: There are currently 25 Sure Start projects in Northern Ireland offering just over 24,000 children in the 0-4 age range access to health care and family support services.

Table 1 shows the percentage of children on Sure Start schemes at Ward level. There are a total of 582 wards in Northern Ireland and Sure Start projects cover 107 wards.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Criminal Justice and Court Services Act

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason section 61 of the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 has not yet been brought into force. [68803]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Before implementing this provision we need to consider the implications for the sentencing framework under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 and the development of improved offender management. A Young Adult Offenders project is looking at the specific needs of this age group, including standards for the management of offenders in custody and the community. This will include consultation with the main interest groups. The project is due to report to Ministers in the autumn, following which a decision will be taken on the best way forward.

Criminal Records Bureau

Natascha Engel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures are in place to remove people wrongfully included on the Criminal Records Bureau database. [68449]

Joan Ryan: The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) operates a central database in order to record transactions during the process of disclosure. This database does not hold details of police convictions or other intelligence, although the CRB does have access to the Police National Computer (PNC) for the purposes of processing disclosure applications.

The CRB has a procedure whereby individuals may contest or "dispute" information held by the police or other data sources in certain circumstances, but the CRB does not have the authority to amend or remove conviction information; this is the responsibility of the police who are the data owners of such material. Where an individual indicates that conviction information has been wrongly or inaccurately portrayed on his or her disclosure, the CRB will contact the relevant force and ask them to review the accuracy or the relevance of such material and will communicate the force's decision to the applicant.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Criminal Records Bureau checks have been carried out since they were introduced. [69439]

Joan Ryan: The latest available figure shows that the Criminal Records Bureau has issued 8,990,597 Disclosures. This is broken down into 1,063,852 Standard Disclosures and 7,926,745 Enhanced Disclosures.

Death Penalty

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of the Murder (Abolition of Death Penalty) Act 1965; and what recent representations he has received about the operation of this Act. [69638]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Murder (Abolition of Death Penalty) Act 1965 abolished capital punishment for those convicted of murder and introduced the mandatory life sentence instead. I have not received any representations recently about the operation of the Act.

DNA Database

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which (a) individuals and (b) bodies are authorised to access the National DNA Database. [68460]

Joan Ryan: Authorisation to access the National DNA Database (NDNAD) is given to 18 staff within the HO Custodian's group who have responsibility for maintaining the integrity of the NDNAD. In addition the Forensic Science Service Ltd have 15 staff in the NDNAD service delivery team and 16 staff in their information service division, supporting the systems and working on NDNAD development, who have authorisation to access the NDNAD.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many volunteers providing DNA elimination samples have consented to the addition of their DNA profile to the National DNA Database in each year since 1997; and what percentage of volunteers this represented in each year. [68461]

Mr. Sutcliffe: No volunteer samples were loaded before the financial year 2004-05. 12,095 samples were loaded in 2004-05, 3,953 in 2005-06, and 135 have been loaded since 1 April 2006. It is not possible to determine what percentage of volunteers this represents, as no central records are kept of volunteers who give samples which are not loaded to the National DNA Database.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many criminal cases familiar searching of the National DNA Database has been used in each year since 1997. [68462]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There were 73 familiar searches in 2004, 78 in 2005 and there have been 19 so far in 2006. There are no data on any familial searches before 2004.

DNA Sampling

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which organisations are approved to provide (a) DNA profiles and (b) crime scene samples. [68459]

Joan Ryan: The following organisations are approved to provide DNA profiles from individuals:

Forensic Science Service Ltd
LGC Limited
Orchid Cellmark
Tayside Police Forensic Science Laboratory
Forensic Science Northern Ireland

The following organisations are approved to provide DNA profiles from crime scene samples:

Forensic Science Service Ltd
LGC Limited
Orchid Cellmark
Tayside Police Forensic Science Laboratory
Strathclyde Police Forensic Science Laboratory
Lothian and Borders Police Forensic Science Laboratory

Forensic Integration Strategy

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what projects are being undertaken under the Forensic Integration Strategy; and if he will make a statement. [68458]

Joan Ryan: There are a number of projects currently being progressed under the auspices of the Forensic Integration Strategy:

National rollout of livescan?project to ensure all police forces are able to rapidly check fingerprints to establish identity in custody centres.

International data-sharing feasibility assessment?work to assess the feasibility of technical options to support international sharing of information, accounting for different national legislation and data protection.

ACPO DNA and fingerprint retention project?work to ensure that DNA and fingerprint records are appropriately retained following the implementation of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001.

ACPO forensic training strategy?to support development and implementation of ACPO's forensic training strategy.

Improvement of forensic mortuaries.

Introduction of national IT system for forensic pathologists?to ensure maintenance of common standards and provision of effective management information.

Development of forensic procurement framework?supporting ACPO to develop common statement of requirements and terms and conditions to support equality of opportunity in development of the forensic service market.

Harry Hammond

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 320W, on Mr. Harry Hammond, if he will posthumously strike Mr. Hammond's conviction from the public record. [68961]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Mr. Hammond was convicted by a court of law and only a court can quash that conviction. It is open to the relatives of Mr. Hammond to seek to bring a late appeal or to seek the assistance of the Criminal Cases Review Commission.

Identity Cards

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans for the management of the identity card database. [68561]

Joan Ryan: Strategic functions, critical decision making and sensitive staff roles connected with the National Identity Register will remain under the direct control of the public sector under the auspices of the Identity and Passport Service. However, where appropriate, it is also planned that where the operations of the National Identity Scheme can be best delivered by the private sector, the Identity and Passport Service will seek to procure these services from the market. The Government have also confirmed that the facilities used for hosting the National Identity Register, as part of the country's Critical National Infrastructure, as well as those used for the personalisation of identity cards will be located in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for remote reading of identity cards; and if he will make a statement. [68599]

Joan Ryan: It is currently intended that the identity card will be a valid travel document for travel within the European Union. In order to meet minimum international standards for travel documents set by the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO), the identity card must include a "proximity" or "contactless" chip. Such chips are being introduced into travel documents worldwide to improve their integrity and security, with four of the five largest passport issuing countries, the US, UK, Japan and Germany introducing this chip in passports this year.

The "proximity" or "contactless" chip is read by actively placing the chip on the reader (at a distance of 0 cm to 2 cm from the reader). The contents of the chip can only be 'unlocked' after special characters printed on the card/passport's Machine Readable Zone (MRZ) are scanned. An attempt to read the chip without using the information printed in the MRZ to 'unlock' it will yield no data which can be used to identify the individual. This is known as Basic Access Control protection, which is being implemented internationally in accordance with ICAO standards. It should be noted that this technology differs from that used in RFID tags. While both use radio frequencies, they operate very differently from one another—an RFID tag is just an identity tag that provides information.

A proximity chip is more advanced—it has processing capability with different operating systems and different security settings. This is reflected in the fact that they are defined by two separate standards set by the International Organisation for Standardisation (ISO).

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of people who will reapply for passports before their expiry date in advance of passports being issued in combination with identity cards; and whether he plans to recruit additional staff to process passport applications. [68600]

Joan Ryan: The Identity and Passport Service expects to receive 6.9 million applications in the 2006-07 financial year and has recruited sufficient staff for this. We do not anticipate that the number of people choosing to renew early in order to delay enrolment on the National Identity Register will be significant in the context of the overall number of applications. However, the IPS will continue to monitor trends in application numbers closely and will take action if necessary.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 15 February 2006, Official Report, column 2128W, on the identity cards scheme, whether the total staff costs for the identity cards unit are included in the costs reported to Parliament. [68647]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 8 May 2006]: Yes. The figure of £32.05 million provided in the answer of 15 February 2006 included total staff costs.

Immigration Detention (Children)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that children subject to immigration control have their needs represented by the Commissioners for Children and Young People in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. [66790]

Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to respond as I have ministerial responsibility for the Children's Commissioner for England.

The Children's Commissioner has the general function of promoting awareness of the views and interests of children in England on all matters, and on non-devolved matters in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. This is a broad and strategic remit allowing him flexibility in the issues he wishes to consider.

As immigration control is a non-devolved matter the Children's Commissioner has the remit to promote awareness of the views and interests of children across the UK in respect of this matter.

The Children's Commissioner is independent of Government. The Secretary of State for Education and Skills does not have the power to direct the general work of the Children's Commissioner so would not be able to ensure the needs of children subject to immigration control are represented by the Commissioner. The Secretary of State can however, direct the Commissioner to hold an inquiry into a case where he considers that the case of an individual child raises issues of relevance to other children.

Informants

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the incidence of the illegal use of prison inmates as informants; what steps he is taking to reduce the incidence of the practice; and if he will make a statement. [69416]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Home Secretary is aware that the Office of Surveillance Commissioners' inspection team found evidence that some information gathering in prisons ought to have had covert human intelligence source authorisation. The Prison Service is committed to address this in their action plan drawn up in response to the inspection undertaken in 2005.

Kelly Hutchinson

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the death in custody of Kelly Hutchinson. [69204]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Kelly Hutchinson, a 22-year-old prisoner at HMPYOI New Hall, tragically died in the early hours of 1 May 2006, following an incident in which she was found hanging. Ms Hutchinson was the first woman prisoner to apparently take her own life since October 2005. Ms Hutchinson's death will be thoroughly investigated by the Prisons and Probation Ombudsman, Stephen Shaw, who, since April 2004, has been investigating all deaths in custody. Her death will also the subject of a police investigation and a coroner's inquest before a jury. The Prison Service will be looking to act on any early lessons that can be learned from Ms Hutchinson's very sad death. My sympathies are with the family and friends of Ms Hutchinson at this time.

Prison Service (Covert Surveillance)

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times covert surveillance has been used in investigations involving staff within the Prison Service in each of the last three years. [69328]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I refer to the answer that was given to the hon. Member on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 335W.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether disciplinary proceedings were (a) instigated, (b) progressed and (c) successfully concluded against prison staff as a result of video evidence obtained by the prison service in a covert surveillance operation in the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [69329]

Mr. Sutcliffe: For operational reasons, it would be inappropriate to divulge details of the outcome of surveillance operations.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many covert surveillance operations were deployed within each regional area of the Prison Service in each of the last 12 months. [69330]

Mr. Sutcliffe: For reasons of operational security, I am unable to list the information in the manner asked. However, the numbers of prison surveillance operations remains low, not least because there continue to be other effective ways of either obtaining intelligence or stopping contraband from entering prison establishments.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms exist to authorise the appropriate use of covert surveillance techniques in the Prison Service; and if he will make a statement. [69331]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Both public sector and contracted prisons have systems and audit trails to authorize staff to consider the use of covert investigative techniques. The policy, set out in function four of the National Security Framework, requires a local risk assessment to be undertaken to consider the necessity; proportionality; and potential for unintentional intrusion that may be caused by any covert operation, before it is submitted to the area manager for approval.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the Surveillance Commissioner to discuss (a) the use of covert surveillance in the Prison Service and (b) the performance of the Prison Service in surveillance operations; and if he will publish the minutes of that meeting. [69418]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The former Home Secretary, Charles Clarke, met Sir Andrew Leggatt, the Chief Surveillance Commissioner, on 2 February 2006. The meeting covered a number of subjects including the performance of the Prison Service. In view of the sensitivities of the subjects under discussion, I am not proposing to release the minutes of the meeting.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to improve the use of covert surveillance in prisons; and if he will make a statement. [69419]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Prison Service is implementing an action plan that addresses issues raised in the Office of the Surveillance Commissioner's report following an inspection in 2005. I am satisfied that the Prison Service is on course to delivering the action plan and the associated improvements to the use of covert surveillance.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether covert surveillance techniques in the Prison Service include the authorised use of in-cell surveillance; and if he will make a statement. [69453]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Prison Service has powers under the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 to use intrusive surveillance and ensure appropriate audit trails are in place for their use.

Prisons

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to improve levels of constructive activity and the availability of quality intervention programmes for 18 to 21-year-old prisoners. [65590]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government have invested considerable extra funds in improving rehabilitation regimes for all adults, including this age group, and we now spend £300 million a year on this in prisons alone. All establishments are required to provide constructive regimes which address offending behaviour, improve educational and work skills, and promote law abiding behaviour. To address the specific needs of this group, the National Offender Management Service has established a project to develop a strategy and standards for their management both in custody and the community. This is working with key interest groups who have experience of working successfully with this age group. It is due to report its findings to Ministers in the autumn.

Rathbone Charity

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the work of the Rathbone charity at (a) HM Young Offender Institution Feltham, (b) HM Young Offender Institution Huntercombe and (c) HM Young Offender Institution Warren Hill; what outcomes he expects the project to deliver; at what cost; and within what time scale. [69323]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Rathbone charity provides an employment, training and education service to young people to acquire the necessary skills for employment or further education courses upon release. Funding for the project is £300,000 from the Youth Justice Board for young people under 18, and £60,000 from the Learning and Skills Council, which can be used additionally to support young people aged 18 and over on transition. The initiative will run at Warren Hill young offender institution (YOI) between April and October 2006 and at Feltham and Huntercombe YOIs between May and November 2006.

Sex Offenders (Extradition)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many alleged sex offenders have been extradited from the US to the UK in each of the last five years. [69358]

Joan Ryan: The figures for the last five complete calendar years are as follows:

	Number of extraditions
2001	0
2002	1
2003	0

Stephen Ayre

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the conclusions of the probation service review into the case of Stephen Ayre will be made public. [68290]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Serious Further Offence (SFO) reviews are an internal process carried out by the probation service to quality assure its risk assessment, risk management and offender management procedures. The SFO review of the supervision of Stephen Ayre by West Yorkshire probation area is not yet fully complete, and as such, it would be inappropriate at present to discuss the conclusions of the review. The SFO review is likely to be complete at the end of May, and consideration will then be given to dissemination of the review's conclusions. I will therefore update the hon. Member further once the review has been fully completed.

Train Fare Evasion

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted for evading a train fare in each of the last eight years. [61273]

Mr. Byrne: Data on the number of people prosecuted and convicted for evading a train fare are not held centrally on the Court Proceedings Database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform as prosecutions are brought privately by train operators.

Young Offenders Establishments

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made at each young offender establishment in the self-assessment against the code of practice outlined in Managing Children and Young People's Behaviour in the Secure Estate; and whether he plans to publish the results. [69322]

Mr. Sutcliffe: With one exception, all secure establishments that accommodate sentenced or remanded young people under the age of 18 have now completed a self-assessment of performance against the code of practice. The remaining establishment is expected to complete its self-assessment shortly. These self-assessments have been validated, either by the Youth Justice Board or by Prison Service operational support staff. Additionally, the Prison Service has audited its national policies and procedures against the code of practice. By the end of May, each establishment is expected to have completed an action plan to address any areas of non-compliance. Once the Youth Justice Board has had the opportunity to analyse all the information gathered from establishments, it will consider how the results can be made more widely available.

Fire and Rescue Services

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many staff members employed by each local authority fire and rescue service are members of the (a) Retained Firefighters Union and (b) Fire Officers Association; and what mechanism she uses to verify the number. [69170]

Angela E. Smith: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many consultants her Department has employed on fire services-related projects, and at what cost, in each of the last five years. [63953]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was formed in May 2002 and expenditure prior to this date is not readily available. For the period May 2002 to March 2006 the figures are detailed in the following table.

	Number of consultancies	£ million
2003-04	78	5.29
2004-05	114	13.27
2005-06	80	15.35

Holiday Accommodation Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what research her Department has undertaken into the effect of a hotel, tourist or bed tax. [66341]

Mr. Woolas: During the Balance of Funding Review, the Local Government Association provided two papers which considered the merits of a range of potential revenue sources, including a tourist tax.

The Office has not carried out or commissioned any research into the effect of a hotel, tourist or bed tax.

HEALTH

Abortions

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many terminations of pregnancies were performed on (a) 13 to 14 and (b) 15 to 16 year olds in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [69669]

Caroline Flint: The information (for England and Wales) is available on the Department's website at:

Data for 2002-04

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/Statistics/StatisticalWorkAreas/StatisticalPublicHealth/fs/en

Data for 2000-01

Will be published in July 2006.

The Government's teenage pregnancy strategy aims to help young people delay early sex through its national media campaign and also improved sex and relationships education and support for parents in discussing relationship and sexual health issues with their children. However, it is very important that teenagers who are sexually active have access to contraception, including emergency contraception, and sexual health advice to minimise the risk of pregnancy or sexually transmitted infections.

Between 1998 (the baseline year for the strategy) and 2004 (the latest year for which data are available) the under-18 conception rate has fallen by 11.1 per cent. The under-16 conception rate has fallen by 15.2 per cent. over the same period. Both rates are now at their lowest levels since the mid-1980s.

Autism

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 254W, to the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr. Lansley), on autism, what assessment the Government have made of the reasons for the trends in the incidence of autism; and what steps her Department is taking to expand the provision of care for autism sufferers. [68262]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In March 2001, the Department commissioned the Medical Research Council (MRC) to produce a report on the prevalence and incidence (epidemiology) and causes of autism. This was published in December 2001 and provides an authoritative overview of the current state of knowledge on the prevalence, incidence and causes of autism.

The report considers recent studies which suggest a prevalence of autism in young children of approximately 60 per 10,000 population and finds that much of the headline rise can be accounted for by changes in diagnostic practice and public awareness. It is available on the MRC website at www.mrc.ac.uk/pdf-autism-report.pdf.

It is for local commissioners to ensure their populations benefit from improvements to the provision of care for people with autistic spectrum disorders using the increasing resources this Government have made available.

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are being undertaken by her Department to increase awareness of autism among health professionals. [68913]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The detailed curricula for the education and training of doctors, nurses and other healthcare professionals in treating and supporting those with autism is a matter for the relevant professional bodies.

The national directors for learning disability and mental health are commissioning a document to assist those working with people with autism spectrum disorders (ASD). This will clarify how existing policies apply to people with ASD and how these may best be delivered to this group.

Care Homes

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the merits of including a value for money assessment in the inspection reports of care homes for older people produced by the Commission for Social Care Inspection. [65303]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: No assessment has been made. The Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI), as the independent inspectorate for social care in England, is responsible for registering, inspecting and regulating all social care services, including care homes. CSCI works to maintain and improve the quality of care, to ensure the safety of service users and, if necessary, takes enforcement action to end bad practice.

CSCI inspects local authority social services and awards star ratings, based on how effectively councils are meeting the social care needs of their populations. These ratings will include an assessment of councils' commissioning arrangements. Councils are responsible for ensuring they achieve value for money in their purchasing of services from care homes and CSCI's functions encompass the economy and efficiency of councils' provision and their value for money.

The great majority—around 70 per cent.—of care homes are private businesses. Market forces, particularly with regard to local authority-funded care home placements, which account for around 67 per cent. of places, ensure there is price competition, particularly in view of the fact that there is currently considerable spare capacity, with approximately 9 per cent. vacancy levels in privately owned, for-profit care homes in 2005[1].

Child Care

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nursery and creche places are provided for people working in her Department; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for the children of employees of her Department. [67365]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department offers a package of childcare support for working parents. The package comprises of access to 60 playscheme places offered on site in London and Leeds during the school holidays. The places are very popular and have been in place for more than five years. The places are subsidised on a daily basis. Each place is charged at £18.00 per day. Parents contribute £8.00 per place and the Department meets the cost of the difference. In addition, we will soon be offering childcare vouchers as part of a salary sacrifice scheme. This will be available to all staff to take advantage of the tax benefits attached to salary sacrifice. We are currently tendering for a voucher provider and expect the contract to begin on 1 September 2006. The Department also shares nursery provision with the Department for Work and Pensions for providing 20 on-site nursery places for pre-school children based in Quarry House, Leeds. Finally, we offer three days per annum carers leave in addition to annual and special leave for parents with caring responsibilities. This is to enable staff to care for their children when their usual childcare provision has broken down or in order for them to make alternative caring arrangements.

Children's Health Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children aged between four and five received pre-school vision screening in the most recent period for which figures are available. [67649]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not held centrally.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many babies received hearing screening during the first month of their life during the most recent period for which figures are available. [67655]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information is not collected centrally. However, data is available from the director of the newborn hearing screening programme for the number of babies receiving hearing screening during the first three months of their life. Between 1 April 2005 and 31 March 2006, 479,886 babies received a hearing screening test.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the impact on service users of changes planned for (a) speech and language therapy, (b) paediatric physiotherapy and (c) paediatric occupational therapy by primary care trusts in Buckinghamshire. [67663]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) in partnership with strategic health authorities, local authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services. This process provides the means for addressing local needs within the health community including the provision of speech and language therapy, physiotherapy and occupational therapy.

Children's Hospices

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list children's hospices which are receiving grants from the Big Lottery Fund; when this funding will cease in each case; whether she plans to increase funding for children's hospices from central budgets when Lottery funding ceases; and if she will make a statement. [51931]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The table shows the list of children's hospices receiving grants from the Big Lottery Fund, and when the funding will cease in each case.

The provision of palliative care for children and young people with a life threatening or life limiting condition requires a wide range of services provided in a variety of settings—home, school, hospital or hospice to enable them to live as normal a life as possible. It is for local primary care trusts (PCTs), working with local authority partners and stakeholders, to decide how these services will be provided; we have published guidance to support PCTs in working with local authorities and other partners, including hospices, to commission high quality services.

The Government's White Paper "Our health, our care, our say" (copies are available in the Library) reaffirms our manifesto commitment to double funding for end of life care to enable more people to have a choice where to die. For children this includes palliative care, quite often a lifelong need, and not just end of life care. I will make an announcement about the manifesto commitment as soon as I can.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the future funding of children's hospices. [58331]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 13 March 2006]: The White Paper "Our health, our care, our say" reaffirms our commitment to double funding of end of life care to enable more people to have a choice about where to die. We will make further announcements on plans to implement this manifesto commitment as soon as possible.

Colonoscopy

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the remaining four programme hubs in the bowel cancer screening programme to be decided by the NHS cancer screening programme teams; and (a) how and (b) where the public can make representations on the location and timing of future hubs. [68712]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Five programme hubs across England will invite men and women to participate in the screening programme, send out the faecal occult blood (FOB) testing kits, interpret kits and send results out. Ninety to 100 local screening centres will provide endoscopy services for the 2 per cent. of men and women who have a positive FOB test result.

As there are only five programme hubs to cover the whole of England, these are being commissioned centrally by national health service cancer screening programmes. The national cancer screening team is currently assessing where the other programme hubs will be located and announcements will be made as soon as possible.

Strategic health authorities (SHAs) were asked to bid last August for their local endoscopy units to become local screening centres as part of the first wave of the programme in 2006-07. Similar exercises will take place for the second wave in 2007-08 and the third wave in 2008-09. It is up to SHAs to decide where local screening centres should be located for the benefit of their own populations.

We intend that all five programme hubs will be established, and around 14 local screening centres will be operating (out of a total of 90 to 100 for full national coverage) by March 2007.

Dentistry

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists signed the dental contract "in dispute". [65530]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists who signed the new contract in dispute is not available centrally. Provisional management estimates indicate that 2,884 contracts were signed in dispute. A contract may be for either a practice or an individual dentist.

Primary care trusts are working with dentists to resolve as many disputes as possible locally.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines on recall interval between dental examinations; and if she will make a statement. [65961]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In 2002, the Department asked the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE), as the independent organisation responsible for providing health guidance, to produce a guideline relating to recall intervals between dental examinations. The Department regards NICE's recommendations as constituting the best available independent clinical advice on how dentists should agree with each patient the recall intervals that are appropriate to the needs of individual patients. Under the new contracts for general dental services and personal dental services, dentists are required to provide services in accordance with guidance issued by NICE, including guidance on recall intervals.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in the (a) Tameside and Glossop and (b) Stockport Primary Care Trust have signed the new NHS dental contract; and what percentage this represents of (i) all dentists and (ii) those dentists providing NHS treatments under the old arrangements in each PCT area. [67887]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not available in the format requested.

Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract and the number who have not signed is not available centrally. We do however have some provisional information that covers contracts. A contract may well be for more than one dentist so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were registered for NHS dentistry in Morecambe Bay Primary Care Trust in each year since 1997. [68735]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The number of patients registered with a national health service dentist in Morecambe Bay Primary Care Trust as at 31 December in each specified year is shown in the table.

With effect from September 1996, the registration period for adults was reduced from two years to 15 months from the date of the patient's last attendance at the dentist. Registration periods for children were also standardised at 15 months. This produced a gradual reduction in the number of patients registered with dentists between January and September 1998 as those adult patients who were originally registered on a 24-month basis and did not return to the dentist were no longer counted.

General dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS)

	Registered patients

1998	155,221
1999	157,106
2000	160,389
2001	161,980
2002	158,667
2003	151,480
2004	151,423

Notes:
1. PDS schemes have varying registration periods. To ensure comparability with corresponding GDS data, PDS registrations for established PDS practices are estimated using proxy registrations, namely the number of patients seen by PDS practices in the past 15 months.
2. Data for 2003 and earlier do not include those PDS schemes that do not have any registrations, for example dental access centres, and is therefore not directly comparable with 2004 and 2005 data.
3. The registration figures for 1997 are not comparable with subsequent years due to the change in the registration period to 15 months. Previously the period for adults was 24 months whilst children's registrations expired at the end of the following calendar year. The introduction of PDS in October 1998 and subsequent growth has also affected the figures.
4. The areas have been defined using practice postcodes within the PCT, not the patient's home address.
5. Prison contracts have not been included in this analysis.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists doing NHS work have signed the new NHS dental contract in dispute in each primary care trust in England; and if she will make a statement. [69605]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract and the number who have signed in dispute is not available centrally.

We do however have some provisional information that covers contracts. A contract may well be for more than one dentist so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level. The number of contracts which have been signed in dispute in each primary care trust (PCT) has been placed in the library.

PCTs are working with dentists to resolve as many disputes as possible locally.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis the number of people registered with a dentist will be recorded following changes to the system for such registration. [62676]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Under the new arrangements, the NHS Business Services Authority will monitor the numbers of patients who receive care or treatment from national health service primary care dentists on one or more occasions within a given period of time, as has previously been the system for most personal dental services pilots. We are reviewing what time period should be used as the main basis for this monitoring.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of eligible dentists in the area covered by the Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth Primary Care Trust had accepted the NHS dental contract as at 31 March; how many eligible dentists had declined to accept the new NHS dental contract as at that date; and how many eligible dentists had not responded either way. [68373]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists or dental practices who have signed the new contract and the number who have not signed is not available centrally. However, provisional information is available that covers contracts.

A contract may be for more than one dentist so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level.

1. Data include all notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS, received by the NHS Business Services Authority, up to 23 March 2006. Figures for the numbers of dentists at specified dates may vary depending upon the notification period, for example data with a later notification period will include more recent notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS.
2. Dentists consist of principals, assistants and trainees. Prison contracts have been excluded from the data.
3. The postcode of the dental practice was used to allocate dentists to specific geographic areas. PCT areas have been defined using the Office for National Statistics all fields postcode directory.
4. A dentist with a GDS or PDS contract may provide as little or as much NHS treatment as he or she chooses or has agreed with the PCT. Information concerning the amount of time dedicated to NHS work by individual dentists is not centrally available.
5. Data on dentists who work only in private practice are not held centrally.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of (a) adults and (b) children are registered with an NHS dentist in each primary care trust in Devon; how many were registered in each category in 1997; and what proportion of dentists have signed the NHS contract in each health trust area in Devon. [68544]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The tables give the estimated percentage of adults and children registered with a national health service dentist in Devon in the years 1997 and 2005. There is no information currently available on the number of dentists who have signed the new NHS contract in Devon. However, information on provisional management estimates is provided for a number of contracts signed in the Devon area.

Notes:
1. Official 2005 population data is not yet available. 2005 data has therefore been estimated using Office for National Statistics 2004 mid-year population estimates based on the 2001 census as these are the latest available.
2. PDS schemes have varying registration periods. To ensure comparability with corresponding GDS data, PDS registrations for established PDS practices are estimated using "proxy registrations", namely the number of patients seen by PDS practices in the past 15 months.
3. Note that the data on registration numbers for December 1997 is calculated on a different basis from subsequent years. The registration period for both adults and children in GDS was 15 months from 1 September 1996 (registrations expire 15 months after the end of the month of registration). Previously the registration period for adults was an exact 24 months while children's registrations expired at the end of the next calendar year. Therefore, data on the 15 month registration period is available from January 1998 for children and September 1998 for adults. The introduction of PDS in October 1998 and subsequent growth has also affected the figures, changes in the registration period from two years to 15 months impacted on the number of patients registered after December 1997.
4. The postcode of the dental practice was used to allocate patient registrations to specific geographic areas (not the patient's home address).
5. Registration rates (i.e. the percentage of the population registered with a dentist) have been estimated by including registrations in the area of the dentist, that is according to the postcode of the dental surgery and not the patient's address. So the registration rates for some areas may be affected by some patients receiving dental treatment in a different area from the one in which they live. This can lead to figures being unusually high, even over 100 per cent. for child registrations, while other areas may have estimated rates which are lower than the actual (but unknown) proportion of residents who are registered with a dentist in or outside their own area.
6. Figures have been provided by the Information Centre for health and social care. The data source is the Business Services Authority and the figures are based on the numbers of patients registered with dentists with open General Dental Service (GDS) or Personal Dental Service (PDS) contracts as at 31 December in each specified year. Prison contracts have not been included in this analysis.

Enzyme Replacement Therapy

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the funding of enzyme replacement therapies for lysosomal storage diseases will continue under the national specialist commissioning advisory group arrangements after 31 March 2007. [69572]

Fruit/Vegetable Consumption

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average fruit and vegetable consumption per person was in the UK in each year since 1997, broken down by household income. [59398]

Caroline Flint: The health survey for England (HSE) undertaken by the Department collects data on fruit and vegetable consumption. Data is available for 2003 for adults and 2001 for children. This is shown in tables one and two. The highest consumption was found in women from the higher income groups eating 4.4 portions per day compared to the recommended portions of five portions.

The Food Standards Agency's consumer attitude survey indicates that there has been a steady increase in awareness of the 5 a day message from 43 per cent. to 67 per cent. in 2005. Those claiming to have eaten at least five portions of fruit and vegetables the previous day had risen from 26 per cent. in 2000 to 30 per cent. in 2006.

Fruit and vegetable consumption for adults and children, broken down by household income for 2001 and 2003, is shown in tables one and two.

In 1997 to 2000, consumption of fruit and vegetables based on household purchases is available from the national food survey and after 2001, from the expenditure and food survey. Quantities purchased for 2001-02 to 2003-04 broken down by income quintile are shown in table three. Quantities for 1997 to 2000 broken down by income bands are shown in table four.

These tables show that, overall, households have not seen a huge change in the purchasing of fruit and vegetables. However, we have seen a significant increase in purchases from those in the lowest income quintiles. This group has purchased 33 per cent. more fruit and vegetables per week in 2004-05 compared to 2001-02.

Mental Health

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many care homes registered as catering for the needs of (a) people aged over 65 with mental illness and (b) people aged between 18 and 65 with mental illness there were in each of the last six years; [64766]

(2) what estimate she has made of the number of people aged 65 years and over who suffered from a sensory impairment in each of the last six years, broken down by sense; [64768]

(3) how many (a) care homes were registered for sensory impairment for elderly people and (b) places were available in such care homes in each of the last six years, broken down by local authority. [64769]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Table 1 shows the number of residential and nursing care homes for people aged 18 and over with mental health problems in England at 31 March for the years 2000 and 2001.

	Aged over 65	Aged 18 to 65	Total
1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003	1,777	2,742	4,519
1 April 2003 to 31 March 2004	1,907	2,523	4,430

Information on the number of people aged 65 and over who are suffering from sensory impairment is not available centrally.

Table 3 shows the number of adults aged 65 and over who are registered as blind, partially blind, deaf or hard of hearing in England. Registration of blindness or deafness is voluntary. Therefore, the number of people registered does not include all people with a sensory impairment.

Table 3: Number of adults aged 65 and over who are registered as having a sensory impairment in England, as at 31 March 2000 to 2004

Registered as:	2000	2001	2003	2004

Notes:
1. The information on both the blind and deaf registers is collected every three years.
2. Data is rounded.

I understand from CSCI that the number of care homes registered for sensory impairment and the number of places available in these homes, broken down by local authority, between 1 April 2003 and 31 March 2006 is shown in table 4.

Midwives

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacant midwife posts there are in (a) the North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire Strategic Health Authority area and (b) the East Hull and West Hull Primary Care Trust area; and what plans her Department has to recruit more midwives into the NHS in North and East Yorkshire and North Lincolnshire. [65437]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is shown in the table. Individual national health service organisations are responsible for the recruitment of midwives. I am advised that Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust is able to deploy staff flexibly to cover vacancies, and is planning to recruit to five of the vacant posts. North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire Strategic Health Authority is continuing to commission training programmes for registered midwives at the Universities of Hull and York in order to maintain future supply.

Three month vacancy notes:

1. Three month vacancy information is as at 31 March 2005.
2. Three month vacancies are vacancies which Trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (full time equivalents).
3. Three month Vacancy Rates are three month vacancies expressed as a percentage of three month vacancies plus staff in post.
4. Three month Vacancy Rates are calculated using staff in post from the Non-Medical Workforce Census September 2004.
5. Percentages are rounded to one decimal place.
6. * Figures where sum of staff in post (as at 30 September 2004) and vacancies (as at 31 March 2005) is less than 10. Staff in post note: Staff in post data is from the Non-Medical Workforce Census September 2004. General notes:

1. Vacancy and staff in post numbers are rounded to the nearest whole number.
2. Calculating the vacancy rates using the above data may not equal the actual vacancy rates.
3. Due to rounding, totals may not equal the sum of component parts.
4. The 2005 vacancy survey did not receive a valid return from the Lincolnshire and Goole Hospitals NHS Trust. Figures for this trust have been excluded from all applicable vacancy totals and calculations. Staff in post figures for this trust are included in the England, Yorkshire and the Humber GOR and North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire SHA totals so as to be consistent with other Health and Social Care Information Centre publications.

NHS Finance

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional funding has been provided to implement Agenda for Change in the Trent Strategic Health Authority in each financial year since 2004-05; and what such funding is planned for each year to 2008-09. [67849]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The funding for Agenda for Change is included in the unified primary care trust

(PCT) revenue allocations that cover the full range of services commissioned by PCTs. It is for PCTs to decide how their allocations can be used in the most effective way.

Opportunities for Volunteering Scheme

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what allocation of grants has been made from the opportunities for volunteering scheme in 2006-07. [68942]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department of Health has allocated £6.7 million to its opportunities for volunteering scheme for 2006-07. Funds will be distributed through grants to individual volunteering projects by the scheme's 16 voluntary sector national agents.

Osteoporosis

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many primary care trusts have an integrated falls and osteoporosis service. [69580]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to include chiropractors in the musculoskeletal services framework being developed by her Department; and if she will make a statement. [68440]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We have recently consulted with a wide range of stakeholders, including the General Chiropractic Council, on the framework. We will review and revise the framework in the light of the contributions received from all stakeholders before publication later this year.

Palliative Care

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much each primary care trust has allocated to palliative care for 2006-07. [67638]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not routinely collect the data requested. Primary care trusts are responsible within the national health service for commissioning and funding services for their resident population, including palliative care.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the process is for commissioning children's palliative care; and what plans she has for the reform of these arrangements. [36730]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: "National Standards, Local Action" published in July 2004 recommends that primary care trusts (PCTs) will need to take into account specialist services, which can only be commissioned effectively on a pan-PCT or broader basis. PCTs, with the support of strategic health authorities (SHAs), are expected to act collaboratively to secure these services and their improvement.

Last November, we published "Commissioning Children's and Young People's Palliative Care Services" which gives commissioners important advice about the key aspects of children's palliative care, both general and specialist, which will improve the quality of service provision and promote quality of care for children, young people and their families in a range of settings, for example palliative care at home, in hospital or in a hospice.

On 22 March a series of eight regional events were launched to bring PCT commissioners, hospital and community services and voluntary organisations to promote local networks to commission and deliver improved quality and choice in palliative care services for children and young people.

The Government's White Paper "Our health, our care, our say" (copies are available in the Library) reaffirms our manifesto commitment to double funding for end of life care to enable more people to have a choice about where to die. For children this includes palliative care, quite often a lifelong need and not just end of life care. The White Paper includes additional commitments on:

provision of emergency, home-based respite care;

expert carers programme;

carers helpline, where the hospice movement will play an important role; and an audit of services by PCTs against the national service framework standard for disabled children and young people and those with complex health needs, agreeing funding, models of service and commissioning arrangements with SHAs.

Patient Transport Costs

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on private sector transportation of patients in the (a) Peterborough and Stamford Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust area and (b) Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire Strategic Health Authority area in the last year for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [67480]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally by the Department. This information is collected individually by each national health services trust through their accounting procedures.

Photodynamic Therapy

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she is taking (a) to raise awareness and (b) to promote the use of photodynamic therapy for skin cancer patients; [68771]

(2) what plans she has to ask the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to issue further guidance on the use of photodynamic therapy for skin cancer patients; [68772]

(3) what assessment she has made of (a) the relative costs and (b) the patient benefits of (i) photodynamic therapy treatment and (ii) other treatment options for skin cancer patients; [68773]

(4) what plans she has to commission research into the efficacy of photodynamic therapy for skin cancer patients. [68774]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 8 May 2006]: It is the responsibility of clinicians to discuss with patients appropriate treatment options for their particular condition. However, the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) was set up in 1999 to issue clinical guidance to support the national health service including: interventional procedure guidance to assess if a procedure is safe for routine use in the NHS; technology appraisals to assess if a treatment is clinically and cost effective; clinical guidelines to advise on the diagnosis and management of certain conditions; and cancer service guidance to advise on how services should be organised to ensure good outcomes for patients.

In February 2006, as part of its programme of work on interventional procedures, NICE issued guidance on the use of photodynamic therapy (PDT) in the treatment of non melanoma skin tumours. It noted that the procedure was generally safe and did not cause major problems although, in theory, it could start off cancerous changes in the skin. It recommended that when doctors use this procedure for people with basal cell carcinoma, Bowen's disease or actinic keratosis, they should be sure that the patient understands what is involved and consents to the treatment and that the results of the procedure are monitored. NICE also noted that there is not much information available on how well the procedure works in people with squamous cell carcinoma. There is a relatively high chance that the carcinoma will return after treatment, and there is a risk that the carcinoma will spread and become more dangerous. NICE has said that patients need to understand these risks before they agree to have PDT. They also need to understand that further treatment may be necessary.

Also in February 2006, NICE published guidance on "Improving outcomes for people with skin tumours, including melanoma". This guidance includes recommendations on the management of patients with suspected precancerous or cancerous skin lesions. It describes PDT including the advantages and disadvantages of this type of treatment and notes that, at present, there is little information available on long-term cure rates. It does however recommend that a number of surgical and non-surgical procedures for the treatment of skin cancer, including PDT, should be available for use by clinicians in relevant teams, subject to locally agreed standards of competence.

There are no plans to ask NICE to produce additional guidance on this treatment.

The main agency through which the Government support medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC is an independent body funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via the Office of Science and Innovation. The Department is not directly funding research on PDT for cancer, but is providing NHS support through the national cancer research network for two trials of PDT for biliary tract cancers. Over 75 per cent. of the Department's total expenditure on health research is devolved to, and managed by, NHS organisations. Details of individual projects, including a number concerned with PDT, can be found on the Department's website on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

Preventive Technology Grant

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the level of the preventive technology grant will be; and how it will be distributed. [68564]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government are investing a total of £80 million over two years from April 2006 through the preventive technology grant. The grant determination and allocations to local authorities were notified in Local Authority Circular LAC(2006)5 issued on 23 March, a copy of which is on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk.

Psoriasis

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what health technology assessment has been carried out of alternative treatments for psoriasis. [69132]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) is currently examining the use of efalizumab and etanercept for the treatment of psoriasis and psoriatic arthritis. Details are available on NICE'S website at www.NICE.org.uk.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many courses of treatment for psoriasis there were in each (a) Government office region and (b) strategic health authority area in the last three years for which figures are available; what the cost per head of treatment was in each year; how many such courses of treatment used (i) corticosteroids, (ii) artificial phototherapy and (iii) heliotherapy in each case; and what the cost was of treatment of psoriasis by each method in each case. [69219]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In 2004-05, there were 8,283 finished consultant episodes, in total 49,015 bed days, recorded for all psoriatic conditions.

Prescription data cannot provide the number, or cost, of treatments for psoriasis with corticosteroids as these drugs are prescribed for other conditions.

Notes:

Finished consultant episode (FCE)

A FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

Section 64 Funding

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will establish contingency plans to mitigate the impact of delays in decisions regarding Section 64 (Health Services and Public Health Act 1968) funding for the voluntary and community sector. [67843]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department understands the implications on voluntary and community sector organisations on the delay in decisions concerning Section 64 funding for 2006-07. For those organisations with second or third year commitments, the Department has organised for them to receive an interim amount equivalent to the first quarter payment, this will enable them to continue projects without interruption.

Self-harm

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she has issued to hospitals on dealing with patients who self-harm on s[illegible] [69341]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) published self-harm clinical guidelines for NHS mental health provider trusts in 2004. The NICE guidelines cover the care which patients who harm themselves can expect to receive from healthcare professionals in and outside hospital settings and what they can expect from their treatment.

However, NICE guidelines do not attempt to explain self-harm or describe the treatment for this in detail. This is why the Department and the National Institute for Mental Health in England are re-evaluating current treatment approaches for self-harm, by undertaking an exploratory exercise on the appropriate management of self-harm. This will focus on adult service users, predominantly female, who self-harm as a coping mechanism or survival strategy. The exercise started in January 2006 and will run until autumn. It will ascertain the level of support at both local and regional levels and the evidence base for adopting a harm-reduction approach. It will also judge the appropriateness (with NICE) of developing guidelines and training to facilitate a harm-minimisation approach amongst service providers.

Serious Case Reviews

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many serious case reviews for vulnerable adults have been carried out; and in how many cases the serious case review involved the murder of a vulnerable adult. [69218]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not collected centrally. There is no statutory requirement for statutory agencies to carry out serious case reviews for vulnerable adults. This is a matter for local decision.

The Department, together with the Home Office, issued "No Secrets" as statutory guidance under Section 7 of the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970. It is designed to help authorities to investigate reports of abuse and develop measures for prevention. It requests local authorities to ensure that local communities are aware of the existence of adult protection procedures and that they know where they can report incidents of abuse.

It provides a complete definition of abuse and a framework for councils to work with the police, the national health service and regulators and other agencies to tackle abuse and prevent it from occurring.

Specialised Commissioning

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her review of specialised commissioning arrangements has included consultation with the Royal College of Speech and Language Therapists. [69313]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The review into commissioning arrangements for specialised services was set up to consider the way specialised health care services as a whole are commissioned and has not looked at individual services or groups of services. It has not specifically consulted the Royal College of Speech and Language Therapists, but over 140 individual written submissions were received from a wide range of clinicians, hospital managers, professional bodies, patients' groups and national health services commissioners.

Transient Families

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent steps she has taken to improve co-operation between the Department and the Welsh Assembly Government on tracking vulnerable adults from transient families; and if she will make a statement. [66940]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Councils locally determine the procedures that ensure information about vulnerable adults, including information relating to risk, is appropriately managed. It is for councils to decide how information, identified through a needs assessment, is to be collected, stored and shared, with due regard to the requirements of the Data Protection Act 1998. The effectiveness of these measures is not monitored centrally.

The social exclusion unit in the Department for Communities and Local Government will publish a report, "Moving On: Reconnecting Frequent Movers", in late spring 2006. The report aims to improve service delivery for people who move frequently. It will include a section on the issues around tracking vulnerable people.

Voluntary Organisations (Compact Agreements)

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with which voluntary organisations the Department has a formal national Compact agreement. [50268]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has no formal national Compact agreements with any individual third sector (voluntary) organisations. The Department does have a strategic agreement with the national health service and the third sector: "Making Partnership Work for Patients, Carers and Service Users" published in September 2004, which is underpinned by and complements the Compact and its codes of good practice.

Wynne Lieberthal

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has received information from the Minister of Defence of the Irish Republic about (a) the agency known as Medicare Solutions based in Chessington, Surrey and (b) Wynne Lieberthal; and if she will make a statement. [49703]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 8 February 2006]: We have no record of a communication from the Minister of Defence of the Irish Republic on these issues.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 10 May 2006

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Deputy Prime Minister

Peter Luff: To ask the Leader of the House if he will make provision for the Deputy Prime Minister to answer oral questions. [69904]

Mr. Straw: Yes. I have today updated the first oral question rota to reflect ministerial responsibilities of the Deputy Prime Minister, a copy of which is available in the Table Office.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

British Poultry (Japanese Ban)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations his Department has made to the Japanese Government following their ban on British poultry products. [68648]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 8 May 2006]: Defra officials continue to liaise with British embassy colleagues in Tokyo, who in turn are in contact with the Japanese authorities about the trade restrictions that were imposed following the recent outbreak of H7N3 in Norfolk.

The Japanese authorities have asked for further information about the nature of the disease, and for details of the remedial action taken. We are doing all we can to have these restrictions lifted as quickly as possible.

Pollution

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Morley and Rothwell (Mr. Colin Challen) of 28 March 2006, Official Report, column 843W, on pollution, what the levels for (a) international aviation and (b) international shipping were in (i) 1990 and (ii) 2004. [68512]

Ian Pearson: Emissions from international aviation and shipping can be estimated from refuelling from bunkers at UK airports and ports (whether by UK or non-UK operators).

Between 1990 and 2004, emissions from aviation fuel use more than doubled whilst emissions from UK shipping bunker fuel use fell by about an eighth, although UK operators purchase most of their fuel outside the UK.

Single Farm Payments

David Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many complaints have been received that payments made under the Single Payment scheme to farmers in the East Midlands have been incorrect. [66634]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The Rural Payments Agency does not have data available on a regional or subject basis, as complaints are not administered in this way.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Arms Supply (Developing Countries)

6. Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on Government policy on supplying arms to developing countries. [69507]

Hilary Benn: The Government believe that all countries are entitled to provide for their own legitimate defence and security needs, including developing countries. All export licence applications are assessed against the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria, including whether the export would seriously hamper sustainable development in the recipient country.

We do however, need better international regulation of the arms trade. That is why the Government are calling for an arms trade treaty covering all conventional weapons.

Nepal

7. Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of British aid to Nepal. [69508]

Mr. Thomas: All DFID projects and programmes in Nepal are subject to regular reviews of their effectiveness not least because of the political instability.

I believe our British aid continues to be effective, given the complexities of working in conditions of conflict and political instability.

A further review is now underway to identify the further opportunities for development given the ceasefires and the restoration of Parliament.

Doha

8. Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent progress has been made in respect of developing countries in the Doha round of trade negotiations. [69509]

Mr. Thomas: The WTO ministerial meeting in Hong Kong in December made just enough progress to keep the current negotiations on track. The most recent end of April deadline to make further substantial progress has been missed. Pascal Lamy has called for a greater sense of urgency in the talks from all delegations. These talks will now move to a more intensive phase in Geneva.

St. Helena

9. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will visit St. Helena to discuss improvements to its economy. [69511]

Mr. Thomas: I have no current plans to visit St. Helena. Whenever possible I meet with island councillors and officials visiting the UK and we discuss a wide range of issues. The development of St. Helena's economy remains a priority and was a key factor in last year's decision to build an airport in St. Helena. We are now working closely with the St. Helena Government to develop appropriate policies to facilitate sound and sustainable economic development.

Darfur

10. Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the Government are taking to alleviate the humanitarian situation in Darfur; and if he will make a statement. [69512]

Hilary Benn: The UK has played a leading role in the international community's response to Darfur, including support to the Abuja peace talks. Since 2003, we have contributed £113 million to humanitarian relief and a further £52 million in support of the African Union mission in Darfur. We continue to press our international donor partners to contribute more. We are also actively lobbying the Government of Sudan to allow full and unrestricted access for humanitarian agencies to the displaced and vulnerable people across Darfur.

Nigeria

11. Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on UK aid to Nigeria. [69514]

Hilary Benn: The UK committed £70 million of development assistance to Nigeria in 2005-06. This will rise to £80 million in 2006-07. DFID's assistance to Nigeria is focussed on supporting the Nigerian Government's own economic growth and poverty reduction strategy; improving governance and the accountability of Government to the Nigerian people; and on contributing directly to improved human development, in the areas of health, education and HIV and AIDS. DFID works closely with the Nigerian Government at federal level and in selected states to achieve these aims and also works in close partnership with other donors in Nigeria, particularly the World Bank.

HIV/AIDS

12. Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what projects his Department is undertaking to tackle HIV/AIDS in the Caribbean and Belize; and if he will make a statement. [69515]

Mr. Thomas: Our spending on HIV/AIDS programmes in the Caribbean will be approximately £3 million over the next three years.

There are three key elements to our HIV/AIDS programme:

tackling stigma and discrimination which experts agree is the key driving force behind the regional epidemic; getting the private sector more engaged with the issues;

ensuring that resources available to the region for HIV/AIDS are effectively used.

Environmental Sustainability

13. Ms Celia Barlow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the integration of policies on climate change and environmental sustainability into his Department's work. [69516]

Mr. Thomas: A new Policy Paper "DFID's Approach to the Environment", published in February 2006, describes how we integrate the environment into our work with developing countries and other donors. The main focus is on how environment contributes to poverty reduction in developing countries.

Afghanistan

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the impact of the security situation in Afghanistan on the alternative livelihoods programme. [69481]

Hilary Benn: The successful delivery of alternative livelihood programmes is highly dependent on the ability of organisations doing the delivery on the ground being able to operate safely. Security in many parts of Afghanistan is improving, particularly in central, northern and western areas and further progress can be made by strengthening the effectiveness of the Afghan police and criminal justice system. However security remains a particular challenge in the south and east of the country, where the insurgency is most active.

Continuing threats to the safety of Afghan and international staff have meant that some non-governmental organisations and international contractors are finding it increasingly difficult to operate in some parts of the country. The majority of DFID's livelihoods programme is channelled through the national priority programmes of the Afghan Government. This helps to reduce some of the security risks by using local contractors, but there have been a number of attacks on implementing partners of these national programmes. Although attacks have increased, so far they have not caused widespread suspension of alternative livelihoods programmes.

Helmand province will be a particularly challenging place in which to deliver programmes that will support the development of alternative livelihoods. DFID is currently designing a large multi-year programme to support rural development in Helmand through the national priority programmes of the Afghan Government. This support will only be successful if implementing partners are willing to work in the province. The UK military deployment to Helmand should help to facilitate a greater Afghan Government presence in the province, and improve the capacity of the police and the Afghan National Army to provide the necessary security for development partners to operate effectively.

Burma

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding he is making available to assist the humanitarian effort for internally displaced people in (a) Burma and (b) the Karen State; and what funds he has given to non-governmental organisations to monitor these aid efforts. [68655]

Mr. Thomas: Within DFID's programme in Burma, £500,000 has provisionally been allocated in this financial year to the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), of which approximately 80 per cent. is attributable to work with conflict-affected populations. In addition, several other projects funded by DFID which provide assistance through local non-governmental organisations (NGOs) (for example, to reduce the incidence of communicable diseases, or to enhance food security) include internally displaced people among their recipients.

All of the funding allocated to NGOs implementing projects on behalf of DFID includes an element for monitoring and evaluation. Various projects (including those of the ICRC and those working to reduce the incidence of communicable diseases or to enhance food security) include Karen State within their coverage, but as their funding is not disaggregated by state, it is not possible to provide specific figures for Karen State.

Education Millennium Goal

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what contribution the UK has made to meeting the millennium development goal on education; and if he will make a statement. [69510]

Hilary Benn: Progress towards the goals of achieving universal primary education and eliminating gender disparity in primary and secondary education by 2015 has been made globally over the past decade, but the pace is too slow.

The Government will spend some £8.5 billion in support of education over the next 10 years. This compares to a figure of under £2 billion over the past 10 years. This long-term commitment will provide Governments with predictable funding against which they can prepare ambitious 10 year investment plans to achieve the education goals. DFID will continue to implement its girls education strategy, launched in 2005.

Palestinian Authority

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assurances he is seeking from the Palestinian Authority which would allow the full aid programme to be restored. [69513]

Hilary Benn: On 30 March, the Quartet (comprising the United States, European Union, the United Nations and Russia) noted that the new Palestinian Government had not yet complied with the principles of non-violence, recognition of Israel's right to exist and commitment to peace agreements. Without progress against these principles, the UK Government cannot provide support to the Palestinian Cabinet or its Ministries.

Should the Palestinian Government comply with the Quartet's conditions, DFID would resume its support to the Palestinian Authority. Assistance to Palestinian refugees through the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) will continue, and the Quartet agreed yesterday that a funding mechanism should be developed to support Palestinian basic needs. DFID is working closely with international partners to take this forward.

PRIME MINISTER

Kyoto Targets

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 8 March 2006, Official Report, column 815W, what the evidential basis was for his statement that the Government will meet their Kyoto targets. [68078]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made on 28 March 2006, Official Report, columns 57-58WS by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mrs. Beckett) on "Climate Change. The UK Programme 2006".

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on how many occasions he has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67518]

Mr. Dhanda: Paragraph 5.28 of the Ministerial Code sets out the rules on the registration of hospitality. All ministerial hospitality is conducted in accordance with this.

Departmental Staff

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) women and (b) men are employed in the Department; what the average pay was for (i) women and (ii) men in the Department in (A) 1997 and (B) 2006; what women's average pay is as a percentage of men's average pay; and how many (1) women and (2) men the Department employed in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [67784]

Mr. Dhanda: The Cabinet Office collects and publishes annually statistical information on the Civil Service by Department. The number of (a) women and (b) men employed in my Department is available in the Library and on the Civil Service website at:

www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/employment/index.asp.

My Department was formed in 2001. The median pay for (i) women and (ii) men in my Department in (A) 2001 and (B) 2006 is shown in the following table.

	Women	Men
2001	18,210	21,720
2006	25,110	27,720

Note:
The median pay in this table is gross salary rounded to the nearest 10 and includes London and national salaries. For part time staff, the full time equivalent salary has been used.

Women's median pay is 90.6 per cent. of men's median pay.

The number of (1) women and (2) men employed by my Department in each of the last five years, broken down by grade level, is shown in the following table.

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65208]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department runs the following main URL domains:

Note that these include a number of cross-Whitehall websites which the Department runs on behalf of Department collaborations. Also note that this list excludes web addresses that are run by Non-departmental Public bodies, Department agencies or which are redirected to those listed above.

The Department does not keep a list of the reports placed online by month. This is because the technical infrastructure to enable the Department to do so is not yet in place. However, the capability of determining a list of reports placed on the website by month for all Department websites will be delivered over 2007/08.

The majority of reports are available in print form, and placed on the website in a PDF format.

Disabled People

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress his Department has made in fulfilling its statutory role as a public body to promote the rights of disabled people. [65815]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department is fully committed to equality and diversity. The Disability Discrimination Act 2005 places new duties on public authorities to promote equality for disabled people, 'the Disability Equality Duty.'

Through the Act, we, like many public bodies, have an obligation to publish a Disability Equality Scheme every three years. Our Equality and Diversity Unit has begun work on the Department's first scheme, to be published later this year. Policy officials will be undertaking a full departmental-wide examination of our policies and functions in relation to disability and other equality issues. Action plans will be produced to address all issues and these will be monitored and reviewed through the annual business planning process. The scheme will be published on the Department's website. This information will contribute towards preparations for the Secretary of State's report on progress, due in December 2008. My Department has also provided support on implementing the new duties to a number of other public authorities including schools and other public bodies. Further information on this and other support is shown as follows.

Examples of DfES support for other authorities include:

Schools and early years:

The Department for Education and Skills is holding a series of events in May and June to launch the new resource "Implementing the Disability Discrimination Act in schools and early years settings" to help schools and local authorities implement the reasonable adjustments duty and planning duty they have under Part 4 of the Disability Discrimination Act by providing:

An explanation of the DDA duties and their relationship to the statutory SEN framework;

a DVD resource filmed in over 40 schools illustrating how schools have made reasonable adjustments to prevent discrimination against disabled pupils and increase their access to education; plus supporting written materials;

templates for schools and local authorities to use in reviewing and revising their statutory accessibility plans; guidance for local authorities on increasing access to early years settings for very young disabled children.

The resource will help schools and local authorities to make adjustments for their disabled pupils both in the short and longer term by improving access to all aspects of school life. The guidance identifies how schools and local authorities' access planning arrangements will help compliance with the Disability Equality Duty.

The Disability Rights Commission will give a presentation at the events providing an overview of the duties schools and local authorities will have under the Disability Equality Duty. They will also make participants aware of the sixth section that will be added to the resource in the autumn as part of the non statutory guidance being developed for schools by the Disability Rights Commission on the new Disability Equality Duty.

DfES's work with DRC/LSC/FE/HE in preparing for implementation of the new disability duty:

DfES has been participating in a series of round-table workshops over the past year with the Disability Rights Commission (DRC), Learning and Skills Council, Higher Education Funding Council for England and external partners in the Further and Higher Education sectors, to prepare for the forthcoming public sector duty to promote disability equality. DRC plans to publish guidance for the FHE sector in May.

LSC's existing statutory duty to promote disability equality:

Section 14 of the Learning and Skills Act 2000, requires the Learning and Skills Council (LSC), in carrying out all of its functions, to have due regard to the promotion of equality of opportunity in terms of disability, race and gender. In addition, section 13 requires the LSC to pay particular regard to the needs of young people and adults with learning difficulties and disabilities, when performing its duties to secure facilities and provide resources for education and training.

DfES are working with the LSC to run an equalities impact assessment across the skills strategy programme. This will include disability. We aim to complete this by the end of October 2006.

Educational Psychology

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he will publish the report of the fundamental review of the function of educational psychologists announced in February 2005. [69688]

Mr. Dhanda: The research contract for the review of the functions and contribution of educational psychologists in England and Wales was awarded to a research team from the School of Education, University of Manchester.

The research team expect to deliver their report to the Department later this month. A date for publication will be determined once we have had the opportunity to consider the report.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many educational psychologist posts are unfilled; and what estimate he has made of the likely ratio of trained educational psychologists to posts over the next five years; [69582]

(2) many educational psychologists have been trained in England in each of the past 10 years; and what the cost of their training was in each year; [69583]

(3) what recent discussions he has had with the British Psychological Society on the funding of the training of educational and clinical psychologists; [69584]

(4) what the cost to his Department of the training of an educational psychologist (a) was in 2005 and (b) is expected to be in each of the next three years; [69585]

(5) what steps he has taken to ensure that local authorities provide sufficient resources for the training of educational psychologists. [69586]

Mr. Dhanda: The full-time equivalent number of educational psychologists in post in local authorities in England as at January 2005 is 2,156, compared to 1,768 in January 1997. There were 100 vacant full-time permanent posts as at January 2005.

Educational psychologists are employed by local authorities and it is for those authorities to determine how many to employ in light of their assessment of local needs and available resources, and to plan for future needs. The Department makes no manpower planning estimates for this group of local employees, nor do we collect centrally information on the number of EPs trained or the cost of EP training, funding for which is not provided by DfES.

There have been no recent discussions between the Department and the British Psychological Society on funding of EP training. Questions relating to clinical psychologists are for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Heath.

Missing Children

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what steps his Department has taken in relation to the recommendations of the social exclusion unit's report on runaway children; [67605]

(2) if he will publish his Department's strategy for safeguarding runaway and missing children; [67607]

(3) what steps he is taking to safeguard the health of runaway and missing children. [68402]

Mr. Dhanda: The key recommendations in the social exclusion unit's (SEU) report on 'Young Runaways' were that young people at risk of running away should know who they could talk to about their problems, that local services needed to work closer together to make sure young people got help, and that a safety net of community-based emergency accommodation was needed for those who did run away.

The findings of the SEU report, which was published in 2002, influenced the wider Government strategy on children's services, which was set out in the Green Paper 'Every Child Matters' (2003). It is through the 'Every Child Matters: Change for Children' programme currently being taken forward by local authorities, and including the reforms set out in the Green Paper 'Youth Matters', that the Government are promoting measures that respond to the SEU report.

'Change for Children' aims to help local services respond to the full range of children's needs—including their health, their safety and their economic well-being. It is particularly concerned with improving targeted support for those children most at risk of negative outcomes, such as those associated with running away or going missing from home. The programme, drawing on the Children Act 2004 reforms, is enabling local areas to improve integrated working arrangements by establishing multi-disciplinary teams, while adopting a lead professional model—someone who is a single point of contact for a young person who can co-ordinate a package of support when multiple needs are present requiring help from various sources. Improved integrated working at a local level is being accompanied by enhanced information sharing between services, leading to earlier identification of children's needs. This in turn allows young people to be referred to the right source of support, at the right time. New joint inspection arrangements will judge the effectiveness and co-ordination of such local provision.

We have also run six projects to test out how best to provide safe, flexible and responsive community-based services that can be easily incorporated into mainstream children's services. We will disseminate the lessons learnt from these to local authorities later this year.

Skills For Life

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many employees in his Department have attended Skills for Life courses; and how many have been assessed as requiring such courses. [68636]

Mr. Dhanda: Over the last 12 months, 14 members of staff in the Department have been assessed as requiring a Skills for Life course and all have attended one through the Department's learning and development unit. In addition, there will be individuals who have undertaken basic skills development through other routes, or who took part in departmental activities organised locally that incorporate elements of basic skills for which records are not held centrally.

Young Carers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of young carers undertaking supervised study in excess of 21 hours each week. [69391]

Mr. Dhanda: This information is not collected centrally.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Account Filing

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many companies were fined by Companies House in the last 10 years for late filing of accounts. [68714]

Margaret Hodge: The number of penalties issued to companies by Companies House in the last 10 years is as follows:

	Number
2005-06	201,889
2004-05	190,946
2003-04	174,013
2002-03	157,426
2001-02	153,624
2000-01	142,235
1999-2000	124,745
1998-99	107,635
1997-98	97,234
1996-97	85,006
Total	1,434,753

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much revenue Companies House received in the last 10 years through fines for late filing of company accounts; and if he will make a statement. [68715]

Margaret Hodge: Companies House does not receive any revenue through fines for late filing of company accounts as it is all paid into the consolidated fund to the Treasury.

However, over the last 10 years the value of penalties issued by Companies House was as follows:

2005-06	42.82
2004-05	40. 86
2003-04	37.24
2002-03	34.44
2001-02	32.63
2000-01	30.57
1999-2000	26.85
1998-99	22.71
1997-98	21.94
1996-97	19.36
Total	309.42

As a result of appeals, company dissolutions, etc. not all the penalties issued by Companies House are paid. Over the last 10 years they have therefore remitted to the Treasury the following amounts:

	£ million
2005-06	30.3
2003-04	27.8
2002-03	25.1
2001-02	23.7
2000-01	25.2
1999-2000	21.8
1998-99	19.2
1997-98	18.0
1996-97	15.1
Total	238.2

British Nuclear Group

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on plans to privatise the British Nuclear Group. [69332]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has had a number of parliamentary questions and some Members have forwarded letters from constituents asking for an explanation of the rationale behind the sale. The unions have also expressed their views and officials have discussed the sale with these and other stakeholders. A number of potential bidders have approached the Department to express interest in the business and some have sought clarification of how the sale will be operated.

British Summer Time

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many representations he has received on adopting British summer time throughout the year in the last 12 months; and how many (a) supported and (b) opposed such a change. [68584]

Jim Fitzpatrick: In the past 12 months, the Department has received 77 representations on the question of adopting British summer time throughout the year.

These representations reflect the strong divergence of opinion on this issue, which suggests that the present situation is a satisfactory compromise between those who prefer lighter mornings and those who prefer lighter evenings.

Company Law Reform Bill

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list organisations from which his Department has received representations on the Company Law Reform Bill since November 2005; and whether each representation was made (a) in a meeting, (b) in writing and (c) through another method in each case. [68087]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 3 May 2006]: There has been extensive discussion and consultation on issues on the Company Law Reform Bill over some seven years during the work of the Company Law Review, the publication of the White Paper and the subsequent consultation on particular clauses in the Bill. A formal consultation, which concerned narrative reporting, closed on 24 March 2006. In a written reply to parliamentary question No. 67492 the Government's decisions in the light of the consultation were set out. A list of the organisations who made representations is available on the DTI website (www.dti.gov.uk).

We have continued to liaise closely on the detail of the Bill with professional and other expert groups. Ministers and officials have received numerous representations in writing and engaged in meetings on various aspects of the Bill, from a wide range of interested parties. It would be disproportionately costly to list these representations in detail.

Electricity Generation

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding has been given by (a) his Department and (b) the Engineering Physical Sciences Research Council to the development of (i) molten salt reactors, (ii) very-high-temperature reactors, (iii) supercritical-water-cooled reactors, (iv) gas-cooled fast reactors and (v) sodium-cooled fast reactors to generate electricity in each year since 1997. [69374]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The Department has provided no funding to these technologies since 1997.

Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council:

The EPSRC invests in basic, strategic and applied research in energy generation, transmission and utilisation. The Council's total expenditure on nuclear fission research in financial years 1997-98 to 2005-06 is given in the following table:

Financial Year	Expenditure (£)
1998-99	81,228
1999-2000	61,793
2000-01	127,562
2001-02	324,879
2002-03	307,195
2003-04	212,239
2005-06	951,643

The recently announced £6.1 million "Keeping the Nuclear Option Open" research consortium, led by Imperial College London, will be undertaking research to both underpin and specifically address the Generation IV research agenda. In part as a result of this recent major investment, EPSRC's expenditure on nuclear power research in 2006-07 is projected to rise to in excess of £1.7 million.

EPSRC is unable to identify from its records specific investment in a number of the various Generation IV technologies. EPSRC has recently funded a research project at the University of Manchester on high-temperature gas-cooled reactors—expenditure on this grant, which is included in the total figures stated above, was £13,505 in 2005-06 and is projected to be £14,849 in 2006-07.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding has been given by (a) his Department and (b) the Physical Sciences Research Council to the development of (i) liquid metal fast breeder reactors and (ii) lead-cooled fast reactors to generate electricity in each year since 1997. [69375]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has provided no funding to these technologies since 1997.

Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council:

The EPSRC invests in basic, strategic and applied research in energy generation, transmission and utilisation. The Council's total expenditure on nuclear fission research in financial years 1997-98 to 2005-06 is given in the following table:

2005-06	951,643

The recently announced £6.1 million "Keeping the Nuclear Option Open" research consortium, led by Imperial College London, will be undertaking research to both underpin and specifically address the Generation IV research agenda. In part as a result of this recent major investment, EPSRC's expenditure on nuclear power research in 2006-07 is projected to rise to in excess of £1.7 million.

Energy Provision

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average energy cost was of power generation from (a) nuclear, (b) oil, (c) gas, (d) coal and (e) renewables in each of the past 30 years at today's prices (i) excluding and (ii) including public subsidy. [68030]

Malcolm Wicks: Figures for energy costs of generation since privatisation of the electricity industry are commercially confidential. Pre-privatisation figures may be available in the Central Electricity Generating Board (CEGB) Yearbooks but can be collated only at disproportionate cost.

EU Extremely Large Telescope

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made of the impact of (a) light pollution and (b) aircraft vapour trails on the location of the EU Extremely Large Telescope. [67315]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The European Extremely Large Telescope (ELT) project is still at the design stage and several possible locations are being surveyed. Many factors are being taken into consideration before a final decision is made as to where such a telescope should be located; including the extent of light pollution and the proximity to high-volume flight paths.

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which organisations are involved in the European Extremely Large Telescope project; and in which country each is based. [67317]

Jim Fitzpatrick: A total of 27 organisations are currently involved in the EU Framework Programme 6 Design Study phase of the European Extremely Large Telescope, led by the European Southern Observatory.

In the UK, the work is led by the UK Astronomy Technology Centre (Edinburgh), with support from the Universities of Durham, Oxford and UCL.

EU Manufacturing

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the levels of competition in manufacturing across the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [68738]

Margaret Hodge: The Government make periodic assessments of the level of competition facing particular manufacturing sectors across the European Union. These assessments include the degree of price competition among firms trading from within the EU and the effects of competition from imports from outside the EU. The Government are fully aware of the strong competition UK manufacturers face from European Union partners, both from Western European economies and lower cost Eastern European countries. We are taking action through the Manufacturing Strategy to promote the development of a successful UK manufacturing base with value added operations in order to help companies to respond to these challenges.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to support the manufacturing industry and promote UK exports. [68741]

Margaret Hodge: The Government support our manufacturing industry as we set out in our Manufacturing Strategy. Our aim is to help manufacturers in the UK move to high value added production through the application of science and innovation, best practice, encouragement of high value investment and by developing a highly skilled labour force. We set up the Manufacturing Advisory Service in 2002, and we estimate that it has generated £213 million of added value throughout the UK. The Manufacturing Forum monitors and drives the delivery of the Manufacturing Strategy throughout the UK.

Support for UK exporters is delivered through UK Trade and Investment (UKTI), the Government organisation that supports UK companies trading internationally and overseas companies seeking to locate in the UK. In 2005, nearly 2,000 companies signed up for UKTI's flagship "Passport to Export" development programme helping them prepare to trade internationally, and nearly 6,000 companies were helped to move into overseas markets new to them. Independent research shows that £65 million spent on four UKTI key trade development schemes generated £1.1 billion additional net benefit by enabling over 6,000 businesses, including manufacturers, to upgrade their international marketing strategies.

Fuel Cell Technology

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what help his Department makes available to companies researching hydrogen fuel cell technology for motor vehicle use through a greater understanding of nuclear energy. [69618]

Malcolm Wicks: The DTI commissioned two reports in 2004 in relation to hydrogen: "Hydrogen Energy Support in the UK" and "A Strategic Framework for Hydrogen Energy Activity in the UK". These reports have been published on the Department's website. The second report identified six potential hydrogen energy chains for the use of hydrogen as a transport fuel. One route is to produce hydrogen from nuclear generation.

On 15 June 2005, I announced the Government's response to the second report "A Strategic Framework for Hydrogen Energy Activity in the UK" which included a funding package of £15 million over four years for a UK wide hydrogen and fuel cell demonstration programme. The details of the demonstration scheme are currently being developed, and requires EC state aid approval.

Home Working

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under what legislation employees are granted a right to work from home; if he has any plans to introduce further legislation; and if he will make a statement. [69631]

Jim Fitzpatrick: In spring 2005 there were around 3.1 million people in the UK who worked mainly in their own home, or in different places using home as a base. There is no legislation which gives employees a right to work from home, however the Government encourage employers and employees to agree suitable working patterns.

In April 2003 we introduced the right to request flexible working, which includes working from home, for parents of children under six and disabled children under 18. The Work and Families Bill, currently before Parliament, extends this right to carers of adults.

The employment provisions (part 2) of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 require employers to consider reasonable adjustments to job application or selection processes, and to premises, practices or procedures, if these would otherwise put a disabled person at a substantial disadvantage. This might include allowing a disabled person to work from home if such an adjustment was reasonable in all the circumstances of the case.

There are no plans for further legislation relating to working from home.

Miners' Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 26 April 2006, Official Report, column 1125W, on noise-induced hearing loss (mining), what assessment he has made of the variations in fixed costs between these agreements; what the reasons were for the decision to refuse costs for certain solicitors since 2005; and which of the fixed agreements have been in place since 2001. [67771]

Malcolm Wicks: The variations between agreements have arisen as a result of those agreements having been individually and commercially negotiated. Costs are disputed whenever they appear unreasonably high and the reasons for each dispute will vary. The agreements are commercially confidential so I cannot provide details.

Agreements with the following solicitors have been in place unchanged since 2001:

Ben Hoare Bell, Brian Mcardle, Browells, Campbell Smith, Comes, Drurmmond Miller, Gorman Hamilton, Gorvin Smith Fort, Graysons, Hickmotts, Ingrams, Kidd & Spoor Harper, Lathams, Lopian Wagner, Marrons, Mcardles, McConville O'Neill, Meloy Whittle Robinson, Morisons, Mortons, O H Parsons, Oxley & Coward, Pannone & Partners, Raleys, Randell Saunders, Saffmans, Simpson Miller, Thompsons, Watson Burton.

Natural Environment Research Council

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what the Natural Environment Research Council science budget allocation was for each centre in each year since 1997; [66367]

(2) what the change in budget will be for the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology after the Natural Environment Research Council proposed restructuring plans. [66368]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Science Budget allocation to the Natural Environment Research Council (NERC) has doubled since 1997, demonstrating our commitment to maintaining the quality of environmental research in the UK. Following consultation with stakeholders, NERC has announced that it will implement plans to ensure that the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH) can contribute to UK environmental science on a sustainable basis in the future.

CEH is wholly-owned by NERC, which determines its budget each year. I shall ask the Chief Executive of NERC to write to the hon. Member concerning his requests.

Post Office

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has commissioned a study on the competitiveness of the Post Office in handling (a) television licence purchases and (b) other payment transactions. [67906]

Jim Fitzpatrick: No. The decision not to renew the television licence contract with Post Office Limited was a commercial one made by the BBC, following a competitive tender exercise. Similarly, decisions relating to Government contracts for handling other payment transactions will be made by respective Government departments or agencies after carrying out competitive tendering exercises to establish best value for money.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what value of business the Post Office Card Account provided to post offices in (a) Leeds, (b) Yorkshire and (c) the UK in 2005-06. [68534]

Jim Fitzpatrick [holding answer 9 May 2006]: Revenue received by Post Office Ltd for managing Post Office Card Account are the subject of commercially confidential contracts with DWP.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Department has to compensate those post offices which will be adversely affected by the proposed closure of the Post Office Card Account. [68861]

Jim Fitzpatrick [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The future of the post office network and future revenue will depend on many factors including what accounts, other than the Post Office Card Accounts, will be made available after 2010. Post Office Ltd and the Department for Work and Pensions are currently discussing the various options.

Power Supplies

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many interruptions to power supply from (a) nuclear, (b) oil, (c) gas, (d) coal and (e) renewables generation there have been in each of the past 30 years. [67824]

Malcolm Wicks: There have been no power supply interruptions due to a shortfall in generation leading to an imbalance between supply and demand over the last 30 years.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the (a) total budget and (b) administrative costs were of each of the regional development agencies in 2005-06; and what the estimated costs are for 2006-07. [66781]

Margaret Hodge: The 2005-06 figures for the total budget and administration costs for the nine regional development agencies are set out in the first table and the indicative budget and estimated administration costs for 2006-07 are set out in the second table.

The London Development Agencies administration budget is subject to the approval of their draft 2006-07 corporate plan by the Mayor.

Renewable Energy

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent by Government on (a) research into and (b) grants and subsidies to promote renewable energy in each year between 1979 and 1997. [65832]

Malcolm Wicks: It would entail disproportionate cost to identify how much was spent by Government on research, grants and subsidies to promote renewable energy in each year between 1979 and 1997. However, information on how much was spent by Government on renewable energy research, development, dissemination and demonstration, between 1989 and 1997, was published by my hon. Friend, the then Energy Minister to the hon. Member for Lewes, on 24 March 2000, Official Report, column 715 W.

The statistics indicate that investment in renewable energy remained broadly unchanged between 1989 and 1996 at under £26 million a year. This compares to Government spending of around £500 million in renewables and other low carbon technologies between 2002 and 2008. The Chancellor also recently announced in the Budget a further £50 million, on top of the £30 million that I had previously announced, for the Low Carbon Building Programme, which supports microgeneration and energy efficiency measures.

Research and Development

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, how much funding his Department has given to research and development via (a) grants, (b) loans and (c) incentive schemes since 1997. [68546]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The net DTI expenditure, leaving aside the research councils, between 1997 and 2006 on R and D via (a) 'grants' represents a cost of £2,490.8 million, (b) 'loans' are not currently used by the Department to fund R and D, (c) 'incentives' in the form of R and D tax credits are owned by the Treasury and as such do not represent an expense on the Department.

Severn Barrage Project

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the merits of a reappraisal of the Severn barrage project as part of the Government's energy review. [67242]

Malcolm Wicks: We are aware of the potential of a Severn barrage scheme, the most recent study of the case for a reappraisal carried out by the Severn Tidal Power Group (available at www.dti.gov.uk/energy/renewables/publications/Severnbarrage.shtml) being published in 2003.

The Department is currently part way through an energy review that will consider all options and opportunities for ensuring we meet our energy goals in the medium to long-term.

Sexual Harassment (Tribunal Rulings)

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many employment tribunal rulings on cases of constructive dismissal found in favour of the claimants where allegations of sexual harassment of a subordinate were upheld in each of the last five years. [67961]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Employment Tribunals Service does not record separately figures for claims which specifically relate to constructive dismissal, nor does it hold separately records of claims where allegations of sexual harassment are made.

Small Shops

Mr. Malik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to promote the economic viability of small local convenience shops. [65976]

Margaret Hodge: DTI's role is to drive up UK productivity and competitiveness. A key part of that work involves creating the conditions for the success of businesses that help to generate the UK's wealth. The support we provide enhances and encourages innovation, enterprise, best practice and investment. We assess its effectiveness in achieving our strategic goals through rigorous monitoring, analysis and evaluation.

Small local convenience stores are eligible for the same range of support measures as other small businesses. These include a range of grants, funds, loan guarantee schemes and advice available through Business Link. In addition, we ensure that representative bodies of smaller retailers are involved with our key retail fora: Retail Policy Forum (better regulation); Retail Innovation Group (identification and exploitation of good practice); and have been invited to be part of the steering group for the fledgling Regional Retail Strategy that is exploring good practice in working with retail at regional/local level. We also ensure that the main trade associations representing small shops are notified directly about relevant public consultations.

Sub-post Offices

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many sub-post offices have closed in Staffordshire since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [68351]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I understand from Post Office Ltd. that information on the Post Office® branch network has historically only been held at a national level. More recently records have been maintained at a Government office region and at parliamentary constituency level and this level of data commenced from the end of 2001-02.

The number of post offices in the constituencies that cover the Staffordshire county area is as follows:

Number of Post Office® branches[1]

	Staffordshire
2001-02	305
2002-03	297
2003-04	263
2004-05	229

Uranium

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has made an assessment of the future security of supply of uranium. [69476]

Malcolm Wicks: In the context of the energy review, DTI is considering a range of assessments of the future security of supply of uranium, including the recent analysis by the Sustainable Development Commission.

In addition, a comprehensive report of uranium supply and production is published by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), the Nuclear Energy Agency (NEA) and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)—"Uranium 2003: Resources, Production and Demand" (The Red Book). An updated version of this report is due for publication on 22 May 2006.

Vehicle Licensing Tax

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment the Government have made of the impact that their policy of encouraging drivers to renew their vehicle licensing tax by (a) telephone and (b) the internet is having on rural post offices. [68387]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Decisions relating to vehicle licensing are the responsibility of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA). Post Office Ltd. continues to act as an agent for the DVLA with 95 per cent. of the population within two miles of a Motor Vehicle Licence issuing office.

Government continue to broaden the way that they offer their services to reflect a changing world and to respond to the new ways that the public wish to access these services. The Post Office is one of a number of ways to deliver Government services and still has an important role to play. We want to see a Post Office network that meets the needs of today and the future and not those of 20 or 30 years ago and have made an unprecedented investment of over £2 billion in the network since 1999, including £750 million to help maintain the rural network to 2008.

TRANSPORT

A1

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average traffic levels were at each interchange of the A1 Western bypass from North Gosforth to the New Tyne crossing, Newcastle in each of the last five years. [69573]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table provides the average annual daily totals (AADT) of vehicles using the A1 between the interchange of the A1 with the A1056, north of Gosforth, to the A1 interchange with the A694, to the south of the New Tyne crossing.

DIRECTS Report

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place a copy of the report into the DIRECTS project in the Library. [69566]

Dr. Ladyman: The data collection phase of the DIRECTS (Demonstration of Interoperable Road user End-to-end Charging and Telematics Systems) project concluded at the end of March 2006. I expect the analysis and conclusions will be published in the 4th quarter of 2006 and a copy of the report will be made available to the Library and published in the usual way on the Department's website.

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps are undertaken within his Department to ensure that women are obtaining equal pay to men doing work of equal value. [65847]

Derek Twigg: The Department of Transport (Centre) and each of the Department's agencies are individual business units. Each unit is an equal opportunity employer.

Each unit has carried out a full equal pay review for staff below the senior civil service within the last three years with further full reviews to be undertaken this year. If any disparities are identified these are to be investigated and rectified accordingly. Pay systems are reviewed on an annual basis.

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people in his Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [67990]

Derek Twigg: The following numbers of DfT staff have been enabled to work away from the office over the last three years:-

	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
DfT (Central)	384	292	477
DVLA	49	94	188
HA	59	66	64
MCGA	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—
VOSA	2	2	2
VGA	30	40	46
GCDA	6	6	8

The figures represent those enabled to work away from the office by means of remote access IT links. This will include home working, but also working from other official locations. The Department and its agencies have a flexible approach in helping staff meet work life balance commitments. Although the Department does not have a formal home working policy, it has other policies which cover a variety of working patterns, such as flexible working hours, staggered hours, part-time working and job share. Requests to work from home on an ad hoc basis are subject to line agreement.

Kingston Park Shopping Centre

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Highways Agency has issued article 14 directions on the proposed redevelopment and expansion of the Kingston Park shopping centre in Newcastle. [69574]

Dr. Ladyman: Newcastle city council have not yet consulted the Highways Agency on this application as part of the planning process. However the Agency has asked for a copy of the relevant Transport Assessment to enable them to review the proposals and any potential impact on the trunk road network. This review will determine whether an article 14 direction is required.

Ministerial Cars

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many ministerial cars are used in each Government Department; what the cost was of maintaining ministerial cars, broken down by Department, in the last year for which figures are available; who supplies ministerial cars; and what discounts the Department receives in relation to the (a) purchase and (b) hire of ministerial cars. [68885]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Wimbledon (Stephen Hammond) on 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 701W. This information was correct as of 4 May. Information on the cost of maintaining each ministerial car is not readily available and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

The Government Car and Despatch Agency is responsible for providing ministerial cars and drivers. Vehicles are purchased through a number of Government-wide contracts in accordance with relevant European and domestic procurement legislation. The contracts provide for a range of discounts, but it would not be in the public interest to disclose commercially sensitive details.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has carried out of the (a) emission levels, (b) fuel economy, (c) cost and (d) safety of ministerial cars. [68886]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government Car and Despatch Agency has responsibility for the provision of ministerial cars. In establishing whether a particular car is suitable for ministerial use the Agency must satisfy me that it is achieving value for money, that it meets with the Prime Minister's guidance "Travel by Ministers" and that the Agency complies with relevant procurement legislation. The Agency periodically evaluates a range of cars against a number of criteria including emission levels, fuel economy, cost and residual value, and safety. The last review, carried out in 2005, resulted in the provision of either the diesel powered Jaguar XJ or the hybrid electric/petrol Toyota Prius for Cabinet Ministers, and either the diesel powered Vauxhall Vectra or the Toyota Prius for other Ministers.

Railways

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many prosecutions have been brought by the British Transport police during the past 12 months for antisocial behaviour on the railway network; and if he will make a statement. [65429]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The British Transport police (BTP) have informed me that between 1 April 2005 and 31 March 2006 the total number of offenders prosecuted for antisocial behaviour offences recorded by the force numbered 5,567. This figure excludes graffiti offences as they are recorded as 'criminal damage' offences on the justice administration system (JAS). During the same period the BTP secured 124 antisocial behaviour orders.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the train operating companies that have requested compensation payments for losses incurred as a result of industrial action from (a) the Strategic Rail Authority and (b) the Department for Transport in each month since 2003. [58390]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 20 March 2006]: The information for each train operating company is a matter of commercial confidentiality and it would be inappropriate to make it available.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the train operating companies which requested compensation payments from (a) the Strategic Rail Authority and (b) his Department for losses incurred as a result of industrial action in each month since January 2003. [65320]

Derek Twigg: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I have given him today [UIN 58390].

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent research has been conducted into the economic value of the cross-country rail network; and if he will publish the findings. [63367]

Derek Twigg: The Department follows the new approach to transport appraisal (NATA) which includes socio-economic benefits. The NATA guidelines are available on webtag. (www.webtag.org.uk)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the passenger growth on the Tamworth to Birmingham railway line was in each year between 1994 and 2005. [68357]

Derek Twigg: Information between 1994 and 2005 is not available in the form requested. The percentage change in the number of passengers travelling to and from the named stations is shown in the following tables (this information does not include passengers joining or alighting between these stations or making journeys beyond):

(a) Tamworth to Birmingham

Year[1]	Percentage passenger growth
2002-03	1.9
2003-04	16.7
2004-05	4.8
2005-06	-3.0

(b) Birmingham to Tamworth

Year[1]	Percentage passenger growth
2002-2003	27.1
2003-2004	15.0
2004-2005	-3.9
2005-2006	12.2

[1] Rail reporting year which is April to March.

Sea Defences

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to attract resources from the European Regional Development Fund to reinstate the old Southern Railway route in Devon in the event of a failure of railway sea defences at Dawlish. [69130]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 9 May 2006]: It falls to Network Rail to continue to monitor the likelihood of risks to the safety and operational integrity of the railway in the Dawlish area, arising from possible increases in sea levels associated with climate change; and to propose further appropriate measures of protection from flooding and coastal erosion.

Network Rail advises me that it does not believe the railway sea defences in the Dawlish area are likely to fail in the foreseeable future. Were this to become more likely, Network Rail would identify and consider a range of options to address any problems, taking account of value for money and affordability.

Stockport Station

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passenger trains have used platform 0 at Stockport railway station since it became operational. [67254]

Derek Twigg: Since January 2006 17 trains have used platform 0 each Sunday to accommodate engineering works. Usage of the platform will increase from the June 2006 timetable change date.

Transport Regulations

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the operation of Road Vehicle (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 1971; and what recent representations he has received about the operation of these regulations. [69637]

Dr. Ladyman: The Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 1971 have been superseded by the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 2002. Recent representations in relation to those regulations have focussed on the release of information from the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's (DVLA) vehicle register.

Regulation 27(1)(e) of the 2002 regulations requires that DVLA release particulars held on its vehicle register to anyone who can demonstrate 'reasonable cause' for having the particulars made available to him. The term 'reasonable cause' is not defined in the legislation and each request is considered on its merits.

These regulations consolidate legislation that has been in force and working efficiently for over 40 years. However, when the provisions were originally introduced they did not anticipate the introduction of electronic databases, the large number of vehicles on the roads, or the range of bodies now requesting access. Concerns have also recently been raised about the breadth of organisations that have access to the register. For these reasons, I announced a review of the regulations governing the release of information. A consultation paper was published on 16 February which sought to address all aspects of the release of information from the vehicle register. The consultation period closed on 31 March 2006 and our conclusions will be published in the near future.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the operation of the Road Traffic (Driver Licensing and Information Systems) Act 1989; and what recent representations he has received about the operation of this Act. [69640]

Dr. Ladyman: The Road Traffic (Driver Licensing and Information Systems) Act 1989 abolished special licences for driving heavy goods and passenger service vehicles (now known as large goods vehicles (LGV) and passenger carrying vehicles (PCV)).

The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency ensures the continuing operation of this Act by integrating within a single licence both car and LGV and PCV entitlements.

No recent representations have been received.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

James Miller/Tom Hurndall

Nick Harvey: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will seek to gain access to evidence regarding the cases of James Miller and Tom Hurndall from the Israeli authorities; and if he will make a statement. [68804]

The Solicitor-General: On 5 May 2006 the Attorney-General met the families of James Miller and Thomas Hurndall together with their lawyers. The Attorney-General is considering the issues raised by both families.

Northern Ireland High Court (Crown Appeals)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Solicitor-General on how many occasions there have been Crown appeals against the length of a sentence in Northern Ireland's High Court in the last three years. [69471]

The Solicitor-General: During the three years 2003 to 2005 there were 28 cases referred to the Northern Ireland Court of Appeal as being potentially unduly lenient. In 2006 there have been two cases referred to date.

TREASURY

Bank of England

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many nominees he considered for the post of Deputy Governor of the Bank of England apart from Sir John Gieve; and what the process of selection was before he made his nomination; [68326]

(2) when he nominated Sir John Gieve to be Deputy Governor of the Bank of England; and whether he interviewed Sir John personally. [68468]

Ed Balls: Under the Bank of England Act 1998, the Queen is responsible for appointing the Deputy Governor of the Bank of England. The appointment of Sir John Gieve was made on the recommendation of the Prime Minister who in turn was advised by the Chancellor on 11 October of last year. The Chancellor did not interview Sir John Gieve and eight candidates were considered alongside Sir John Gieve.

This appointment process does not fall within the remit of the Commissioner for Public Appointments because it is highly market sensitive. In common with other highly market sensitive appointments the Chancellor's recommendation to the Prime Minister was based on a considered appraisal of a number of suitable candidates.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the staffing requirement of the Bank of England to meet its statutory financial supervision and regulatory obligations in each year since 1996. [68587]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Under the Bank of England Act 1998, responsibility for management of the Bank's affairs resides with the Bank's court of directors.

Since 1998 statutory responsibility for financial supervision and regulation has resided solely with the Financial Services Authority. The Bank is only responsible for contributing to the overall stability of the financial system as a whole.

Biofuels

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the quality criterion will be available for inclusion of biofuel manufacturers using pure vegetable oil, within the current 20 pence per litre duty reduction, with particular reference to rape seed oil. [68668]

John Healey: Fuel produced from vegetable oil, including rape seed oil, is eligible for the rate of duty for biodiesel (currently 27.10 pence per litre) if it meets the legal definition of biodiesel for tax purposes set out in section 2AA of the Hydrocarbon Oil Duties Act 1979 (HODA). In other cases it is liable to duty at 47.10 pence per litre. Conformity with this definition rather than the source of the oil or method of production determines whether a fuel is deemed as a biodiesel for tax purposes.

As announced at Budget 2006, the Government are reviewing the current definition of biodiesel in HODA to ensure that it remains fit for purpose and enables environmentally friendly fuels, which meet fuel quality standards, to receive recognition through the duty system. HM Revenue and Customs will hold discussions with stakeholders in the coming months and the Government will report on progress at the pre-Budget report.

Centenarians

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people aged 100 or over there are in each county in England. [68392]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 10 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question regarding the number of people aged 100 or over there are in each county in England. (68392)

The attached table provides the information requested. The figures are taken from 2001 Census table S001 which is available on the 'CD supplement to the National Report for England and Wales and Key Statistics for local authorities in England and Wales'. Data are shown for current administrative counties. For completeness, figures are also shown for other 'non-county' areas (i.e. London boroughs, metropolitan districts, and unitary authorities).

Age information for annual mid-year population estimates is available up to age 89 and then 90 and over. It is not possible to calculate reliable annual population estimates for centenarians for sub-national areas.

Office for National Statistics

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list primary care trusts in order of (a) average age of population, (b) the proportion of over-65s, (c) the proportion of over 25s and (d) the proportion of over 85s in their areas. [68393]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 10 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary Question requesting lists of primary care trusts in order of (a) average age of population, (b) the proportion of over 65s (c) the proportion of over 25s and (d) the proportion of over 85s in their areas. (68393)

The attached Tables A-D, which I am placing in the House of Commons Library, provide the requested information. The tables are based on mid-2004 population estimates; these are the latest available. The tables provide information on all Primary Care Organisation areas in England: 300 Primary Care Trusts and the 3 Care Trusts (Bexley, Northumberland, and Witham, Braintree & Halstead). The 'median age' measure of average age is used.

Compensation Payments

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his letter of 21 March Ref: 4/25060/06, when the constituents of the hon. Member for West Worcestershire can expect to receive the compensation payment of £100 from HM Revenue and Customs. [66359]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 27 April 2006]: HMRC sent the payment in question on 27 April 2006.

Consultancy Firms

Mike Penning: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what records are held centrally by the Government on consultancy firms hired by Government Departments. [68502]

John Healey: Information about specific consultancy engagements, or those consultants hired by Government are not held centrally.

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions he has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67534]

Ed Balls: Paragraph 5.28 of the Ministerial Code sets out the rules on the registration of hospitality.

Correspondence

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Paymaster General will reply to the hon. Member for Edinburgh West's letter of 24 February 2006 regarding his constituent Ms P Duff. [64410]

Dawn Primarolo: I have done so.

Doncaster, North (Statistics)

Edward Miliband: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Doncaster, North residents were employed in mining in (a) 1981, (b) 1991, (c) 2001 and (d) the most recent year for which figures are available. [68294]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 10 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment in the mining industry in (a) 1981, (b) 1991, (c) 2001 and (d) the most recent year for which figures are available. (68294)

The information requested is available from 1991 and 2001 Censuses of Population. Equivalent information from the 1981 Census is not available.

The 1991 Census shows 132 people resident in the Doncaster North constituency employed in mining. The 2001 Census shows 351 persons aged 16 to 74, resident in the Doncaster North constituency employed in mining and quarrying.

The 1991 data have been taken from table S73 in the 1991 Census Small Area Statistics which is available on request from Census Customer Services (census.customerservices@ons.gsi.gov.uk). The 2001 data have been taken from table KS11a in the "Census 2001 Report for Parliamentary Constituencies" which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Edward Miliband: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit recipients there were in each ward in Doncaster, North in (a) 1997 and (b) the most recent year for which figures are available; and what the average award was in each year in each case. [68299]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the number of families who were receiving family credit in 1997 is not available at ward level.

Reliable estimates of the number of families receiving child and working tax credits are also not available at ward level. However, estimates of the number of recipient families in each constituency and local authority at various dates are published on the HMRC website at: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-qeog-stats.htm.

Edward Miliband: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many ethnic minority residents there were in Doncaster, North (a) in (i) 1981, (ii) 1991 and (iii) 2001 and (b) according to the most recent figures available. [68305]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 10 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many ethnic minority residents there were in Doncaster, North (a) in (i) 1981, (ii) 1991 and (iii) 2001 and (b) according to the most recent figures available. (68305)

A question on ethnicity was not asked in the 1981 Census and consequently no data are available. Data from the 2001 census are the most recent figures available.

The 1991 data have been taken from the counts supporting table G in the "Census 1991 New Parliamentary Constituency Monitor for Yorkshire and the Humber" which is available on request from 2001 Census Customer Services (census.customerservices@ons.gsi.gov.uk). The 2001 data have been taken from KS06 in the "Census 2001 Report for Parliamentary Constituencies" which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Differences in the ethnic group questions, coding and in the methods for treatment of under-enumeration complicate the making of direct comparisons between 1991 and 2001. More information is provided in the 'Guide to comparing 1991 and 2001 Census ethnic group data' and can be found on the ONS website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/CCI/article.asp?ID=1471&Pos=1&ColRank=1&Rank=64.

Edward Miliband: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many residents of Doncaster, North worked outside the constituency in (a) 1981, (b) 1991, (c) 2001 and (d) the most recent year for which figures are available. [68320]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

As Doncaster North Parliamentary Constituency did not exist in 1981 no data is available for this year. Data from the 2001 census are the most recent figures available.

Edward Miliband: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people with disabilities were resident in Doncaster, North constituency in (a) 1981, (b) 1991, (c) 2001 and (d) the most recent period for which figures are available, broken down by disability. [68328]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 10 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning how many people with disabilities were resident in Doncaster, North constituency in (a) 1981, (b) 1991 and (c) 2001 and (d) the most recent year for which figures are available, broken down by disability. (68328)

The Census is the only data source suitable for local area statistics of this nature. The Census question asked whether the respondent perceived themselves to have a long-term limiting illness, health problem or disability which limits their daily activities or the work they can do, including problems that are due to old age. This is a "yes" or "no" question and no breakdown of illness of disability is available. The figures in the table below therefore cover not only disability but also health problems and old age. This question was first asked in the 1991 Census and therefore data for 1981 is unavailable. Data from the 2001 census are the most recent figures available.

Euro Preparations Unit

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total costs of the Treasury's Euro Preparations Unit were in (a) 2002-03, (b) 2003-04, (c) 2004-05 and (d) 2005-06; how many (i) full and (ii) part-time staff there were in each year; what the programme budget was for each year; what projects were undertaken in each year; and if he will make a statement. [64061]

Ed Balls: The costs of the Euro Preparations Unit (EPU) in each of these years were met from within the Treasury's departmental expenditure limit. The number of staff in EPU varied within each year, reflecting normal staff turnover. The mid-year figures were:

As at September	EPU staffing[1]
2002	17
2003	13
2004	10
2005	9

[1] Full-time equivalents

The projects and activities of the Euro Preparation Unit are set out in the reports on euro preparations available on the Treasury's public website (www.euro.gov.uk). Central planning documents including the managed transition plan and the consumer protection framework are well developed and the focus of EPU is now on maintaining these and the network of expert stakeholders.

General Practitioners

Steve Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria HM Revenue and Customs uses in determining that GPs are regarded as self-employed for tax purposes; and if he will make a statement. [69617]

Dawn Primarolo: There is no statutory definition of employment and self-employment for tax and national insurance contributions (NICs). HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) use 'case law' defined by the courts, as an outline principle when they give an opinion on employment status for tax and NICs.

General practitioners can be engaged on employed or self-employed terms, there is no one answer to cover all situations. In practice, however, common features, such as the autonomy that general practitioners have over the way their practices are administered and arranged usually mean that it is HMRC's view that they are likely to be self-employed.

Informal Economy

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department is taking to reduce the size of the informal economy in the West Midlands. [68363]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC is currently restructuring its approach to tackling the informal economy. This builds on and brings together the work previously undertaken by the Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise in this area.

Nationally new teams are being set up dedicated to identifying individuals and businesses who should be registered for income tax and VAT. At the same time HMRC has been running extensive media campaigns promoting awareness of the need to register as well as a Hotline focussing on increasing intelligence relating to the informal economy.

HMRC is also participating in the Joint Workplace Enforcement Pilot, led by Home Office and based in the West Midlands. This is a three-year pilot to explore the scope for closer co-ordinated working between Government workplace enforcement and compliance departments for the purpose of tackling both the use and exploitation of illegal migrant workers.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the size of the informal economy in (a) the UK, (b) the West Midlands and (c) Tamworth constituency. [68364]

Dawn Primarolo: There is no reliable estimate of the size of the informal economy in (a) the UK, (b) the West Midlands or (c) Tamworth constituency.

Kidney Failure

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in (a) England and (b) Dorset died as a result of kidney failure in 2005. [68311]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 10 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning how many people in (a) England and (b) Dorset died as a result of kidney failure in 2005. (68311)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2004. Numbers of deaths in 2004 where kidney failure was mentioned anywhere on the death certificate are included in the attached table.

Kidney failure can be the result of a number of different conditions or diseases, such as diabetes, high blood pressure, or infections. In most cases the underlying cause of death will be one of these causes rather than kidney failure. To provide more complete figures, numbers of deaths with a mention of kidney failure have therefore been provided rather than deaths where this was the underlying cause.

Deaths with a mention of kidney failure,[1] England and Dorset,[2, 3] 2004[4]

	Number of deaths
England	26,207
Dorset	237

[1] Deaths with a mention of kidney failure were defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10). The codes used are listed as follows: Renal failure—ICD10 N17-N19
[2] Figures for Dorset are for the current county which excludes the unitary authorities of Bournemouth and Poole, created in 1997.
[3] Usual residents of these areas.
[4] Deaths registered in the 2004 calendar year.

Married Person's Tax Allowance

Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many cases HM Revenue and Customs has discovered that taxpayers have been wrongly receiving married person's tax allowance in each year since it was abolished. [67927]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 10 May 2006]: Married Couple's Allowance was abolished from 2000-01 but only for those born after 6 April 1935. Information is not available about the numbers of taxpayers who may have claimed and been given the allowance incorrectly.

Ministerial Flights

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for North Devon (Nick Harvey), of 26 April 2006, Official Report, column 1173W, on ministerial flights, whether air passenger duty is payable on flights other than commercial flights taken by (a) Ministers and (b) members of the Royal Family. [68511]

John Healey: In the event of Ministers and members of the Royal Family taking other than commercial flights, it is likely that they would use the Royal Air Force. Since the Royal Air Force is not deemed to be an Air Transport Undertaking under the Air Navigation Order 1982, its flights are not liable to air passenger duty.

Newhaven Port

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals used the facility installed at Newhaven port to allow them to declare goods remotely by telephone in 2005. [68467]

Dawn Primarolo: Currently travellers and vehicles arriving at the port of Newhaven arrive directly from another EU member state. As declarations are only required from individuals arriving from outside the EU, no declaration point is required and no 'Red Point' telephone is installed.

Private Healthcare (Taxation)

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners in occupational pension schemes who will opt out of private healthcare provision in order to avoid it being taxed as a benefit in kind following the recent changes in the tax treatment of such provision. [69283]

Ed Balls: It is difficult to estimate the behavioural effect of a change of this type. We expect that the overall number of people affected by this change will be small.

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the revenue to be raised in the tax year 2006-07 from the decision to treat employer contributions to private medical schemes for people in retirement as a benefit in kind. [69284]

Ed Balls: A Regulatory Impact Assessment ('Regulatory Impact Assessment for Simplifying the taxation of pensions' Update) was published on 22 March 2006 setting out the Government's assessment of the impact of the changes to the new simplified regime for pensions taxation introduced in the 2006 Budget. This is available at www.hmrc.gov.uk/ria/ria-pensions-simplification.pdf. The Government estimate that pensions tax simplification will have an overall cost to the Exchequer building up to £250 million per year.

Stamp Duty

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals paid stamp duty on (a) residential and (b) commercial property transactions, in (i) each Government office region, (ii) Wales, (iii) Scotland and (iv) Northern Ireland in each financial year since 1996-97. [26939]

Ed Balls: The estimated number of residential and non-residential transactions, where stamp duty was payable on account of the value of the transaction being higher than the stamp duty threshold, is given in the following tables for the years and regions for which information is available. The stamp duty threshold for residential transactions was £60,000 up to 16 March 2005 and £120,000 from 17 March 2005. For non-residential transactions the threshold was £60,000 up to 30 November 2003 and £150,000 from 1 December 2003 to the end of 2004-05. Residential transactions from 30 November 2001 with values above £60,000 and up to £150,000 in designated disadvantaged areas were relieved from stamp duty and have been excluded from these figures. However non-residential transactions which were valued above the threshold but paid no duty due to the operation of reliefs (e.g. disadvantaged area relief, charitable relief) are included in the table because reliable estimates of all relieved transactions are not available.

Tax Credits

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax credit fraud has been perpetrated by HM Revenue and Customs' employees; and how many HM Revenue and Customs' employees have been prosecuted for tax credit fraud. [64822]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) has robust procedures in place to identify abuse of the tax credits system, and has identified the false use of the names of a number of DWP staff, as outlined in the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 18 January 2006, Official Report, column 1357W.

No fraud has been found to have been perpetrated by HMRC employees as a result of this investigation, but prosecution will always be pursued against the very small number of HMRC's 98,000 staff who abuse their position of trust. There are four HMRC employees who are currently being prosecuted for other alleged tax credit fraud involving amounts totalling £500,000. These cases have yet to be concluded in the courts.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the morale of staff working at the tax credits office; and if he will make a statement. [62032]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC takes the morale and well-being of its staff very seriously, including those working at the tax credit office, and takes very seriously the maintenance and improvement of staff well-being.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 30 March, Official Report, column 117W, on tax credits, how many monetary payments have been agreed between HM Revenue and Customs and recipients of tax credits where people have deliberately or negligently made incorrect statements (a) in total and (b) in each compliance office in Hampshire and the Isle of Wight in the last year for which information is available; and how many involved payments of (i) less than £250, (ii) £250 to £499, (iii) £500 to £999 and (iv) £1,000 and over. Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals in the Peterborough constituency were overpaid tax credits in the financial year 2004-05; and if he will make a statement. [67479]

Dawn Primarolo: Tax credits are awarded to families rather than individuals. For the number of 2004-05 awards to families that have been overpaid, by constituency, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to hon. Friend the Member for West Lancashire (Rosie Cooper) on 24 April 2006, Official Report, column 878W.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many disabled adults have claimed tax credits in Tamworth constituency in each month since April 2003. [68362]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of tax credits recipients in each constituency are based on a sample of cases. Any estimates of the number of disabled adults in families receiving tax credits in any constituency would be subject to a very large relative sampling uncertainty and therefore no reliable estimates are available.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many joint claims for tax credits were terminated in (a) 2003-04, (b) 2004-05 and (c) 2005-06. [63324]

Dawn Primarolo: The majority of awards are terminated because of a failure to renew the previous year's award. Therefore in 2003-04 very few tax credit awards to couples were terminated after the start of the year. We estimate that about 135,000 awards for 2004-05 were terminated after the start of the year, and about 160,000 awards for 2005-06 were terminated after the start of the year.

Tax Returns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's response to the Carter Committee's recommendations on bringing forward the tax return filing deadline. [68322]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to paragraph 5.81 of this year's Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report (HC 968).

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment the Government have made of the potential impact of advancing the tax return filing deadline on (a) business and (b) the capacity of HM Revenue and Customs to process returns quickly and without error. [68327]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are currently assessing the impacts on businesses of implementing the recommendations of Lord Carter of Coles' Review of HMRC Online Services, and HMRC has published a partial regulatory impact assessment which invites comments and evidence to inform the final assessment. The document can be viewed at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/ria/pria-online-services.pdf.

The proposed changes to the income tax self assessment return filing deadlines will promote online filing leading to fewer processing errors and cleaner data. The new deadlines will also enable HMRC to calculate the tax for all paper filers and tell them what to pay before the 31 January payment deadline and help to ensure that PAYE coding notices are up to date by the start of the following tax year.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information the Valuation Office Agency will have access to as a consequence of the implementation of the Valuebill project. [66256]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The only additional information that the VOA receives through the Valuebill initiative that was not available previously is the National Land and Property Gazetteer unique property reference numbers (UPRN) and co-ordinates of the property, both of which are used to correctly identify the property concerned.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which representatives from the Valuation Office Agency attended the Property Information Systems Common Exchange Standard (PISCES) home information packs workgroup meeting on 30 March. [66656]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

None.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the potential cost to the Treasury of introducing a zero VAT rating on authors; and if he will make a statement. [67704]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 3 May 2006]: No estimate has been made.

Voluntary Shops

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer under what fiscal regime a voluntary shop in a rural area operates; and what assessment he has made of the impact on such business of recent changes in corporation tax. [67773]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 3 May 2006]: A 'voluntary shop in a rural area' has been taken to refer to a shop that is set up and run by volunteers. Such shops will generally pay corporation tax on any profits in the usual manner.

However where such shops operating within the charge to corporation tax donate all or part of their profits to community or other charities under Gift Aid, there will be no tax paid on the profits donated.

The replacement of the starting and non-corporate distribution rates of corporation tax with a single banding for small companies set at the current small companies' rate, announced at Budget, will only impact on voluntary shops that are liable to pay corporation tax, and to the extent that they do not donate their profits to charities under Gift Aid.

A full regulatory impact assessment can be found at: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/ria/ria-corporation-tax.pdf.

House Mail Services

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) whether the Commission has discussed with Royal Mail (a) a bulk purchase contract and (b) a business mail discount; and if he will make a statement; [68526]

(2) what consideration the Commission has given to using alternatives to Royal Mail for the House's mail. [68527]

Nick Harvey: Royal Mail offer a range of products that provide bulk purchase and business mail discounts, but these apply only where there is a central point of posting and administration which enables Royal Mail to use their automation of bulk postings to reduce operational costs. As Parliament's pre-paid envelope service provides the ability to post in constituencies anywhere in the UK, often in small volumes, these services are not applicable. Given a background of increasing deregulation within the mail industry the House authorities keep the possibilities of alternative contracts under continuous review.

A thorough evaluation of the external market through the Official Journal of the European Commission was also carried out in 2005 in respect of Parliament's own mail service. Four firms were short-listed and Royal Mail won a new three year contract after they were able to convince the evaluation panel that they could deliver to a demanding specification and provide value for money.

Stationery Supplies

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what recent discussions the House authorities have had with stationery suppliers on procuring alternative cheaper stationery for use by Members. [68486]

Nick Harvey: The House authorities regularly re-tender the contract for the supply of stationery. During the contract term they have regular meetings with the contractor in order to monitor the service and costs, most recently in April 2006. Costs are presently lower than they were in 2002 and the contract is due to be re-let in competition in 2007. Members' bespoke stationery is high quality comprising specially designed and milled environmentally friendly paper and envelopes. The stationery contract includes the provision of a next day delivery anywhere in the UK and a unique management system which allows two accounts to be held for each Member—one for their own stationery and one for the bespoke stationery provided separately by the House.

DEFENCE

771 Search and Rescue Squadron

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the contribution which the 771 search and rescue squadron at Royal Naval Air Station makes to (a) the protection of lives of those at sea and on the coast in western waters and Cornwall and the south west, (b) the training of and experience available to naval pilots and crew and (c) anti-terrorism activities. [67002]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 2 May 2006]: In contributing to Search and Rescue (SAR) in the coastal waters of the south west extending 200 miles out to sea, 771 Squadron of the Royal Navy was scrambled 211 times last year and rescued 154 people.

As the Royal Navy's sole Sea King training unit, 771 Squadron trains aircrew for its own SAR duties at Royal Naval Air Station Culdrose and for HMS Gannet SAR Flight at Prestwick Airport. Additionally, through duties within the SAR roster, pilots and aircrew of 771 Squadron gain extensive experience of SAR operations in diverse and challenging weather conditions.

The Squadron is also committed to providing aircraft and crews to UK Homeland Defence which includes counter terrorism operations.

Advisory Committee on Conscientious Objection

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cases have been heard by the Advisory Committee on Conscientious Objection in each of the last five years; and in how many of those cases the claims were upheld. [68519]

Mr. Watson: The Advisory Committee on Conscientious Objection (ACCO) hears appeals against non-approval by the Service Authorities of applications for administrative discharge from the armed forces on grounds of conscientious objection. There have been no appeals to the ACCO in the last five years.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times the Advisory Committee on Conscientious Objection has met in each of the last five years. [68520]

Mr. Watson: The Advisory Committee on Conscientious Objection (ACCO) is only required to meet when an application for discharge on grounds of conscientious objection is put before them. As there have been no cases brought before ACCO in the last five years there has been no requirement for it to meet.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the costs were of the Advisory Committee on Conscientious Objection in each of the last five years. [68521]

Mr. Watson: As the Advisory Committee on Conscientious Objection (ACCO) has not sat in the last five years the associated cost of the committee for this period is nil.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures are in place to ensure that members of the armed forces are aware of the existence of the Advisory Committee on Conscientious Objection. [68522]

Mr. Watson: Detailed guidance on the Advisory Committee on Conscientious Objection (ACCO) and procedures for making an appeal to the committee are available to all service personnel. Personnel informing their chain of command of a conscientious objection to military service will be provided with the appropriate advice and assistance.

Afghanistan

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations his Department has received from Army officers requesting an increase in the troop numbers allocated to Afghanistan. [67539]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 4 May 2006]: As I made clear in my answer of 1 March 2006, Official Report, column 735 W, the force package that the UK will send to Southern Afghanistan meets the requirements identified by the relevant military planning staffs and has been fully endorsed by the chiefs of staff.

Furthermore, during the previous Secretary of State's recent visit to theatre, the Commander of the British Forces again confirmed that he was content with the force package deploying. This package will be kept under review and adjusted were deemed necessary—as recently demonstrated by the announced extension to the GR7 Harrier deployment.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the impact of the eradication of poppy production on the security situation in Helmand province, Afghanistan. [69482]

Mr. Ingram: The Afghan-led eradication of poppy has had little impact on the overall security in Helmand, which remains fragile.

Armed Forces (Voting)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the Electoral Commission concerning the provision of postal and proxy voting forms to members of the armed forces in advance of the Scottish parliamentary election in 2007; and if he will make a statement. [69320]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 8 May 2006]: Regular discussions are held with the Electoral Commission concerning Service voting issues, including the provision of postal and proxy voting forms to members of the armed forces. The Ministry of Defence and the Electoral Commission plan a joint electoral registration campaign in the autumn, in advance of the Scottish parliamentary election in 2007, which will include ensuring postal and proxy voting forms are available to all members of the armed forces.

Postal and proxy voting forms for members of the armed forces are also available year round from the Electoral Commission's website.

Army Drugs Policy

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what Army disciplinary policy is on (a) soldiers and (b) officers found to be (i) selling, (ii) distributing, (iii) in possession of and (iv) under the influence of class (1) A and (2) B drugs; [66847]

(2) in what circumstances a soldier might not be discharged automatically for possession of a class A drug; and how many times in the most recent 12 month period for which figures are available (a) a soldier and (b) an officer found in such possession has been permitted to remain (i) at his or her rank and (ii) at his or her post in the Army. [66848]

Mr. Watson: Soldiers and Officers found to be selling, distributing, possessing or under the influence of drugs are subject to disciplinary proceedings under the Army Act 1955. The Act states that after a finding of guilty in any drugs case, Commanding Officers are to apply for the discharge of the soldier under the provisions of Queens Regulations para 9.404. The regulations go on to state that retention in the Service should only be recommended in the most exceptional of extenuating circumstances.

In the last 12 months no Soldiers or Officers have been allowed to stay in the Army after being found guilty of possession of class A drugs.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many drugs tests on Army personnel have produced positive results in each quarter since January 2000, broken down by (a) class of drugs and (b) regiment concerned. [58313]

Mr. Watson: Due to the length of the response, the information has been placed in the Library of the House. The results of tests under the CDT programme are recorded by unit and some of the regimental returns may include individuals from a different cap badge.

The Army has in place a robust drug policy based on prevention, detection and disciplinary or administrative action. This triple approach aims to reduce drug taking in the Army as far as is possible in order to maintain the integrity of the force. CDT is a part of this approach by providing an active deterrent to drug taking. The Army tests 85 per cent. of the force annually for all controlled drugs and those who are caught are almost always discharged. Additionally, education and information strategies for substance misuse, including drugs and alcohol, have been developed and are implemented at all stages in the careers of soldiers wherever they are based and on at least an annual basis.

Astute Submarines

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there are plans to procure further Astute Class submarines beyond Astute, Ambush and Artful. [68941]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 May 2006]: Three Astute Class submarines are on order with BAE Systems, and further boat orders are currently being considered, subject to affordability. We are working with Industry as part of the Defence Industrial Strategy (DIS) to achieve an affordable and sustainable submarine programme. In support of this we have ordered long-lead items for Boat Four.

Camp Breadbasket Inquiry

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the findings of the senior military officer appointed by General Sir Mike Jackson to examine the lessons from Camp Breadbasket in Iraq have been published; and if he will make a statement. [66765]

Des Browne: The review, announced by General Sir Mike Jackson is still ongoing. The findings will be published when the review has concluded.

Central Wales Tactical Training Area

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flight movements were carried out at between 250 and 100 feet in the Central Wales Tactical Training Area between 1993 and 2005. [69485]

Mr. Ingram: The amount of military low flying that takes place in the United Kingdom is better expressed in hours rather than by number of sorties, which can vary significantly from minutes to several hours. The information is only available for the last seven training years, as previous data was compiled in a different manner. The figures for the training year 2005-06 are shown in the following table and are due to be published in the next statement on the pattern of military low flying that will be made available in the Library of the House in summer 2006.

The following information reflects the actual amount of operational low flying carried out between 100 and 250 feet within 7T, the tactical training area in mid-Wales. These statistics are consistent with the information provided annually in the statement on the pattern of military low flying.

Training year	Hours-minutes
2000-01	25.21
2001-02	30.23

Training year	Hours-minutes
2002-03	33.12
2003-04	32.12
2004-05	27.15
2005-06	13.49

Chaplains

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) men and (b) women serving in each of the armed forces visited a Christian chaplain in each of the last 12 months. [68513]

Mr. Watson: Chaplaincy is proactive and all chaplains make every effort to speak to as many of the personnel on their ship, unit or base as often as possible. Similarly, Service personnel often approach the Chaplain on an informal basis without an appointment. Most of this contact therefore goes unrecorded.

This does not mean that the matters discussed are not important or the moral or pastoral care provided has no value. On the contrary, the ability to share fears or concerns, especially when deployed abroad and on operations, has particular value in the support of the moral component of fighting power.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Muslim, (b) Hindu, (c) Sikh, (d) Jewish and (e) Buddhist chaplains there are in each of the armed forces. [68524]

Mr. Watson: There is one Muslim, one Hindu, one Sikh, and one Buddhist chaplain to the armed forces. The post-holders are Ministry of Defence civil servants but are fully integrated into the armed forces chaplaincy organisation. In respect of the Jewish faith there is one honorary Jewish chaplain to the armed forces. These chaplains have tri-service responsibilities.

Civil Servants

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many non-industrial civil servants from his Department are based in Northern Ireland; and how many will be offered redundancy over the next 12 months. [68427]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 May 2006]: There are some 1,900 non-industrial Ministry of Defence (MOD) civil servants based in Northern Ireland as at 1 April 2006.

We are still working to establish the full impact of the security normalisation programme on MOD civilian staff in Northern Ireland. Once this work has been completed, we will be consulting with the trade unions on implementation but, until then, it is not possible to assess the total number of MOD non-industrial staff that might become surplus over the next 12 months.

Colombia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his Answer of 25 April 2006, Official Report, columns 1021-2W, on Colombia, how much bespoke counter-narcotic assistance has been granted to Colombia, broken down by main budget heading. [68753]

Mr. Ingram: UK armed forces have been able to provide some counter-narcotic assistance to the Colombian authorities as part of HMG's wider engagement with Colombia on counter-narcotics co-operation. However, I am withholding information on the bespoke training provided because its disclosure would be to the detriment of the safety of individuals, the prevention and detection of crime and international relations.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 4W, on Colombia, if he will list the evaluation criteria for each type of training provided to the Colombian armed forces. [69427]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my right hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 4W, on Colombia, by what criteria the level and nature of UK military assistance and training to Colombia is reviewed. [69428]

Mr. Ingram: The level and nature of our military assistance to Colombia is based, and regularly reviewed on: the identification of training needs in the Colombian armed forces through our discussions with the Colombian authorities; the capacity and expertise the UK has to provide such training; and our satisfaction that those undertaking it have not been involved in activities that violate human rights, aid internal repression nor are in collusion with illegal armed groups.

Courts Martial

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average delay has been in each of the last five years for military personnel accused of serious offences between being charged and appearing at courts martial [55462]

Des Browne: [pursuant to the reply, 21 March 2006, Official Report, c. 360W]: A note should have appeared after the table. The table is repeated as follows with the note:

	Royal Navy	Army	Days RAF
2001	129	416	77
2002	179	387	105
2003	184	343	84
2004	124	367	91
2005	115	399	56

Notes:
1. Royal Navy figure shows the average delay between charge and appearing at court martial and the year in which court martial was convened.
2. Army figure shows the average delay between the date of the offence and appearing at court martial and the year in which the court martial was convened.
3. Royal Air Force figure shows the average delay between the point that the case papers are received by the Court Administration Unit (which administers arrangements for the court martial) to the trial date and appearing at court martial and the cases that commenced in 2005.

Deepcut Barracks

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies his Department has carried out on the impact on armed forces recruitment of the Deepcut incidents since 2003. [68095]

Mr. Watson: The armed forces have not undertaken any specific research or study into the impact of Deepcut on recruitment levels. Nevertheless, the Services continually monitor recruitment and seek to identify the reasons for any significant variation in the number of enquiries received. There is some evidence to suggest that the media coverage of Deepcut has been a factor in depressing encouragement from parents and teachers for those in the target audience to join.

Defence Export Services Organisation

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Ministers attended the Defence Export Services Organisation symposium on 22 March. [68110]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 4 May 2006]: My noble Friend the Minister for Defence Procurement participated in the Defence Export Services Organisation Symposium on 22 March.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of Defence Export Services Organisation staff, funded by the Government, work on defence export services to Saudi Arabia. [68593]

Mr. Ingram: About one per cent of UK-government-funded staff of the Defence Export Services Organisation undertake work on the promotion of defence exports to Saudi Arabia. The costs of staff working on the Saudi armed forces project are met from a management fee received from the Saudi Arabian Government.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his counterparts in the Department for International Development and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on the work of the Defence Export Services Organisation and its relevance to the work of those departments on counter-proliferation and conflict resolution; and if he will make a statement. [68594]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Export Services Organisation (DESO) of the Ministry of Defence implements Government policy in support of responsible defence exports consistent with Government commitments on export licensing policy. Responsibility for the Department's contribution to policy on counter-proliferation and conflict resolution rests with other areas of the Department, but DESO's activities are guided by the Government's policies on these subjects.

Disposal Contractors

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in relation to the case of arbitration referred to in the answer on 9 February 2004, Official Report, column 1177W, when the disposal contractor first sought resolution of contractual differences; what attempts were made, and on what dates, by the Department to resolve matters through negotiation or mediation; and when legal process commenced. [67842]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Eurofighter

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions officials from his Department have had with British Aerospace Systems concerning the impending order of Eurofighter Typhoon aircraft by Saudi Arabia; and what effect he expects this contract to have on the delivery of Eurofighters to the RAF. [67859]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 3 May 2006]: There have been numerous, confidential discussions between MOD officials and BAE Systems representatives on a wide range of commercial and technical issues concerning the Typhoon programme and the implications of the proposed supply of the aircraft to Saudi Arabia. Negotiations continue between Her Majesty's Government, the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia and representatives of BAE Systems. Until these negotiations have concluded it is not possible to define precisely the implications for the Royal Air Force.

Iraq Service Medal

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British police officers have been seconded as advisers in Iraq since 2003; and how many of them have received an Operation Telic medal. [67774]

Mr. Watson: Since 2003, there have been 35 Ministry of Defence Police officers seconded as advisers in Iraq. None of these officers has received an Operation Telic medal.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many servicemen have served in Iraq for the qualifying period for receiving the Iraq service medal; and how many such medals have been awarded to servicemen. [68504]

Mr. Watson: The information is not held in the format requested. However, as at 28 April 2006, 107,197 applications for the Iraq medal had been received from service personnel. Of these, 105,064 have been found eligible. 100,930 medals have been despatched and 4,134 are awaiting engraving and despatch.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 20, on the Iraq service medal, what the nature is of the qualifications required for contractors to be awarded the Iraq service medal; what the procedure is for awarding the medal; how many further such awards are under review; and if he will list the companies involved. [68693]

Mr. Watson: Ministry of Defence Contractors on Deployed Operations (CONDO) in Iraq are eligible to receive the Ministry of Defence Iraq Medal, provided they meet the stipulated eligibility criteria. Sub-contractors employed by CONDOs, not directly under contract by the MOD, are ineligible for the award of the MOD Iraq Medal. A list of companies who are MOD CONDOs is set out as follows:

Applications from CONDO personnel are verified against the eligibility criteria by the Ministry of Defence Permanent Joint Headquarters before being sent to the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency, Ministry of Defence Medal Office, for the medal to be despatched to the recipient.

At the end of June 2005, the Prime Minister announced that the Queen had agreed a special medal to recognise service by UK civilians in Iraq. The eligibility criteria for this second Iraq medal is currently being considered by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and will be announced in due course.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 20, on the Iraq service medal, if he will list the civilian journalists who have received Iraq medals; and which were (a) applied for by the recipient and (b) handed over in a medal ceremony. [68694]

Mr. Watson: In June 2004, media organisations with employees who deployed as War Correspondents with United Kingdom forces during Operation Telic were informed of their entitlement to the award of the campaign medal in accordance with DCI Gen 170/04. As a result, the Ministry of Defence received 74 requests for the medal with clasp, of which 61 had been distributed to the recipients as at 4 May 2006. The remaining 13 are held pending collection or confirmation of required postal address. There has not been any awards ceremony, all medals were either sent via registered post or collected by hand from the MOD.

The term war correspondent includes media support staff as well as journalists and broadcast reporters; thus camera/sound crew, producers, editors and other support staff who were part of the deployed team are included in the definition. These personnel are also entitled to the medal as detailed in the DCI and are included among the 74 requests made to the MOD.

Joint Strike Fighter

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what progress has been made on the Joint Strike Fighter project; and whether the project is on schedule; [68939]

(2) what progress has been made in the negotiations to secure the UK's rights to the source codes of the Joint Strike Fighter; and if he will make a statement. [68940]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 May 2006]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 27 April 2006, Official Report, columns 1270W, 1271W and 1272W, to the hon. Member for Wellingborough (Mr. Bone). Negotiations are currently underway to secure the information access we require for operational sovereignty. These are expected to conclude later this year.

Substantial progress has been made in the System Development and Demonstration phase of the JSF programme with the recent completion of the Critical Design Review for the Short Take Off and Vertical Landing (STOVL) variant. Progress in building development aircraft is on schedule with assembly of the first development Conventional Take Off and Landing variant now complete and first flight expected toward the end of this year. In conjunction with the US and the other international partners within the Joint Strike Fighter Programme, we are negotiating the terms of the Memorandum of Understanding for the co-operative Production, Support and Follow on Development Phase.

Michael White

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what disciplinary action has been taken against those involved in the death of Warrant Officer Michael White following his death in a live fire exercise near Newcastle, Co. Down in December 2001. [67689]

Mr. Watson: No disciplinary action has been taken against any individual following the death of Warrant Officer Michael White.

Ministerial Activities

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) public speeches and (b) official visits he has made since 5 May 2005; and how many letters he sent in this period. [55704]

Des Browne: My right hon. Friend the Member for Airdrie and Shotts (John Reid) made 15 public speeches and some 36 visits up to the end of February 2006. All speeches and visits were made in accordance with the Ministerial Code. He also replied to a total of 623 letters from right hon. and hon. Members over the period.

Private Americk Hayer

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what disciplinary action has been taken against the army instructor charged with grievous bodily harm upon Private Americk Hayer of the Royal Welch Fusiliers in the course of training at Warcop, Cumbria; [66934]

(2) what rank the officer was who informed the family of Private Americk Hayer of his hospitalisation in September 2005; what rank the officer was who visited him in hospital; when each event took place; and what the reason was for the time taken in each case; [66935]

(3) what steps have been taken to ensure that the Royal Welch Fusiliers tackled the racism and violence that led to assault and severe injuries for a trainee recruit in September 2005. [66936]

Mr. Watson: The incident happened on 26 August 2005 at Warcop Cumbria and involved personnel from Somme Company, the Infantry Training Centre (Catterick) where Fusilier (Fus) Hayer was a phase 2 trainee. Immediately following the incident normal notifications were instigated. A notification of casualty signal was sent and attempts to contact Fus Hayer's mother were made. There was no reply from the contact number and the company commander, a major, left a message on her answering service asking her to contact him. The company commander spoke to Mr. Hayer, Fus Hayer's stepfather, on 27 August 2005.

While Fus Hayer was in hospital, he was visited on 26 August 2005 by a captain and, on 30 August 2005, by a lieutenant. His company commander also spoke to him on the telephone on 28, 29 and 30 August 2005 as did his company sergeant major on 31 August. On his discharge from hospital on 2 September 2005, Fus Hayer was collected by the company sergeant major and returned to ITC Catterick.

At a district court martial held in Aldershot from 4 to 5 April 2006 Corporal L Orgill, of the 2nd Battalion Royal Welsh (1st Battalion the Royal Regiment of Wales), was found not guilty of unlawfully and maliciously inflicting grievous bodily harm. Internal administrative action is being considered.

There is no evidence to suggest that there is an issue of institutionalised racism or violence within the 1st Battalion Royal Welsh (1st Battalion Royal Welch Fusiliers).

RAF Rescue Missions

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average cost was of a rescue mission carried out by the RAF in 2005-06. [67566]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what charge is made to the Scottish Ambulance Service for use of RAF search and rescue helicopters for air ambulance flights. [67567]

Mr. Ingram: The current charge to the Scottish Ambulance Service for use of RAF search and rescue helicopters for medical evacuation is £2,018 plus VAT per hour.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in each year since 1996 RAF search and rescue helicopters have been used for air ambulance flights in (a) Orkney, (b) Shetland and (c) the Western Isles; and what the average cost was in each case. [67568]

Mr. Ingram: The following table shows the number of occasions RAF search and rescue helicopters have been used for medical evacuation flights in the isles of Orkney, Shetland and Western Isles in each year since 1999.

	Orkney Isles	Shetland Isles	Western Isles
2000	0	0	2
2001	1	0	2
2002	1	0	6
2003	0	1	1
2004	1	2	1
2005	1	1	0
2006	3	4	0
Total	7	8	12

[1] Data are only held from 24 August 1999

Figures are not held centrally for the average cost of helicopter flights and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Recruitment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies spent on recruitment, search and selection agencies in each of the last five years. [68345]

Mr. Watson: This information is not held centrally as the authority for such expenditure has been delegated to business areas for some years. The Ministry of Defence is currently undertaking a major review of its HR processes, including recruitment and aims to transform the current recruitment systems later this year. As part of this transformation process we have introduced a new data management system, HRMS, based on a Peoplesoft Human Resource management product. When the new system is fully operational, it is planned that data on how much the Department spends on recruitment, search and selection agencies will be available centrally. Until such time the cost involved in providing the information requested will continue to be disproportionate.

Redress of Grievance Cases

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many redress of grievance cases in each of the armed forces have resulted in (a) a conviction and (b) other forms of punishment in the last 12 months. [68517]

Mr. Watson: A redress of grievance is a complaint made by a service person on any matter relating to their service. Any criminal or disciplinary proceedings against other individuals that may result from an investigation into those grievances are separate matters and it is not possible to provide the information in the form that has been requested.

Evacuation/Hospital Treatment

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the UK hospitals (a) where service personnel have been treated and (b) for injuries sustained in theatre of active operations in each of the last five years; and how many such personnel each hospital treated in each year. [66541]

Des Browne [holding answer 27 April 2006]: In the last five years, Service personnel requiring hospital treatment in the UK, including those suffering from injuries sustained in theatre, have been treated at the following six MOD Hospital Units (MDHU):

MDHU Birmingham (part of the Royal Centre for Defence Medicine), Selly Oak Hospital, University Hospital Birmingham NHS Foundation Trust

MDHU Derriford, Derriford Hospital, Plymouth Hospitals NHS Trust

MDHU Frimley Park, Frimley Park Hospital NHS Foundation Trust

MDHU Northallerton, Friarage Hospital, South Tees Hospitals NHS Trust

MDHU Peterborough, Peterborough and Stamford Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust

MDHU Portsmouth, Queen Alexandra's Hospital, Portsmouth Hospitals NHS Trust

Our records show that the number of Service personnel treated at each MDHU in each of the last five years is as follows:

MDHU	Out/In-patients	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	[1]2004-05

	In	[2]—	[2]—	3,095	2,355	1,999

[1] 2004-05 is the latest year for which figures are currently complete
[2] Figures for this period are no longer held on file. To obtain them would require a manual trawl of the individual hospital records which could only be undertaken at disproportionate cost.

It is not possible to break down these figures by operational and non-operational injury/illness. Such information is not held centrally and to obtain it would require the examination of the individual medical records of every patient. These can only be viewed for non-clinical reasons with the express consent of the individual concerned, to protect patient confidentiality. To seek permission, and then to extract the information from the records, could only be done at disproportionate cost.

Since 2001, the Royal Centre for Defence Medicine has been the main receiving unit for patients aeromedically evacuated from an operational theatre. If a long stay is expected, patients can be transferred to a hospital local to their home for less acute treatment, enabling them to be nearer to their family. Indeed, a significant proportion of service personnel requiring hospital treatment in the UK in general are treated, both as emergencies and electively, at other NHS hospitals. The decision to do this is based on relative waiting times and on convenience for the individual patient and the patient's family. Additionally, patients requiring more complex rehabilitation for musculo-skeletal conditions can be referred, where appropriate, to the Defence Medical Rehabilitation Centre at Headley Court.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the UK military hospitals that British military casualties are sent to after evacuation from (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan. [65449]

Mr. Watson: There are no longer any stand-alone military hospitals in the United Kingdom. As part of the 1994 "Defence Costs Study", most of these were closed in the 1990s when it became clear that they no longer had sufficient patient volume and case mix to develop and maintain the skills of our medical personnel to the appropriate operational and NHS standards. They have been replaced by Ministry of Defence Hospital Units (MDHUs) located within University hospital Birmingham, South Tees, Frimley Park, Peterborough, Plymouth, and Portsmouth hospitals NHS trusts. Where necessary, we could also use the hospital facilities in Cyprus for treatment, or as a staging post prior to treatment in the UK.

When casualties are aeromedically evacuated to the UK, the usual receiving hospital is the University hospital Birmingham. However, at times where there are a large number of casualties, the decision as to which hospital they should be treated at is made in conjunction with the Department of Health, based on clinical need and bed availability.

Staff Development

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost was of (a) staff away days and (b) staff team building exercises in his Department in each of the last three years. [69115]

Mr. Watson: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Territorial Army

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what spending has been allocated to Territorial Army recruitment for (a) the last three quarters of 2005, (b) the first quarter of 2006 and (c) 2006-07. [43677]

Mr. Watson: It is not possible to provide comprehensive and accurate details on Territorial Army (TA) recruiting spend alone nor break it down into the detail requested. Spending on TA recruitment is a multi-layer activity involving disparate formations, units and agencies spanning a number of different budget areas, which allocate funds over a financial year, not by quarters.

The overall national marketing spend for financial year (FY) 2005-06 for the Army (both Regular and TA) was £38.4 million and the national marketing budget for FY 2006-07 is £25.8 million. This includes £5 million and £2.3 million specifically earmarked for TA activities. However, the TA also benefits further from many elements of the rest of the national Army marketing budget, which are aimed at both the Regular Army and the TA. These encompass television and press advertising, the production of DVDs, leaflets, pamphlets and brochures as well as the overarching production and design costs.

In addition, £12.9 million was spent on various TA recruiting (and in some cases retention) initiatives in FY 2005-06 and £12.5 million is allocated for 2006-07. These initiatives include the establishment of additional posts to further improve TA recruiting hierarchy and infrastructure, the establishment of Brigade Recruitment and Advisory Teams, improvement of recruiting Reception Centres and other ad hoc recruiting drives.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the main areas of the Territorial Army are identified (a) as undermanned and (b) for increased recruitment. [43691]

Mr. Watson: Territorial Army (TA) manning has been under pressure for a number of years and the Army faces a growing challenge in recruiting sufficient officers and soldiers of an appropriate quality for all branches of the TA. Particular areas for recruiting focus on increasing the number of young officers joining the TA, medical technicians, specialist trades in the Royal Logistics Corps, communications technicians and other more general trade soldiers in the Royal Artillery, Royal Engineers, Infantry and Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers. A major change programme, known as Project One Army Recruiting is under way to improve recruiting into the Regular and Territorial Army by integrating the recruiting operations of the two organisations.

Type 45 Destroyers

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate the naval staff have made of the total number of Type 45 destroyers required to protect (a) a carrier task group and (b) an amphibious task group against aerial attack. [67918]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 3 May 2006]: There are many variables involved when determining the number of air defence ships required to defend a carrier or amphibious task group. These include the level of the threat, the various readiness levels of the ships, the level of multinational involvement and the scale of the operation. It is the capability provided by the ships, rather than their numbers, that determine the level of protection provided.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect on employment at shipbuilders' yards of a decision not to build the seventh and eighth Type 45 destroyers. [67920]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 3 May 2006]: No decision has yet been made on ordering the seventh and eighth Type 45 destroyers. When approval is sought, all factors will be taken into account. In particular, any decision will be made in the context of our defence industrial strategy, a key element of which is to retain onshore the ability to deliver a number of strategic capabilities, including those required to build and integrate complex ships in the United Kingdom.

To that end, we are working with industry to develop a common understanding of the core load required to sustain the industrial capabilities we identified as important to sustain in the DIS. We expect industry to restructure itself to improve its performance and address the fundamental issues of affordability and productivity to deliver the equipment we need; to sustain onshore the industrial capabilities we require for national security; and to provide a sustainable and profitable industry, with clearer employment prospects.

UFOs

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his Answer to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) of 28 March 2006, Official Report, column 904W, on unidentified flying objects, on how many occasions there has been an assessment of evidence of risk to the integrity of UK airspace in the last five years; and what the job title is of desk officers assigned to this task. [68757]

Mr. Watson: Over the last five years evidence of risk to the integrity of UK airspace from a reported unidentified flying object has been assessed on 12 occasions; in no case was there considered to be any actual risk. Analysis of reports for this purpose is made by the military desk officer responsible for airspace integrity within the UK operations branch.

CABINET OFFICE

Land Ownership (Shropshire)

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much land is owned in Shropshire by the Duchy of Lancaster. [68806]

Hilary Armstrong: The Duchy of Lancaster owns approximately one hectare of land in Shropshire.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Food Advertising Control

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will respond to the Ofcom proposals for greater controls on food advertising of foods high in fat, sugar and salt. [68566]

Mr. Woodward: The Government welcomes Ofcom's consultation on options to strengthen the rules on broadcast food promotion to children and we look forward to discussing the issues further with them in the light of the responses to their consultation.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by her Department in each of the last five years. [67019]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Transport my hon. Friend the Member for South Thanet (Dr. Ladyman) on 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1226W.

Olympic Games 2012

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what progress has been made in providing a manual of facilities identified as suitable for training camps by National Olympic and Paralympic Committees for the Olympic games in 2012; [68848]

(2) what progress has been made in providing interested organisations with the guidelines and requirements for training camps for the run up to the Olympic games in 2012. [68849]

Mr. Caborn: It is expected that guidelines and technical requirements for facilities and organisations will be available on the website of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic games (www.london2012.com) by the end of May. Facilities will shortly be invited to submit their interest in being assessed for inclusion in the manual.

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2006, Official Report, columns 214-5W, on the London Olympics, what the most recent estimate made by KPMG is of the cost of the 2012 Olympics. [69425]

Tessa Jowell: The review of the cost of the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic games is still ongoing. Any revised estimates will be reported only when they have been agreed and when the cost review has been completed.

Public (Arts Organisation)

Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many times the chief executive of the Arts Council of England, West Midlands, was invited to attend the Board of the arts organisation, the Public, in each of the last three years; and how many times she attended. [68482]

Mr. Lammy: The Regional Executive Director of Arts Council England West Midlands has attended one board meeting in 2005. She has attended The Public's stakeholder meetings. Arts Council staff have attended at least 17 board meetings over the last three years. These have mostly been attended by the lead officer or the Director of Arts.

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport who the lead officer was from the Arts Council responsible for liaison on the construction of the building to house the Arts Organisation, the Public based in West Bromwich. [69531]

Mr. Caborn: The chief executive of Arts Council England, Peter Hewitt, is the accounting officer for the organisation.

Schools Strategy

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the National Strategy for Physical Education, School Sport and Club Links; how much her Department has (a) allocated and (b) plans to allocate to the initiative; and if she will list those schools which will take part in the initiative. [68846]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) and the Department for Education and Skills are working together to deliver the National School Sport Strategy. From 2003-06 DCMS invested £150 million in the strategy, and between 2006-08 the Department has allocated another £89 million. From September 2006 all maintained schools will be part of a School Sport Partnership.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum/Immigration

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers who were normally resident in (a) Peterborough and (b) Cambridgeshire in the 12 months after entering the United Kingdom have been (i) refused asylum and (ii) removed from the United Kingdom in each year since 1999; and if he will make a statement. [68762]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 8 May 2006]: Statistics on the location of asylum seekers who were refused asylum and removed from the UK since 1999 is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by the examination of individual case records.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what post-return monitoring is in place to ensure that all returns to Iraq are safe and sustainable. [65622]

Mr. McNulty: Returnees under the voluntary assisted return and reintegration programme—VARRP—are only monitored in so far as they have approached the International Organization for Migration (IOM) to receive counselling and reintegration assistance. Initial counselling begins upon arrival at the port of entry and further counselling takes place post-arrival, which ranges from assistance with social reinsertion and administrative procedures. Of those who have been monitored through their use of reintegration assistance it has been reported that there is no evidence that returnees have found themselves in danger or under threat of persecution due to their being returnees.

There is no post-return monitoring or sustainability programme for those persons who choose not to return as part of an assisted voluntary return package and whose subsequent removal from the UK is enforced.

However, removal will only be carried out where it is considered both appropriate and safe to do so and only after a full assessment of each case has been thoroughly conducted.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures and safeguards are in place to ensure that all returning Iraqi asylum seekers reach their home village or town safely. [65623]

Mr. McNulty: In respect of voluntary returns through Erbil and Sulaymaniyah, returnees assisted by the International Organization for Migration (IOM) are met upon arrival by the IOM. Arrangements are in place at both airports which allow the IOM and their representatives unrestricted access, enabling staff to provide assistance to returnees from the moment they land. They are assisted through immigration, baggage retrieval and customs formalities.

The IOM arranges with local transportation companies in Erbil and Sulaymaniyah for returnees to be transported via bus or car to their final destination within the three Northern Governorates and their immediate vicinity, this means Kirkuk and Mosul. Arrival is confirmed by the transportation company. For returns through Baghdad, passengers are met at the airport by IOM staff. Only one company is able to provide transportation from Baghdad International airport. The IOM arranges for the returnees to be taken to Baghdad's main land transportation hubs where onward travel is organised either by taxi or bus.

For enforced returns, there is clearly a difficult position in those parts of Iraq most affected by insurgent action, but it is not accepted that this applies to all areas.

Returns are taken forward on a case by case basis and are only enforced to areas assessed as sufficiently stable and where the Home Office is satisfied that the individual concerned will not be at risk of persecution or in need of humanitarian protection. The 15 individuals who were removed on an enforced return flight to Erbil on 20 November 2005 were offered onward transport to their home town or village.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken (a) to improve and (b) to extend the statistics published on those detained under immigration legislation powers; if he will take steps to provide annual data showing the total number of people who have sought asylum, at what stage of the asylum process the individual was detained, the duration and location of their detention and any transfer across the immigration detention estate; and if he will make a statement. [68400]

Mr. McNulty: Period statistics covering those leaving detention were published for the first time in February 2006 on the Home Office's Research Development and Statistics website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html. Statistics on persons leaving detention during July to September 2005, broken down by those who have sought asylum at some stage, place of last detention and the length of sole detention were published in the quarterly asylum bulletin.

There are currently no plans to publish statistics on transfers across the immigration detention estate. It is not possible to say which stage of the asylum process people are at when they are detained. The decision to detain is made on a case by case basis and may be appropriate in one or more of the following circumstances: to effect removal; while a person's identity and claim is being established; where a person is unlikely to comply with the conditions of temporary admission or release; or where the application is capable of being considered quickly.

Detailed official statistics on the asylum process are quality assured and published by the Immigration Research and Statistics Service (IRSS). Further information about National Statistics can be found at http://www.statistics.gov.uk/about/default.asp. The full range of immigration statistics published by the Home Office, including the frequency of publication, has recently been addressed in an independent review of the Control of Immigration Statistics publications.

An early findings paper was published in August 2005, which can be found on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/statsprog1.html. The Home Office is not bound to accept the recommendations, many of which would require additional resources, and is currently considering its response to the review.

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what alternatives he has considered to the detention of children in immigration detention centres. [68080]

Mr. McNulty: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer to a similar question of 26 April 2006, Official Report, column 312.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether (a) Dungavel and (b) Oakington Detention Centre is being used to hold immigration detainees from Northern Ireland; and what consultation took place on the proposal to hold such detainees in those centres. [68255]

Mr. McNulty: There have been some recent developments in respect of immigration detention in Northern Ireland. Until early 2006 it had been the case that 'where it was necessary to detain individuals in Northern Ireland' men were accommodated in the Working Out Unit, Crumlin Road, Belfast and women were accommodated at HMYOC Hydebank Wood.

It is now the case that individuals in Northern Ireland who are detained under Immigration Act powers are no longer held in Northern Ireland. Such individuals are transferred to a detention facility in Great Britain either on the day of detention or within 24 hours. In the majority of cases individuals will, initially, be detained at Dungavel House Immigration Removal Centre. Individuals whose asylum applications are straightforward and capable of being decided quickly may be held at Oakington Reception Centre.

While there are occasions when consultation with outside bodies is appropriate, there will be other occasions, of which this was one, where such consultation would delay changes to operational policy and practice that can and should be made quickly. In this case, consultation would simply have served to prolong the routine use of prison places in Northern Ireland for detainees beyond the point that it was operationally necessary to do so. This would not have been desirable.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 365W, on UK immigration procedures, how many of those listed in the table have been included in the number of those recorded as removals and voluntary departures of asylum seekers. [68596]

Mr. McNulty: None of the persons listed in the previous table provided, have been recorded as removals or voluntary departures of asylum seekers as they have not been granted leave to enter the United Kingdom, and are handed straight over to the French authorities.

Business Rates/Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been imprisoned for non-payment of (a) business rates and (b) council tax in each year since 1997. [66293]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on numbers of prisoners held under non-criminal categories of imprisonment is to be found in table 7.10 at the website http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/omcs.html for the Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2004. Figures can be found for all years since 1993 for the categories community charge/council tax, and rates. The data are as obtained from the prison IT system.

Child Trafficking

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 1406W, on child trafficking, whether the information requested is collected at a local level by (a) local authorities, (b) the police and (c) the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. [68551]

Mr. McNulty: Neither local authorities, police nor IND currently have specific requirements or associated standards and processes for such information to be collected at a local level. While some local recording may take place, it is not systematic. The Home Office is working in collaboration with DFES, local authorities, Local Safeguarding Children Boards and relevant voluntary organisations to address these issues. Among other steps we are establishing dedicated social work teams at ports and asylum screening units.

These teams will benefit from additional training and close working relationships with the Police and Immigration Service. The teams will ensure that children who need safeguarding will be properly referred to statutory agencies, and the information about them will be captured on the National Register of Unaccompanied Children and in due course the DFES Information Sharing Index.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 1406W, on child trafficking, if he will take steps to establish a system which will collect information about children who have been trafficked or smuggled from (a) EU countries and (b) the rest of the world. [68552]

Mr. McNulty: Information on the steps being taken to establish a system to collect information about children who have been trafficked or smuggled to the UK has been provided in answer to the hon. Gentleman's related PQ 68551. The Home Office is working in collaboration with both the EU and G8 countries to combat trafficking and the following outlines current actions:

(a) EU countries

The EU action plan on combating and preventing trafficking in human beings, which was agreed during the UK presidency, contains a number of specific actions focusing on children, including:

"holding a seminar on sharing best practice regarding the identification of children at risk, in particular unaccompanied minors; improving the strategic and tactical intelligence picture on trafficking in human beings and enabling an intelligence-led approach;

ensuring that Frontex (the EU's border agency) work on trafficking takes into account the particular circumstances of the most vulnerable victims, in particular children and women."

The plan also commits member states to sharing lists of priority origin and transit countries and the most frequently encountered routes, as well as improving knowledge on the scale and nature of trafficking in human beings.

(b) The rest of the world

The G8 are committed to tackling the threat of human trafficking and has recently accepted the UK's questionnaire and concept paper on human trafficking and smuggling which was proposed during our presidency. The concept paper and questionnaire will serve to add value to the G8's position on immigration crime and aims to highlight where a joined-up international approach on human trafficking will be most influential by looking at current trends, routings and areas of best practice.

Criminal Justice Act

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the custody plus and related provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 will be brought into force; what period of notice will be given before their introduction; and what transitional provisions his Department has planned. [67117]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Criminal justice agencies have already been advised that the Government are planning to introduce custody plus in the autumn of 2006. We are currently considering what transitional arrangements may be required.

Criminal Justice and Court Services Act

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which provisions within the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 (a) have not yet come into force and (b) have been replaced (i) prior to and (ii) after coming into force. [67120]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Criminal Records Bureau

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people are the subject of multiple Criminal Records Bureau clearance applications; [69440]

(2) how many people have renewed their Criminal Records Bureau clearance following expiry. [69442]

Joan Ryan: The information sought by the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham is not available. Criminal Records Bureau's standard and enhanced disclosures do not carry any specific period of validity. They are designed to be used by an employer or licensing authority at the point of recruitment for a specific position. With certain exceptions, CRB checks are not mandatory and the decision to undertake them for eligible positions rests with the employer or licensing authority, as does the decision to periodically renew checks on staff, bearing in mind any legal and contractual obligations.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to alter the Criminal Records Bureau registration system following the Bichard Inquiry recommendations. [69443]

Joan Ryan: In 2004 the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) undertook an exercise to evaluate the compliance of Registered Bodies with the Bureau's Code of Practice. This identified risks to the Disclosure service posed by an increasing and remote Registered Body network. Although the CRB and the Bichard Inquiry recognise the vital role of Registered Bodies in the Disclosure service, both share concern over the high numbers and proficiency of the existing Registered Body network.

The CRB will consequently reduce the number of Registered Bodies to work with those that remain to make the network more professional and more experienced in the Disclosure process. This will allow the CRB to ensure that the network of users is fully proficient in the security and policies of the CRB. A minimum threshold of 100 applications per year, per Registered Body has been set. The CRB will provide advice, guidance and support to organisations that do not meet the volume criteria about how they can access the Disclosure service in the future before their registration is cancelled.

The CRB has developed an alternative distribution network, through the Umbrella Body (UB) network to ensure cancelled organisations maintain full access to the Disclosure service. The CRB has been working closely with the existing UB network to ensure that they are able to provide an effective, robust and efficient service and have the capacity to absorb the increased volume of applications from new and cancelled organisations.

The CRB have developed a 'controlled roll out programme' to ensure that UB's can manage any increased volume with ease. The CRB have also been encouraging those organisations that remain part of the Registered Body network to become UBs. The UBs are able to offer a great deal of experience in handling and processing CRB checks that can also pay dividends in ensuring that the check is completed as quickly as possible. In addition, improved UB web pages have been developed and implemented on the CRB website, which provides an enhanced search facility to enable eligible organisations to find a suitable Umbrella Body.

Dental Care (Prisoners)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent on dentistry treatment provided for inmates of prisons in the UK in the last period for which figures are available, broken down by prison establishment; and if he will make a statement. [67501]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 3 May 2006]: In England, resources previously held by the Home Office for the dental care of prisoners have been devolved to those primary care trusts (PCTs) that host a publicly managed prison. This forms part of their general allocation to commission appropriate healthcare services for prisoners. These resources are not ring fenced, and PCTs as part of their commissioning role are able to move resources from one healthcare service to another to meet their specific local needs. It is therefore not possible for us to identify centrally how much is spent on dentistry in prisons.

The dental services provided to prisoners are an integral part of primary dental services under the new contractual arrangements for national health service dentistry. PCTs are required to provide all dental services required to meet the reasonable needs of their resident population, including prisoners. In Wales, these resources have been devolved to local health boards. Arrangements in Scotland and Northern Ireland are a matter for the Scottish Executive and the Northern Ireland Office respectively.

Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when sections 17 to 21 of the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 will be brought into force. [67118]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is intended that these provisions should be implemented by the end of this year.

Drug Confiscations (Prisons)

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the quantities of each drug that have been confiscated in prisons in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [67758]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information my hon. Friend has requested is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The Prison Service is improving its data collection and is shortly to begin implementation of a new system called CNOMIS for recording gathering data.

Ex-prisoners

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the involvement of crime reduction partnerships in the resettlement of ex-prisoners. [65585]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The importance of involving crime reduction partnership agencies in the resettlement of offenders is recognised in the NOMS regional strategies to reduce re-offending as well as nationally in the Government's Reducing Re-offending Delivery Plan. In November 2005 Baroness Scotland launched three alliances, including the Civic Alliance which set out how NOMS can work with local authorities and local communities to reduce re-offending.

These are now being rolled out across the nine regions and Wales by Regional Offender Managers (ROMs). The ROM in the East Midlands, along with the Local Government Association and Society of Local Government Chief Executives, is leading a demonstration project on how NOMS will work with local Strategic Partnerships and Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships (CDRPs) through local area agreements to reduce re-offending in local communities. To date no evaluation of the effectiveness of CDRPs' involvement specifically in the resettlement of ex-prisoners has been completed. However, work has recently begun in London to examine the operation of a scheme aimed at meeting the needs of prisoners resettling in eight London boroughs.

The scheme—the London Resettlement Pilot—forms part of the London Resettlement Strategy published in September 2005. The Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships in the eight boroughs (Hammersmith and Fulham, Kensington and Chelsea, Brent, Barnet, Hillingdon, Hounslow, Harrow and Ealing) are working with Wormwood Scrubs prison in west London. They have nominated local strategic leaders who are working to develop enhanced and co-ordinated responses to the needs of resettling prisoners. An action research project has been commissioned which will report in summer 2006 on the resettlement pilot and will include an assessment of progress being made through working with local partnerships in this way.

An evaluation is also currently underway of the impact of Prolific and other Priority Offenders Programme (PPO), which is being implemented by CDRPs and local Strategic Partnerships. One strand of the programme is aimed at rehabilitating and resettling PPOs who are in custody or serving sentences in the community, through closer working between all relevant agencies and continued post-sentence support. A final report on this work is due in autumn 2006.

Foreign Prisoners

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what prison programmes there are to assist the rehabilitation of foreign national prisoners. [69539]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Prison Service offers a range of opportunities to develop the skills and meet the needs of prisoners including foreign nationals. These include education and training, specialist programmes, work and resettlement courses. English for speakers of other languages is provided where that need is present, and may have to be undertaken prior to engagement in other interventions.

Identity Cards

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the effectiveness of identification cards and associated data in (i) thwarting acts of terror and (ii) helping identify perpetrators; and if he will make a statement. [47960]

Joan Ryan: We have carefully evaluated the effectiveness of identity cards in contributing to preventing and disrupting terrorism, and in identifying those engaged in terrorism. For reasons relating to national security, it is not possible to go into details. The Security Services have said that an ID card will help. Eliza Manningham-Buller, Director General of the Security Services, said:

"Widespread use of false documents is an essential aspect of terrorist activities. Al-Qaeda's own training manual requires its operatives to acquire false identities to hide their terrorist activities. ID Cards will make it more difficult for terrorists to operate".

In the translation of the Al-Qaeda training manual (found by the Manchester Police during a search of an Al-Qaeda member's home) it states in the Third Lesson relating to Counterfeit Currency and Forged Documents:

"The brother who has special work status (commander, communication link,...) should have more than one identity card and passport. He should learn the contents of each, the nature of the [indicated] profession, and the dialect of the residence area listed in the document."

Informants (HMP Wandsworth)

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been made about the use of illegal informants at HM Prison Wandsworth; what action was taken in each case; what disciplinary sanctions resulted; and if he will make a statement. [69420]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not Prison Service policy to discuss the use of informants in individual establishments.

International Arrest Warrants

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1619W, on international arrest warrants, if he will place in the Library copies of the written representations from the Israeli Government. [69808]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not our practice to deposit in the Library representations received from foreign Governments in confidence.

Israel

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 1416W, on which dates his officials met representatives of Israel; who those representatives were; and what written submissions those representatives presented on the issuing of arrest warrants in international cases. [68401]

Joan Ryan: Discussions took place with the Minister Plenipotentiary from the Israeli embassy on 10 April this year. The written representations concerned the potential for arrest warrants to be sought against Israeli citizens and members of the Israeli defence forces visiting the United Kingdom.

John Joseph Tourney

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken by the Criminal Cases Review Commission to comply with the Order of the Divisional Court in the High Court of Justice in Northern Ireland made on 22 June 2005 in connection with the application by John Joseph Tourney for judicial review of a decision by the Commission. [67690]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not the practice to comment on the outcome of individual cases. The hon. Member's letter of 19 April 2006. In their letter they set out their consideration of the case and how they have complied with the Order of the High Court of Justice in Northern Ireland.

Murderers

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of convicted murderers were on (a) probation, (b) early release and (c) parole when they committed their offence in each of the last five years. [65495]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information is not available in the precise form requested. Data on the number of murder convictions in England and Wales from 2000-04 can be found in the table. Individuals are subject to probation supervision when there is a statutory requirement following a community penalty or release from a custodial sentence (including parole and automatic conditional release). Data on the number of individuals who were convicted of murder while being supervised by the Probation Service can be found in the table.

The information is not available to show how many of those offenders who were convicted of murder when being supervised by the Probation Service, were serving community sentences or were on licence following release from custody. Until 2004, the data on the number of individuals convicted of a serious offence while subject to probation supervision was collected under the Serious Incident Reporting (SIR) process by calendar year. From 1 April 2004, when the SIR process was replaced by the Serious Further Offence process, data on the number of murders and other serious offences committed by offenders being supervised by the Probation Service began to be collected by business year. Between 1 April 2004 and 31 March 2005, 26 offenders being supervised by the Probation Service were convicted of murder.

National Offender Management Service

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what areas of the prison estate the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) has taken over direct responsibility. [67346]

Mr. Sutcliffe: NOMS is responsible for all areas of the prison estate.

Passports

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which retail outlets are allowed to hold passport application forms. [67763]

Joan Ryan: Passport application forms are available from those Post Office branches and Worldchoice travel agents that offer the passport "Check and Send" service. There are around 2,800 such outlets across the UK. Application packs are also available from the Passport Adviceline, the Application Form Request line, and the Identity and Passport Service website. Application packs are regularly reviewed and updated. These arrangements ensure that passport applicants are able to obtain up to date application packs, and also allow for the efficient control of stock.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to reduce the number of passports lost by the UK Passport Service since the introduction of the use of the special mail service. [68702]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The Identity and Passport Service is working closely with SMS to reduce losses in the delivery process. The following actions have been taken:

"To deal with the threat of courier attacks, delivery routes and delivery times are changed regularly, and double manning used.

Security at SMS branches has been strengthened, and vehicle tracking improved.

A higher standard of secure delivery for 80 per cent. of addresses.

New technology is being deployed to improve location of addresses, and evidence of delivery.

As there is a clear audit trail for the delivery of each passport, every loss is fully investigated including to check whether postcode details have been correctly captured, and performance and procedural improvements made."

Where losses are confirmed, the passport details are recorded on IPS's lost and stolen passport database to prevent misuse. Also, all passports contain security features to prevent counterfeiting and forgery, and to recognise it when it is attempted. Since the introduction of secure delivery in February 2004, secure mail services have successfully delivered nearly 13 million items 98 per cent. on the next day.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fraudulent passport applications were made in each of the last 10 years; and how many of those applications involved (a) identity theft and (b) false declarations where the individual was otherwise entitled to a passport. [68705]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 4 May 2006]: Figures for the number of fraudulent passport applications detected by the Identity and Passport Service since 1996 are set out in the table.

	Number
1996	1,164
1997	1,880
1998	1,368
1999	1,596
2000	1,484
2001	2,419
2002	1,973
2003	1,571
2004	1,880
2005	1,126

IPS introduced in March 2005 a new and comprehensive fraud casework and management information system. This is used for the progression of cases of suspected fraud and the collection, collation and analysis of information relating to passport fraud. Prior to the introduction of this system information relating to frauds detected was collated through manual processes and the analysis of breakdowns of types of fraudulent applications was not available. Figures relating to fraudulent applications involving identity theft and false declarations where the individual was otherwise entitled to a passport, for the period April 2005 to January 2006 are as follows:

	Number
Deceased ID	76
Fictitious ID	257
Genuine ID	286
False Statements	141
Countersignature Fraud	148
Other	400
Total	1,308

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many dispatched passports have been reported lost since February 2004; and what estimate he has made of the number of such lost passports that may have been stolen. [68706]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The estimated number of passports lost whilst in the delivery process for the period February 2004 to January 2006 is 1,561. Of these, 308 are known to have been lost as a consequence of robbery or theft, or lost whilst being delivered by secure mail services. The remainder are passports that have been misposted by couriers, and not subsequently recovered.

Points System

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the weighting of earnings is for the purposes of the proposed points system for entry as a highly skilled migrant for applicants from (a) India, (b) Pakistan, (c) Nigeria and (d) Ghana. [68541]

Mr. McNulty: Highly skilled migrants will enter under tier 1 of the proposed points-based system and receive points for a number of attributes including their previous earnings. Under tier 1 of the proposed points-based system high-skilled migrants will receive points for a number of attributes they can demonstrate, including their previous earnings. As with the current High Skilled Migrant Programme (HSMP), salaries earned overseas will be converted at an appropriate rate so that we can equate the earnings of equivalent workers between countries which have different income levels. The precise details of the points-based system, including salary conversion rates, are being developed and will be announced in advance of our implementation of the points-based system.

Prisons

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what checks are in place in prisons to ensure that when halal meat is offered to prisoners as an alternative, non-halal meat is also made available. [67974]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Guidance has been issued to all prisons that when a halal meat or poultry menu choice is offered an alternative non-halal meat or poultry choice must be provided. The halal choice must be clearly identified on the published menu. Aside from local management requirements to follow this guidance regular checks are made by area catering managers.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long each prison governor had served as governor as at 31 March 2006; who the governor of each prison is; what relevant specialist qualifications he or she holds; what the details are of his or her career to date; on what date each joined the Prison Service; at which prisons each has served as a governor; when each is expected to retire; who has been appointed to replace him or her; and if he will make a statement. [66883]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The table contains a list of current governors-in-charge of each public sector Prison Service establishment together with their length of tenure at their current establishment. The names of Directors of contracted establishments is also included. All other information requested, including that considered personal information for which individual consent to release is required, can only be obtained at disproportionate cost. Information on the career histories and personal details of Directors of contracted (privately) managed establishments is not routinely collected and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff at governor grades at each prison establishment in the Prison Service have been transferred compulsorily to another role in each of the last four years. [69324]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table relates to directed moves since April 2004 until the end of April 2006. There are no figures available before April 2004 and these figures relate only to senior operational managers (senior governor grades in pay bands A to D). Figures for operational managers (pay bands E and F) are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The number of senior operational managers in the public sector prison service in England and Wales transferred compulsorily to another role between April 2004 and April 2006

Period	Number of managed moves
April 2004 to December 2004	13
January 2005 to December 2005	52
January 2006 to April 2006	25

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the performance testing exercises have resulted in prison governors being transferred compulsorily to another establishment; and if he will make a statement. [69325]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The performance testing process is fluid and will require different specialisms, skills and experiences to support it. On occasions this means there will need to be staffing changes. Some of these changes will be the result of directed moves. Details of the numbers or reasons for these movements are not held centrally and it could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of Prison Service staff who have secondary employment as security staff; what action he is taking to ensure compliance with Prison Service orders relating to such employment; what mechanisms exist to ensure the appropriate use of investigatory powers; and if he will make a statement. [69421]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people sentenced to more than (a) five and (b) 10 years were received into prison in each year since 1990; and what estimate has been made of the likely numbers over the next 10 years. [67344]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the numbers of prisoners received into prison under an immediate custodial sentence of more than (a) five and (b) 10 years is published in:

For receptions in 1994 to 2004—Table 7.8 of the internet tables for Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2004.

For receptions in 1990 to 1993—Table 1.13 of Prison Statistics England and Wales 1993.

The internet tables for Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2004 are available at the following internet address—http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/omcs.html. A copy of Prison Statistics England and Wales 2003 is available from the House of Commons Library. The latest prison population projections are published in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin 10/05 "Updated and Revised Prison Population Projections, 2005-2011, England and Wales". Figures for 10 scenarios can be found in this document. However, projections have not been made at the level of detail that would allow the numbers of receptions in particular sentence length bands to be estimated.

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the prison population was on 31 March; how many unoccupied prison places there were; and in which prisons they were located. [67349]

Mr. Sutcliffe: On 31 March 2006, the total prison population was 77,058 and there was available capacity for 2,203 prisoners. Capacity was available at all prison establishments, with the exception of HMP Haverigg.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Education and Skills about the impact of the churn of prisoners on educational provision. [65605]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Home Secretary has regular meetings with the Secretary of State for Education and Skills. Recent meetings have not covered the effect of churn specifically, but have focused on the establishment of the Offenders Learning and Skills (OLASS) project, which will introduce a new service of education and skills for offenders in both custody and the community.

There have also been discussions about the Reducing Reoffending through Skills and Employment Green Paper launched in December 2005, which looks at strengthening the link between education and employability for prisoners. The Department for Education and Skills, the National Offender Management Service and the national probation directorate (NPD) are working closely to ensure that all prisoners have education opportunities in prison and in the community after release. The throughput of prisoners in establishments (i.e. numbers of prisoners received and discharged on a daily basis, also known as churn) has increased significantly.

It has had some impact on establishment performance, particularly in hard pressed local prisons. However, since April 2002, over 150,000 basic skills qualifications have been achieved by learners in prison. In the last year, the NPD in partnership with the Learning and Skills Council supported the achievement of just under 9,500 qualifications to offenders in the community.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will instruct the Prison Service to run a small number of pilot schemes to assess the impact of paying prisoners market rates for their work, with appropriate deductions to cover the cost of accommodation, food, child support and reparations for victims. [65609]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Prison Service already has a scheme at HMP Coldingley that pays prisoners market rates for their work. However any expansion of such a pilot is limited by finding sufficient work that generates income to support such schemes. Under present legislation prisoners cannot be required to contribute directly to the cost of their stay in prison. Section 51 of the Prison Act 1952 requires that all expenses incurred for the maintenance of prisons and prisoners are met from public funds. However some schemes do exist that enable prisoners to make voluntary contributions to a variety of charitable causes, including those for victims. The Prisoners' Earnings Act 1996, which would, if implemented, allow deductions to be made, is very complex and prescriptive and would cost substantially more to administer than it would raise in revenue.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates are being held at HMP Leyhill; how many of these are (a) category D prisoners and (b) prisoners of other categories; what the corresponding figures were five years ago; and if he will make a statement. [68240]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 3 May 2006]: There were 341 prisoners detained at HMP Leyhill on 31 March 2006 and 321 detained on 31 March 2001. All were category D prisoners.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost to (a) HM Prison Service and (b) other prison operators was of litigation in each of the last five years; what proportion of actions were initiated by (i) staff, (ii) inmates and (iii) others; and what action he is taking to reduce levels of litigation arising from the operation of prisons. [66599]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table covers the last two financial years. Data prior to this are unreliable and are therefore not included. Information collated centrally relates to public sector prisons; litigation in private sector prisons is a matter for the individual contractor. The figures exclude employment tribunals. In liaison with the Treasury Solicitor, the Prison Service publishes a monthly newsletter, highlighting best practice and lessons learned, to prison governors and senior staff.

In addition, the Prison Service's Litigation Unit regularly reminds establishments of the steps to be taken following incidents, in order that resultant claims can, where possible, be defended. Trend data collated over the last two years are to be used to identify potential difficulties allowing governors and area managers to take remedial action for the future.

Probation Service

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what legislation governs the requirement on the Probation Service to provide a pre-sentence report when a (a) magistrates court and (b) Crown court requests one; and if he will make a statement. [66852]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 and the Criminal Justice Act 2003 contain provisions which relate to either the role of the national probation service in assisting the court through the production of pre-sentence reports or the consideration of such reports by the courts. In particular, the Criminal Justice Act 2003, part 12, from section 156 sets out the requirements on courts to obtain and consider pre-sentence reports.

Public Service Agreements

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress his Department is making towards the Spending Review 2002 Public Service Agreement Target (a) four, on public confidence in the criminal justice system and (b) five, on protecting the public and reducing re-offending; and if he will make a statement. [67854]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The spending review 2002 set the following Public Service Agreement Targets (PSA) for the Home Department: (a) PSA four, Improve the level of public confidence in the Criminal Justice System, including increasing that of minority ethnic communities, and increasing year on year the satisfaction of witnesses, whilst respecting the rights of defendants. And; (b) PSA five, Protect the Public and reduce re-offending by 5 per cent. I have published progress made against these targets in the Autumn Performance Report of December 2005 (CM6707), and will be publishing my latest assessment of progress, in the Departmental Report for 2005-06 which will be published in May at:

www.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/ho-targets-autumn-report-05

Residence Requirements

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of people who will be affected by the decision to extend the period of residence for settlement; and if he will make a statement. [68487]

Mr. McNulty: An assessment has been made based on the number of in-country work related applications for settlement received each year. This indicates that around 45,000 applicants may be affected by the change and will now have to wait a further year for settlement. This estimate has been made subject to certain assumptions; for instance, that applicants who are eligible will apply for settlement at the earliest opportunity, and that the broad pattern of applications will remain the same as before.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he held with minority ethnic communities about the likely impact of the extension of the residence period for settlement prior to its introduction; what such consultations he has had since its introduction; and if he will make a statement. [68488]

Mr. McNulty: The change in the minimum qualifying period for settlement affects work permit holders and those coming to the UK for employment. Our discussion of the change has, therefore, reflected this and has been principally with organisations that represent employees irrespective of their nationality or ethnic community. The Home Office has regular contact and discussions on migration and asylum issues with representatives of the minority ethnic communities.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he held with (a) employers, (b) employers' organisations and (c) employees' organisations representing minority ethnic communities on the effects of the extension of the residency period required for settlement rights; and if he will make a statement. [68489]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office has had significant and regular contact with employers and employers' organisations to discuss the future changes to the immigration system since this increase in the minimum qualifying period for settlement was announced on 7 February 2005. Between that date and the introduction of the change we received no views from employers on the substance of the policy, and the views that we have received since have been about the effect of the timing on individuals, not on sectors of business or employment. Most of the views we receive from employers in the normal course of events are that skilled workers do not stay with them for long enough, which, of course, is not affected by this change. On consultation about the effect of this change on minority ethnic communities I refer the my hon. Friend to my previous answer [No 68488].

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the likely effects on (a) the employability of those on work permits, (b) employers of migrant workers and (c) inward investment of the extension of the residency period required for settlement rights in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [68490]

Mr. McNulty: The change does not affect anyone's right to remain and work in the UK; anyone with valid leave to remain and who is continuing in employment will qualify to remain as before and should have no difficulty in completing the fifth year. It will, therefore, have no affect on the employability of those on work permits since their employability is linked first and foremost to the skills that they possess, whether there is an employer who continues to require those skills, and whether the skills are still not available in the resident labour market. In some cases an employer may have to obtain renewal of a work permit and to pay a fee. We wish to maintain the attractiveness of the UK as a destination for investors. But our assessment is that the length of the qualifying period for settlement is of marginal importance in inward investment decisions compared with economic factors and the specific investment opportunities available. The discussions that we have had with representatives include those who represent individual overseas investors and these discussions have reassured us that the impact of this change on its own is likely to be neutral.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the merits of transitional arrangements for those affected by the extension of the residency period required for settlement in the UK; what representations he has received on this matter; and if he will make a statement. [68491]

Mr. McNulty: The Government looked closely at the merits of introducing transitional arrangements for those affected by the increase in the minimum qualifying period for settlement. In deciding not to introduce transitional arrangements the Government took account, amongst other things, of the following: the change does not prevent anyone from doing anything that they are currently doing; it does not limit anyone's time with any employer or reduce their stay in the United Kingdom in any way; and that to introduce transitional arrangements for those who arrived when the qualifying period was four years would mean that a desirable policy would not take effect until 2011.

The Government have received representations from the Immigration Law Practitioners Association and from the Chinese Association about the change as a whole and from the Royal College of Nursing about some aspects of it. In addition a small number of individuals have been in contact with the Home Office about their individual cases. We acknowledge that this is will be a disappointing change for those individuals and will provide guidance and advice to those affected.

Security Industry Authority

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many licensing applications were received by the Security Industry Authority (SIA) in each month since January 2005; how many licences were issued; how many applications were returned to the individual for (a) correction, (b) further information and (c) other reasons; and if he will make a statement on the performance of the SIA in handling licensing applications. [56444]

Mr. Coaker: The Security Industry Authority (SIA) are currently issuing around 530 licences a day. By virtue of the backlog (caused by some parts of the industry failing to meet their part of the agreement to submit licences over a 14-month period) the average time taken to process a licence has risen from six weeks for over 80 per cent. of applications to approximately 10 weeks. The SIA are taking steps to increase capacity. This information is set out in the table.

[1] Up to March.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what factors affected the timing of the decision in February 2006 to include security personnel working in alarm control centres in the Security Industry Authority (SIA) licensing scheme; how many SIA licences have been issued to personnel working in alarm control centres; and how many SIA licence applications are yet to be processed. [65808]

Mr. Coaker: The Security Industry Authority (SIA) first provided guidance that individuals who use CCTV to 'solely identify intruders onto a site' would need a Security Guard licence, as opposed to a CCTV licence, in the "Licensing Security Get Licensed" booklet, published in January 2005, not February 2006. The SIA has consistently made this position clear since then. Incorrect advice was given to one company by the SIA's call centre in October 2005, which was corrected in February 2006. It is not possible to identify how many licensed security guards undertake activities in alarm centres.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions where electronic type tags were fitted to persons after their release from prison for sex offences in England and Wales between 2000 and 2005, the tags were found to have been illegally removed. [64909]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 24 April 2006]: A total of 64 prisoners are recorded as serving a sentence for a sexual offence at the time of their release on home detention curfew (HDC). The last such offender recorded as released on HDC was released in January 2004. It is not possible to provide accurate statistics of the number who removed their tag. This is because the data relate to the period before the start of the new electronic monitoring contracts on 1 April 2005 and are incomplete. Also, the data of one former supplier are unavailable.

US Extradition

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many alleged offenders have been extradited from the US to the UK in each of the last five years. [69359]

Joan Ryan: The figures for the last five complete calendar years are as follows:

	Number
2001	4
2002	3
2003	6
2004	7
2005	2

Work Permit Regulations

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what period of grace he proposes for doctors already in the UK under the new work permit regulations; [65015]

(2) what response he has made to the request of the British Medical Association for a period of grace for international medical graduates already in the UK in relation to the relevant changes in immigration rules. [65055]

Mr. McNulty: The changes to the rules were developed by the Home Office and the Department of Health together, following a request by the Department of Health. Those who had existing leave as a postgraduate doctor or dentist prior to the changes can continue to use this leave as before. We have also put in place transitional arrangements for all those either in a post or offered one before the Department of Health announced the changes on 7 March. Full details of the transitional arrangements are available in the Immigration Directorates' Instructions on the revised rules on the IND website at www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk The Home Office and the Department of Health met with the British Medical Association to discuss the changes, including the transitional arrangements.

Young Offenders

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many under 18 year olds were remanded to custody by each youth court in each year since 2000; and what percentage of sentences for under-18s this represented in each case. [67350]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Statistics collected from the magistrates courts and the police on persons remanded to custody by magistrates/youth courts are not sufficiently robust to be shown for under 18-year-olds and by individual court. The readily available information, which relates to persons aged 10 to 17 sentenced for indictable offences in each magistrates/youth court, is published in table S4.1(B) of 'Criminal statistics, England and Wales, supplementary tables, Volume 4'. These publications can be found on the Home Office website for 2000-04, as follows: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs/crimstatvol4.pdfhttp://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs2/cs2001vol4.xlshttp://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs2/cs2002vol4pt1.xlshttp://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs04/cs2003vol4pt1.xls.http://www.home office.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/cs2004vol4pt1.xls.

WORK AND PENSIONS

100th Birthday (One-off Payment)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will introduce a one-off payment for UK residents who reach the age of 100 years. [69459]

Mr. Plaskitt: We have no plans to make such a payment.

Benefit Recipients (Doncaster, North)

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many residents of Doncaster, North constituency received pension credit in the most recent period for which figures were available, broken down by ward; and what the average payment was. [68304]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is provided in the following table.

Pension credit individual beneficiaries and average weekly amount of benefit for wards in Doncaster, North, November 2005

Ward name	Individual beneficiaries	Average weekly benefit (£)
Adwick	1,220	38.39
Askern	785	39.08

Notes:
1. Number of individual beneficiaries are rounded to a multiple of five, average amounts to the nearest penny.
2. Average weekly benefit has been calculated using the numbers of claimants.
3. Individual beneficiaries includes claimants and partners.
4. Pension credit (PC) replaced minimum income guarantee (MIG) on 6 October 2003. Existing MIG recipients were automatically converted onto pension credit on that date (assuming they still met the eligibility criteria).

Claim Processing

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many days it took to rate a claim for (a) income support, (b) jobseeker's allowance and (c) incapacity benefit in Alloa in the most recent period for which figures are available. [68805]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about how many days it took to rate a claim for Jobseeker's Allowance, Income Support and Incapacity Benefit in Alloa in the most recent period for which figures are available. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Our measure of the time taken to process a claim is the Actual Average Clearance Time. For 2005/06, the Jobcentre Plus Key Management Indicators for processing claims were 12 working days for Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance and 19 working days for Incapacity Benefit.

Jobcentre Plus does not record separate information for Alloa. However, it is included with the whole of the Stirling area. The average clearance times for the Stirling area in March 2006 are set out in the table.

	Income support clearance time	Jobseeker's allowance clearance time	Incapacity benefit clearance times
			Days
March 2006	18.3	10	14.3

Although the overall Actual Average Clearance Time for Income Support claims during 2005/06 is 11.3 days, the figure for March was 18.3 days. Action is being taken to reverse the recent increase in clearance times in Income Support.

A number of additional staff are currently undergoing intensive training and we anticipate an improvement in clearance times once they come into operation. Our management groups meet regularly to review local arrangements and performance issues, and this enables us to solve immediate problems.

Jobcentre Plus gives a high priority to customer service and we are doing everything we can to ensure that we continue to deliver the high level of service our customers have the right to expect.

I hope this is helpful.

Pension Credit

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of pensioners received pension credit in (a) the UK, (b) the South West and (c) Taunton constituency in each year since its introduction. [64312]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information that is available is in the following table.

Pension credit case loads (beneficiaries)

	November 2003	August 2004	August 2005
Total in Great Britain	2,495,300	3,147,100	3,281,200
Percentage of population over age 60 in Great Britain in receipt of pension credit	20.5	25.6	26.7
Total in South West Government office region	206,600	260,700	271,900
Percentage of population over age 60 in South West Government office region in receipt of pension credit	17.1	17.1	22.1
Total in Taunton parliamentary constituency	4,000	5,300	5,500

Notes:
1. Case load figures are rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. Estimates of the number of people over age 60 in parliamentary constituencies are unavailable; a percentage figure for the Taunton constituency cannot be provided.
3. The answer is expressed as a percentage of the population over age 60 as pension credit (PC) is an entitlement for claimants in this age group.
4. The number of individual beneficiaries is the claimants plus their partners. Couples may include partners who are less than age 60.
5. Pension credit replaced minimum income guarantee (MIG) on 6 October 2003. Existing MIG recipients were automatically converted onto pension credit on that date (assuming they still met the eligibility criteria).

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the average payment of pension credit was in Midlothian in the latest period for which figures are available; [68891]

(2) how many households in Midlothian are in receipt of pension credit. [69199]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is provided in the following table.

Parliamentary constituency	Household beneficiaries	Weekly average amount (£)
Midlothian	3,590	37.39

Notes:
1. The preferred data source for figures supplied by the Department for Work and Pensions is the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study (WPLS), for which the latest published data is November 2005. However, as the latest available figures have been requested the figures provided have been taken from the pension credit early estimates.
2. Caseloads are rounded to the nearest 10.
3. These figures are early estimates. Caseload figures are taken from the GMS scan at 17 February 2006. These are adjusted using the historical relationship between WPLS and GMS data to give an estimate of the final WPLS figure. Average amounts are displayed as at the scan reference data of 17 February 2006.
4. Pension credit (PC) replaced minimum income guarantee (MIG) on 6 October 2003. Existing MIG recipients were automatically converted onto pension credit on that date (assuming they still met the eligibility criteria).
5. Household recipients are those people who claim PC either on behalf of themselves only or on behalf of a household. This number is equal to the number of households in receipt of PC.
6. Couples may include partners who are aged less than 60.
7. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant postcode directory.

Mr. Plaskitt: The information that is available has been placed in the Library.

Post Office Card Accounts

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in which (a) postcode areas and (b) constituencies holders of Post Office card accounts are being contacted to close their Post Office card accounts under the pilot scheme announced by his Department. [65881]

Mr. Plaskitt: We ran a number of small-scale pilots between 13 February and 10 March 2006, with coverage across Great Britain. Now that the pilots have concluded we are evaluating the results.

SCOTLAND

Block Grant

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the First Minister on the underspend of the Scottish block grant. [69477]

David Cairns: My right hon. Friend intends to meet the First Minister frequently to discuss a range of issues. Government Departments and the devolved administrations are entitled to carry forward departmental expenditure limit (DEL) monies that have not been spent from one financial year to the next. This end year flexibility is a prudent and proper part of the Government accounting system.

Children's Services

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many nursery and creche places are provided for people working in his Department; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for the children of employees of his Department. [67367]

David Cairns: The staff in the Scotland Office are on loan from the Scottish Executive or the Department for Constitutional Affairs and have access to the facilities provided by those Departments.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in his Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years. [67987]

David Cairns: Regarding inappropriate use of the internet, I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Castle Point (Bob Spink) on 15 February 2006, Official Report, column 2091W. The telephone system for the Scotland Office bars telephone calls to premium rate numbers.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [69108]

David Cairns: This information was published in the Office's annual report for 2005 and will be updated in the 2006 report which will be published shortly.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [69106]

David Cairns: The staff in the Scotland Office are on loan from the Scottish Executive or the Department for Constitutional Affairs and are able to apply for the opportunities of those Departments.

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65201]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office operates one website, www.scotlandoffice.gov.uk: no reports were placed on this site during March 2006.

ID Cards (Scotland)

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how the introduction of identity cards in Scotland will differ from the rest of the UK. [68446]

David Cairns: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. Friend, the previous Secretary of State for Scotland, gave to him in response to his similar question during Scottish oral questions on 28 March 2006, Official Report, columns 668-69.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Bolivia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Bolivia about their campaign for the UN to legalise coca. [68170]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the reply the then Minister for Europe my right hon. Friend the Member for Paisley and Renfrewshire, South (Mr. Alexander) gave to him on 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 185W. It is for the Bolivian Government to establish the overall direction of policy on coca cultivation, but the UK expects Bolivia will continue to respect international agreements already committed to. Where possible, we hope to continue to assist the Bolivian Government in their efforts to tackle drug trafficking. Our position on this issue has not changed.

Brazil

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Government of Brazil on the use of military-style armoured police vehicles in Rio de Janeiro's favelas and the protection of civilians from indiscriminate enforcement activity. [68409]

Mr. Hoon: The Government have raised human rights issues with the Brazilian Government, including those relating to policing methods. The authorities there recognise the scale of the problem and addressing it is a priority for Brazil's Government.

In April this year my noble Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, met with Paulo Vannuchi, Special Secretary for Human Rights. The two agreed that police reform was a key area in which Brazil and the UK could co-operate, complementing existing Government-supported projects with Brazilian partners aimed at combating torture and improving the police and penal systems. We will continue to work with the Brazilian authorities and with Brazilian civil society to help address the root causes of these problems.

Burma

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his EU counterparts about the case for a total investment ban in Burma. [68180]

Mr. McCartney: There is currently no consensus within the EU to introduce an investment ban in Burma. My right. hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not had any recent discussions with her EU counterparts on this issue.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his counterparts on the UN Security Council about Burma. [68181]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has regular discussions with UN Security Council partners about a number of countries, including Burma.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the reports recently issued by the Free Burma Rangers about Burma Army attacks on civilians. [68182]

Mr. McCartney: We are aware of the reports. We are particularly concerned that offensives continue in Karen State despite the cease-fire discussions between the Karen National Union and the State Peace and Development Council (SPDC) which have been held in the past two years. We call for the SPDC to refrain from attacks on civilians, in line with international humanitarian law, and to pursue peaceful political solutions to the ethnic conflicts in Burma.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what recent (a) meetings he has had and (b) representations he has received about (i) human rights in Burma, (ii) the status of Shan refugees living in Thailand and (iii) the use of rape as a weapon of war in Burma; [68183]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Burma about (a) human rights, (b) persecution of ethnic nationals, with particular reference to the Shan people, the Karen people and the Karenni, and (c) the use of rape as a weapon of war in Burma. [68185]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no recent discussions with the Burmese Government. The Head of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's (FCO) South East Asia Group recently raised the human rights situation in Burma with the Burmese

Ambassador in London on 11 April and senior officials from the Burmese Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Rangoon on 20 April.

There is credible evidence that members of the Burmese armed forces are carrying out rape on a large scale, particularly against women belonging to ethnic groups. Both Professor Sergio Pinheiro, the UN Special Rapporteur for Human Rights in Burma, and Nang Charm Tong of the Shan Women's Action Network have produced reports demonstrating the extent of this. We have helped to ensure that resolutions at the UN General Assembly have called for an end to the use of rape and sexual violence by the armed forces in Burma.

My right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary discussed the human rights situation in Burma, including the use of rape as a weapon of war, and the status of Shan refugees living in Thailand with Nang Charm Tong on 26 April. FCO officials regularly discuss human rights issues with representatives from non-governmental organisations and Burmese ethnic groups.

Chad

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with members of the government of Chad on the planned presidential elections on 3 May; what security concerns have been raised by the government of Chad; what help has been (a) offered by the UK Government and (b) accepted by the government of Chad to ensure a safe environment for the election; and if he will make a statement. [66689]

Mr. McCartney: We have had no specific discussions with the Government of Chad about the elections which took place on 3 May 2006, but we have made consistently clear our wish to see credible and peaceful elections in Chad and throughout Africa.

As there is no resident UK mission in N'Djamena, our main engagement in-country is through resident EU Heads of Mission. An EU delegation visited Chad on 27 and 28 April and met with President Deby to discuss the security situation in Chad and the forthcoming elections. We call upon President Deby to open genuine political dialogue with the opposition and civil society to ensure a secure environment.

The EU did not provide any support or observers for the election following a UN Development Programme report which stated that the elections in Chad did not meet the minimum conditions required for them to be described as free and fair.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support the UK Government plan to commit to alleviate the security and political situation in Chad. [66714]

Mr. McCartney: As there is no resident UK mission in N'Djamena, our main engagement in-country is through resident EU Heads of Mission. An EU mission visited Chad on 27 and 28 April to discuss the security situation in Chad and the elections. The EU did not provide any support or observers for the election following a UN Development Programme report which stated that the elections in Chad did not meet the minimum conditions required for them to be described as free and fair.

The UK provided £5 million to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the World Food Programme, and to non-governmental organisations delivering life-saving medical assistance and water supplies in Chad in 2005. In 2006, we are providing £4 million to support the humanitarian response in Chad.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Chad; and what assessment he has made of whether the country will be able to proceed with its scheduled elections. [68569]

Mr. McCartney: The situation in Chad remains unstable following army desertions, attempted coups and general unrest throughout much of the country in recent months. A rebel assault on the capital, N'Djamena on 13 April was defeated, but unrest is likely to continue. We remain concerned, particularly, about cross-border attacks involving both Darfur and Chadian rebels.

Presidential elections took place as scheduled on 3 May. Reports so far indicate that they have been generally peaceful, but opposition parties boycotted the election and voter turnout was low.

Cote D'Ivoire

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of (a) the current security situation in Cote d'Ivôire, (b) the projected development of the security situation in the run-up to the presidential elections in Cote d'Ivôire, (c) the ability of the current UN peacekeeping deployment to meet the increased security demand and (d) the UN Secretary General's most recent call to the Security Council for additional troops and police; and if he will make a statement. [66641]

Mr. McCartney: The peace process in Cote d'Ivôire is at a critical stage. The security situation will remain fragile and difficult to predict in the lead up to elections. The UN peacekeeping deployment, working closely with French peacekeepers, has played an important role in maintaining peace on the ground under difficult circumstances. Discussions in New York are currently under way on the UN Secretary General's call for additional troops and civilian police. We believe that an increase in troops is justified, but decisions on the precise modalities must be made on a careful assessment of need.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the potential impact of the proposal in Cote d'Ivoire to run disarmament and voter identification programmes concurrently on the (a) security situation and (b) enfranchisement levels in the run-up to presidential elections; and if she will make a statement. [66690]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him today (UIN 66641) and on 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 1391W.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by his Department to assist with reform of the security services in Democratic Republic of Congo, with particular reference to steps taken (a) to improve respect for human rights and (b) to reduce sexual violence against women. [68175]

Mr. McCartney: Poorly-disciplined and unpaid members of the Democratic Republic of Congo security services continue to commit frequent human rights abuses, including sexual violence against women. We have pushed the Congolese Government, including the President and senior army officials, for an end to such abuses and for those guilty to be brought to justice.

The UK has provided finance and experts to the EU's Security Sector Reform mission, which is helping create a unified army and reduce the massive corruption stopping ordinary soldiers from being paid. The UK is also contributing £3 million for accommodation and sanitation for soldiers in the integrated brigades. Better pay, conditions and training should mean a reduction in troops harassing civilians for food and money.

Equatorial Guinea

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions and requests for judicial co-operation there have been between the authorities in South Africa and the UK authorities regarding the alleged involvement of Greg Wales, David Tremain and Eli Calil in the attempted coup in Equatorial Guinea. [68318]

Mr. McCartney: It is the Government's practice to treat requests for judicial co-operation or discussions about criminal matters from foreign governments as confidential.

The UK remains committed to assisting its international partners in the fight against crime wherever possible.

Falun Gong

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of China about the Falun Gong. [68176]

Mr. McCartney: We regularly raise human rights abuses against individual Falun Gong practitioners with the Chinese Government, including at the biannual UK and EU-China Human Rights Dialogue. Officials from our Embassy in Beijing raised the recent media allegations of organ harvesting from Falun Gong practitioners with the Chinese Government in April. We will continue to raise concerns, where appropriate.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the treatment of the Falun Gong by China. [68177]

Mr. McCartney: The Government have received representations from hon. Members, non-governmental organisations and members of the public about the treatment of Falun Gong practitioners in China. Although the Government do not take a position on the nature of the Falun Gong organisation, we are concerned about human rights abuses against individual Falun Gong practitioners. We regularly raise individual cases with the Chinese Government, including at the UK and EU-China Human Rights Dialogue. We will continue to raise such cases where appropriate.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the UK Government are taking to protect the human rights of Falun Gong practitioners in China. [69180]

Mr. McCartney: The Government are concerned about human rights abuses in China, including against Falun Gong practitioners. We regularly raise these concerns with the Chinese Government, through ministerial contacts, our bilateral human rights dialogue and EU mechanisms. We raised concerns of abuse against individual Falun Gong practitioners at the last round of the EU-China human rights dialogue in October 2005.

Indonesia

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made concerning the situation of Christians in Indonesia. [67907]

Mr. McCartney: We regularly raise human rights issues with the Government of Indonesia, both bilaterally and through the EU. We have made clear our view that freedom of religion is an important component of the democratic life of the country.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not made representations personally. However, through the EU, we have made representations to the Indonesian Government concerning the death penalty handed down to three Christians convicted of masterminding violence in central Sulawesi in 2000. On 14 November 2005, as EU Presidency, we expressed to the Government of Indonesia the EU's regret at the decision to carry out the executions, and urged the Indonesian Government not to do so and to consider the abolition of the death penalty altogether. The current EU Presidency, Austria, followed this up with the Government of Indonesia in January 2006 in separate meetings with the Minister of Law and Human Rights and the Attorney-General, and in a note to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The EU Presidency raised this again during the EU-Indonesia Ministerial Troika meeting in Vienna on 27 March 2006.

We understand that the Indonesian Supreme Court had recently reopened the case and that there may be further police enquiries.

Iran (Nuclear Programme)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the status of the Russian proposal for an offshore nuclear fuel supply arrangement with Iran. [69197]

Dr. Howells: The Government understand that the Russian proposal for a fuel supply arrangement with Iran remains on offer. President Putin announced on 25 January a similar scheme for a multilateral fuel cycle centre in Russia, open to all countries. We continue to believe that such a proposal could contribute to resolving international concerns regarding Iran's nuclear programme.

Iraq

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in the investigation into illegal exports to Iraq referred to on page 125 of the Court of Auditors report for 2003. [68756]

Dr. Howells: I understand this concerns illegal exports of meat to Iraq in the 1990s. Several EU member states have been requested to recover funds that should not have been paid. Investigations into this case are continuing.

Kosovo

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent steps have been taken to assess the (a) security needs and (b) continuing role of NATO forces in Kosovo; and what the British involvement will be in the EU planning team in Kosovo. [69472]

Mr. Hoon: Kosovo's security needs are kept under constant review by NATO as part of its mandate to provide a safe and secure environment in Kosovo. The London Ministerial Contact Group statement of 31 January 2006 recalled the commitment of NATO to continue to maintain a safe and secure environment through the presence of the Kosovo Force in Kosovo. A copy of the statement has been placed in the Library of the House. NATO participates in Contact Group discussions relating to Kosovo were necessary to ensure that its posture is calibrated both to international political discussions and Kosovo internal developments.

The General Affairs and External Relations Council agreed at their meeting on 10 April 2006 to a Joint Action launching the EU Planning Team for a possible future civilian European Security and Defence Policy Mission in Kosovo. The UK has offered one policing adviser to the EU Planning Team. The Council Secretariat are expected to confirm appointments over the coming weeks.

Lord's Resistance Army

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her estimate is of the number of armed Uganda Lord's Resistance Army rebels operating in (a) northern Uganda and (b) the Democratic Republic of Congo; and if she will make a statement. [69299]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Taunton (Mr. Browne) on 20 April 2006, Official Report, column 783W.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her assessment is of the reports that the (a) Uganda People's Defence Forces and (b) Sudanese People's Liberation Army have entered the Democratic Republic of Congo on search-and-destroy missions against the Lord's Resistance Army; and if she will make a statement. [69300]

Mr. McCartney: On 27 April there were media reports of clashes between the Democratic Republic of Congo's (DRC) troops and Uganda's armed forces (UPDF) in north-eastern DRC. On 30 April MONUC, the UN peacekeeping mission to the DRC, stated that reports concerning a Ugandan incursion into the DRC were credible. The Congolese Government have since claimed that their troops had clashed with men in UPDF uniforms, on Congolese soil, on 26 April. There have subsequently been media reports that the Sudanese People's Liberation Army may have entered DRC territory in pursuit of the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA).

We take any such allegations very seriously and our high commissioner in Kampala discussed the reports with the Uganda Foreign Minister on 27 April. Minister Kutesa and other contacts within the UPDF have strongly denied the reports.

It is very difficult to obtain authoritative information on the precise situation in north-eastern DRC. The LRA is a highly mobile and brutal organisation. Its members are known to wear stolen uniforms from other armed forces, which may have led to confusion as to the identity of those involved. We are following the situation very closely and continue to emphasise to all sides the need to deal robustly with the LRA while respecting the territorial integrity of the DRC.

Nigeria

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Nigerian Government on (a) the destruction of churches in Jigawa state, Kaduma, Banchi and Kano and (b) difficulties church leaders encounter in the north of the country in getting permission and obtaining licences to re-build churches destroyed in inter-religious violence. [67636]

Mr. McCartney: I refer my hon. Friend to my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary's reply to him of 25 April 2006, Official Report, columns 487-88. We take every opportunity to raise concerns about religious conflicts and human rights generally with the Government of Nigeria and senior leaders from all faiths in that country. Nigeria is a diverse, federal state and conflicts unfortunately occur over many issues. We will continue to make representations to the relevant authorities on the importance of religious tolerance and co-existence and raise specific incidents of religious conflict where they are credible and verified.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the implications of the constitutional amendment proposed by President Obasanjo to remove the limit of two presidential terms; and if she will make a statement. [69679]

Mr. McCartney: As my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary said publicly during his visit to Nigeria in February this year, constitutional change, done fairly and transparently, is a matter for Nigeria. The UK will continue to support the Nigerian Government's reform agenda whoever the Nigerian people choose as their next President.

Shan Refugees (Thailand)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions she has had with the UN High Commissioner for Refugees about the status of Shan refugees living in Thailand; [68184]

(2) what recent discussions she has had with the government of Thailand about regularising the status of Shan refugees living in Thailand; [68186]

(3) what recent discussions she has had with (a) the Government of Thailand and (b) members of the Association of South East Asian Nations about the treatment of Shan refugees living in Thailand. [68187]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed the status of the Shan refugees living in Thailand with the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). However, our embassy in Bangkok regularly discusses the situation of Burmese refugees from all ethnic groups with the office of the UNHCR. The Royal Thai Government are not a signatory to the United Nations Convention on Refugees and do not give refugee status to refugees from any of the Burmese ethnic groups, including the Shan. There are, however, more than 150,000 Burmese refugees in the area. We have not had any recent discussions with the Royal Thai Government or other Association of South East Asian Nations countries about the status or treatment of Shan refugees.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made in pursuit of ensuring that tribal chiefs in Sierra Leone remain neutral in forthcoming elections. [68147]

Mr. McCartney: Our high commission in Freetown has repeatedly reinforced the importance of political neutrality to the paramount and district chiefs.

We have also made clear to the Sierra Leonean Government that we expect to see open access for all parties to the electorate across the whole country. We are closely monitoring the situation in the run-up to the elections next year and will make strong representations to the Government if we feel that democratic principles are being endangered.

Ensuring credible elections in Sierra Leone is the task of the Sierra Leone National Electoral Commission (NEC). The UK has contributed to a UN Development Programme "basket fund" designed to provide co-ordinated donor support to the NEC. With this support, the NEC has undertaken a campaign to sensitise chiefs to their politically neutral electoral role. We understand the NEC will follow up this exercise with a further education campaign soon.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government have made representations to the United Nations on ensuring that border disputes between Sierra Leone, Liberia and Guinea are subject to mediation or action by the International Court. [68148]

Mr. McCartney: We have co-operated with the UN military and civilian missions in Sierra Leone and urge the peaceful resolution of the border dispute between Sierra Leone and Guinea. We funded a UK expert to assist the Economic Community of West African States-initiated boundary delimitation exercise on the disputed border village of Yenga.

We are not aware of any active border disputes between Liberia and Sierra Leone or Guinea. We support the work of the Mano River Union to address any differences arising between the three countries.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking towards ensuring that elections to be held in Sierra Leone are (a) conducted on a free and fair basis and (b) scrutinised by international observers. [68149]

Mr. McCartney: The UK has made representations to the Government of Sierra Leone and the opposition parties to stress the importance of free and fair elections.

The Department for International Development are providing financial assistance to strengthen the National Electoral Commission (NEC) in two parts, the first £1.5 million of which has been disbursed. The funds provided will support training of the NEC staff and will help to conduct the boundary delimitation, voter registration and voter education activities. The UK sits on a steering committee for the electoral process and is working closely with the UN in-country and in New York to ensure wide and fair participation by the electorate, and competent management of the process by the NEC.

We are also supporting civil society preparations for elections including a proposal to use the Radio UN facilities as an independent broadcaster for voter education and public service purposes.

We anticipate that there will be a need for international observers for the elections. We will consider the precise details once the dates are known.

Sudan

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how his Department is attempting to secure peace in Darfur. [68669]

Mr. McCartney: The UK is at the forefront of international efforts to bring peace to Darfur. In the absence of a peace agreement we have been a leading supporter of the African Union mission (AMIS) there, contributing over £50 million. The African Union (AU) has done a good job in improving security in the region. But the situation is evolving and a more multi-disciplinary approach is now needed. We therefore support handover to a UN mission when AMIS's current mandate expires on 30 September. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is in constant contact at Ministerial level with the AU, UN and on a bilateral basis with those nations taking key roles in the peace process.

Only a political solution will bring lasting peace and security to Darfur. We fully support the AU-led peace talks in Abuja and are pressing the parties to reach a deal as soon as possible. We have had a permanent presence throughout the talks since March in the form of a high-level Special Representative. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development arrived in Abuja on 2 May to support the negotiations and help achieve a deal. We are urging the parties to reach an agreement without further delay, on the basis of the AU's draft peace agreement text.

Uganda

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of reports that a legal adviser to President Museveni of Uganda used a rifle to intimidate civilians and attack voters in the run up to the election in March. [68410]

Mr. McCartney: A Ugandan newspaper published a photograph on 24 February which appeared to show President Museveni's legal adviser, Fox Odoi, brandishing a firearm over a number of people who were lying on the ground, surrounded by armed police officers.

Fox Odoi was questioned by the police on 25 February and arrested on 26 February. He was granted bail on 28 February. We understand that the Director of Public Prosecutions is now considering the case.

In the run-up to the elections on 23 February the UK made clear the importance we attached to peaceful and lawful campaigning. We look forward to a thorough investigation of this incident. My hon. Friend the Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) was present as special envoy of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for the duration of the election.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of reports that the Ugandan army used armoured vehicles to intimidate opposition supporters and injure civilians in the run up to the election in March. [68411]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that the then Minister of State for Trade, Investment and Foreign Affairs my hon. Friend the Member for Dudley, South (Ian Pearson) gave to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 18 April 2006, Official Report, Column 92-3W.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 92W, on Uganda, what assessment she has made of President Museveni's comments regarding the effect of aid donors' decisions on the building of two dams on the power shortage in Uganda; and if she will make a statement. [69293]

Mr. McCartney: Speaking on 1 May, President Museveni suggested that the 6th Ugandan Parliament and donors were responsible for preventing the construction of two dams, which was the cause of the current electricity power crisis in Uganda.

The World Bank and other donors did not block the construction of the Bujagali dam and have confirmed their commitment to support the Government of Uganda's plan to develop the country's energy sector. The Ugandan Government have announced their intention to construct a dam at Karuma but detailed feasibility and financing studies have yet to commence.

As my hon. Friend the then Minister of State for Trade, Investment and Foreign Affairs set out in his reply to the hon. Member on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 92W, our view is that the current drought coupled with reports of over-abstraction of water from Lake Victoria to generate power are causing the current problems.

West Papua

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the reports of mistreatment of native Papuans and Christians in West Papua; and if she will make a statement. [69298]

Mr. McCartney: The isolated nature of some areas of the province of Papua makes it difficult to establish a clear picture, but we investigate any credible reports of human rights abuses in the province of Papua. We have no firm evidence of widespread mistreatment of native Papuans and/or Christians. Officials from our Embassy in Jakarta visit Papua regularly and meet local officials, academics, journalists and non-governmental organisations. We are also in regular contact with Papuan groups in the UK. We raise cases of concern with the Government of Indonesia and ask them to follow up substantiated allegations.

We regularly encourage the Indonesian Government to allow access to Papua for media organisations. We understand that the BBC correspondent in Jakarta has been given permission to visit Papua this month. We welcome this.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what the change has been in the numbers of people claiming (a) higher rate and (b) lower rate attendance allowance in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; [69190]

(2) how many people in Northern Ireland are in receipt of (a) higher rate and (b) lower rate attendance allowance. [69195]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is shown in the following tables. Data are taken from February in each year.

Change in number of people claiming Attendance Allowance

	Higher rate	Change +/-	Lower rate	Change +/-
2001	52,180	—	20,398	—

	Higher rate	Lower rate
2006	53,017	19,791

Child Support agency

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 315W, on the Child Support Agency, what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the new system. [69235]

Mr. Hanson: Further work to improve the IT system is scheduled to take place over 2006 and 2007. The current position with the IT system is one of improvement; as a result of work over the past 18 months, the stability, availability and performance levels of the new computer system are much improved. Monitoring will continue as the improvements are implemented.

Civil Servants (Women)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the percentage of women in (a) senior civil service positions and (b) general service grades in Northern Ireland was in each of the last five years. [69182]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is set out in the table and shows the position as at 1 January in each year. It includes Northern Ireland civil servants working in the 11 Northern Ireland departments and agencies and the Northern Ireland Office.

	Percentage of women in the senior civil service	Percentage of women in the general service grades[1]
2002	16.3	64.1
2003	17.1	64.3
2004	20.1	64.3
2005	22.0	64.0
2006	25.1	63.8

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in each department in Northern Ireland, including the Northern Ireland Office. [69233]

Mr. Hanson: For the majority of staff in the 11 Northern Ireland civil service departments and the NIO, including agencies, the normal retiring age is 60 (for some prison officers it is 55). Staff, both industrial or non-industrial, may choose to continue to work up to the compulsory retirement age of 65, subject to satisfactory performance and attendance.

Domestic Violence

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many incidents of domestic violence have been recorded by the Police Service of Northern Ireland in each of the last five years, (a) in total and (b) broken down by District Command Unit; and how many victims of such incidents were (i) women in a heterosexual relationship, (ii) men in a heterosexual relationship, (iii) women in a same sex relationship, (iv) men in a same sex relationship and (v) children; [66458]

(2) how many domestic violence crimes were investigated by the Police Service of Northern Ireland in each of the last five years, (a) in total and (b) broken down by District Command Unit; and how many victims of such incidents were (i) women in a heterosexual relationship, (ii) men in a heterosexual relationship, (iii) women in a same sex relationship, (iv) men in a same sex relationship and (v) children. [66459]

Mr. Woodward: The Police Service of Northern Ireland defines a domestic incident as "any incident of threatening behaviour, violence, or abuse (psychological, physical, sexual, financial or emotional) by one family member against another or adults who are or have been intimate partners, regardless of gender".

The following table provides details of the total number of domestic incidents and crimes reported to police in each of the last five years. A breakdown of these incidents by District Command Unit is only available from 2003-04 and can found on the Police Service of Northern Ireland website at www.psni.police.uk under the hyperlink 'statistics'. It is not possible to provide information on whether the victims of such incidents are women/men in a heterosexual relationship or otherwise, or if they are children. Statistics relating to the number of domestic violence crimes investigated by the PSNI is not available.

Number of domestic incidents and crimes

	Incidents reported	Offences committed

Equality Impact Assessment

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how an equality impact assessment will be carried out in respect of (a) the programme for government and (b) the Northern Ireland budget. [66392]

Mr. Hanson: Since 2003 the Government have adopted an integrated approach to the publication of both priorities and associated final allocations. The most recent publication, Priorities and Budget 2006-08, was published on 14 December 2005 and Chapter 6 of this document sets out details of how high level equality, good relations and social need impacts are assessed and factored into decision making.

Looking to the future, in preparation for Comprehensive Spending Review 2007 officials are working closely with the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland to further develop the methodology to ensure that the assessment of the Government's spending proposals in respect of equality, good relations and social need impacts, continue to comply, to the fullest extent possible, with the equality impact assessment process laid out in the Commission's guidance.

Firearm Certificates

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time is for the processing of firearm certificates by the Police Service of Northern Ireland; and what resources are available to the Chief Constable to reduce waiting times. [66685]

Mr. Woodward: The Chief Constable informs me that the average time taken to deal with most firearms applications is currently 22 weeks. There are 39 civilian staff and three police officers involved in the various aspects of the day-to-day processing of firearm certificate applications. These figures include six additional members of staff recruited in mid-January 2006 to help reduce the current backlog of work.

Fixed Speeding Cameras

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fixed speeding cameras in Northern Ireland have been found to be faulty or not working in the last 12 months. [67544]

Mr. Woodward: The PSNI currently operates four fixed safety cameras, all in the greater Belfast area. Over the past 12 months, all four cameras have experienced technical difficulties of some form or another. On each occasion that a fault has been identified, it has been referred to the manufacturer and the appropriate remedial action taken to remedy the problem.

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in (a) each Northern Ireland Department and (b) the Northern Ireland Office have been enabled to work from home for part of the week in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [68010]

Mr. Hanson: The number of staff working at home for part of the week in each of the last three years is:

Department	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
DE[1]	60	61	63
DEL	0	1	1
DFP	0	1	2
DRD	0	0	1
OFMDFM	0	1	1
Total	60	64	68

[1] Includes a group of 60 inspectors who are recruited on the basis that they will work from home.

These figures only include staff who have a formal working at home arrangement agreed with their Department. These arrangements may be agreed for example as a reasonable adjustment under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, under the flexible working provisions of the Employment (NI) Order 2002, or to aid a return from sickness absence.

All Departments have previously indicated that local managers may allow staff to work at home on an ad hoc basis. These arrangements are informal and no monitoring of this pattern of working is currently carried out. Information on this type of home working could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The NICS is currently developing a Working at Home policy that will formalise arrangements for working away from the office and will allow all staff to apply to work at home provided the job, the individual and their home are suitable and the business can sustain the proposed arrangement.

Military Personnel

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many military personnel from Northern Ireland have died in each of the last five years. [67078]

Mr. Ingram: I have been asked to reply.

Residential data are not held centrally and cannot be collated without incurring disproportionate cost.

Money Laundering

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will introduce legislation to make money laundering a terrorist-related offence. [67202]

Mr. Woodward: Money laundering of terrorist property (Section 18 of the Terrorism Act 2000) is already a scheduled offence.

Scheduling all money laundering activities would only affect those offences that were committed after the offence became scheduled. As the Diplock court system is due to be repealed in July 2007, this would be a short term measure affecting only a tiny number of cases.

I am therefore focusing on a longer term solution. Consideration is currently being given to how trials in which there may be paramilitary or community based pressures on a jury can be addressed in the longer term. Measures will be brought forward in due course.

Omagh Bomb (Compensation Claims)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many compensation claims have been lodged following the Omagh bomb. [19547]

Mr. Hain: The Compensation Agency received 852 claims for criminal injury compensation and 220 claims for criminal damage compensation following the Omagh Bomb.

Police Officers (Injuries)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police officers have been injured in the course of their duties in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [68101]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is contained in the following table.

	Cause
Year	Gunshot wound	Explosion	Other	Total
2003	2	16	114	132
2004	0	0	136	136
2005[1]	0	111	292	403

[1] 2005 statistics are provisional and may be subject to minor amendment.

Note:
The increase in the figures for 2005 is largely due to the Whiterock riots.

Police Services

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how often he has met the (a) Police ombudsman, (b) Police Service of Northern Ireland Chief Constable, (c) Chief Inspector of Criminal Justice, (d) Justice Oversight Commissioner and (e) Policing Oversight Commissioner in each month since he became Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. [68555]

Mr. Hain: I have very regular meetings with the Chief Constable, including a regular session along with the General Officer Commanding and others concerned with security policy at approximately monthly intervals. I have met the Police Ombudsman on a number of occasions and we have agreed to hold formal meetings approximately every six months. I met the Policing Oversight Commissioner in June 2005. I have not yet had a formal meeting with the Chief Inspector of Criminal Justice or the Justice Oversight Commissioner.

Rates

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the effect on public funds in Northern Ireland for 2006-07 of the (a) increase in Regional Rate of 19 per cent., (b) introduction of 25 per cent. of the full business rates for manufacturing companies and (c) removal of non-rated basis for vacant premises. [69181]

Mr. Hanson: The increase in the Regional Rate of 19 per cent. will raise an estimated additional £42.1 million in 2006-07 from domestic properties in Northern Ireland.

The introduction of 25 per cent. of the full business rate for industrial companies is estimated to raise total revenue of £18.2 million in 2006-07, an increase of £7.5 million on last year when the rate liability for industry was 15 per cent. of the full bill.

Non-domestic vacant rating is estimated to raise a total of £5.5 million in 2006-07, an increase of £0.3 million on last year.

These estimates may change as a consequence of updates to collection and valuation information.

Senior Citizens (Crime Statistics)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many senior citizens have been (a) burgled and (b) assaulted in their home in each (i) police district and (ii) council area in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [65505]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is only available by District Command Unit and is contained in the following tables.

Social Security Agency (Staff Transfer)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions Northern Ireland Social Security Agency staff have been transferred to posts against the written advice of their general practitioner that such a move would have an adverse effect upon their health. [68985]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, it should be noted that there have been occasions when such transfers have taken place.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Bernadette Graham

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when the inquest into the death of Bernadette Graham of Cushendall will be completed. [69460]

Bridget Prentice: Following the conclusion of the police investigation and having sought the views of the family on the holding of an inquest, the coroner has decided not to hold an inquest into the death of Bernadette Graham. A certificate was sent to the registrar of deaths on 23 February 2006 stating the cause of death as disclosed by the report of the post-mortem examination.

Community Legal Service

Julie Morgan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate she has made of the percentage of callers to Community Legal Service (CLS) Direct that (a) have already sought advice on the same matter from face-to-face service providers and (b) seek similar advice subsequent to their contact with CLS Direct. [68377]

Vera Baird: This information is not held centrally. However, in the period July 2004 to December 2005, 33 per cent. of Community Legal Service Direct specialist advice clients found out about the service from a solicitor or other advice agency. In the same period, 16 per cent. of Community Legal Service Direct specialist advice clients were either referred to another organisation or their cases continued under different CLS funding.

Julie Morgan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what percentage of callers to the Community Legal Service Direct specialist helpline have been subsequently subject to a full means assessment since its inception. [68378]

Vera Baird: Community Legal Service Direct specialist advice clients are subject to a two-stage means assessment process. All callers are entitled to 30 minutes of free advice. After 30 minutes all clients are subject to a simplified 'proxy' means assessment, which they must pass if they are to receive further advice. After two hours total advice all clients are subject to the full 'Legal Help' means assessment process, which they must pass if they are to receive further advice.

In the period July 2004 to December 2005, 33 per cent. of Community Legal Service Direct specialist advice clients were subject to means assessment.

Of these, 28 per cent. of clients were subject to the simplified means assessment, having received 30 minutes of free advice. A further 5 per cent. of clients were subject to both the simplified means assessment after 30 minutes advice and subsequently the full signed and verified 'Legal Help' means assessment process after two hours of advice.

Julie Morgan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what percentage of Welsh resident callers to Community Legal Service Direct have been referred to local specialist advisers since its inception, broken down by unitary authority of residence. [68379]

Vera Baird: The percentage of Community Legal Service (CLS) Direct specialist advice cases that were referred to another organisation or that continued under different CLS funding, broken down by Welsh unitary authority, is shown in the following table.

Electoral Register (Christchurch/East Dorset)

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) for what reasons the (a) Christchurch and (b) East Dorset constituency was omitted from the answer given on 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 642W; [64464]

(2) whether part of the marked electoral register for (a) Christchurch and (b) East Dorset constituency is missing. [64458]

Bridget Prentice: The contractors for the 2005 General Election electoral documents storage, and administration of the marked registers viewing and copying service, have informed officials from my Department that they have no record of receiving any reports suggesting that Christchurch constituency had pages missing from its marked register.

There is no constituency of East Dorset. The Dorset constituencies are as follows:

Mid Dorset and Poole North

North Dorset

South Dorset

West Dorset

Of these constituencies, North Dorset has been identified as having pages missing from its 2005 marked electoral register, and this was included in the answer given on 30 November.

Legal Advice

Mr. Love: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what work is being undertaken within Government to co-ordinate the provision of legal advice services; and if she will make a statement. [68413]

Vera Baird: On 23 March 2006 the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) published "Getting earlier, better advice to vulnerable people" (www.dca.gov.uk/laid/betteradvice.pdf). This report notes that different areas of Government must work together more effectively to commission advice that fits people's needs and recommends that the DCA and Legal Services Commission (LSC) work with other Government Departments to ensure that people can easily access appropriate advice across the full range of problems that they face. In particular, the report recommends improving co-ordination between the LSC's CLS Direct service and other Government funded helplines. The report also links to the LSC's Community Legal Service Strategy which sets out how the LSC will work in partnership with local authorities to deliver legal advice services.

Legal Aid

Julie Morgan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of whether people who are financially eligible for legal aid prefer receiving specialist advice via (a) a telephone helpline and (b) a local provider. [68376]

Vera Baird: Information is not held centrally on the preferred method of access to specialist advice for members of the public who are financially eligible for Legal Aid.

Responses made in March 2006 to a Community Legal Service Direct client satisfaction questionnaire indicated that 93 per cent. of telephone advice clients were either very satisfied or quite satisfied with the service they received.

Parliamentary Boundaries

Mr. Laws: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when the proposals of the latest review of parliamentary boundaries will be implemented; when the next review will (a) commence and (b) conclude; and if she will make a statement. [68494]

Bridget Prentice: The Parliamentary Boundary Commission for England is an independent body which is required, by the Parliamentary Constituencies Act 1986, to keep English parliamentary boundaries under constant review and conduct a general review every 8-12 years. It is expected that its present report will be submitted to the government by the end of this year. It will then be laid before Parliament by the Government "as soon as may be".

The next report will then be submitted, under the Parliamentary Constituencies Act 1986, no less than eight years and no more than 12 years from the date the current report is received by the Government.

Specialist Support Service

Julie Morgan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many calls to the Specialist Support Service telephone advice line have been made by Welsh residents since its inception, broken down by unitary authority. [68380]

Vera Baird: The Specialist Support Service is a telephone advice line available to lawyers and advice providers working on complex legal cases. It is not available to the public in England or Wales.

Wales

Julie Morgan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what discussions she had with the Welsh Assembly Government before the announcement of (a) the withdrawal of funding for the Wales Specialist Support Service and (b) the announcement that the Legal Services Commission's Wales office would be reduced over the next five years. [68374]

Vera Baird: The provision of funding for legal advice services in Wales is the responsibility of the Legal Services Commission (LSC). Senior officials in the LSC regularly meet with representatives from the Welsh Assembly Government to discuss key issues, including the future of the Specialist Support Service and the organisational review of the Commission.

Julie Morgan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what discussions she has had with the Welsh Assembly Government on the transfer of responsibility for planning future legal advice services in Wales. [68375]

Vera Baird: The Legal Services Commission (LSC) is responsible for provision of publicly funded legal advice services in England and Wales. The LSC is working closely with the Welsh Assembly Government to develop the future accountability and structure of legal services within Wales.

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 May 2006]: In total £193 million of the £200 million community infrastructure fund has been allocated by Government to support transport infrastructure schemes in the four growth areas. The remaining £7 million is to be used as a contingency reserve to address any emerging issues that may arise over this two-year programme.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will announce further allocations from the community infrastructure fund. [68776]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 May 2006]: An announcement was made on 11 April 2006 of the final tranche of schemes approved under the community infrastructure fund. In addition the Office has engaged a further 100 consultancy firms to provide support to the working of the office. The full list could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Office in response to the need to develop sustainable homes and communities consultants has been engaged to support the development of system processes. The skills required for these programmes were not available from civil servants. In addition consultants have been engaged by ODPM to support the delivery of projects to enhance the ability of the Fire and Rescue Service to respond to major incidents. The work undertaken by consultants includes radio engineering expertise for the new radio systems for the Fire and Rescue Service; also, logistical support and design for responding to a chemical, biological, radioactive or nuclear incident and search and rescue incidents. Some 60 per cent. of expenditure has been in support of these projects.

Energy Efficiency

Joan Walley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a copy of the report on the thermal performance of multi-foil insulation prepared under his Department's domestic buildings energy performance project. [67158]

Angela E. Smith: I have placed a copy of the BRE (Building Research Establishment) report "The thermal performance of multi-foil insulation" in the Library of the House.

Fire Services

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many fire brigade strikes there have been in each of the past five years; how many brigades were affected in each case; and on how many of those occasions a back-up service was not provided by the Army. [69479]

Angela E. Smith: In the past five years strikes in the Fire and Rescue Service have occurred as follows:

2001—Merseyside fire and rescue service.

2002 to 2003—National fire strike in all fire and rescue services in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

2004—No strikes.

2005—Suffolk fire and rescue service and West Midlands fire and rescue service.

On all of these occasions, the armed forces provided basic emergency fire cover. In the case of the Suffolk fire strike in 2004 armed forces support was deployed to the county but never actually used, as other arrangements proved sufficient.

Government Offices

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost has been of information campaigns undertaken by Government Offices for the Regions since 1997. [68638]

Yvette Cooper: This information is not held centrally by the Regional Co-ordination Unit, corporate centre of the Government Offices for the English Regions, and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Housing

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to increase the number of units of (a) social and (b) affordable housing in West Lancashire constituency. [64324]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold this information at a constituency level, and outputs in individual local authorities vary over time, as Housing Corporation allocations are made on a regional and sub-regional basis.

In 2004-06, 27 units of social rented housing were provided in West Lancashire local authority. For 2006-08, the Affordable Housing Programme includes the allocation of resources for the provision of a further six units of social housing and 35 new shared equity housing units in West Lancashire under the new HomeBuy scheme. Not all of these will be completed in the two year timeframe.

Further units may be provided under the Private Finance Initiative and through planning obligations.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many and what proportion of homes were estimated to be non-decent homes according to the English Housing Conditions Survey, in each year since 1990, broken down by (a) owner occupier, (b) private sector rented, (c) local authority, (d) housing association and (e) other housing. [68562]

Yvette Cooper: The "English House Condition Survey 2004: Headline report" (ODPM, 2006) includes details of households living in homes that did not meet the decent homes standard by tenure in 1996, 2001, 2003 and 2004 (the years the survey was carried out). Data for surveys before 1996 are not sufficient to provide robust estimates. The report is available on the ODPM website at www.odpm.gov.uk/ehcs.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance has been given to Housing Market Renewal Pathfinders about access to meetings, papers and records by (a) the general public, (b) representatives of local voluntary organisations, (c) elected councillors and (d) hon. Members. [69217]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 9 May 2006]: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not issued any guidance but papers and records are available on request.

All nine housing market renewal pathfinders are expected to pursue a policy of openness and this is encouraged by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the pathfinder local authorities.

Local Government Restructuring (Ministerial Meetings)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answers of 30 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1217-18W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Surrey Heath (Michael Gove) on local government restructuring and on ministerial meetings, if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) the minutes and (b) presentation notes and handouts from each of those meetings. [66242]

Mr. Woolas: Notes of each county dialogue event will be published on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister website in due course. At the same time, copies will be placed in the Library of the House. Formal presentations were not made by Ministers or ODPM officials nor were handouts supplied at the dialogue events.

Local Government Strikes

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent guidance the Government have issued to local authorities in relation to contingency planning for local government strikes. [66435]

Mr. Woolas: The impact of strikes by local authority employees is different in different areas. It is generally a matter for local government to prepare contingency plans. ODPM has issued no guidance in relation to the recent strike action. The Local Government Employers has prepared extensive guidance on planning for industrial action, some of which was issued as bulletin to local authorities.

Peterborough and Cambridgeshire Fire Authority

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) full-time and (b) retained firefighters have (i) been employed and (ii) taken early retirement in the Peterborough and Cambridgeshire Fire Authority in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [69046]

Angela E. Smith: The number of firefighters in Cambridgeshire and Peterborough Fire and Rescue Authority that have (i) been employed in each year since 1997 and (ii) taken ill-health retirement since 1998-99 is presented in the table. Information on ill-health retirement prior to 1998-99 is not held centrally.

Regional Administration

Mr. Syms: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the annual expenditure has been of each of the Government Offices of the Regions in each year since their creation. [64954]

Yvette Cooper: The information is as follows:

(a) The administrative running costs for each Government Office for the period since their creation are detailed in the following table. The table includes the current expenditure recorded for the financial year just completed, 2005-06.

(b) Programme budgets administered by the Government Offices are the responsibility of the Secretaries of State for the relevant sponsor Departments. Information is however contained in GO Annual Reports, as was referred to in the answer to PQ 3342 tabled by the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar in October 2004.

Rise Associates

Mr. Heald: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many tenders Rise Associates have submitted to his Department in each of the last five years; and how many were successful. [69157]

Angela E. Smith: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was formed in May 2002 and information prior to this date is not readily available. Since that date there have been no successful tenders for Rise Associates. The number of tenders submitted during this period is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many contracts his Department holds with Rise Associates which have a potential duration of five years or more. [69158]

Angela E. Smith: ODPM has no existing contracts with Rise Associates.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many applications for regeneration monies have been submitted by Rise Associates to his Department and its agencies in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what the value is of those which were successful. [69159]

Angela E. Smith: No regeneration monies have been paid directly by the Department to Rise Associates. The Department maintains a record of funding to its agencies, but this does not include details of any payments made by agencies to third party organisations for services.

Rushenden Link Road

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will announce the funding for the Rushenden link road. [68906]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 May 2006]: Officials within Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are in dialogue with the South East of England Development Agency to consider how regeneration in the area of Queenborough and Rushenden can be progressed, and the issue of the Rushenden relief road.

Stock Transfers

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which local authorities have (a) transferred their housing stock and (b) set up an arm's length management organisation; how many properties were involved in each case; and how much debt was written off as a result in each case. [58937]

Yvette Cooper: A list of all local authority housing stock transfers and arms length management organisations and the number of properties involved in each case has been place in the Library of the House. For transfers we have provided the amount of local authority debt repaid by central Government. The list shows the one off payment that was made to discharge the Office's continued liability, through the Housing Revenue Account (HRA), to pay subsidy on an authority's housing attributable debt that remains after transfer. This option of paying off debt, as opposed to continuing to pay subsidy, was introduced in 1999 following consultation and is not an extra cost, it is largely a question of when the liability to meet the cost of HRA debt is discharged. There is no debt repayment for ALMOs as the local authority continues to be support through the HRA subsidy system.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a copy of the communications strategy prepared by the Valuation Office Agency for the council tax revaluation in England. [66315]

Mr. Woolas: The communications strategy drafted by the Valuation Office Agency for the currently postponed council tax revaluation in England was prepared as an input to the formulation and development of Government policy and it is not therefore appropriate to place this in the public domain.

Wiring Regulations

Robert Key: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which professional body oversees compliance with the Wiring Regulations and British Standard 7671. [68525]

Angela E. Smith: British Standard 7671 is also known as the Wiring Regulations. It is a code of practice and is the UK national standard for electrical installation work. The Institution of Engineering and Technology (IET) is the professional body responsible for maintaining the standard, but it does not oversee compliance with the standard. Complying with BS 7671 is a way of meeting the requirements of the Electricity at Work Regulations and the Building Regulations Part P (Electrical safety in dwellings). These regulations are enforced by the Health and Safety Executive and Local Authority Building Control respectively.

HEALTH

Alcohol Misuse Programmes

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding she has made available for alcohol misuse programmes through the pooled treatment budget for substance misuse. [67423]

Caroline Flint: The Department has made no funding available specifically for alcohol misuse treatment through the pooled drug treatment budget, as this budget is intended for the funding of drug treatment. National health service primary care trusts are responsible for commissioning alcohol misuse treatment according to local need.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to create a separate agency to take forward the alcohol strategy. [67629]

Caroline Flint: The Government have no plans to create a separate agency to take forward the alcohol strategy.

Anatomy Act

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will seek to amend the Anatomy Act 1984 to prevent the public exhibition for profit of plasticised cadavers; and if she will make a statement. [67284]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The public exhibition of human bodies is not covered by the Anatomy Act 1984, which regulates the donation and use of bodies for anatomical examination.

From 1 September 2006, it will be unlawful under the Human Tissue Act 2004 to store or use human bodies, organs and tissues for public display, without a licence from the Human Tissue Authority.

Audiology Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the timescale for the replacement of all NHS analogue hearing aids with digital ones. [69356]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is for primary care trusts to plan and commission appropriate services for their local population including those who require digital hearing aids.

We have no estimate of the timescale for replacing analogue hearing aids with digital ones. This should be done as part of the routine maintenance programme for individuals based on their clinical need.

Bone Density Scanning

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what routine bone density scanning programmes are being operated by each of the primary care trusts covering Portsmouth and who is routinely screened by each trust. [68434]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bone density scanning machines are available in each of the primary care trusts covering Portsmouth. [68435]

Caroline Flint: There is one bone densitometry scanner available to serve the Portsmouth and South East Hampshire healthcare community.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time is for a bone density scan in each of the primary care trusts covering Portsmouth. [68436]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Bowel Cancer

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what funding is being allocated to the roll-out of the bowel cancer screening programme for the financial year (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2008-09; [63233]

(2) how many testing kits for the bowel cancer screening programme have been ordered for the first year of the screening programme; [63234]

(3) for what reasons Rugby was chosen as the first location for the bowel cancer screening programme; and what resources will be provided to the Hospital of St. Cross to facilitate the continuation of the programme after April. [63235]

(4) which locations are being considered as suitable for hubs for the bowel cancer screening programme; what criteria are used to determine the location of hubs; and when decisions will be made; [63236]

(5) how many people were tested for bowel cancer as part of the screening pilot in Rugby between April 2005 and March 2006; and how many people will be tested in the following 12 months; [63237]

(6) what estimate she has made of the number of lives saved as a result of the bowel cancer screening pilot in Rugby since 2000; and what the estimated gains are for cancer survival rates as a result of the bowel cancer screening programme in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2008-09; [63238]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national bowel cancer screening programme will be rolled out nationally over the next three years. Funding for the first year of the screening programme is being transferred to the national cancer screening team in Sheffield, and Wolverhampton will be the first local screening centre. We estimate that around £10 million will be spent on the first stages of the national bowel cancer screening programme. Funding decisions have not yet been made for future years but we are committed to ensuring that the necessary funding is available to ensure the full implementation of the programme.

NHS cancer screening programmes are taking all the necessary action to ensure the successful roll-out of the programme, including the procurement of testing kits. The kit supplier has been notified that the first order is for 100,000 kits.

Five programme hubs across England will invite men and women to participate in the screening programme, send out the faecal occult blood (FOB) testing kits, interpret kits and send results out. 90 to 100 local screening centres will provide endoscopy services for the 2 per cent. of men and women who have a positive FOB test result.

The pilot in Rugby will continue to run as planned to the end of March 2007. In addition, the first of the five programme hubs will also be established by March 2007, with announcements to be made in due course.

NHS cancer screening programmes are currently considering where the five programme hubs will be located. We intend to establish the other four programme hubs by March 2007, with announcements to be made in due course.

24,345 people were tested in Rugby between April 2005 and March 2006. In the next 12 months they will be inviting a further 28,360 people.

We estimate that the number of lives saved as a result of the bowel cancer screening pilot is between 100 to 150. Our expectation is to reduce deaths in the population invited for screening by 15 per cent.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the representations made by Cancer Research UK concerning the implementation of the bowel cancer screening programme; what steps are being taken by the Government to establish the programme on a national basis from 1 April onwards and what the timing is of such steps; and if she will make a statement; [63643]

(2) pursuant to the Answer of 21 March 2006, Official Report, columns 2552-53W, on colon cancer, how many of the 217 people diagnosed with bowel cancer as a result of the bowel cancer screening pilot are still alive; how many of the 959 people diagnosed with bowel polyps subsequently underwent treatment for the removal of those polyps; and what estimate she has made of the number of people likely to be diagnosed with (a) bowel cancer and (b) bowel polyps when bowel cancer screening is fully operational as proposed in the White Paper. [63795]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national bowel cancer screening programme will be rolled out nationally over the next three years. Funding for the first year of the screening programme is being transferred to the national cancer screening team in Sheffield, and Wolverhampton will be the first local screening centre. We intend that all five programme hubs will be established and around 14 local screening centres will be operating, out of a total of 90 to 100 for full national coverage, by March 2007.

We do not hold data on how many of the 217 people diagnosed with bowel cancer as a result of the bowel cancer screening pilot are still alive.

The clinicians in Rugby have advised that all persons diagnosed with bowel polyps have been treated.

Once the bowel cancer screening programme is fully operational we would estimate that around 2 per cent, of all those screened will have a positive FOB test result. Of these around 10 per cent. will have bowel cancer and approximately 45 per cent. will have polyps.

Breast Screening

Ms Barlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent her Department took demographic changes into account when developing the NHS Breast Screening Programme. [63999]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is aware of the growing number of women becoming eligible for breast screening, as women born in the post-war baby boom reach their fiftieth birthdays. This increase is expected to peak in 2015, resulting in a 20 per cent. increase in women aged 50 to 70, in England, between 2005 and 2025.

Commissioners are aware of this issue and the need to plan for this in order to prevent a negative impact on the breast screening service.

Additionally, the Department and the NHS breast screening programme are closely monitoring screening activity to ensure the quality of the service is not compromised.

Car Provision

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what cars have been provided for the senior management in each of the last five years of the Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire strategic health authority; and what the (a) year, (b) make, (c) model and (d) cost per annum was in each case. [64717]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected by the Department but can be obtained direct from the strategic health authority concerned.

Cardiac Care (Children)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to screen all children for cardiac problems; and if she will make a statement. [65912]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 192W.

Care Homes

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many lay assessors for care home inspection were employed in each year from 1992 to 2006; and at what cost; [63932]

(2) what research the National Care Standards Commission undertook on lay assessors; what its conclusions were; and if she will make this report available. [63934]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I understand from the Chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI), which took over the regulation and inspection of care homes in England from the National Care Standards Commission (NCSC) on 1 April 2004, that it does not employ lay assessors for care home inspections.

The NCSC commissioned a report on lay assessors, published in January 2003, entitled, "Inspecting with Lay Assessors: What Value? What Impact?". Copies have been placed in the Library.

The report concluded that lay assessors' contribution to regulatory work was valuable, when it was well supported by a comprehensive and appropriately resourced scheme.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the number of places currently available at care homes in the (a) public sector, (b) private sector and (c) not-for-profit sector. [66683]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I understand from the Chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that the number of care homes and places in the public sector, private sector and non-for-profit sector is as shown in the tables.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) residential, (b) nursing and (c) elderly mentally infirm (i) homes and (ii) places were available in Tamworth constituency in each of the last 10 years, broken down by (A) local authority, (B) private sector and (C) charity and voluntary providers; and what percentage of capacity in each sector was used in each year. [43461]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of care and nursing care homes and places was collected by the Department from 1997-2001. The data were collected by health authority and council with social services responsibility areas. This information is shown in tables 1 and 2.

Table 1 shows the number of care homes and places in Staffordshire for adults age 18 and over, by type of accommodation at 31 March 1997-2001. Table 2 shows the number of care homes and places for older people with mental health problems in Staffordshire, by type of accommodation at 31 March 1997-2001. Data are not available for the percentage of capacity used each year.

The Commission for Social Care Inspection produces data on the number of care homes and places registered as at 31 March each year, beginning with 2003. There are some minor definitional differences between these data and those for years up to 2001.

Table 3 shows the number of care homes and places that were registered in Staffordshire LA, of which Tamworth is part, at 31 March for the years 2003 to 2005, for adults aged 18 and over. Table 4 shows the number of care homes and places for older people with mental health problems in Staffordshire LA for the same period. Data are not available for the percentage of capacity used each year.

Data for Tamworth are not available separately.

Children's Health Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children aged between four and five are registered with an NHS dentist. [67650]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of children aged between four and five registered with a national health services dentist is not held centrally.

The number of children aged between three and five registered with a NHS dentist in England at 30 September 2005, the latest data available, was 1,014,351.

Note:

Figures have been provided by the information centre for health and social care. The data source is the business services authority and the figures are based on the numbers of children aged between three and five registered with dentists with open general dental service or personal dental service contracts as at 30 September 2005.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what funding the Department has made available for 2006-07 to support health promotion for parents and young children; and whether this funding is ring-fenced; [67651]

(2) what steps are being taken in each primary care trust to provide parents of children aged between three and five with information about (a) parenting and (b) promoting health; [67652]

(3) how many birth to five guides were distributed to parents during the most recent period for which figures are available. [67654]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is for primary care trusts to make decisions locally about how much of their resources to make available to support health promotion for parents and young children. There is no ring-fenced funding to support health promotion for children and parents but the child health promotion programme provides a framework to promote the health and well-being of children. We issue "Birth to Five", which gives first time parents advice both on parenting and on the health of young children, to health promotion units so that they can make sure first time parents get a copy. We issued 421,430 copies between May 2005 and April 2006.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many blood spot tests for hypothyroidism and phenylketonuria were carried out on babies less than a week old during the most recent period for which figures are available; [67656]

(2) how many (a) antenatal screening and (b) preliminary assessments of child and family needs were carried out during the most recent period for which figures are available. [67657]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures are used to decide which central or local government body has responsibility under the Every Child Matters policy for financing medical and therapeutic support for children with a Statement of Special Educational Needs; and if she will make a statement. [67804]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is for primary care trusts in partnership with strategic health authorities, local authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services. This process provides the means for addressing local needs within the health community including the provision of health care to children with a statement of special educational needs.

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions she has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67526]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Paragraph 5.28 of the Ministerial Code sets out the rules on the registration of hospitality.

The Secretary of State for Health has not accepted any hospitality since being appointed to her current post.

Correspondence

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Brent, East, dated 23 March, regarding Ms Renae Tilley. [37744]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I regret we did not receive the hon. Member's original letter of 23 March 2005. The hon. Member wrote again on 23 December and I replied on 11 January.

Coventry Primary Care Trust

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the financial position of Coventry primary care trust. [64709]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Coventry teaching primary care trust is forecasting a break-even position for 2005-06 at month six.

Deep Vein Thrombosis

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of deep vein thrombosis have been recorded in (a) each region in England and (b) the Tees Valley in each year since 1997. [67190]

Caroline Flint: Table 1 shows the counts of primary diagnosis finished consultant episodes for deep vein thrombosis by strategic health authority SHA of residence for the years 1997-98 to 2004-05, the latest year for which data are available.

Dementia

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's strategies are for supporting older people with dementia to live independently at home. [64707]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The service development guide 'Everybody's Business' was launched in November 2005 as the next step in the Department's strategy for improving mental health and care services for older people, including those with dementia. It builds on the existing service models outlined in the "National Service Framework for Older People" (2001) and the principles promoted in "Securing Better Mental Health for Older Adults" (July 2005). One of the main aims of the guide is that older adults with mental health problems and their carers have their needs met wherever they are in the system, including where possible being supported and enabled to live independently at home.

Dentistry

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what dental services provision is available to patients to obtain NHS treatment once a dental practice has used its unit quota; and if she will make a statement. [65909]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) to commission primary dental care services to reflect the needs of their local populations. The units of dental activity agreed between a PCT and a practice or dentist will generally reflect the courses of treatment that it is reasonable to expect the practice or dentist to provide over the course of a year taking into account the aim of allowing more time for preventative care. It is for practices and dentists to plan how to spread their activity, including any necessary emergency treatment, over the course of the year.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dental units are given to practices for emergency appointments. [65911]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts contract with dentists or dental practices for total units of dental activity. The number of these units then used for urgent treatment is a matter for the dentist or dental practice.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what will happen to unmet units of dental activity at the end of the contract year. [65960]

Ms Rosie Winterton: General dental services (GDS) contracts and personal dental services (PDS) agreements specify the number of units of dental activity (UDAs) to be delivered each year. The GDS or PDS contractor may carry forward up to 4 per cent. of these UDAs into the following year.

GDS contracts and PDS agreements provide for a mid-year contract review to enable the primary care trust and contractor to deal with instances where activity is below the expected level and agree appropriate action.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of people in each region with no teeth in each year since 1997. [65962]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of eligible dentists in the area covered by (a) Yorkshire Wolds and Coast primary care trust and (b) East Yorkshire primary care trust had accepted the new NHS dental contract as at 31 March 2006; how many had declined to accept the new contract; and if she will make a statement. [63513]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In the North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolshire strategic health authority (SHA) area, 211 national health service dental contracts have been signed and 63 contracts have been rejected. The signed contracts account for 93.7 per cent. of NHS dental service in the SHA.

Data on the number of dentists signing the contract at primary care trust level are not yet available.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the percentage of children who were (a) registered with an NHS dentist, (b) registered with a private dentist and (c) not registered with any dentist in each year since 1997. [64032]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data on the number and percentage of children registered with a national health service dentist in general dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS) are shown in the table.

Data on the number of children treated or registered with a private dentist are not held centrally.

Data on the number of children not registered with a dentist are not held centrally.

Notes:
1. PDS schemes have varying registration periods. To ensure comparability with corresponding GDS data, PDS registrations for established PDS practices are estimated using proxy registrations, namely the number of patients seen by PDS practices in the past 15 months.
2. Data for 2003 and earlier do not include those PDS schemes that do not have any registrations, for example dental access centres, and is therefore not directly comparable with 2004 and 2005 data.
3. 2005 data have been calculated using Office of National Statistics mid-year population estimates based on the 2001 census, as these are the latest available.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of dentists in England were (a) NHS and (b) private in each year since 1997. [64033]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A dentist with a general dental services (GDS) or personal dental services (PDS) contract may provide as much or as little national health service treatment as he or she chooses or has agreed with the primary care trust (PCT). Information concerning the amount of time dedicated to NHS work by individual GDS or PDS dentists is not centrally available.

Data on the number of dentists working only in private practice are not held centrally.

The following table, however, contains the numbers of NHS dentists with a GDS or PDS contract in England as at 31 March each year.

E111 Forms

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures have been taken to publicise the discontinuation of E111 forms; and if she will make a statement. [63065]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A major publicity campaign ran from October 2004 to March 2006 to publicise both the withdrawal of E111s and the introduction of the european health insurance card. Activities included the Department's press releases, information leaflets distributed through the travel trade pharmacies and general practitioner surgeries and to 17.5 million households through inserts in local free newspapers, national and local press advertising, a public information film, radio interviews and advertising on photo booths and at Heathrow airport.

Electroconvulsive Therapy

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances electroconvulsive therapy is administered; and if she will make a statement. [57582]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Mental Health Act 1983 sets out the circumstances in which people with a mental disorder who are being treated compulsorily under that act may receive electroconvulsive therapy (ECT). The Act allows ECT to be given to patients who are under compulsory powers when a patient with capacity consents or if the patient's doctor prescribes it and a second opinion appointed doctor agrees to it. People can also receive ECT voluntarily. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) issued guidance on the use of ECT in 2003. The guidance is available on NICE's website at www.nice.org.uk.

European Health Insurance Card

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 389W, on the European Health Insurance Card (EHIC), what percentage of EHIC forms have been processed within 21 days. [65768]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Over 99 per cent. of applications have been dispatched within 21 days of receipt. Further information from the customer was needed in the small percentage of cases where the target was not met.

Fibromyalgia

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the incidence of fibromyalgia in England has been in each of the last five years; what treatments are available on the NHS; and what research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on fibromyalgia. [67168]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Data on the incidence of fibromyalgia are not collected. However, estimates suggest there are around 14,700 new cases in the United Kingdom each year.

People living with fibromyalgia have access to the full range of NHS treatments for this condition. A variety of painkillers are available to provide relief from pain; drugs can also be prescribed to help relieve the associated symptoms of tiredness, anxiety and muscle spasms.

The main agency through which the Government support medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC is an independent body, which receives its grant in aid from the Office of Science and Innovation, part of the Department of Trade and Industry. The MRC is not currently funding research specifically into fibromyalgia although some basic research being undertaken would have relevance to developing a greater understanding of this condition.

Hearing Aids

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to reduce waiting times for hearing aids; and if she will make a statement. [69793]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Several initiatives were introduced through the modernising hearing aid services programme to increase capacity to deliver audiology services in England. These include the national framework contract (public private partnership) to bring in additional independent sector capacity, the development of a new degree to help to address the shortage of audiologists and the introduction of hearing direct which provides follow-up care and advice for some hearing aid users.

Influenza Vaccinations

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of those aged over 65 years in the Peterborough constituency are expected to receive influenza vaccinations by the end of winter 2005-06. [52449]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Greater Peterborough Primary Care Partnership reports that 77.5 per cent. of people aged over 65 in the North Peterborough Primary Care Trust (PCT) area and 77.4 per cent. in the South Peterborough PCT area have received an influenza vaccination this winter.

Lupus

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of lupus there have been in Norfolk in the last five years. [64655]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected by the Department.

Mental Health

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the expenditure of primary care trusts and strategic health authorities was on mental health in each of the last five years; what percentage of their total expenditure in each year each figure represents; and what assessment she has made of the trends in the proportion of the NHS budget spent on mental health services since 1992. [65983]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on expenditure by the national health service on mental health services in each year since 1992-93 is shown in the table. The table also shows the proportion of mental health expenditure as part of the hospital and community mental health services (HCHS) budget. The proportion of mental health spend has increased from 11.47 per cent. of the total HCHS budget in 1992-93 to 13.34 per cent. in 2003-04.

The data exclude social care spend on people with mental health problems, and expenditure concerning people treated in primary care for whom a specific diagnosis has not been reached. The figures therefore underestimate the total mental health expenditure.

In order to gain a more comprehensive picture of mental health spend, the Department commissioned national surveys of investment in mental health services in each year since 2001. The reports of four surveys covering the period from 2000-01 to 2004-05 are available from the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk. The survey covering the financial year 2005-06 will be placed on the Department's website shortly.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to publish her revised proposals for a Mental Health Bill. [69397]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 29 March 2006, Official Report, column 1066W.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many clinical psychologists are employed by hospital trusts in West Sussex, expressed as (a) headcount and (b) full-time equivalent posts. [69345]

Caroline Flint: The number of clinical psychologists employed by hospital trusts in West Sussex expressed as headcount and full-time equivalent posts is shown in the table, which also provides data on the number clinical psychologists across the Surrey and Sussex Strategic Health Authority (SHA) area.

Mixed-sex Wards

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mixed-sex wards there are in each hospital in England. [62501]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the format requested.

Between 1998 and 2005, the provision of single-sex accommodation was measured as compliance at national health service trust-level with three objectives set by the Department. These objectives have been superseded by the core national standards presented in "Standards for Better Health".

The core standards require that:

"Staff treat patients, their relatives and carers with dignity and respect" (C13) and "Health care services are provided in environments which promote effective care and optimize health outcomes by being ... Supportive of patient privacy and confidentiality" (C20b).

The Healthcare Commission will measure compliance with these standards. Previously compliance was measured annually at trust level. The results of the most recent compliance survey (December 2004) show that:

99 per cent. of NHS trusts provided single-sex sleeping accommodation for planned admissions and had robust operational policies in place to protect patients' privacy and dignity;

99 per cent. of NHS trusts met the additional criteria set to ensure the safety of patients who are mentally ill; and

97 per cent. of NHS trusts provided properly segregated bathroom and toilet facilities for men and women.

The small number of hospitals who did not achieve these objectives are building new hospitals.

The 2004 position of each NHS trust was published on 26 May 2005 and is available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk and is available in the Library.

National Service Framework for Children and Young People and Maternity Services Framework

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on Standard One of the National Service Framework for Children and Young People and Maternity Services in England. [68840]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The national service framework for children, young people and maternity services sets out a 10-year strategy to stimulate long-term and sustained improvement in children's health and well-being by setting standards for the care of children, young people and maternity services.

Standard one of the framework is concerned with the promotion of health and well-being, identifying needs and intervening early. It recognises the vital role that parents and professionals play in creating the circumstances in which children and young people can grow up to be healthy.

Neonatal Care

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) on how many occasions babies needing admission to a neonatal intensive care unit were unable to be placed in the nearest neonatal intensive care unit because the unit was full in the last month for which figures are available; what assessment she has made of the implications of the level of provision of beds in special care baby units on the ability of trusts to move babies out of neonatal intensive care units; and if she will make a statement; [67864]

(2) how many (a) neo-natal intensive care beds and (b) special care baby unit beds there were in the NHS in (i) 1995 and (ii) 2005; and in which hospitals those beds were provided in each year. [67865]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested on the number of occasions babies needing admission to a neonatal intensive care unit were unable to be placed in the nearest unit because it was full is not collected centrally. It is for local neonatal networks and hospital trusts to determine the appropriate number of special care baby cots to ensure there is provision to enable those babies no longer requiring neonatal intensive care to be moved down. Strategic health authority areas will increase or decrease cots to reflect demand. Information on the number of neonatal intensive care cots in 2004-05 by national health service trust has been placed in the Library. Information on the number of neonatal intensive care cots in 1995 and the number of special care baby cots is not collected centrally.

Obesity

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent research her Department has examined on the management of obesity in adolescents through the use of beverages containing calorie-free sweeteners; and if she will make a statement; [67827]

(2) if she will make it her policy to encourage drink manufacturers further to promote the use of calorie-free sweeteners in soft drinks marketed to children. [67831]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not examined any specific research on the impact on obesity of using beverages containing calorie-free sweeteners. Research has been carried out in the United States of America, and published in the Official Journal of American Academy of Paediatrics, on the effects of decreasing consumption of sugar-sweetened drinks on body weight in adolescents. The available evidence on the relationship between sugar and body weight is not clear and more evidence of an association is required before definitive conclusions can be drawn.

Calorie-free soft drinks contribute to consumer choice and current consumption levels of artificial sweeteners are within safe limits. The Government's healthy eating advice remains that consumers should drink plenty of water, or other fluids, daily, and to drink fewer sugary soft and fizzy drinks.

The Food Standards Agency and Department have published guidance for schools on practical ways of developing approaches that provide healthy drinks and snacks. This encourages schools to provide, in addition to drinking and bottled water, other drinks which provide a nutritional benefit to pupils, such as fruit juices and milk-based drinks.

Osteoporosis

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to extend the availability of osteoporosis bone density scanning; and if she will make a statement. [67426]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In 2005-06, £3 million was allocated to the national health service for increasing capacity for bone density scanning. A further £17 million will be made available over two years to build on this capacity.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has for the management of osteoporosis services after the amalgamation of primary care trusts and strategic health authorities in the Portsmouth area. [68432]

Caroline Flint: It is for primary care trusts in partnership with strategic health authorities, local authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has for a fully integrated falls and osteoporosis service in the Portsmouth area. [68433]

Caroline Flint: It is for primary care trusts (PCT) in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services

I understand that Portsmouth City PCT, in partnership with social services, the ambulance service and other key stakeholders has been developing an integrated falls prevention and bone health (osteoporosis) service since the publication of the national service framework for older people in 2001 and it has achieved all of the milestones.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) men and (b) women in the primary care trust areas covering Portsmouth are estimated to have osteoporosis. [68437]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally.

Ovarian Cancer

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ask the National Institute of Health and Clinical Excellence to issue guidance on the use of intraperitoneal chemotherapy for patients with stage three ovarian cancer; and what assessment she has made of the potential impact on survival rates in England of such treatment. [64842]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has no plans to ask the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) to issue guidance on the use of intraperitoneal chemotherapy for patients with stage three ovarian cancer or assess the potential impact on survival rates in England of such treatment. However, in March 2005, NICE issued interventional procedures guidance on complete cytoreduction and heated intraperitoneal intraoperative chemotherapy (Sugarbaker technique) for peritoneal carcinomatosis.

Peritoneal metastases commonly result from the regional spread of gastrointestinal, gynaecological and other cancers. NICE recommended that current evidence on the safety and efficacy of this technique for peritoneal carcinomatosis "does not appear adequate for it to be used without special arrangements for consent and for audit or research".

More details on this guidance can be found on NICE's website at: www.nice.org.uk

Members of the public and professionals are free to make suggestions on possible topics for interventional procedure guidance via NICE's website.

Personal Health Guides

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many personal health guides have been produced in each primary care trust area in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available; and at what cost. [67419]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally.

Psychiatric Secure Accommodation

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women found guilty under the Mental Health and Criminal Justice Acts have been assessed to need psychiatric secure accommodation but have been placed in prison instead because of lack of such accommodation in each of the last 10 years. [54837]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Sentencing is a matter for the courts and account should be taken of a woman's mental health needs at the time sentencing occurs.

Information is not collected on how many women have been convicted of a criminal offence, assessed to need psychiatric secure accommodation, but sent to prison instead because there was no secure hospital bed available for them.

It would not be possible to identify whether the reason was absence of a suitable bed or the judge rejected the recommendation and chose imprisonment instead, if information was collected on these cases.

Under the Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964, people who are not fit to plead for reasons of severe mental ill health are never sent to prison.

Pulmonary Hypertension

Chris Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure that all those diagnosed with pulmonary hypertension receive adequate treatment without waiting for the treatment to be approved by the local primary care trust. [65531]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) is currently appraising treatments for pulmonary arterial hypertension and is expecting to issue guidance to the national health service in May 2008. The Department has made it clear that funding for licensed treatments should not be withheld because guidance from NICE is unavailable. In these circumstances, we expect primary care trusts to take full account of available evidence when reaching funding decisions.

Lead clinicians from pulmonary hypertension centres will be meeting to develop a national protocol on pulmonary hypertension therapy.

Queen Mary's Hospital Trust, Sidcup

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the operational impact of the budget adjustments levied by her Department on Queen Mary's Hospital Trust, Sidcup, in respect of budgetary overspend. [67380]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not made any budget adjustments to Queen Mary's Hospital National Health Service Trust in respect of any overspend the trust is experiencing.

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been paid by her Department to Queen Mary's Hospital, Sidcup (a) in each of the last three financial years and (b) for 2006-07; and what that sum would be if the hospital had foundation hospital status. [67384]

Caroline Flint: National health service trusts do not normally receive funding from the Department, but receive income for the provision of services from commissioners, principally from primary care trusts (PCTs).

Figures shown in the table are for the Queen Mary's Sidcup NHS Trust and are total income including all income from activities and all other operating income for each year 2002-03 to 2004-05. 2004-05 is the latest year for which data is available. The Department has no figures relating to estimates for 2005-06 or 2006-07.

NHS foundation trust status does not in itself change how much PCTs wish to allocate trusts for specific services.

Residential Care Funding (Stoke-on-Trent)

Mr. Flello: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much Stoke-on-Trent Social Services department received from Government for the provision of residential care for (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07. [66872]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not hold this information nationally or for individual local authorities. Council funding for adult social services is derived from a number of sources: a share of overall formula grant allocated by the Department for Communities and Local Government, specific grants distributed by the Department, revenue from council tax, income from fees and charges and local decision making.

As most of the Government funding for adult social care is allocated without conditions, it is not possible to identify the proportion of that funding that may be attributable to residential care. Local authorities have a significant degree of flexibility to manage and direct their resources in accordance with local priorities and the needs of the communities to which they are accountable.

Sandwell and West Birmingham Acute Trust

Mr. Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the job titles and the salaries of employees of Sandwell and West Birmingham Acute Trust earning more than £90,000 per annum. [66501]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Title	Salary (£)
Chief executive	136,740
Director of finance	117,322
Health care purchasing consortium: chief executive	122,537
Health care purchasing consortium: director	93,526
23 consultants (surgeons, physicians and others)	94,000

Notes:
The figures shown are based on basic salary and do not include allowances. Data includes all employees of the trust paid more than £90,000 per annum including consultant staff and senior managers of other organisations hosted by the trust on behalf of the wider health economy and therefore not part of the trust's management structure.

Mr. Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the estimated costs are of the Sandwell and West Birmingham Acute NHS Trust's 2010 Project for financial years (a) 2006-07, (b) 2007-08 and (c) 2008-09, broken down by staffing and other costs; [66502]

(2) what the estimated level of public expenditure is for (a) Sandwell and West Birmingham Acute and (b) Sandwell Primary Care NHS Trusts' 2010 project over the next three financial years; [66503]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The NHS Bank has allocated a total of £10 million to support the costs of taking the Towards 2010 programme up to the preparation of a full business case in 2008-09. Of this sum, £2 million was drawn down during 2005-06. The estimated draw down of the remaining funding is shown in the table.

	Pay	Non-pay	£000 Total
2006-07	440	1,060	1,500
2007-08	600	2,400	3,000
2008-09	700	2,800	3,500

The bulk of the non-pay expenditure will be required to meet the cost of securing specialist advice and expertise in areas such as town planning, building design, private finance initiative procurement and financial modelling.

Self-harm

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role her Department has played in the six month trial at St. George's psychiatric hospital in Stafford into ways of treating people who self-harm; and if she will make a statement. [62270]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The pilot being undertaken by South Staffordshire Healthcare National Health Service Trust is part of a joint Department and National Institute for Mental Health in England (NIMHE) exercise, which started in January 2006 and is expected to run until autumn.

The Department and NIMHE are jointly exploring the management of self-injury, focusing on adult service users, predominantly female, who self-injure as a coping mechanism, or survival strategy. The Department/NIMHE exercise will ascertain the level of local and regional support and the evidence base for adopting a harm-reduction approach. In addition, the exercise will judge the appropriateness, with the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence, of developing guidelines and training to facilitate a harm minimisation approach amongst service providers.

Sexual Health

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funds were allocated to the (a) Greater Derbyshire and (b) Central Derby Primary Care Trust for the treatment of sexually transmitted infections in each financial year between 2000-01 and 2005-06. [67631]

Caroline Flint: Primary care trusts (PCTs) commission services with the funds allocated to them to meet the needs of their populations. This includes the commissioning of sexual health services. Funding for PCTs to meet these commitments such as those in the White Paper "Choosing Health" formed part of their overall allocations.

University Hospital of North Staffordshire

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated loss of income to the University Hospital of North Staffordshire is from work contracted out to independent sector treatment and diagnostic centres in the year ending 31 March 2006. [62912]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This is a matter for the local health community.

Venous Thromboembolism

John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the expert panel on venous thromboembolism to report its findings on implementing the Health Select Committee's recommendations on the prevention of venous thromboembolism in hospitalised patients. [69282]

Caroline Flint: In their terms of reference the independent expert working group on the prevention of venous thromboembolism in hospitalised patients were asked to submit their report and recommendations to the Chief Medical Officer by July 2006 and earlier if possible.

Waiting Lists/Times

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was between referral and treatment for NHS cancer patients in (a) England, (b) Somerset and (c) Taunton constituency in the latest period for which figures are available. [64310]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Average waiting times for the treatment of cancer patients are not collected centrally. A cancer waiting times standard of a maximum wait of 31 days from diagnosis to first cancer treatment was introduced for all cancer patients from December 2005. Data showing progress towards this standard for the period October to December 2005 show that in England 96.8 per cent. of all cancer patients were treated within this standard and 98.9 per cent. in the Taunton and Somerset National Health Service Trust.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Avian Quarantine

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which recommendations from the report of the Independent Review of Avian Quarantine have been implemented. [69413]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government and the Devolved Administrations published their response to the Independent Review of UK Avian Quarantine on 19 April. This is available on the Defra website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/diseases/control/avianquarantine/pov-strategy/index.htm

The Government and the Devolved Administrations either accept, or accept in principle, 29 of the 32 recommendations. However, some of the responses are preliminary, pending further consultation with stakeholders or the completion of further studies. For many of the recommendations, the European Commission would be responsible for taking forward any necessary action. Two of the recommendations require further consideration, and one recommendation regarding pet birds has been rejected. These are detailed in the Government response.

There is currently an EU ban on imports of captive wild birds, which is due to expire on 31 July. A decision on whether to extend the ban will be taken at the EU Standing Committee on the Food Chain and Animal Health in June.

The key elements of the Government response are currently being implemented and will be in place before imports resume. In addition, all approved quarantine premises will need to be reassessed against revised standards before they can accept any birds into quarantine.

In April 2005 the European Commission requested the European Food Safety Authority to carry out a review of the animal health and welfare aspects of imports of captive wild birds, which is due to report in October 2006. This will inform EU policy and we await their opinion with interest.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what response he has made to the advice from the Science Advisory Council on bovine tuberculosis; [54634]

(2) when he will answer question 54634 tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth South on 24 February 2006. [69666]

Mr. Bradshaw: Science Advisory Council (SAC) advice on bovine TB was taken into consideration by the Chief Scientific Advisor when formulating his guidance to Ministers on new measures to tackle the disease, announced on 15 December 2005.

Further advice was provided on 20 December 2005, following the publication of interim results of the Randomised Badger Culling Trial (RBCT).

Defra provided the SAC with an update on bovine TB activity at a meeting on 12 January 2006. Draft minutes of the meeting are available on the Defra website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/science/how/advisory06a.htm.

Case Control Study

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will expand the farm management questionnaire in the Case Control Study 2005 (CCS 2005) to include more farmers and landowners in the survey and to add additional animal health officers as participating bodies. [68654]

Mr. Bradshaw: Data collection for the Case Control Study 2005 (CCS 2005) has been completed. The study was put in place at the request of the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB (ISG) to gather data on TB risk factors.

CCS 2005 was designed to be a one-year study only, in order to collect data in time for analysis and reporting by the ISG. The ISG's work is due to conclude in March 2007.

Dairy Industry

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the (a) operation and (b) profitability of the dairy market; and if he will make a statement. [66106]

Barry Gardiner: The Department has not made an assessment of the operation or profitability of the dairy market. However, the Milk Development Council publishes a report on an annual basis which examines dairy supply chain margins. The last report covering 2004-05 showed that dairy supply chain margins did not change significantly from the year before. Dairy farm income rose slightly as a result of marginally higher farmgate prices and the payment of the dairy premium. Processor margins varied during the period. Retail margins generally continued to increase (a Europe-wide phenomenon).

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) the pattern of volume output in the milk year and (b) levels of profit derived at each stage of the dairy food chain. [66110]

Barry Gardiner: Final calculations about milk production are still being made, but although it appears that wholesale milk production was lower in 2005-06 than 2004-05, it is too early to tell whether this is a long term trend or has been caused by weather, restructuring etc. The UK is more often under quota than over it and it must be remembered that quota is a limit on production and not a target.

The Department has not made an assessment of the operation or profitability of the dairy market. However, the Milk Development Council publishes a report on an annual basis which examines dairy supply chain margins. The last report covering 2004-05 showed that dairy supply chain margins did not change significantly from the year before. Dairy farm income rose slightly as a result of marginally higher farmgate prices and the payment of the dairy premium. Processor margins varied during the period. Retail margins generally continued to increase (a Europe-wide phenomenon).

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his policy is on milk price (a) regulation and (b) indexing. [66111]

Barry Gardiner: We believe the market must determine prices. Provided competition law is respected, the Government cannot and do not get involved in price negotiations.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make it his policy to establish a regulator of the dairy market. [66112]

Barry Gardiner: The Government supported the conclusion of the Environment, Rood and Rural Affairs Committee in 2004 that there was no compelling evidence in favour of setting up a regulatory body to oversee the dairy industry. It is difficult to see how a regulator could determine a fair price other than by reference to a market price. A price regulator would almost certainly be incompatible with EU competition law and with the common organisation of the market in milk and milk products.

Departmental Policies

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will set out with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to West Lancashire constituency the effects in West Lancashire of changes to his Department's policies since 1997. [64236]

Barry Gardiner: Since the Department was established in 2001, we have put in place a considerable programme of reforms and improvements. For example, action on sustainable development, climate change and energy, sustainable consumption and production, natural resource protection, sustainable rural communities, and a sustainable farming and food sector. A summary of achievements relating to these policy areas can be found at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/achievements.htm. I am confident that the West Lancashire constituency will have benefited from these.

In particular, the West Lancashire constituency has benefited from funding through the National Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund as well as the Waste Performance and Efficiency Grant to deliver household waste recycling levels that are currently well above the national average. Singly, or in partnership with other Lancashire authorities, West Lancashire has received more than £7 million to support progress in this area in the last three years.

Under the Nitrates Directive, around 80 per cent. of the West Lancashire constituency was designated as an Nitrate Vulnerable Zone (NVZ) in 2002; currently about 55 per cent. of England is designated. Farmers in NVZs are required to follow an action programme aimed at reducing the risk of nitrates loss; for example by limiting the amount of nitrogen applied on the farm during the year and by not applying manure or fertilisers during certain times of the year.

Since 2003, local authority performance on street cleanliness has been measured through best value performance indicator BV199. This assesses the percentage of survey sites in each local authority area with unacceptable levels of litter and detritus. In 2003-04 West Lancashire scored 18.2 per cent. against a national average of 21.2 per cent., and in 2004-05 19 per cent. against a national average of 18.1 per cent. These results are for West Lancashire district, comprising the constituencies of West Lancashire and South Ribble. Data are not available at the constituency level.

In March 2005 we announced that Lancashire would be one of eight rural pathfinders in England. The pathfinder initiative is a key part of the Government's Rural Strategy and reflects the Government's commitment to devolve decision making and resources to the local level. The Lancashire rural pathfinder is helping to ensure greater co-ordination of rural delivery programmes, including testing new and innovative methods to bring about improvements in the delivery of services to rural communities and businesses.

Lancashire has also proved to be a fertile ground for our Defra's Project Based Schemes which are generally available to farmers to help them develop new business opportunities and widen the skills they already possess. For example, Farmer Ted's Farm Park, located at Worral House Farm just outside Southport, was opened in 2003 with the help of funding from the Rural Enterprise Scheme. In the first 18 months it received over 38,000 visitors including 480 school trips. The attraction also contributes to the local economy by employing 10 full-time and 30 part-time employees.

The RPA will be releasing details of payments made under the new Single Payment Scheme (SPS) in due course. It will publish an annual figure for payments to each recipient under the SPS drawn from its financial records. The information will be extracted and published on the RPA website later this year.

Indicators of environmental quality for West Lancashire district are given as follows, they are for water quality and waste and recycling. Data for other indicators are available only either at regional and/or national level and not local level, or for individual monitoring sites not within the area local to West Lancashire. For some indicators data for 1997 are not available and the nearest year for which data are available has been given.

Farm Land Prices

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average price of farm land in England was in (a) 1997 and (b) 2005. [67330]

Barry Gardiner: In 1997 the average price for agricultural land was £6,448 per hectare. Data for 2005 are not yet available, the most recent figures available are for 2004. In 2004 the average price per hectare for agricultural land was £7,786. Please note that figures for 2004 are provisional estimates and could be subject to change.

Fur Trade

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he has taken to prevent the import of fur from domestic animals from China. [67828]

Mr. McCartney: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have sought to establish the facts about the extent of the alleged trade in domestic cat and dog fur in the UK. We have found no evidence that such fur is being imported into this country in significant volumes. The Government have also been working to establish a scientific test to make it possible to ascertain reliably from what species of animal any given fur sample has come.

We firmly believe that action on this issue should and would best be taken at EU level as a harmonised approach would have greater impact, enhance animal-welfare standards within the EU itself and avoid obstacles to the operation of the single market. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs supported calls for the European Commission to investigate these allegations when the Agriculture and Fisheries Council met in May 2005.

In January 2006, the Commission published its Action Plan on the Protection and Welfare of Animals, which proposes action in the course of 2006 to address public concerns on the trading of cat and dog fur and derived products. On 20 February, Health and Consumer Protection Commissioner Kyprianou stated at the Agriculture and Fisheries Council that the Commission was planning to publish a proposal on the import of cat and dog fur within the next few months.

Milk Industry

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the relationship between the levels of imports of milk and the purchase of milk from domestic producers. [66928]

Barry Gardiner: The Government have made no such assessment. The UK does not import significant quantities of liquid milk.

Reservoirs

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if he will list the reservoirs which have been closed and built over since 1997; [66449]

(2) what statutory requirements must be complied with in order to close and re-develop reservoirs. [66489]

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many reservoirs have been closed in the last 15 years. [66967]

Ian Pearson: The Department does not hold information on the number of reservoirs closed or built over, either in respect of water company reservoirs or those in other ownership.

The closure and discontinuance of reservoirs subject to the Reservoirs Act 1975 has to be carried out under the supervision of specialist engineers appointed to operate under the Act. Redevelopment of the site would require planning permission.

Rural Payments Agency

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total running costs of the Rural Payments Agency and its predecessor were in each of the last three years. [63772]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) is an Executive agency of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and was formed on 16 October 2001. The previous three years' costs therefore only relate to RPA.

RPA's gross running costs for these years were as follows:

	Amount (£ million)
2002-03	[1]186.4
2003-04	198.3
2004-05	249.2

[1] Restated figure under merger accounting

Further details are given in the accounts for these years (HC 940, HC 1009 and HC 82 respectively).

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the job description is of each member of the senior management team of the Rural Payments Agency; and if he will make a statement. [66700]

Barry Gardiner: The Chief Executive and other Directors make up the senior management team of the Rural Payments Agency (RPA). In addition to the functions of the Chief Executive as Chief Accounting Officer, there are currently five Directors who work to individual performance-related objectives supporting the Agency's key performance targets. These cover RPA's Operations, Information Systems, Business Development, Finance and Resources and the provision of Legal Services. Their aims and objectives are outlined in the RPA's Annual Report and Accounts, last year's copy of which is in the Library of the House.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many outside contracts worth over £100,000 the Rural Payments Agency has awarded since 2001, broken down by (a) value, (b) recipient and (c) tender process. [66701]

Barry Gardiner: RPA acquires high value goods and services—where the value exceeds the EU directive threshold—either by tendering via OJEU and letting its own contracts, or by using contracts previously advertised by the OGC or other Government Departments.

The details of contracts worth over £100,000 the Rural Payments Agency has directly awarded since 2001 have been placed in the Library of the House.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what staff turnover within the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) was in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [66702]

Barry Gardiner: The following table shows all starters and leavers by year commencing 1 April since 2001. "Leavers" includes those individuals who left on redundancy terms as part of the downsizing of RPA.

	Staff	Leavers	Starters	Percentage of increase/ decrease
2001-02	1,548.75	786	808	1.42
2002-03	3,245.55	763	643	-3 .70

2005-06	3,235.75	1,081	726	-10.97

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff there were within the Rural Payments Agency in each year since 2001, broken down by grade. [66703]

Barry Gardiner: The following table shows the average number of staff by grade employed by the Rural Payments Agency in each year commencing 1 April.

Single Farm Payments

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the delivery of the single payment scheme and progress towards meeting the Government's target of 96 per cent. of payments to be made by the end of March. [58352]

Barry Gardiner: 120,367 applications were received for the Single Payment Scheme (SPS). By the end of 26 April 52,922 claims (44.10 per cent.) had been paid.

The remaining claims will be paid as soon as legally possible following the positive action set out in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's written statement on 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 104WS, and the written statement on 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 13WS.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Rural Payments Agency on the efficiency and accuracy of its computer systems; and whether the Agency has allocated the correct payments for each farm. [60484]

Barry Gardiner: My right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State and my noble Friend Lord Bach, had regular meetings with the acting chief executive of the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) at which a range of issues surrounding the performance of the Agency were discussed. By the end of Wednesday 26 April, 52,922 claims (44.10 per cent.) had been paid under the single payment scheme. The RPA will consider any representations made by farmers about the accuracy of those or other payments made by the Agency and take corrective action where appropriate.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many eligible farmers in Beverley and Holderness are awaiting payment of outstanding single farm moneys due to them; what percentage of eligible farmers had received their full entitlement to the single farm payment as at 31 March 2006, and if he will make a statement. [63506]

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers in Devon received payments under the Single Payment Scheme by 28 March; and how many are still to receive it. [63632]

David Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made with payments to farmers in the East Midlands under the Single Payment Scheme. [66635]

Barry Gardiner: 120,367 applications were received for the Single Payment Scheme (SPS). By the end of 26 April, 52,922 claims (44.10 per cent.) had been paid.

The Rural Payments Agency does not have data available on a regional basis, as the scheme is not administered in this way.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the 2006 single farm payment application form was passed to the Plain English Campaign for editing before its despatch to farmers. [66174]

Barry Gardiner: The 2006 version of the single payment scheme handbook and guidance for England was not submitted to the Plain English Campaign for editing; however it was edited by the Central Office of Information. The application form was not.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in what circumstances he will (a) make advance single farm scheme payments (SFSP) to farmers whose 2005 claims have been delayed for payment beyond 31 March 2006 and (b) pay interest on those SFSP claims which have been unreasonably delayed. [66175]

Barry Gardiner: The vast majority of farmers will have received either a full or partial single payment scheme (SPS) payment by 30 June 2006. As with predecessor schemes there will be some complex claims that will not be paid before 30 June.

The issue of interest payments or compensation does not arise as the EU regulations governing the scheme provide for a payment window that runs until 30 June.

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of single farm payments have been paid with respect to the financial year 2005-06. [66334]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 27 April 2006]: 120,367 applications were received for the Single Payment Scheme. By close of business on 26 April 2006 some 52,922 claims to the 2005 Single Payment Scheme, representing 44.10 per cent. of total claimants had been paid.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many single farm payments awards in (a) Beverley and Holderness and (b) England have been terminated following the return of (i) an incomplete and (ii) a late application; and if he will make a statement. [66527]

Barry Gardiner: 1,171 applications to the Single Payment Scheme 2005 were rejected due to (a) an incomplete application or (b) being received after the final deadline of 10 June 2005.

The Single Payment Scheme is not administered on a regional basis; therefore the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) does not hold information specific to the Beverley and Holdnerness constituency.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many small businesses his Department estimates will be declared bankrupt as a result of the late payment of claims under the 2005 Single Payment Scheme. [66710]

Barry Gardiner: My noble Friend Lord Bach, met the British Bankers' Association and other representatives of the major lending banks on 30 March 2006 to discuss the situation of farmers awaiting payment under the Single Payment Scheme. The banks re-emphasised on that occasion that "no viable business is being refused additional financial support and, as a result, no viable businesses are failing because of uncertainty about the payments timetable".

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the impact that delays within the 2005 Single Payment Scheme will have on the ability of the Rural Payments Agency to deliver the 2006 Single Payment Scheme. [66744]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 27 April 2006]: The full impact of the timing of 2005 Single Payment Scheme on the timetable for the 2006 scheme will not become clear until the vast majority of payments have been made and any corrective action identified. However, preparation for the 2006 scheme is well under way, with the vast majority of 2005 scheme claimants having received a claim form for this year's scheme. Business processes and IT systems required to process 2006 scheme claims are being developed and deployed on an iterative basis, and data capture of 2006 scheme claims will commence shortly.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers in (a) Lancaster and Wyre constituency and (b) Lancashire have received a single farm payment. [68096]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 3 May 2006]: 120,367 applications were received for the single payment scheme. By the end of Wednesday 26 April 52,922 claims (44.10 per cent.) had been paid.

The Rural Payments Agency does not have data available on a regional basis, as the scheme is not administered in this way.

Telephone Advice Lines

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many telephone advice lines his Department and its non-departmental public bodies support; how many telephone advisers each employs; and how much funding is provided to each by (a) his Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (b) other Government Departments, (c) the private sector and (d) the voluntary sector. [66588]

Barry Gardiner: Defra and its non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) currently provide 33 telephone advice lines. No funding is provided by other Government Departments, the private sector or the voluntary sector. The number of telephone advisers employed varies according to the level of business demand. It is not possible to ascertain the amount of funding Defra and its NDPBs provide without disproportionate cost.

Water Metering

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research the Department has undertaken on intelligent water metering. [67895]

Ian Pearson: The Department has not undertaken research into intelligent water metering, but research has been carried out by the industry and the Department has taken a keen interest in this. The Water Saving Group is considering a broad range of topics relating to metering.

WALES

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) EU foreign nationals and (b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in his Department in each of the last five years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether these include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68015]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office draws its staff from other bodies, namely the National Assembly for Wales and Department of Constitutional Affairs. Staff have already been vetted by their employing bodies before moving to the Wales Office. The Wales Office does not hold information about the nationality of its employees centrally, and obtaining this information could only be achieved at disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [68979]

Mr. Hain: Staff serving in the Wales Office are either on loan from the National Assembly for Wales or employed by the Department for Constitutional Affairs. Their retirement age is agreed with their home departments rather than by the Wales Office. The Wales Office has a number of staff who have opted to work beyond normal retirement age.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the staff in his Department is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [68981]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office publishes information about the gender and grading of staff in its annual departmental report, which is available in the House Library.

The Wales Office has a small number of staff with disabilities. For privacy reasons the numbers are confidential, in line with guidance issued by the Cabinet Office, which states that Departments are not required to provide figures on the number of disabled staff where it is less than five in the department.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of his private office staff is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [68980]

Mr. Hain: The gender split of my private office staff is as follows:

(a) 42.9 per cent. of the staff are male

(b) 57.1 per cent. of the staff are female

The Wales Office has a small number of staff with disabilities. For privacy reason the numbers are confidential, in line with guidance issued by the Cabinet Office, which states that Departments are not required to provide figures on the number of disabled staff where it is less than five in the department.

TRANSPORT

Aircraft Noise

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the commitment in the White Paper on the future of aviation to bear down on aircraft noise, what target decibel level his Department has set for aircraft noise. [69852]

Gillian Merron: The information requested is not available for Doncaster, North. The number of passenger bus journeys per person per year in Yorkshire and Humberside are listed in the following table for *(a)*1985-06, *(b)*1994 and (c) 2004.

Buses

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total public spending (a) per head of the population and (b) per passenger was on bus services (i) including and (ii) excluding funding for concessionary travel in (A) London, (B) each of the English Passenger Transport Executive areas and (C) the rest of England in each of the last 10 years. In addition, operators of local bus services receive Bus Service Operators Grant from this Department. This is paid direct to operators and is not attributed to a specific area.

Departmental Policies

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to West Lancashire constituency the effects in West Lancashire of changes to his Department's policies since 1997. [64239]

Derek Twigg: Capital funding for local transport in the West Lancashire constituency is allocated to the Lancashire county council. The funding provided to Lancashire county council since 1997 is shown in the following table. It is for Lancashire county council to determine how that allocation is spent, in line with the priorities detailed in their local transport plan.

The Government are also investing £87 billion per week nationally to improve the railways, which will benefit those in West Lancashire. TransPennine Express, who operate services in West Lancashire, have invested £250 million in a fleet of 51 new trains. Passengers are already travelling on these trains and the full fleet is expected to be operating by the end of January 2007.

More locally, the West of Lancashire community rail partnership, which was established in 2000, has already been involved with the recent refurbishment of Parbold railway station, the development of a new interchange at Burscough Bridge and the introduction of a new Sunday service at Gathurst station and later evening service from Manchester to Southport.

The public performance measure for Northern Rail (2004-05), which covers punctuality and reliability, shows that 85 per cent. of trains arrived within five minutes of their designated time, against a national average of 84 per cent. These figures show an improvement in Northern Rail's performance since 2003-04.

Departmental Staff

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many departmental staff work on (a) rail, (b) road, (c) aviation, (d) [illegible], (e) walking, (f) cycling and (g) light rail related matters. [56607]

Derek Twigg: Actual and planned numbers of staff working in the central Department and its Agencies are set out in the Department's Annual Report 2005 (c. 6527). It is not possible to disaggregate staff numbers in the central Department by mode other than at disproportionate cost, since significant numbers work cross-modally or in units which are themselves cross-modal.

Driving Licences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his policy is on the revised European directive on driving licences; and if he will make a statement. [69641]

Dr. Ladyman: Driver licensing arrangements in the UK and in all other member states are currently governed by the second EU driver licensing directive (Directive 91/439/EEC). New proposals have been under negotiation since December 2003.

On 27 March, the Council of Transport Ministers announced that it had reached political agreement on a text for a proposed third Directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on driving licences. That text has now to be considered by the European Parliament before it can be adopted.

The Government abstained from the vote in Council on 27 March, because we are disappointed that it has been impossible to secure amendments to achieve better and more flexible arrangements for staged access by young motorcycle riders to the larger machines.

We believe that our present practice on licensing motorcycle riders, which insists on compulsory basic training and testing for all, is effective. We shall seek to work with motorcycle and road safety interests to devise as good as possible a way of retaining its benefits within the new EU framework.

Although the Government abstained because of its disappointment over staged access to motorcycles for young riders, it did not oppose, because it welcomes most of the remainder of the agreed text.

GNER

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact of the award of an open GNER contract to Grand Central, with particular reference to the ability of GNER (a) to achieve the objective of more trains between London and Leeds and (b) to pay the Government the amount required under its franchise agreement. [68414]

Derek Twigg: Network Rail has been required by the Office of Rail Regulation to undertake further timetabling work to establish how many additional GNER Leeds-London trains can be accommodated in addition to the additional Grand Central and Hull Trains services for which ORR recently granted access rights. The GNER franchise agreement contains a commitment to pursue a half-hourly service to Leeds. The financial provisions of the GNER franchise agreement does not include the additional Leeds services in the agreed premium payments.

Heathrow

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what meetings (a) he has and (b) his Ministers have had with (i) airport operators, (ii) aircraft operators and associated companies and (iii) the travel industry to discuss (A) night flights and (B) the expansion of Heathrow in the past two years; and if he will place in the Library the minutes of those meetings. [69834]

Gillian Merron: Ministers have met with a wide range of such bodies over the past two years. Issues relating to night flights and the expansion of Heathrow will have been discussed in the course of many of these meetings, along with other aviation issues. The matters discussed at such meetings are often confidential for commercial or other reasons, and it would not be appropriate to place the minutes in the House Library.

Level Crossings

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many level crossings there are in each parliamentary constituency in England and Wales. [69619]

Derek Twigg: Information on the number of level crossings is recorded by Network Rail zone not by parliamentary constituency. Data on the number of crossings in each zone are contained in the Health and Safety Executive's Railway Safety annual report for 2004, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

MOT Computer System

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many days the MOT computer system has worked without a technical problem occurring since its formal live date. [69552]

Dr. Ladyman: The MOT computerisation system was rolled out between 18 April 2005 and 29 March 2006. The supported service is available to garages between the hours of 6am to 10pm daily, 365 days of the year. Technical problems that have occurred have never impacted all garages and, save one recent incident, have not lasted a complete day. Supported service availability to the end of April 2006, is 99.37 per cent. (accuracy measured on a minute basis). Over the same period, the number of days without any technical problem occurring was 350 days (93 per cent.).

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent by the Vehicle and Operator Services Agency (VOSA) on the new MOT computer system. [69553]

Dr. Ladyman: Expenditure on the MOT computerisation programme was £24 million from the inception of the project to the commencement of roll out (18 April 2005). This includes VOSA internal project costs and payments to Siemens Business Systems. Expenditure to the completion of roll out to all testing stations is £32.1 million.

Petrol Sales

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent estimate he has made of how many litres of petrol are purchased in a year for use in (a) road haulage, (b) private cars and (c) city buses. [69748]

Dr. Ladyman: Consumption of road fuel by weight is published by the Department in "Transport Statistics Great Britain" (see TGSB 2005, Table 3.1 Petroleum Consumption: by transport mode and fuel type). Figures can be converted from tonnes to litres by dividing the weight of the fuel by the density of the fuel (0.000736 tonnes per litre for petrol and 0.000832 tonnes per litre for diesel). No petrol (motor spirit) is consumed by buses or heavy goods vehicles as these vehicles have diesel engines. A copy of the TGSB 2005 is available in the House Library.

Railways

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the rail franchise contracts that are expected to be awarded before the end of 2008. [67270]

Derek Twigg: The following franchise contracts are expected to be awarded before 1 January 2009: South Western, East Midlands, West Midland and Cross Country.

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the passenger growth on the (a) Plymouth to Bristol, (b) Plymouth to Birmingham, (c) Plymouth to London and (d) Exeter to Waterloo railway lines was in each year between 1994 and 2005. [63431]

Derek Twigg: Information for years prior to 2002 is not available in the form requested. The figures for years from 2002 onwards are as follows:

Year[1]	Percentage passenger growth
(a) Plymouth to Bristol
2002-03	15
2003-04	8
2004-05	-6

[1]Rail reporting year which is April to March

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many (a) members of departmental staff and (b) external consultants were employed to research and write the North East regional planning assessment for the railway; [68876]

(2) what the total cost was of (a) preparing and (b) producing the North East regional planning assessment. [68877]

Derek Twigg: The preparation and writing of the draft North East regional planning assessment (RPA) was carried out by a single consultancy firm procured by the Strategic Rail Authority at a fee cost of £224,997 (including VAT). Data for the exact number of consultants employed are not available.

A number of SRA, and subsequently Department for Transport (DfT) staff supported the development and production of the published RPA, but were not solely dedicated to this task. SRA and DfT staff costs for the RPA work alone are therefore not available. However, it is estimated that around 15 per cent. of a full-time DfT post (plus formerly 25 per cent. of a full-time SRA post) was spent supporting this work, with additional administrative support.

The total cost to date of publication of the RPA by the Department is £6,903 (including VAT).

Regional Transport Boards

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether the meetings of each regional transport (a) board and (b) forum are open to the public; [69548]

(2) if he will list the members of each regional transport (a) board and (b) forum; [69549]

(3) to whom the regional transport board or forum is accountable in each of the English regions. [69550]

Dr. Ladyman: It is for individual regions to consider what structures to put in place to consider transport matters. The membership, meeting arrangements and accountability of these bodies are also matters for individual regions, but will generally depend on their allotted functions, which may vary; for example developing the draft regional transport strategy or preparing advice on regional funding allocations and providing a consultation mechanism for these processes.

Road Accidents

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicle accidents occurred on A roads in (a) Hampshire and (b) England in each year since 1990; and how many (i) fatalities and (ii) serious injuries there were as a result in each year. [69675]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of personal injury road accidents reported to the police on A roads in (a) Hampshire (excluding the unitary authorities of Southampton, Portsmouth and Isle of Wight) and (b) England and the resulting fatalities and serious injuries in each year from 1990 to 2004 (the latest year for which figures are available) are given in the table.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicle accidents have occurred on motorways in each year since 1990; and how many (a) fatalities and (b) serious injuries occurred as a result in each year. [69676]

This information has been published in annual publication series "Road Casualties Great Britain", which are available in the Library of the House.

Road Tax

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport at what age the Government ceases to exempt motorists with disabilities from road tax. [69753]

Dr. Ladyman: Exemption from Vehicle Excise Duty (VED) is available to motorists in receipt of certain mobility allowances; the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance (DLA) and war pensioners mobility supplement (WPMS). There is no age limit as long as the motorist is in receipt of a qualifying allowance.

Subsidies

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the subsidies paid to each (a) passenger transport authority and (b) other county council and transport authority area in each of the past ten years. [60025]

Gillian Merron: The largest subsidy is the Revenue Support Grant, which is provided to all local authorities to assist in their delivery of services. Services supported by this grant include, for example, procurement of public transport services and routine maintenance of highways. As RSG is provided as a 'single pot' it is not possible to identify the amount used by each passenger transport authority or local transport authority specifically on transport.

Local transport authorities receive subsidy for capital investment through supported capital in the local transport settlement for integrated transport and highways maintenance, and through direct grant in respect of major schemes. A table has been placed in the Libraries of the House showing the total allocations. Most authorities have also received Rural Bus Subsidy Grant since 1998, which is shown in the second table that has also been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Smaller subsidies to local authorities include the Rural and Urban Bus Challenge Grant and Kickstart. Information on these grants is available in the Library of the House. Information on rail grants is contained in the strategic rail authority's annual reports.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Christmas Day Trading Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the operation of the Christmas Day Trading Act 2004; and what recent representations he has received about the operation of this Act. [69634]

Mr. McCartney: The public consultation during 2003 showed 97 per cent of respondents in favour of maintaining the special nature of Christmas Day. The Department has received no representations about the operation of the Act and we have no plans to revisit this issue.

Corruption (Kenya)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment he has made of whether British companies have been involved in corruption in Kenya. [68228]

Mr. McCartney: The UK takes a firm stand on combating corruption in international trade. The Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 includes provisions on bribery and corruption. The UK also ratified the UN Convention against Corruption in February 2006. There have so far been no cases brought to our attention under the legislation alleging that UK companies have been involved in corrupt practices in Kenya.

Developed Countries (UK Trade)

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the UK's international trade with developed countries. [68475]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The Government's approach to international trade is set out in the 2004 trade and investment White Paper: "Making globalisation a force for the good". We are committed to a global trading system that is fair as well as free. The UK's trade (imports and exports) in goods and services with OECD countries totals around £490 billion.

Domestic Dog and Cat Fur

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department has taken since his written ministerial statement of 27 January 2005, Official Report, columns 33-4WS, on domestic dog and cat fur (alleged imports), to investigate the alleged import of domestic cat and dog fur into the UK. [68077]

Mr. McCartney: The Government have sought to establish the facts about the extent of the alleged trade in domestic cat and dog fur in the UK. We have found no evidence that such fur is being imported into this country in significant volumes. The Government have also been working to establish a scientific test to make it possible to ascertain reliably from what species of animal any given fur sample has come.

We firmly believe that action on this issue should and would best be taken at EU level as a harmonised approach would have greater impact, enhance animal-welfare standards within the EU itself and avoid obstacles to the operation of the single market. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs supported calls for the European Commission to investigate these allegations when the Agriculture and Fisheries Council met in May 2005.

In January 2006, the Commission published its Action Plan on the Protection and Welfare of Animals, which proposes action in the course of 2006 to address public concerns on the trading of cat and dog fur and derived products. On 20 February, Health and Consumer Protection Commissioner Kyprianou stated at the Agriculture and Fisheries Council that the Commission was planning to publish a proposal on the import of cat and dog fur within the next few months.

Energy Imports

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost of UK energy imports of (a) gas, (b) oil and (c) electricity was in each of the last five years. [69684]

Malcolm Wicks: Energy value balances produced by the DTI show the following values for imported gas, oil, and electricity. Further information on the methodology used to produce the value balances is contained in Chapter 1 of the Digest of UK Energy Statistics, copies of which are available in the House Library or on the DTI website at: http://www.dti.gov.uk/files/file19257.pdf.

EU Manufacturing

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the extent to which export subsidies are given by EU member state governments to support their domestic manufacturing industry. [68739]

Mr. McCartney: Direct export subsidies are illegal under the state aid rules which apply under the treaty of Rome. These rules are enforced by the European Commission and reports on the action it takes against member states who breach them are published on its website at: http://europa.eu.int/coinm/competition/state_aid/scoreboard/

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Government plan to challenge export subsidies given to manufacturers by other EU member state governments; and if he will make a statement. [68740]

Mr. McCartney: Direct export subsidies are always illegal. Only the European Commission can take action against illegal subsidies. If the Government had any evidence of such subsidies we would bring this to the attention of the Commission at once. It also open to any UK company in possession of such evidence to complain direct to the Commission.

Guidance on how to complain to the Commission can be found at http://europa.eu.int/comm/secretariat_general/sgb/droit_com/index_en.htm#aides

Hotelware (Tariffs)

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on negotiations between the European Commission and the United States authorities regarding tariffs applied to hotelware. [67157]

Mr. McCartney: Negotiations between the European Commission and the US authorities on tariffs applied to hotel ware form part of the Doha development agenda negotiations on non-agricultural market access.

Italian Subsidies

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has received on subsidies available in Italy. [68742]

Mr. McCartney: The Department's main source of information on state aid granted in all member states including Italy is the European Commission's twice yearly scoreboard for global information on state aid granted in other member states: http:/Veuropa.eu.int/coinni/competition/state_aid/scoreboaiW2005/autuinn_en.pdf

Information on aid schemes and individual aids in all member states which have been notified to and approved by the European Commission can also be found on the Commission's website:

http://europa.eu.int/conini/competition/stateaid/register/

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions Ministers of State in his Department stayed overnight in (a) five star, (b) four star and (c) three star hotels on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69000]

Mr. Darling: This information is not readily available and can only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

However, under the terms of the ministerial code and travel by Ministers, when travelling on official business, Ministers are expected to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements.

Post Office Card Account

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much interest has accrued from balances kept on Post Office card accounts since its inception; to which organisation these balances accrue; and if he will make a statement. [69893]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Any interest accrued from balances on Post Office card accounts is shared between Post Office Ltd. and its suppliers of the card accounts. This sum helps to offset some of the costs of operating the card account. Details of the amount of interest that accrues is commercially confidential.

Sakhalin II Project

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions Shell has had with his Department on the Sakhalin II oil and gas project. [68586]

Mr. McCartney: DTI and UK Trade and Investment (and the latter's predecessor, Trade Partners UK) have had a number of meetings with Shell at which Sakhalin II has been discussed. However, most of the meetings relating to Sakhalin II since May 2001 have taken place in the context of the Export Credits Guarantee Department's (ECGD) due diligence and have been with Sakhalin Energy Investment Company (SEIC), in which Shell Sakhalin Holdings B.V. is the major shareholder, rather than with Shell itself.

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria the Export Credits Guarantee Department use when assessing whether to support the Sakhalin II oil and gas project. [68588]

Mr. McCartney: The Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD) has published its Case Impact Analysis Process, which sets out the criteria that it uses to assess the environmental and social impacts of projects. This can be found on its website at www.ecgd.gov.uk/ecgd_case_impact_analysis_process_ may2004.doc.

In addition to the environmental and social impacts, in assessing the Sakhalin II project ECGD will need to consider the financial, commercial and legal aspects of the project.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the operation of Statutory Instrument number (a) 2001/2673, (b) 2001/2660, (c) 2001/4010, (d) 2002/3128, (e) 2003/3319 and (f) 2003/1656. [69633]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Government are proud of their record on employment regulation. This has given the UK a skilled and flexible work force. We have given people decent rights at work without jeopardising their prospects for employment. Both employers and employees have rights and responsibilities towards each other and we strive to find the right balance and consult closely on all our regulations.

The Regulations behind the above statutory instruments are as follows:

SI 2001/2673

The Regulations behind Statutory Instrument 2001/2673 amended the National Minimum Wage Regulations 1999 and came into force on 1 October 2001. They increased the adult minimum wage rate from £3.70 to £4.10 an hour and the rate for workers aged 18-21 (inclusive) from £3.20 to £3.50 an hour. They also made a number of other amendments relating to the level of the accommodation offset and workers taking part in accredited training. Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs is responsible for enforcing compliance with the national minimum wage legislation.

SI 2001/2660

SI 2001/2660 introduced two technical changes to the Sex Discrimination Act 1975 to implement the Burden of Proof Directive—97/80/EC—the aim of which was to ensure that victims of sex discrimination are provided with effective access to justice, and in doing so promote equal treatment. This Directive applied to the employment field only. These regulations are enforceable through the Employment Tribunal system.

SI 2001/4010

SI 2001/4010 extended parental leave entitlement for parents of disabled children under 18 from 13 weeks' parental leave to 18 weeks' leave which can be taken up to their child's 18th birthday. SI 2001/4010 also extended the right to parental leave to parents of children under 5 on 15 December 1999. These parents were able to take their parental leave until 31 March 2001. SI 1999/3312, which SI 2001/4010 amended, is enforceable through the employment tribunals system.

SI 2002/3128

SI 2002/3128 introduced measures to protect young workers and provide fair minimum standards which ensure that young people are protected from excess working time leading to fatigue, risks to health and safety and possible damage to their education. These Regulations are enforceable and I have not been made aware of any difficulties with their operation.

SI 2003/3319

The Conduct of Employment Agencies and Employment Businesses Regulations 2003 (Statutory Instruments 2003/3319) govern the private recruitment industry in the UK and seek to protect those using the job-finding services provided by employment agencies. It is enforced by the DTIs Employment Agency Standards (EAS) Inspectorate. The Inspectorate can prosecute an agency found to be in breach of the legislation and can also apply for a Prohibition Order preventing an individual from operating as an agency or employment business for up to 10 years. The EAS has a helpline; the number is 0845 955 5105.

SI 2003/1656

SI 2003/1656 amended the Equal Pay Act 1970 in three respects to reflect requirements of European Community law, specifically Article 141 of the Treaty of Rome (equal pay), as applied in a number of recent cases before the European Court of Justice and the domestic courts. It extended the previous two-year limit on the period over which an employment tribunal could award back pay in successful equal pay cases, extended the six-month time limit within which a woman must bring an equal pay claim before an employment tribunal in specific, limited cases, and introduced a new rule that enables equal pay claims to be brought during the period of a stable employment relationship or within six months of it ending. These Regulations are enforceable through the Employment Tribunal system.

TREASURY

Planning Gain Supplement

11. Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on progress in implementing the planning gain supplement. [69714]

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to bring forward proposals on the planning gain supplement. [69716]

John Healey: As set out in the 2006 Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report, the Government will make further announcements on PGS implementation by the end of the year.

The Government received approximately 800 responses to their consultation on PGS and are considering views carefully and continuing to engage with stakeholders.

Economic Growth

14. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on economic growth in the first quarter of 2006. [69718]

Ed Balls: On the basis of latest estimate, UK GDP grew by 0.6 per cent. in the first quarter of 2006 and stood 2.25 per cent. higher than in the first quarter of 2005, fully consistent with the Budget forecast. This represents the 55th consecutive quarter of uninterrupted economic growth, maintaining the longest expansion on record and is clear testament of the success of this Government's macroeconomic policies.

Inflation

15. John Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the level of inflation is in the UK, the EU and the USA; and if he will make a statement. [69719]

John Healey: At present, the rate of CPI inflation in the UK is 1.8 per cent.; close to target despite recent rises in oil prices. This is below the current rate of CPI inflation in the United States of 3.4 per cent., and below the rate of more than 2 per cent. in both the euro area and the EU as a whole.

Drug Misuse

17. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria he will use to determine the level of public expenditure for combating drug abuse in the forthcoming spending review. [69721]

Mr. Timms: Tackling drugs remains one of the Government's highest priorities, and that priority will be reflected in the forthcoming spending review. We will ensure that spending continues to contribute to improving health and reducing crime.

Working Tax Credit

18. Mary Creagh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people claimed working tax credit in (a) Wakefield and (b) West Yorkshire in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [69722]

Dawn Primarolo: In April 2006, there were 33,000 in-work families with child or working tax credit awards in the local authority of Wakefield, and 9,300 in the constituency of Wakefield. There were 204,500 thousand in-work families with child or working tax credit awards in the metropolitan county of West Yorkshire.

Climate Change

19. Nia Griffith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the role of taxation policy in combating climate change. [69723]

John Healey: The Government set out their framework for using the tax system to meet their environmental objectives in their "Statement of Intent on Environmental Taxation" in 1997. This principled framework was developed further in the Treasury 2002 publication "Tax and the Environment".

Alongside other policy instruments, tax measures have been a significant part of the UK's Climate Change Programme that was launched in 2000. For instance, the climate change levy package has delivered over 28 million tonnes of carbon emissions savings so far.

Energy and Environmental Research Institute

20. Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on public funding for the energy and environmental research institute which he announced in his Budget. [69724]

John Healey: The new National Institute for Energy Technologies will be a 50:50 public-private partnership. The intention is that the private sector investment would be matched (up to a pre-determined limit) by public science and technology investment.

Pensions

21. Rob Marris: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of tax relief on pension contributions on levels of savings in occupational pension schemes. [69725]

Ed Balls: Tax relief on pension contributions is just one of the range of fiscal incentives designed to encourage both workers and their employers to save for retirement via an occupational pension scheme. The current annual net cost of the tax treatment of approved pensions is approximately £12 billion.

Inflation Report

22. Ms Keeble: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the implications for economic growth of the Bank of England's latest inflation report; and if he will make a statement. [69726]

Ed Balls: The Bank of England's latest Inflation Report forecasts suggest somewhat stronger growth over the next two years than the independent consensus.

Business Rate (Civic Penalties)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civic penalties have been issued for failure to provide information to the Valuation Office Agency for business rates valuations since they were introduced; what average penalty has been levied; and what the estimated aggregate revenue from the penalties has been. [62281]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

809 civil penalty notices have been issued for failure to provide information requested for non-domestic rating purposes. The average penalty levied is £220, and the total amount collected since the powers were introduced is £178,350. All monies are paid into the Consolidated Fund. They are neither retained by nor accessible to the Valuation Office Agency.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what means an individual can appeal against the imposition of a civic penalty for failure to provide information to the Valuation Office Agency for business rates valuations. [62282]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

An individual can appeal to the local valuation tribunal if aggrieved by the imposition of a penalty for failure to provide rental information requested by a valuation officer. The appeal needs to be made within 28 days of the penalty notice being served. The tribunal can mitigate or remit any penalty on the grounds that the appellant had a reasonable excuse for non-compliance and/or that the information is not in the possession or control of the appellant.

Cancer

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the death rate for cancer was in (a) males and (b) females under 75 years of age in each year since 1976. [68832]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 11 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the death rate for cancer was in (a) males and (b) females under 75 years of age in each year since 1976. (68832)

The most recent year for which figures are available is 2004. The attached table shows the age-standardised death rate from cancer, for males and females aged under 75 years in England and Wales for the years 1976 to 2004. Although coding changes within this period mean that figures are not completely comparable between 1976 and 2004, nevertheless a strong overall downward trend can be seen in cancer mortality across these years.

Death rates[1] from cancer[2], for males and females aged under 75[3], England and Wales, 1976 to 2004[4]

Between 1984 and 1992 a different interpretation ofICD-9 selection rule 3 was used to code underlying cause of death in England and Wales to that used internationally. This change means that comparisons between this period and years before and after, should be interpreted with caution. The impact of the change on mortality statistics was analysed and reported in annual mortality publications in 1984 and 1994*. The introduction of ICD-10 for coding cause of death in 2001 also means that figures are not completely comparable with data for years before this date. Comparisons between the data before and after 2001 should therefore also be interpreted with caution. An article specifically examining the effect of the change in classification for cancer trends was published in Health Statistics Quarterly 23. More information about these changes, as well as the results of the study, can be found on the National Statistics website at www.statistics.gov.uk/icd10mortality

Cash Machines

Ben Chapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with banks on fee-charging cash machines; and if he will make a statement. [69720]

Ed Balls: On 4 May 2006, the former Economic Secretary to the Treasury convened a meeting of representative stakeholders, including banks, independent ATM providers and consumer groups, to address ATM charging. The discussion was open and extremely constructive. With the agreement of industry and consumer bodies present, my predecessor invited John McFall MP to chair a working group to take forward work on the key issues. This group will report back to me within a specific time-frame.

Census Records

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many communications have been received by (a) his Department and (b) the Office for National Statistics from hon. Members since 1 January 2005 on the failure of the Registrar General to transfer decennial census records for England and Wales to the National Archives not later than 30 years after their creation in accordance with the Public Records Act 1958 s.3(4). [66496]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 11 May 2006:

As National Statistician and Registrar General I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many communications have been received by (a) the Treasury and (b) the Office for National Statistics from hon. Members since 1st January 2005, on the failure of the Registrar General to transfer decennial census records for England and Wales to the National Archives not later than 30 years after their creation in accordance with the Public Records Act 1958 s.3(4). 66496

There has been just one communication in total from Members of Parliament since 1 January 2005 concerning the transfer of census records but this related to the 1981 and 1991 Censuses which are, of course, not yet 30 years old.

I should clarify that in accordance with Section 3(4) of the Public Records Act I have obtained approval for retention of decennial census records which are over 30 years old. Lord Chancellor's Retention Instrument number 81 approves retention of the 1921 and 1951 censuses and the Lord Chancellor's Retention Instrument number 63 approves retention of the 1961 and 1971 censuses. There are no surviving decennial population census records for 1931 and no census was taken in 1941.

Charges (Bank/Credit Card)

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to limit punitive charges that can be levied when (a) a bank account goes overdrawn and (b) a credit card limit is breached. [64056]

Ed Balls: The Office of Fair Trading has been investigating the question of credit card default charges. In April it produced a statement of the principles they think card issuers should follow in setting default charges in their standard contracts with consumers in order to meet the test of fairness set out in the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999.

The OFT has made it clear that it expects all credit card issuers to recalculate their default charges in line with the principles set out in the statement and to take action where needed to reduce the level of credit card default fees. The OFT also noted that the principles also apply to default charges in other consumer contracts such as those for bank overdrafts, store cards and mortgages.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [69066]

John Healey: The Treasury looks sympathetically at requests from its employees to work beyond its current retirement age of 60. The Department's retirement age policy is currently under review to take account of the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006.

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the staff in his Department is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [69068]

John Healey: 56.3 per cent. of the staff of the Treasury are male. The breakdown by grade is as follows:

	Percentage
Range A	0.5
Range B	6.6
Range C	9.8
Range D	34.1
Range E	34.1
SCS	11.4
Special Advisers	1.1
Students	2.5

The grade breakdown of the 43.7 per cent. of staff who are female is as follows:

	Percentage
Range A	1.2
Range B	18.6
Range C	15.2
Range D	307
Range E	23.8
SCS	8.6
Special Advisers	0.4
Students	1.4

3.5 per cent. of Treasury staff have declared themselves as having a disability. The grade breakdown is as follows:

	Percentage
Range A	44.4
Range B	6.0
Range C	5.1
Range D	2.4
Range E	2.4
SCS	1.7

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of his private office staff is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [69067]

John Healey: 76.9 per cent. of the staff of the Chancellor's Office are male and 23,1 per cent. are female. None of the staff concerned have declared themselves as being disabled.

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total cost was of (a) staff away-days and (b) staff team building exercises in his Department in each of the last three years. [69065]

John Healey: The total cost recorded for staff away-days and team building exercises in 2005-06 is £54,000. Costs for earlier years could be disaggregated only at disproportionate cost.

Staff Vetting

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) EU foreign nationals and (b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in his Department in each of the last five years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether these include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68024]

John Healey: The information requested in respect of the Treasury is set out in the following table.

	EU nationals	Non-EU nationals
2001	11	12
2002	6	14
2003	12	22
2004	9	12
2005	12	18

All staff working in the Treasury are required to undergo national security vetting. The level of vetting that is appropriate will depend on the particular post that they are going to fill. Where necessary, the vetting process will include a check of time spent overseas.

Doncaster, North (Statistics)

Edward Miliband: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people resident in Doncaster, North were employed in transport services in (a) 1984, (b) 1994 and (c) 2004. [68407]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 11 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment in the transport service. (68407)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of employment for local areas from the annual local area Labour Force Survey (LFS) and the Annual Population Survey (APS) following International Labour Organisation definitions.

It is estimated that 1,000 people, resident in the Doncaster North Parliamentary Constituency, were employed in transport services (1992 Standard Industrial Classification classes 60 - land transport, 61 - water transport and 62 - air transport) for the 12 months ending December 2004 from the APS. LFS industry class data for parliamentary constituencies are only available from the 12 month period ending February 1999.

The estimate, as with any from sample surveys, is subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Economic Inactivity

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the rates of economic inactivity were for people of working age in each (a) region, (b) country in the UK and (c) parliamentary constituency in Tyne and Wear in each year from 1995 to 2005. [69578]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 11 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question about economic inactivity. (69578)

The Office for National Statistics compiles statistics of economic inactivity for local areas from the annual population survey following international labour organisation definitions.

Table 1, attached shows the economic inactivity rates for persons of working age (males aged 16 to 64 and females aged 16 to 59) for each region and country of the UK for the 12 month period ending December 2004. Table 2, attached, shows the equivalent rates for each parliamentary constituency in Tyne and Wear.

These estimates, as with any from sample surveys, are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Energy Efficiency (Scotland)

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what proportion of the funding he announced in the Budget for local authorities and energy companies to work together for energy efficiency will be allocated to Scotland; [69905]

(2) whether the additional funds announced in his budget to help local authorities and others to work in partnership with energy companies to promote and incentivise energy efficiency measures for households apply to Scotland; [69906]

(3) what discussions he has had with the Scottish Executive on the allocation of funds from the additional £20 million announced in his Budget for energy efficiency measures. [69907]

Mr. Timms: The Scottish Executive received additional funding totalling £87 million as a consequence of additional funding for Government Departments in the March 2006 Budget. The allocation of these funds to specific services is a matter for the Scottish Executive.

Treasury Ministers and Scottish Ministers are in regular contact on matters of common interest.

Infant Mortality

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the 10 areas with the (a) highest and (b) lowest rates of infant mortality; and if he will make a statement. [69334]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 11 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the 10 areas with the (a) highest and (b) lowest rates of infant mortality. (69334)

The attached table gives infant mortality rates for the aggregate period 2002-2004, for the 10 primary care organisation (PCO) areas in England with the highest rates of infant mortality and the 10 PCO areas with the lowest rates of infant mortality.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will provide a substantive response to question 63954, tabled by the hon. Member for the Isle of Wight on 30 March on tax credits. [70138]

Dawn Primarolo: I have already done so.

Pregnancy Rates

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the pregnancies rates for (a) 15 to 16 and (b) 13 to 14 year olds were in the last period for which figures are available. [69661]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 11 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the pregnancy rates for (a) 15 to 16 and (b) 13 to 14 year olds were in the last period for which figures are available. (69661)

The most recent year for which conception statistics are available is 2004 and figures for this year are provisional.

Number of conceptions to girls aged under 14 by single year of age are not published by ONS to protect the confidentiality of individual's information due to small number of events at younger ages. It is therefore not possible to provide conception rate for girls aged 13-14; we can instead provide information for all aged under 14 combined.

Conception figures for women aged under 14, 14 and 15 to 16 for England and Wales are given in the following table.

Conceptions at ages under 14, 14 and 15-16, England and Wales, 2004

Age	Number	Rate[1]
Under 14	341	1.0
14	1,751	5.2
15-16	19,137	28.3

[1] Rates for women aged under 14, 14 and 15-16 are based on the female population of women aged 13, 14 and 15-16 respectively.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update Table 8.17 of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 2005 to show (a) current and (b) capital expenditure for each year from 1999-2000 to 2005-06. [69916]

Mr. Timms: We do not have any plans to modify Table 8.17 of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses (PESA) 2005 to show current and capital expenditure or for the table to cover a run of years. Updated estimates of expenditure analysed by country and region, including an update of Table 8.17 to cover 2004-05, will be published in PESA 2006 (Cm8511), on 15 May 2006.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what projections he has made for the revenue from stamp duty on (a) property and (b) share transactions in each of the next three financial years. [69837]

Ed Balls: Projected revenues for total stamp taxes in 2006-07 were published in Table C8 of the Budget 2006 report. The breakdown between stamp taxes on land and property and stamp taxes on shares is as follows:

Taxes	£ billion 2006-07
Stamp taxes on land and property transactions	8.1
Stamp taxes on share transactions	4.0
Total stamp taxes	12.2

Projections of total stamp taxes are only shown in the Budget 2006 report up to 2006-07 and this is therefore the last year for which forecast receipts are currently given in replies to parliamentary questions.

Tax Credits

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made in response to the ombudsman's recommendation of an independent right of appeal on decisions to recover tax credit overpayments; and if he will make a statement. [67258]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC are exploring with the adjudicator whether her office could provide an independent review of disputed overpayment decisions.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken to prevent abuse of the new £25,000 income disregard rule in tax credit assessments. [69160]

Dawn Primarolo: The tax credit regulations already contain anti-avoidance provisions which HMRC would seek to deploy in the event of an attempted abuse of this kind.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many additional staff have been brought in to the tax credit call centres to deal with the current annual declarations. [69161]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC keep the demand and service levels of the Tax Credit Helpline under constant review and have the flexibility to adjust resources as and when needed.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the UK's balance of trade was with (a) the USA, (b) China, (c) India, (d) Japan, (e) the remainder of South East Asia and (f) South America in each of the last eight years; and what assessment he has made of the trends over this period. [69937]

Ed Balls: The Office for National Statistics publishes trade in goods and services data by country in their annual Pink Book publication (http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=1140&Pos=1&ColRank=1&Rank=272). Trends in the UK's trade with the rest of the world vary significantly across regions. For example, the UK runs a substantial trade surplus with the United States, while it is currently running a trade deficit with the majority of south-east Asian and south American economies.

These trends are likely to partly reflect broader global trends, with emerging economies accounting for an increasing share of global output, trade and investment. These changes have significant implications for the world's advanced economies, bringing with them new challenges and opportunities.

Unemployment

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of unemployment in the West Midlands in 2004-05. [69727]

Ed Balls: In 2004-05, claimant unemployment in the West Midlands reached a record low, and was 243,000 lower than its peak in March 1986.

Between May 1997 and March 2006, claimant unemployment in the West Midlands has fallen by 40,000 (27.1 per cent.) and the rate is now 5.2 per cent.

Vehicle Excise Duty Forms

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps were taken following the changes announced in the Budget to ensure that correct renewal information was included on vehicle excise duty renewal forms despatched in April for renewal in May. [69827]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) issues around 3 million V11s every month. This volume means that they are printed up to eight weeks in advance and are timed to arrive with the registered keeper of a vehicle about three weeks before the licence is due for renewal. Because the forms have to be printed so far in advance it was not possible to print the post budget rates of vehicle excise duty (VED) on most forms for May dates of liability. The rates of duty shown were correct at the time of printing.

When the date of the next Budget is known, DVLA will ensure that the warning message will be placed on all reminders that may show out of date rates of VED to prevent confusion arising in the future.

Electoral Roll

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the size of the total electorate for the (a) Vale of Clwyd and (b) Denbighshire in each of the last 10 years; [65905]

(2) what the (a) size of the electorate and (b) registration rate was in each local authority in (i) England, (ii) Wales, (iii) Scotland and (iv) Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [68582]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 11 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions regarding (1) the size of the electorate and the registration rate in each local authority in (i) England, (ii) Wales, (iii) Scotland and (iv) Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years; (2) the percentage of those eligible to vote who were registered to vote in each local authority in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years and (3) the total electorate for (a) the Vale of Clwyd and (b) Denbighshire in each of the last 10 years. (68582, 64195 and 65905)

Firstly, please allow me to explain why it has taken a little while to reply to your questions. I understand from the House of Commons Library that you are most interested in Parliamentary electorate by local authority. This is not a standard output so it has taken some time to collate the data and ensure it is on an equivalent basis. This is further complicated by different data being available for England & Wales, Scotland, and Northern Ireland. Electoral data are held locally by the General Register Office for Scotland (GROS), the Electoral Office Northern Ireland (EONI) and for England & Wales the Office for National Statistics (ONS). Regarding the question on total electorate for Denbighshire and the Vale of Clwyd, we do not normally publish data on total electorate (rather we publish local/European electorate and separately Parliamentary electorate data). For years up to and including 2001, data are not held electronically in a form that enables us to calculate 'total electorate'. Therefore, in order to obtain the data you requested we have referred to the annual paper returns from Denbighshire to collate the necessary data.

Historical UK Electorate by LA

Electoral data are available on the number of people registered to vote in Parliamentary elections and also on the number of people registered to vote in local/European elections. Annual population data are only available on a "usual residence" basis: the mid-year population estimates. Since population data are available by age, the mid-year population aged 18 and over can be calculated. Thus it is possible to calculate an estimate of the 'registration rate' using "the percentage of the usually resident population, aged 18 and over who are registered to vote" as either Parliamentary or local/European electors).

It is not possible to 'split' estimates of the usual resident population in order to give estimates of the population entitled to vote. We do not hold data (e.g. populations of non-EU citizens) that enable us to produce such a 'split'.

The attached tables (one for each year), therefore, provide information, for each local authority in the UK, on (i) the annual 'usual resident' mid-year population; (ii) the size of the (a) Parliamentary electorate and (b) local/European electorate; and (iii) the percentage of the "estimated usually resident population" aged 18 and over who are registered to vote as (a) Parliamentary electors and (b) local/European electors. These are labelled as 'registration rates' on the tables and this term is used in the remainder of this reply. These data provide the closest available approximation to the information you requested. It is not possible to calculate the percentage of the eligible population who are registered to vote: the resident population aged 18 and over is not the same as the number of people eligible to vote.

This 'registration rate' is not a published National Statistic: there are a number of issues that mean care needs to be taken when interpreting the data. In particular care needs to be taken when considering local authorities where the usually resident population differs radically from the population eligible to vote. An example of such a local authority is Forest Heath. There are a large number of United States Air Force personnel, contractors, and dependants in Forest Heath who, as American citizens, are not eligible to vote. These people are however included in the population estimates as they are usually resident. Therefore, the estimated 'registration rate' calculated for Forest Heath is considerably reduced. However, the Office for National Statistics (ONS), in order to aid comparisons of the resident population of voting age and the number of people who are registered to vote, does calculate 'registration rates' on occasion in the manner outlined above.

The attached tables give comparisons between the number of registered electors and annual mid-year population for the ten years up to mid-2004 (the latest available population estimates for the UK) for all local authorities in the UK. Each table shows a comparison against Parliamentary electorate (where available) and against local/European electorate. The availability of Parliamentary electorate by LA differs by country as this is a non-standard output. Data availability also differs from year to year. Recent improvements to the way the data are held for England and Wales mean these data can now be calculated for more recent years. For England and Wales data on Parliamentary electorate by LA, for years prior to 2002, could only be calculated by reference to individual paper LA annual returns and would involve disproportionate cost. For Scotland, 2004 data on Parliamentary electors by LA will be available shortly and we will provide you with an update of these tables when they become available. For Northern Ireland data on Parliamentary electors by LA are not currently available.

In order to give an estimate of the number of electors at the mid-year point, 30 June, a weighted average is taken of the two closest sets of electoral data. This gives the best possible comparison with the population estimates. Footnotes to the tables indicate the formulae used to calculate these weighted comparisons.

Attainers have been excluded from the electorate data to give the best possible comparison. Therefore, the data may differ to that published elsewhere.

We have also updated the data where there are known (small) errors in or updates to previously published data. This means that the attached data provide the best possible comparison.

The local/European electorate gives a better comparison than parliamentary electorate to the usually resident population as EU citizens are included and UK citizens resident abroad are excluded from the local/European electorate. However, a number of other difficulties remain when comparing these sources. For example not everyone who is usually resident is entitled to vote (foreign citizens from outside of the EU and Commonwealth, prisoners, etc. are not eligible) and people who have more than one address may register in more than one place (e.g. students may register at parental and term-time addresses). These factors may have a differential impact from place to place.

There is also inevitably some double counting of the registered electorate (both parliamentary and local/European) as electoral registration officers vary in how quickly they remove people from the registers after they have moved away from an area or after they have died. This is the main reason some areas show apparent rates in excess of one hundred per cent.

In order to aid comparison two further tables are attached that show the estimated 'registration rates' for all ten years. Table A shows these rates for Parliamentary electors and Table B for local/European electors. However, any comparison of these data across years should be made carefully as electoral legislation and other changes (such as EU expansion) can change the size of the electorate.

A copy of the tables will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

The tables provide as comprehensive as possible comparisons between historic local authority population and electorate numbers. I understand from the House of Commons Library that you are also interested in the percentage of residents who are registered to vote on a Parliamentary constituency basis. Official Report number 82 column 1719, 12 December 2005, provides the best possible consistent UK comparison for Parliamentary constituencies. For England and Wales we hope to investigate the possibility of producing population estimates by Parliamentary constituency in the future using Small Area Population Estimates. For Northern Ireland, population estimates by Parliamentary constituency are already available from the Northern Ireland Statistical and Research Agency (NISRA). Total Electorate for Denbighshire and Vale of Clwyd

The table below provides the requested 'total electorate' information for Denbighshire and the Vale of Clwyd, for the past 9 years. The total electorate figures shown here are those who are registered to vote as either Parliamentary electors, or local/European electors., or both.

Data for 1996 are not readily available. The data are derived from data as reported by Denbighshire, and for years up to and including 2001, have been collated from the original paper returns.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Angola

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much (a) direct and (b) bilateral aid his Department has allocated to Angola in 2006-07; how much he expects to be allocated in 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [69221]

Hilary Benn: The DFID bilateral programme in Angola has commitments of £5 million for the financial year 2006-07. Expenditure is concentrated in the following areas:

Relief and recovery. This includes support for bridge repairs that are necessary to allow humanitarian aid to reach affected areas of the country. Funding has also been provided for emergency operations to contain the outbreak of the Marburg virus in 2005.

Strengthening democratisation. Our work here focuses on decentralisation and supporting civil-society contributions to the elections process. We also work with the World Bank to try and improve governance in the country and support the Extractive Industry Transparency Initiative.

Urban poverty in Luanda. This programme has created space for local communities to organise and better engage with local government on a range of issues, such as local water supply. The programme will end this year.

HIV and AIDS. We are providing support for condom promotion, access to testing and behaviour change programmes, and are also providing anti-retrovirals.

This year, Angola has also received approximately £1.3 million from the Africa Conflict Prevention Pool (ACPP). ACPP funds are agreed on a yearly basis. In addition, DFID continues to support de-mining operations in Angola. £1 million has been provided this year for de-mining in the country. A similar commitment is expected in 2007-08.

Angola will also be involved in regional programmes that DFID in Southern Africa is currently developing. This regional programme is a £20 million per annum commitment, addressing regional peace and security, trade and growth, and resilient livelihoods concerns. As part of this regional commitment, we have recently approved an £18 million UNICEF programme to address children affected by AIDS. Around £3 million of this programme will be directed to Angola.

All DFID bilateral resources are managed through third party civil society and UN organisations and not by the Government of Angola.

Allocated bilateral expenditure from DFID is expected to be £3 million for 2007-08. Angola also benefits from DFID contributions to European Union and the World Bank operations in Angola. The EU has committed €146 million over the five year period from 2002-07. The World Bank's contribution this year is approximately US$30 million.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list his Department's (a) advisory bodies and (b) committees concerned with animal health and welfare; and if he will make a statement. [67181]

Mr. Thomas: I refer the hon. Member to the response given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mr. Bradshaw) on 9 May 2006, Official Report, column 127W.

Chad

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will urgently assess the food situation in Chad. [69526]

Hilary Benn: DFID staff continually monitor the humanitarian situation (including food needs) in Chad, and undertake periodic assessments in the east of the country. Of immediate concern is the food situation of the estimated 50,000 Chadians who have been displaced as a result of attacks and violence in the border area with Darfur. The World Food Programme (WFP), along with other UN agencies and non governmental organisations (NGOs), are currently assessing needs and are launching programmes to assist these displaced and vulnerable people.

Another critical issue at this time of year is the pre-positioning of food aid for the 205,000 Darfur refugees in Chad prior to the start of the rains. The WFP has indicated that, despite the deterioration of security in April, this process is on-track. The UK provided the WFP with £2 million for its operations in Chad last financial year, and we are considering providing further support.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people in his Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate telephone numbers in each of the last five years. [67995]

Mr. Thomas: All DFID staff can access the internet while at work. Our policy on the Acceptable Use of IT is set out in our security manual, available on our intranet, and is drawn to the attention of staff on first appointment. Each time staff log on to our computer network, they are required to acknowledge that they have read and agree to comply with the Acceptable Use of IT policy. Our system also alerts staff when logging in that their activity on the system may be monitored. The policy provides clear guidance that misuse of official equipment will be a disciplinary offence, and, subject to the particular offence, could lead to dismissal. The policy applies to civil servants working in the UK and overseas, and to our locally appointed staff overseas, who work under local contacts.

Although internet activity on all DFID computers is logged every day, analysis is only undertaken when suspicion of misuse is raised. All premium rate telephone numbers are barred from DFID office telephones except for mobile telephones. Itemised bills for DFID mobile telephones are checked by individual departments.

DFID did not hold a central disciplinary record until October 2004. In the last five years, we have details of one disciplinary case which did not result in dismissal and three dismissals (one of whom was provided by an agency and dismissed by the agency) for inappropriate use of the internet while at work. The following table lists the cases by year.

	Disciplined	Dismissed
2004	0	[1]2

[1] one locally appointed and one agency staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many (a) EU foreign nationals and (b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in his Department in each of the last five years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether these include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68014]

Mr. Thomas: DFID collects information on Ethnic Origin and nationality for its home civil service (HCS) and equivalent staff in line with the categories defined in the 2001 Census and which were agreed with the Commission for Racial Equality. Provision of this information by staff is voluntary.

Our records show that in the years 2001 to 2006, 115 HCS staff have declared their Ethnic Origin as "Any other" which is defined as other than "British or Mixed British"; "English"; "Irish"; "Scottish" or "Welsh".

The following table shows these results:

Ethnic nationality	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	Total
Bangladeshi	—	1	—	—	—	—	1
Indian	—	1	6	3	—	—	10
Pakistani	—	1	2	—	—	—	3
African	2	4	—	1	1	—	8
Caribbean	2	—	—	1	—	—	3
Asian and White	—	2	2	—	—	—	4
Other Mixed Ethnic	—	—	—	2	1	—	3
White	18	15	16	16	8	2	75
Any Other Ethnic background	—	1	4	1	—	—	6
Unknown or Unspecified	—	—	1	—	1	—	2
Total	22	25	31	24	11	2	115

As staff are not obliged to state the exact nationality which corresponds to ethnic origin we cannot provide a breakdown between EU foreign nationals and non-EU foreign nationals.

For our HCS and equivalent staff, DFID carries out a basic verification check of identity and eligibility to work in the UK for EU foreign nationals and non-EU foreign nationals, when candidates attend the selection process. Further vetting for selected candidates, which can include criminal record checks with foreign law enforcement agencies, is undertaken by our Security Section.

In addition to HCS staff, DFID also employs staff appointed in country (SAIC) in our overseas offices. We do not hold specific nationality information on these staff, but the vast majority are nationals of the country in which they are appointed, and, therefore non-EU foreign nationals. We do not hold a central record of annual appointments, but the total numbers of SAIC in post in each year since 2001, is as follows:

	SAIC staff numbers
2001	424
2002	739
2003	874
2004	914
2005	989
2006	932

For Staff Appointed in Country, our Security Section carries out a basic check of identity, including references. The DFID overseas offices are required to confirm to Security Section that they have completed the relevant police checks for criminal records, where possible, with the local police authorities in the country of appointment.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [69020]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's current retirement age is (i) for UK staff below the senior civil service and our locally appointed staff overseas who work under local contracts (unless local law dictates otherwise)—60, with staff having the option to continue working up to 65 if they wish, subject to continued capability and satisfactory service; (ii) for the senior civil service—60. We have flexibility to retain members of the senior civil service beyond 60 in certain circumstances if it is judged to be in the public interest, and similarly, exceptionally, staff below the senior civil service beyond 65. Currently there are three senior civil servants aged beyond 60, and three staff below the senior civil service aged beyond 65.

From 1 October 2006, the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations come in to force, introducing wide ranging provisions against discrimination on age in employment and vocational training. The Regulations introduce a default retirement age of 65. DFID is presently considering what its retirement age should be from October 2006. For the senior civil service, it will be 65, in line with the default retirement age. DFID retains its delegated authority to set the retirement age for staff below the senior civil service and will decide shortly whether to adopt the default retirement age of 65 or to have no retirement age at all. The Age Regulations also introduce a "duty to consider" procedure to ensure retirements at whatever age are fair. This will allow employees to request to work beyond the normal retirement age, and require discussions between DFID and the employee about when the employee will retire. Both parties will have to give adequate notice in order to ensure the retirement constitutes a fair dismissal in employment law.

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many (a) women and (b) men are employed in the Department; what the average pay was for (i) women and (ii) men in the Department in (A) 1997 and (B) 2006; what women's average pay is as a percentage of men's average pay; and how many (1) women and (2) men the Department employed in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [67777]

Mr. Thomas: The Cabinet Office collects and publishes annually statistical information on the civil service by Department. These include data on the employment of men and women.

The number of permanent and pensionable home civil service (HCS) staff employed by DFID as at 1 May 2006 broken down by gender is: male: 949 and female: 898.

The average (median) pay for HCS staff employed by DFID as at 1 May 2006 by gender are as follows:

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the total cost was of (a) staff away days and (b) staff team building exercises in his Department in each of the last three years. [69019]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not separately record its expenditure on staff away days and staff team building exercises, and therefore is unable to provide the breakdown requested without incurring a disproportionate cost.

DFID is committed to ensuring staff have the right skills and expertise to meet our commitment to the internationally agreed Millennium Development Goals. In November 2005, DFID launched a new "People Strategy", which outlined our vision and commitments on how we will lead, manage, develop and support our people over the next three years. Individual departments within DFID plan and manage development away days and team building exercises for their staff in accordance with their specific needs in the context of business planning, continual professional development and performance improvement. Costs are usually met through delegated divisional or departmental training budgets.

Disabled Children (Developing Countries)

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the projects his Department is funding to ensure disabled children are given access to education in developing countries. [69555]

Mr. Thomas: All children, including those with disabilities or living in difficult circumstances, should have equal access to a good quality basic education. DFID is committed to working with the Governments of developing countries towards the education of all children, including those with disabilities.

DFID's policy on social exclusion is laid out in its September 2005 policy paper entitled 'Reducing poverty by tackling social exclusion'. The paper sets out how DFID will build on the work that is already under way and some practical actions that DFID is taking to tackle social exclusion and make a real difference to the lives of excluded people.

Also, DFID's strategy paper of last year, 'Girls' education: towards a better future for all' recognised that certain groups of girls are more likely to be excluded from school on the basis of caste, ethnicity, religion or disability and that disabled children, and among them disabled girls in particular, constitute a significant group that is denied access to education. The challenge is to support governments to provide quality education for excluded groups.

It is not possible, without incurring a disproportionate cost, to identify a comprehensive list of projects supported by DFID which include supporting disabled children's right to education. DFID's approach is to support developing country governments' own education plans rather than directly manage discrete projects. In India, for example, DFID has supported through its country programme, the District Primary Education Programme, which promotes inclusive education, and some states have been successful in integrating disabled children into mainstream schools. In Vietnam, DFID has co-financed with the Government of Vietnam, the World Bank and other donors the Primary Education for Disadvantaged Children programme, a £243 million project which was launched in October 2003 and includes a strong focus on primary education for disabled children.

DFID also provides funding through UK non-governmental organisations to support projects that benefit disabled people and advocate for disabled people's rights. DFID has partnership agreements with a number of organisations that support disability-focused activities, such as World Vision, HelpAge International, Save the Children and VSO, among others. In addition, through our partner, Action on Disability and Development, with whom we have a six-year Programme Partnership Agreement, we work to promote greater participation and inclusion of disabled people and their organisations in decision-making processes, particularly on partner governments' Poverty Reduction Strategies.

Farming (India)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department (a) to modernise agricultural practices, (b) to increase productivity and (c) to improve access to credit for farmers in India. [68172]

Mr. Thomas: Agriculture in India is generally a success story. India is self-sufficient in staple grain crops in most years and stores a substantial surplus. The so-called 'green revolution' has been the main driving force behind this success, promoting the use of improved crop varieties and fertilisers in areas with access to irrigation.

However, the benefits of new technologies have not been equitably distributed. DFID's focus has been on improving the livelihoods of farmers and other rural people in rain-fed areas which are not suited to the particular packages of improvements offered by the green revolution. The focus on livelihoods, rather than agriculture, recognises that poor people are often landless and depend on a diverse range of activities to support themselves. However, DFID-supported projects have developed and tested appropriate new agricultural technologies and tools in these areas that have resulted in increases in production and income, more efficient and sustainable use of soil and water resources and reduction of hard manual labour, particularly for women. Some examples are treadle pumps for small-scale irrigation, seed drills and paddy rice transplanters, which have made work easier as well as contributing to improvements in production.

Consistent with this approach, DFID has concentrated on micro-credit rather than agricultural credit. DFID is working with the Small Industries Development Bank of India (SIDBI) to develop the capacity of micro-finance institutions to on-lend to individuals or groups. Approximately 45 per cent. of these loans are for agriculture, livestock, fisheries or related activities. DFID's rural livelihoods projects incorporate revolving funds at the village level to support agriculture, livestock and micro-enterprise activities.

Fledgling Democracies

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 27 April 2006, Official Report, columns 1231-32W, on fledgling democracies, why his Department does not track multilateral aid; and what mechanisms are in place in his Department to evaluate the effectiveness of the programmes which UK aid funds. [68210]

Mr. Thomas: DFID reviews the effectiveness of all bilateral projects over £1 million at least once a year. This includes money which DFID country programmes channel through multilateral agencies since according to international convention this aid is classified as bilateral. DFID has a public service agreement target to achieve a sustained increase in the quality of DFID's bilateral projects. DFID reports progress towards this target in the Departmental Report and the Autumn Performance Report. This year's Departmental Report will be published on 9th May.

This monitoring system cannot track core contributions to multilateral agencies because these funds are pooled. However, DFID uses a Multilateral Effectiveness Framework and other assessments to evaluate the performance of the multilateral agencies. During 2004, DFID used the Multilateral Effectiveness Framework to assess 23 multilateral agencies against their objectives. These objectives were agreed jointly with DFID and set out in an Institutional Strategy Paper. These institutional strategies are publicly available. DFID uses the results of the Multilateral Effectiveness Frameworks and other mechanisms to inform decisions around funding for the multilateral agencies.

HIV/AIDS

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what estimate he has made of the percentage of pregnant women with HIV/AIDS in developing countries who receive (a) information, (b) drugs and (c) antenatal treatment in order to prevent transmission of the virus to the child; [68161]

(2) what steps are being taken by his Department to link HIV/AIDS and family planning policies, with particular reference to the use of condoms; [68162]

(3) what assessment he has made of the relationship between steps taken to improve maternal health and the achievement of HIV/AIDS targets. [68163]

Mr. Thomas: There is a close relationship in action to improve reproductive health and family planning, maternal health and to make progress on HIV and AIDS. Closing the gap in unmet needs for family planning would make a big contribution to helping to lower maternal mortality. Sexual and reproductive health services are vital in ensuring that women have a choice about if and when to have children, and play a key role in helping them avoid sexually transmitted infection including HIV, including through condom provision.

HIV pregnant women with HIV and AIDS are four times more likely to die in pregnancy and childbirth than uninfected women. Women with HIV need care and services in pregnancy to help protect their own health and to help prevent transmission of HIV to their babies. The United Nations Secretary-General's progress report on the 2001 Declaration of Commitment on HIV and AIDS, released in April, estimates that only 9 per cent. of HIV positive women in low and middle income countries currently receive antiretroviral drugs to prevent mother to child transmission of HIV. In countries with weak health systems this falls to less than 1 per cent.

DFID is working to support stronger health systems, with more adequate staff, equipment and drug supplies that are needed to improve access to HIV treatment, as well as to provide women with the care needed in pregnancy, especially when complications arise. Sustained improvements in maternal health and AIDS prevention, treatment and care will in large part depend on strengthening basic health services. Access to sexual and reproductive health and family planning services must be an essential part of this effort, and we are working to ensure that the forthcoming United Nations General Assembly High Level Meeting on AIDS in June gives a clear and strong message on the importance of sexual and reproductive health to efforts to make progress in HIV and AIDS.

Palestine

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer to my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond, Yorkshire (Mr. Hague), of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 529W, on Palestine, if he will place in the Library a copy of the accounts of the Palestinian Authority audited by PricewaterhouseCoopers. [69175]

Hilary Benn: PricewaterhouseCoopers have not yet completed their audit of the Palestinian Authority's accounts for 2003-04, although we expect them to do so shortly. As soon as the audit is completed and the details published a copy of the audit report will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Shan Refugees (Thailand)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Thailand about the treatment of Shan refugees living in Thailand. [68242]

Mr. Thomas: Discussion with the Government of Thailand about the treatment of Shan refugees living in Thailand is carried out by the British embassy in Bangkok through the United Nations High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR). The UNHCR's advocacy efforts with the Government of Thailand aim to improve the situation in the Burmese refugee camps in Thailand and to bring about a relaxation of the regulations prohibiting freedom of movement and employment outside the camps. In light of the fact that the Government of Thailand have agreed to expand resettlement opportunities from the camps, the UNHCR is stepping up its efforts to promote alternative solutions for Burmese refugees.

Sub-Saharan Africa

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many trade delegations to the UK from each sub-Saharan country have received funding from the Department's bilateral country programme since 1997. [67818]

Mr. Thomas: DFID provides some support to sub-Saharan African countries for the development and facilitation of their national policies on trade, and specific issues like tourism, through its bilateral programmes. Much of DFID's support on trade to sub-Saharan Africa is provided regionally through programmes such as the Capacity-Building for Trade Policy and Negotiations and the Southern Africa Trade and Poverty Programme, and multilaterally through institutions like the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

Governments can access funds for trade delegations to the UK and other destinations from a variety of sources, many supported by DFID funds, such as the World Trade Organisation (WTO) Trust Fund for Least Developed Country Travel managed by UNCTAD. This information is not held centrally and would involve a disproportionate cost to collect. For example, a delegation of developing country trade negotiators including from sub-Saharan Africa came to the UK at the end of last year. This was funded by the European Development Fund, to which the UK makes subscriptions.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Solicitor-General what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [68987]

The Solicitor-General: I am answering this question on behalf of my Department's, the Crown Prosecution Service, Serious Fraud Office, Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office, Treasury Solicitor's Department and HMCPS Inspectorate.

In all the Departments the normal retirement age for members of the senior civil service is 60. However heads of Departments have the flexibility to retain members of the SCS beyond 60 if they judge it to be in the public interest and are satisfied about the fitness and efficiency of the individual to carry out his or her duties. This flexibility has been used from time to time.

For staff below the SCS all Departments have reviewed, or are reviewing their retirement policies.

For the CPS the normal retirement age is 60, though former local authority staff that joined the CPS in 1986 retain the contractual right to remain in service until age 65, under the CPS (Transfer of Staff) Regulations 1985.

Staff at level E and below may give notice of their intention to remain beyond age 60. All other staff must demonstrate that they meet the normal requirements of their level in terms of performance, attendance and conduct.

The SFO has a flexible retirement policy covering staff below the SCS. The policy offers a minimum retirement age of 60 years at which employees may opt to retire and receive full accrued superannuation benefits as of right. Employees cannot remain in employment beyond the day prior to their 65th birthday.

The Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office has now adopted a retirement policy that enables staff to continue working until the maximum age of 65.

The Treasury Solicitor's Department raised its normal retirement age for people below the SCS from 60 to 65 on 1 June 2006. The Department now allows people to retire at any time between the ages of 60 and 65.

HMCPS Inspectorate has decided not to change its policy, pending the creation of a single cjs inspectorate currently being debated in the Police and Justice Bill.

PRIME MINISTER

Foreign Criminals

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 968, what advice he relied on for his statement that the Human Rights Act 1998 does not prevent the automatic deportation of foreign criminals on completion of their sentence. [70150]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave at my monthly press conference on 8 May 2006, a transcript of which is available on the No.10 website.

Ministerial Duties (Deputy Prime Minister)

James Duddridge: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the (a) responsibilities, (b) salary and (c) nature and value of official benefits-in-kind of each Minister in (i) the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister before the week beginning 1 May and (ii) the Department for Communities and Local Government in the week beginning 8 May; [70031]

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Prime Minister what duties he has allocated to the Deputy Prime Minister that relate to the responsibilities of the Department for Trade and Industry. [69875]

The Prime Minister: A full list of the Government and details of machinery of Government changes were announced on 5 May. Copies are available in the Libraries of the House and on the No. 10 website. Details of salaries paid to Ministers are available in the Libraries of the House.

Ministerial Residences

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what criteria he used in allocating official residences to members of the Government. [69871]

The Prime Minister: I act in accordance with the way previous Prime Ministers have allocated official residences.

Peerages

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister whether Cameron Mackintosh was offered a peerage; and if he will make a statement. [69883]

The Prime Minister: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to comment on nominations for honours and peerages.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Child Behaviour

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the programmes run by his Department to modify behavioural patterns of children since 1997; and what the cost was in each case. [68602]

Jim Knight: Funding for behaviour improvement in schools comes from a wide variety of sources and is aggregated to varying degrees with funding for other activities, in particular, on initiatives which have the combined purpose of improving behaviour and attendance and on reducing exclusions. It is therefore impossible to give discrete totals just for behaviour improvement related activities.

The information in the following table lists the main programmes funded by this Government since 1997 that most directly relate to improving behaviour and attendance in schools and the amounts of funding in each case.

City Academies

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the capital cost is of each city academy in operation; [67851]

(2) what average amount of funding per academy has been released by his Department during the feasibility phase of planning the establishment of a new academy. [69826]

Jim Knight: The current capital allocation for the 27 academies currently in operation is given in the following table.

Open academy	Current agreed capital cash limit (£)
The Academy at Peckham	30,169,539
The Academy of St. Francis of Assisi	20,868,385
The Business Academy Bexley	38,459,531
Capital City Academy	26,994,000
The City Academy, Bristol	27,666,644

Trinity Academy	25,070,483
Unity City Academy	20,590,000
Walsall Academy	17,321,463
West London Academy	31,163,389

The average cost of a new secondary school in a high cost inner city area is similar for academy and non-academy schools.

The average amount of funding per academy released by my Department during the feasibility phase is £252,959. This figure is based on the funding released to the 27 open academies and to 30 other academies yet to open but which have entered feasibility and to which payments have been made.

Education Act 1996

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if he will make a statement on the operation of section (a) 512, (b) 512ZB and (c) 512A of the Education Act 1996; what recent representations he has received on the operation of these sections; if he will place in the Library copies of such representations; and whether he plans (i) to amend and (ii) to repeal these sections; [68836]

(2) under what legislation children attending (a) primary and (b) secondary schools receive free school meals; and if he will make a statement. [69622]

Jim Knight: Section 512 of the Education Act 1996, as amended by Section 201 of the Education Act 2002, sets out a local authority's responsibilities in relation to meals, milk and other refreshments provided in local authority maintained schools in England. This includes a duty on local authorities to provide:

Free school lunches to eligible pupils;

Paid for lunches where one is requested; and

Free milk to eligible pupils where provision is made.

Section 512A sets out the circumstances under which the functions relating to school lunches are transferred from a local authority to a school governing body.

Section 512ZB of the Education Act 1996; The Education (School Lunches) (Prescribed Requirements) (England) Order 2003; The Education (Free School Lunches) (Prescribed Tax Credits) (England) Order 2003; and The Education (Free School Lunches) (State Pension Credit) Order 2005 set out free school lunch eligibility criteria.

In September 2005, the School Meals Review Panel recommended, in their report 'Turning the Tables: Transforming School Food', that the Secretary of State should consider the impact of possible increases in the cost of school meals on low income families, whose income level places them just outside eligibility for free school meals.

We have no plans to amend or repeal Sections 512, 512A or 512ZB of the Education Act 1996.

Food Education

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the strategies introduced by his Department to support and enhance food education in schools; if he will introduce further professional development for teachers in this area; and if he will make a statement. [69139]

Jim Knight: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) will put a greater emphasis on practical cooking skills in the review of the National Curriculum at Key Stage 3. QCA is also revising the criteria for food related GCSEs to put a greater emphasis on diet and health, consumer awareness, food safety and hygiene and food preparation skills. The Training Development Agency is aiming to increase the number of food technology training places in initial teacher training. We have invested £1.5 million in professional development for primary teachers through our Food in Schools programme. However, in each school, headteachers and governors set priorities for professional development and it is for them to decide whether further food education provision is needed for their staff.

In addition, our aim is for all schools to be working towards Healthy Schools status by 2009. The programme now includes a compulsory healthy eating strand. Schools develop whole school food policies, linking what is taught across the curriculum with the food children eat at school, to ensure that consistent messages about healthy food choices run throughout all aspects of school life. Healthy Schools co-ordinators are being trained to support schools, including on healthy eating.

Fresh start

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much income has been received from the sale of assets of schools closed under the Fresh Start scheme; and how much of this came from the sale of school playing fields. [68639]

Jim Knight: The Fresh Start scheme involves the closure of a struggling school and the opening of a new school on the same site, usually in refurbished buildings, and under an approved plan to improve standards at the new school. Comprehensive data on subsequent disposal of assets at Fresh Start schools, and therefore income, is not centrally available. However, since 1998, disposal of areas capable of forming a sports pitch has needed approval from the Secretary of State, and there is no recorded instance of such an approval at a Fresh Start school.

GCSE

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils achieved five or more A* to C grades at GCSE in (a) 1997 and (b) 2006 in (i) Swindon and (ii) England. [69044]

Jim Knight: GCSE examinations have not yet been taken in 2006. The following table shows the percentage of 15-year-old pupils[1] achieving five or more GCSEs or equivalents[2] at grades A* to C in 1997 and 2005.

	1997	2005
Swindon local authority[3]	43.0	49.8
England[4]	45.1	56.3

Illiteracy

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people over the age of 65 years are deemed to be illiterate in (a) former mining areas and (b) England. [69813]

Phil Hope: The Department for Education and Skills does not collect statistics on the literacy levels of people over the age of 65 years.

The Department does collect statistics on learners starting Skills for Life courses?adult literacy, numeracy and language courses. In the academic year 2003/04 around 18,000 adults aged 60 to 69 and 9,000 adults aged 70 and above in England started Skills for Life courses.

Mr. Des Smith

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how much Mr. Des Smith has been paid by his Department; [65094]

(2) when Mr. Des Smith transferred to the specialist schools and academies trust; [65095]

(3) what Mr. Des Smith's official duties were; and to whom he reported. [65096]

Jim Knight: The Department contracts with Veredus Interim Management to provide school improvement support for open academies. To deliver this contract, Veredus Interim Management used successful current or very recently retired headteachers, who had an excellent track record in raising standards to high levels and have experience of working in schools in challenging circumstances. Des Smith was one of the consultant headteachers provided via this contract. His role was to provide support for two newly opened academies. This support involved practical help and advice to the new senior leadership teams helping them to establish monitoring systems and to implement effective school improvement strategies.

The Department made no direct payments to Mr. Smith. The work of individual consultants, including Mr. Smith, was managed by Veredus Interim Management. The contract with Veredus Interim Management was managed by the academies division within DfES.

Mr. Smith ceased doing this consultancy work in January 2006. He did not 'transfer' to the specialist schools and academies trust. Separate from his consultancy work, Mr. Smith was also a member of the SSAT council. He joined the council as a co-opted headteacher representative in November 2005 and resigned in January 2006. He also undertook a very small amount of consultancy work for the trust.

Physical Education

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will take steps to improve physical education in schools during (a) the current and (b) 2006-07 school year; and if he will make a statement. [69138]

Jim Knight: The Government are investing over £1½ billion in the five years up to 2008 to deliver the first comprehensive national school sport strategy, which went live in April 2003. The strategy's prime objective?a joint Department for Education and Skills and Department for Culture, Media and Sport PSA target?is to increase the percentage of five to 16-year-olds who spend a minimum of two hours each week on high quality PE and school sport within and beyond the curriculum, to 75 per cent. by 2006 and 85 per cent. by 2008. The long-term ambition?by 2010?is to offer all children at least four hours of sport.

Spearheading action is the creation of a national network of sports colleges and school sport partnerships. There are currently 411 live school sport partnerships incorporating 80 per cent. of schools in England. All maintained schools will be within a partnership by September 2006. Good progress is being made towards the PSA target. The 2004/05 school sport survey found that 69 per cent. of pupils in the 11,4000 schools taking part were spending at least two hours in a typical week on high quality PE and school sport, an 11 per cent. increase on 2003/04. Copies of the survey reports for 2003/04 and 2004/05 have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Prison Education

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will enable successful charities working in the prison education sector to enter the quality assurance regime. [65578]

Phil Hope: The Government recognise the contribution charities make towards offender learning and the importance of linking charity provision to a quality assurance regime. Charities are already a part of a prison's quality assurance regime and guidance on this matter was issued in March 2004 to Prison Service Heads of Learning and Skills and Education Managers in prisons.

Pupil Participation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what plans he has to ensure that all schools put into effect the guidance on pupil participation in decision-making; and if he will make a statement; [68438]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of the Working Together guidance published in 2002 on dealing with pupil participation in decision-making in schools, with particular reference to its (a) circulation and (b) implementation; and if he will make a statement. [68439]

Jim Knight: The Department is encouraging schools to put the guidance on participation into practice in ways that are meaningful to children and young people. As a key outcome for all children, local partners including schools and local authorities have to listen to children and involve them in planning and delivery of services. We have ensured that inspection arrangements make the views of children and young people an important part of assessing how local areas are doing, and of school inspections. In addition, we have changed the law so that school governing bodies can now appoint pupils as associate members allowing them to attend governing body meetings and become members of committees.

Printed copies of the guidance were sent to all schools and local education authorities and are available online. Since then 10,853 additional copies have been requested. Evidence from the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority monitoring and the National Foundation for Educational Research longitudinal reports shows that more schools than ever before have set up school councils as a way of involving pupils in decision-making processes.

School Meals

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the operation of the Education (Nutritional Standards for School Lunches) (England) Regulations 2000; [68833]

(2) if he will bring forward legislation for mandatory (a) nutrient and (b) compositional standards for school meals, including maximum and minimum levels for (i) fat, (ii) sugar, (iii) salt, (iv) vitamins and (v) minerals; and if he will make a statement; [68835]

(3) what recent steps he has (a) taken and (b) plans to take to encourage the sale of healthy foods from vending machines in (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools in (A) Southend and (B) England; and if he will make a statement. [69621]

Jim Knight: School lunches provided in all local authority maintained schools in England must meet the minimum requirements set out in the Education (Nutritional Standards for School Lunches) (England) Regulations 2000. Introduced on 1 April 2001, the first such regulations for over 20 years, they require schools to make foods from the following groups available on a daily basis:

Fruit and vegetables;

Milk and dairy;

Meat, fish and alternative sources of protein; and

Starchy Foods

In addition, the standards make separate requirements in relation to the frequency that certain foods e.g. red meat and fish are served.

Later in May 2006, we intend to announce, in response to recommendations from the School Meals Review Panel and the School Food Trust, a full suite of new standards for school food.

To implement these new standards, we intend to replace the Education (Nutritional Standards for School Lunches) Regulations 2000 with new regulations enshrining new food-based and nutrient-based standards for school lunches. In addition, the Education and Inspections Bill, currently in its parliamentary stages, includes a clause which would enable the application of standards to meals other than lunches and to other food in schools, e.g. tuck shops and vending machines.

These standards, which will form part of our forthcoming announcement, would play a significant role in preventing the sale of less healthy foods and drinks in schools, including through vending machines.

We believe that there are no vending machines in primary schools in England.

Guidance on healthy vending is already in place to support secondary schools and is available through both the joint Department for Education and Skills/ Department of Health 'Food in Schools' programme www.foodinschools.org, and the Food Standards Agency, www.food.gov.uk/news/pressreleases/2004/oct/vendinghealthy.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the operation of the Education (Transfer of Functions concerning School Lunches etc.) (England) (No. 2) Order 1999 (S.I., 1999, No. 2164). [68837]

Jim Knight: Where an authority delegates funding resources for meals to schools, the Education (Transfer of Functions Concerning Schools Lunches etc.) (England)(No. 2) Order 1999 transfers the duty of providing a free meal and a paid meal from the local authority to the governing body of each school whose budget share includes a delegated amount in respect of meals and other refreshment. In most local authorities, the funding of school meals has been delegated down to schools, and therefore the Order passes the local authority's duty in providing meals on to schools.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on (i) the take-up and (ii) the quality of free school meals in (A) primary and (B) secondary school children; and if he will make a statement. [69624]

Jim Knight: The Annual Schools Census collects data on free school meal eligibility and take up. In 2001, DfES commissioned research to explore factors which could improve the take up of free school meals (DfES Research Report 270). In addition, the Department's cost of schooling survey collected information from parents and carers about their child's school meal take up (DfES Research Report 588).

In addition, DfES has commissioned research to assess food consumption and quality of school meals (including free school meals) in maintained schools in England. A study of 'School meals in secondary schools in England' reported in 2004 (DfES Research Report 557). A similar study of maintained primary schools has been conducted and findings will be reported this May.

Part of the remit of the school food trust is to ensure adherence to school food standards; and to increase the take up of school meals.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the operation of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1999; if he will amend the regulations to provide for free bottled mineral water for use in school dining halls; and if he will make a statement. [68834]

Jim Knight: The Education (School Premises) Regulations 1999 requires all maintained schools to have a wholesome supply of water for domestic purposes, including drinking water. The local authorities together with school governors are responsible for ensuring compliance with the Regulations. The Secretary of State can, under Section 497 of the Education Act 1996, take action to enforce compliance with the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1999.

Independent schools are subject to The Education (Independent School Standards) (England) Regulations 2003, which quote The Education School Premises Regulations 1999 in respect of water supplies. The Independent School Standards are the Regulations to which independent schools are inspected under Part 10 of the Education Act 2002. The Independent Schools Registration Authority will consider the inspector's report and can take enforcement action.

Further guidance is available in Building Bulletin 87 (Guidelines for Environmental Design in Schools), which can be viewed on the website: www.teachernet.gov.uk/energy.

New school food and drink standards will require all local authority maintained schools to provide drinking water, free of charge, at all times to registered pupils on school premises. We do not consider there to be valid reasons to stipulate that water should be served in bottles.

We believe that schools are best placed to decide how best to deliver the requirements of the new standards. However, the School Food Trust plans to publish good practice guidance to assist with the implementation of the standards.

School Statistics

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils live outside the local authority in which the school is located in each secondary school that selects (a) wholly and (b) partly by ability. [68782]

Jim Knight [holding answer 10 May 2006]: The information requested for wholly selective schools has been provided in the following table. We are unable to provide figures for partially selective schools as they are not designated as such and therefore the Department has no definitive list.

England
Number of pupils attending grammar schools	111,426
Number of pupils attending grammar schools residing outside school local authority	23,779
Percentage of pupils attending grammar schools residing outside school local authority	21.4
Number of pupils attending grammar schools with unknown residence	380

Notes:
1. Includes secondary, middle deemed secondary, academies and City Technology Colleges.
2. Includes pupils aged 15 and under.

School Transport

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what discussions he has had with bus operators on developing innovative dedicated transport facilities for children's journeys to schools; [69589]

(2) what discussions he has had with environmental organisations on the steps necessary to create a more sustainable system of school transport. [69594]

Jim Knight: Officials in the Department have regular meetings with representatives from a wide range of organisations, including the environmental, and bus transport sectors, as part of the joint Department for Transport (DfT) and Department for Education and Skills (DfES) "Travelling to School" action plan. This plan includes work with a range of stakeholders to promote sustainable home to school travel, and to increase the proportion of pupils walking, cycling and taking the bus to school.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what steps he is taking to encourage more efficient and sustainable transportation of children to school; [69592]

(2) how many local authorities have made bids for funding to pilot new systems of transport for school children in their area; [69593]

(3) what ring-fenced resources have been allocated in 2006-07 to encourage local authorities to develop innovative systems of school transport. [69596]

Jim Knight: The joint Department for Education and Skills and Department for Transport "Travelling to School" action plan aims to increase the proportion of pupils travelling to school by sustainable means. We want all school in England to develop travel plans by the end of the decade, and the Government are funding a network of travel advisers in each local authority to support them in drawing up and implementing measures to encourage more pupils to walk, cycle or take the bus to school.

The Education and Inspections Bill includes provisions to improve home to school travel and transport arrangements in three main respects:

By placing a general duty on local authorities to assess the travel and transport needs of all pupils, and to promote sustainable travel to school;

By extending entitlement to free home to school transport for low income families (for secondary aged pupils to any one of the three nearest suitable schools, where the distance travelled is between two and six miles; and for primary aged pupils aged over eight, to their nearest school where this is more than two miles from their home); and

By enabling a small number of local authorities to propose Pathfinder schemes to test innovative approaches to home to school transport to support school choice, reduce the distances pupils are expected to walk to school, and increase the proportion of pupils travelling by sustainable means.

The Department will support these improvements with additional funding as follows:

£4 million per annum to support the new general duty on local authorities from financial year 2007/08;

revenue funding building to £40 million per annum to support the extension of rights for low income groups from financial year 2008/09; and

£4 million pump priming and annual revenue support building up over several years to £12 million for school travel Pathfinder schemes, which we anticipate will start in September 2009.

The Department will seek formal expressions of interest in Pathfinder schemes only after these proposals have been enacted.

Teacher Salaries

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average salary was for a teacher in (a) Blackpool, (b) Lancashire and (c) England in the latest year for which information is available. [66875]

Jim Knight: Provisional estimates show that in March 2004, the latest information available, the average salaries of full-time regular qualified teachers, of all grades, in Blackpool and Lancashire local authorities were £30,830 and £31,520 respectively. In England it was £31,710. These averages include all allowances including, for England, London Weighting.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1483-84W, to the hon. Member for Peterborough, on teachers' pay, what progress has been made in consideration of the issues arising from the consultation on enabling teachers to access tax-beneficial schemes. [68952]

Jim Knight: We expect that an Order amending the statutory School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document, to enable teachers to use salary sacrifice for child care vouchers and other recognised activities and thereby benefit from the advantages of reduced income tax, will be laid before Parliament shortly.

Truancy

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of school-home support organisations in reducing truancy. [69389]

Jim Knight: Local Authorities' Education Welfare Services work with schools and families to help parents discharge their responsibility for ensuring that their child attends school regularly, if they are of compulsory school age and registered at a school. They will arrange home visits where appropriate and work with families to resolve attendance issues.

Education Welfare Services are making a significant contribution to improving levels of school attendance. Overall absence from schools has fallen in each of the last four years and, in 2004-05, is at the lowest level since records began.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils were recorded as having at least one incidence of truancy in 2005-06. [68642]

Jim Knight: The Department does not hold data on pupils recorded as truant, it also does not yet hold the 2005/06 data. However, the figures for the number of pupils missing at least one half day due to unauthorised absence (of which truancy forms a part) in maintained mainstream schools in 2004/05 was 1,358,206, this accounts for 20.6 per cent. of the 6,602,061 pupils in maintained mainstream schools.

University Degrees

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the proportion of jobs in the UK which will require a university degree in (a) 2015, (b) 2020 and (b) 2025. [65391]

Bill Rammell: The Institute of Employment Research and Cambridge Econometrics have recently published two sets of UK skill scenario projections, investigating skills profiles up to 2014[1] (commissioned by the Learning and Skills Council and the Sector Skills Development Agency), and separately up to 2020 (commissioned as part of the Leitch Review of Skills[2]).

These analyses suggest that between 2004 and 2014, just over 12 million jobs will need to be filled (through a combination of new employment growth and replacing workers leaving employment). We do not know exactly how many of these will need graduates, although around 6 million are expected to be in 'managerial', 'professional' or 'associate professional' occupations (high-level jobs that are most likely to employ graduates).

The 'baseline' projections[3] up to 2020, broadly using the same approach, suggest that around 18 million jobs will need to be filled, with around 9 million expected to be in these high-level occupations.

The research needs to be viewed as showing possible trends in the skills needs of the future workforce. The work makes assumptions about how past trends in occupational change will continue; about future macro-economic performance; and how business decision-making will react to changing skill profiles.

More detail is available in the individual reports. No projections up to 2025 have been conducted.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the Answer of 6 March 2006, Official Report, column 1183W, on Afghanistan, under what circumstances the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) will provide support to the Government of Afghanistan's counter-narcotics operations; what support will be provided; and whether any particular types of support from ISAF have been ruled out. [69575]

Des Browne: ISAF forces may provide support to Government of Afghanistan-led counter-narcotic efforts in a number of ways set out in an annex to NATO's operational plan for the mission in Afghanistan. These include training of Afghan counter-narcotics personnel and the provision of intelligence. ISAF forces are not permitted to take direct, pre-planned action against the drugs trade, including eradication of opium poppy.

Counselling

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of servicemen and women who have visited an armed forces counsellor in each of the last 12 months. [69292]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence does not employ armed forces counsellors. Welfare support is provided by a variety of organisations—service, civilian and voluntary—in recognition of the uniqueness of service life. It would not be practicable to identify the number of individual visits to these organisations over the last 12 months but there is no doubt that they provide valued and well-used services.

Defence Cuts

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the military (a) bases, (b) facilities and (c) installations where (i) closures and (ii) manning reductions are planned, broken down by parliamentary constituency; and if he will identify the constituency. [68499]

Mr. Watson: This information is not all held centrally or in the form requested. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the facts have been assembled and collated and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) EU foreign nationals and (b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in his Department in each of the last five years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether these include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68019]

Mr. Watson: Data regarding how many EU foreign nationals that have been employed in the Department in each of the last five years is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

In line with the statutory prohibition in the Aliens Restriction (Amendment) Act 1919, the Ministry of Defence is required to provide an annual return on the number of non-UK/EU/Commonwealth citizens (aliens) employed in the Department. The MOD employed non-UK/EU/Commonwealth citizens (aliens) for the period 2001-02 to 2004-05 as follows:

Non-UK/EU/Commonwealth citizens employed in the MOD

	Number
2001-02	21
2002-03	34
2003-04	31
2004-05	30
2005-06	[1]

[1] Awaiting data

The need for an individual to undergo national security vetting, and the level of vetting that is appropriate will depend on the particular post they are going to fill. All applicants undergo the same clearance process regardless of their nationality.

The range of checks that are required to be carried out are set out in the then Prime Minister's statement of 15 December 1994, Official Report, columns 764-66.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many officials from his Department are seconded to private companies, broken down by (a) grade and (b) private company; and what costs have been incurred by his Department as a result of the secondments. [69290]

Mr. Watson: There are currently 297 officials seconded from the Ministry of Defence. Records are not kept centrally on whether the secondments are to private companies (charities or other organisations) and this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Nor am I able to provide figures as to the costs involved as this information is also not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Disposal Contractors

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) barristers' chambers and (b) (i) Ministry of Defence and (ii) Treasury legal staff have been employed by the Government during the case of arbitration referred to on 9 February 2004, Official Report, column 1177W. [67840]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Fire Brigade Strike

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what conditions the Army provides back-up in the event of a fire brigade strike. [69480]

Mr. Watson: These conditions are outlined at paragraphs 3.26 and 3.27 of the Fire and Rescue Service Statutory National Framework 2006-08, laid before Parliament earlier this year and published on 6 April 2006. The Government's White Paper, 'Our Fire and Rescue Service', published in 2003, stated that "it would be wrong for any party to proceed on the basis that the Armed Forces will be available in the event of industrial action" (Paragraph 7.23).

Military Deployment (Afghanistan)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria will determine whether forces in Afghanistan will be subject to the provisions of (a) the law of armed conflict and (b) human rights legislation when fighting insurgents in the course of their current deployment. [69301]

Des Browne: UK forces deployed as part of the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) will operate at all times within the framework of applicable international and domestic law, including the Law of Armed Conflict.

RAF Hythe

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make representations to his United States counterparts to maintain the US Army Field Support Battalion at RAF Hythe (a) until existing work at the shipyard has been completed and (b) permanently. [68539]

Mr. Ingram: It was a US Government decision to withdraw the US army operations from RAF Hythe by 30 September 2006. Representations were made to the US ambassador in advance of the decision being made.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the United States army's presence in the United Kingdom is stationed at RAF Hythe. [68540]

Mr. Ingram: There are two United States army personnel stationed at RAF Hythe and this represents less than 1 per cent. of the total number of United States army personnel in the United Kingdom. In addition to the two US army personnel at RAF Hythe the US army also employs around 200 civilians at the facility.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House on how many occasions he has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67525]

Mr. Straw: I have accepted corporate hospitality on two occasions in the last 12 months. Details are given in the Register of Members' Interests (Session 2005-06), published on 24 March 2006.

Deputy Prime Minister

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Leader of the House whether the Deputy Prime Minister will answer oral parliamentary questions. [70734]

Mr. Straw: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 10 May 2006, Official Report, column 245W to the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Peter Luff).

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his office staying overnight in (i) mainland Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years. [69643]

Mr. Straw: The information is set out in the following table. No special advisers or civil servants from the Office of the Leader of the House of Commons made overnight trips to Northern Ireland or the Republic of Ireland.

	Great Britain		Other countries
	Special advisers	Civil servants	Special advisers	Civil servants

2005-06	75	0	506	505

Portland PR

Helen Goodman: To ask the Leader of the House what meetings officials in his Office have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Office and agencies for which he has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70137]

Mr. Straw: None.

Two special advisers working for my right hon. Friend the Member for Ashfield (Mr. Hoon), when Leader of the House of Commons, attended a summer garden party on 13 July 2005 hosted by Portland PR.

Staff Development

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House what the total cost was of (a) staff away days and (b) staff team building exercises in his Office in each of the last three years. [69150]

Nigel Griffiths: No staff away days or team building events have been held by the Office of the Leader of the House of Commons within the last three years.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Activity Levels

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how activity levels amongst the general population have changed in the last 10 years. [69921]

Mr. Caborn: According to the Health Survey for England (2004) the percentage of the population achieving the recommended levels of physical activity has increased for both men and women, from 32 per cent. in 1997 to 35 per cent. in 2004 for men, and 21 per cent. to 24 per cent. for women. This is based on undertaking a minimum of 30 minutes of at least moderate intensity activity at least five times a week.

The new national Taking Part survey will provide robust measurement of the Department's public service agreement target on increasing participation in sport.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on how many occasions Ministers of State in her Department stayed overnight in (a) five star, (b) four star and (c) three star hotels on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69120]

Mr. Caborn: The detailed information requested could not be provided without disproportionate cost.

All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the ministerial code and travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of both Houses.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

1911 Census

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will place in the Library a copy of the Registrar General's Analysis of tentative proposals made by National Archives to release 1911 Census records in advance of 2012, dated 18 February 2004, together with the associated correspondence with her Department about the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [69254]

Bridget Prentice: I have today placed in both Libraries copies of correspondence between my Department and the Office for National Statistics on this matter.

Since 1966 successive Governments have consistently maintained this position, and from 1981 onwards there has been an explicit assurance on census forms that they will remain closed to the public for 100 years. It remains government policy to make census returns publicly available after a period of 100 years.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the Registrar General's conclusion, dated 18 February 2004, regarding the effect of the release of the 1911 Census before 2012 on public trust in statistical confidentiality; and if she will make a statement. [69255]

Bridget Prentice: I have today placed in both Libraries copies of correspondence between my Department and the Office for National Statistics to which the hon. Member refers. No formal assessment was made in response to the letter of 18 February 2004. The Government's view is that a closure period of 100 years strikes the right balance between the access interests of family historians and the right of citizens to have the personal information about themselves in their census returns kept confidential. Maintaining the security and confidentiality of the information that citizens supply about themselves in their census returns is of paramount importance. It remains government policy to make census returns publicly available after a period of 100 years.

Census Closure Rule

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of (a) the Registrar General's proposal, dated 18 February 2004, to enshrine a 100-year census closure rule in primary legislation and (b) the implications for that proposal of the principles of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if she will make a statement. [69256]

Bridget Prentice: There are no current plans to enshrine a 100-year census closure rule in primary legislation.

Children's Services

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many nursery and creche places are provided for people working in her Department; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for children of employees of her Department. [67359]

Bridget Prentice: My Department has 37 bought-in nursery places and during the past year provided 74 holiday playscheme places. The Department offers a 25 per cent. subsidy towards nursery places and a 50 per cent. subsidy towards playscheme places. The total cost was £43,712.05 during the last financial year. £34,253.88 was spent on subsidised nursery places at a cost of £1,200.00 per child; and a total of £9,458.17 for subsidised playscheme places at a cost of £127.00 per place. The Department has participated actively in an inter-departmental working party in collaboration with the Daycare Trust to establish the Civil Service Childcare Toolkit.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what opportunitites exist for people to work beyond retirement age in her Department. [69030]

Bridget Prentice: My Department has a retirement policy which explicitly states that if a member of staff below senior civil service level wishes to work beyond the normal retirement age of 65 we will normally agree to such a request subject to the normal standards of health, efficiency, conduct, performance and attendance being met. Individuals may not work beyond the age of 70 except in exceptional circumstances. The normal retirement age in the senior civil service is 60. However, the Department retains members of the senior civil service if it is judged to be in the public interest to do so and it is satisfied as to the fitness and efficiency of the individual to carry out his or her duties. This flexibility allows the Department to meet its business needs, retaining valuable knowledge and skills, while giving staff as much choice as possible about when they retire.

Election Registers

John Mann: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many General Election marked registers were not available (a) six months and (b) nine months after the 2005 general election. [69822]

Bridget Prentice: The only marked register that was unavailable in either the six months or nine months following the 2005 General election was Woking, which was missing in its entirety.

Electoral Registration

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what percentage of those eligible to vote were registered to vote in each local authority in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [64195]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 11 May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions regarding (1) the size of the electorate and the registration rate in each local authority in (i) England, (ii) Wales, (iii) Scotland and (iv) Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years; (2) the percentage of those eligible to vote who were registered to vote in each local authority in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years and (3) the total electorate for (a) the Vale of Clwyd and (b) Denbighshire in each of the last 10 years. (68582, 64195 and 65905)

Firstly, please allow me to explain why it has taken a little while to reply to your questions. I understand from the House of Commons Library that you are most interested in Parliamentary electorate by local authority. This is not a standard output so it has taken some time to collate the data and ensure it is on an equivalent basis. This is further complicated by different data being available for England & Wales, Scotland, and Northern Ireland. Electoral data are held locally by the General Register Office for Scotland (GROS), the Electoral Office Northern Ireland (EONI) and for England & Wales the Office for National Statistics (ONS). Regarding the question on total electorate for Denbighshire and the Vale of Clwyd, we do not normally publish data on total electorate (rather we publish local/European electorate and separately Parliamentary electorate data). For years up to and including 2001, data are not held electronically in a form that enables us to calculate 'total electorate'. Therefore, in order to obtain the data you requested we have referred to the annual paper returns from Denbighshire to collate the necessary data.

Historical UK Electorate by LA

Electoral data are available on the number of people registered to vote in Parliamentary elections and also on the number of people registered to vote in local/European elections. Annual population data are only available on a "usual residence" basis: the mid-year population estimates. Since population data are available by age, the mid-year population aged 18 and over can be calculated. Thus it is possible to calculate an estimate of the 'registration rate' using "the percentage of the usually resident population, aged 18 and over who are registered to vote" as either Parliamentary or local/European electors).

It is not possible to 'split' estimates of the usual resident population in order to give estimates of the population entitled to vote. We do not hold data (e.g. populations of non-EU citizens) that enable us to produce such a 'split'.

The attached tables (one for each year), therefore, provide information, for each local authority in the UK, on (i) the annual 'usual resident' mid-year population; (ii) the size of the (a) Parliamentary electorate and (b) local/European electorate; and (iii) the percentage of the "estimated usually resident population" aged 18 and over who are registered to vote as (a) Parliamentary electors and (b) local/European electors. These are labelled as 'registration rates' on the tables and this term is used in the remainder of this reply. These data provide the closest available approximation to the information you requested. It is not possible to calculate the percentage of the eligible population who are registered to vote: the resident population aged 18 and over is not the same as the number of people eligible to vote.

This 'registration rate' is not a published National Statistic: there are a number of issues that mean care needs to be taken when interpreting the data. In particular care needs to be taken when considering local authorities where the usually resident population differs radically from the population eligible to vote. An example of such a local authority is Forest Heath. There are a large number of United States Air Force personnel, contractors, and dependants in Forest Heath who, as American citizens, are not eligible to vote. These people are however included in the population estimates as they are usually resident. Therefore, the estimated 'registration rate' calculated for Forest Heath is considerably reduced. However, the Office for National Statistics (ONS), in order to aid comparisons of the resident population of voting age and the number of people who are registered to vote, does calculate 'registration rates' on occasion in the manner outlined above.

The attached tables give comparisons between the number of registered electors and annual mid-year population for the ten years up to mid-2004 (the latest available population estimates for the UK) for all local authorities in the UK. Each table shows a comparison against Parliamentary electorate (where available) and against local/European electorate. The availability of Parliamentary electorate by LA differs by country as this is a non-standard output. Data availability also differs from year to year. Recent improvements to the way the data are held for England and Wales mean these data can now be calculated for more recent years. For England and Wales data on Parliamentary electorate by LA, for years prior to 2002, could only be calculated by reference to individual paper LA annual returns and would involve disproportionate cost. For Scotland, 2004 data on Parliamentary electors by LA will be available shortly and we will provide you with an update of these tables when they become available. For Northern Ireland data on Parliamentary electors by LA are not currently available.

In order to give an estimate of the number of electors at the mid-year point, 30 June, a weighted average is taken of the two closest sets of electoral data. This gives the best possible comparison with the population estimates. Footnotes to the tables indicate the formulae used to calculate these weighted comparisons.

Attainers have been excluded from the electorate data to give the best possible comparison. Therefore, the data may differ to that published elsewhere.

We have also updated the data where there are known (small) errors in or updates to previously published data. This means that the attached data provide the best possible comparison.

The local/European electorate gives a better comparison than parliamentary electorate to the usually resident population as EU citizens are included and UK citizens resident abroad are excluded from the local/European electorate. However, a number of other difficulties remain when comparing these sources. For example not everyone who is usually resident is entitled to vote (foreign citizens from outside of the EU and Commonwealth, prisoners, etc. are not eligible) and people who have more than one address may register in more than one place (e.g. students may register at parental and term-time addresses). These factors may have a differential impact from place to place.

There is also inevitably some double counting of the registered electorate (both parliamentary and local/European) as electoral registration officers vary in how quickly they remove people from the registers after they have moved away from an area or after they have died. This is the main reason some areas show apparent rates in excess of one hundred per cent.

In order to aid comparison two further tables are attached that show the estimated 'registration rates' for all ten years. Table A shows these rates for Parliamentary electors and Table B for local/European electors. However, any comparison of these data across years should be made carefully as electoral legislation and other changes (such as EU expansion) can change the size of the electorate.

A copy of the tables will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

The tables provide as comprehensive as possible comparisons between historic local authority population and electorate numbers. I understand from the House of Commons Library that you are also interested in the percentage of residents who are registered to vote on a Parliamentary constituency basis. Official Report number 82 column 1719, 12 December 2005, provides the best possible consistent UK comparison for Parliamentary constituencies. For England and Wales we hope to investigate the possibility of producing population estimates by Parliamentary constituency in the future using Small Area Population Estimates. For Northern Ireland, population estimates by Parliamentary constituency are already available from the Northern Ireland Statistical and Research Agency (NISRA). Total Electorate for Denbighshire and Vale of Clwyd

The table below provides the requested 'total electorate' information for Denbighshire and the Vale of Clwyd, for the past 9 years. The total electorate figures shown here are those who are registered to vote as either Parliamentary electors, or local/European electors., or both.

Data for 1996 are not readily available. The data are derived from data as reported by Denbighshire, and for years up to and including 2001, have been collated from the original paper returns.

Electoral System

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the outcome of the pilots for postal voting. [67091]

Bridget Prentice: Although it is too early to make a full assessment, initial indications suggest that the pilots of administrative changes to the postal voting process at the May 2006 local elections have been conducted successfully. The Electoral Commission will formally evaluate the pilots and report by 3 August 2006.

Legal Services Commission

Julie Morgan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many matters were started under Legal Services Commission contracts in civil law, in each of the financial years 2000-01 to 2004-05, broken down by category of law; and what the projected total is in each category for 2005-06. [68382]

Vera Baird: The following table shows the number of matters started as reported by solicitor firms and not for profit suppliers, including community legal service direct, for each financial year since 2000-01. The number of matters started differ slightly from what has previously been published in the Legal Services Commission's (LSC) annual reports as matters started during the year are still reported after the publication of the annual report, and the annual report does not include new matters started through community legal service direct.

Political Parties (Members Liabilities)

Chris Huhne: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the Government's policy is towards the liabilities of individual members of registered political parties in circumstances of (a) liquidation, (b) bankruptcy and (c) administration of such a party. [66675]

Mr. Straw: I have been asked to reply. The requirements for the registration and administration of political parties are set out in the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 (PPERA).

There are no specific rules regarding liquidation, bankruptcy or placing in administration of registered political parties in the Act. Whether individual members have liabilities, and the insolvency procedures applicable to a political party, are not matters governed by electoral law. Rather such matters will depend on how the particular political party has been set up, and its legal status in the general law: for example, some parties may be registered companies, and therefore would be subject to the specific requirements of companies' legislation.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Publications

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission how many publications were produced by the Electoral Commission during 2005; and what the total cost was. [69263]

Peter Viggers: I am informed by the Electoral Commission that during 2005 it produced 48 publications at a cost of £340,136. These included both statutory reports and publications providing training and support for those involved in the running of elections, political parties, agents and candidates.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Brighton and Hove Albion

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the dates of contacts between (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department and representatives of (i) Brighton and Hove council and (ii) Brighton and Hove Albion football club since 25 October 2005; and whether in each case the contact was by (A) telephone, fax or e-mail, (B) written correspondence and (C) meeting. [65222]

Angela E. Smith [holding answer 24 April 2006]: I have been asked to reply.

Given the hon. Gentleman's interest in the Palmer planning decision, I have restricted my answer to contact regarding that matter.

I am unable to provide details of telephone calls, faxes or emails as these records are not held centrally.

The letter setting out the Secretary of State's decision regarding the applications at Palmer was issued to all main parties on 27 October 2005.

No Ministers or officials in the Department for Communities and Local Government have had any meetings or written correspondence relevant to the planning decision with either the Council or the Football Club since the decision was issued.

Fire and Rescue Services

Ms Barlow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact on response times of the move to individual integrated risk management plans for the fire and rescue services in England. [69603]

Angela E. Smith: I have been asked to reply.

No assessment has been made. It is for individual Fire and Rescue Authorities to determine appropriate fire cover and the level of service in its area on the basis of local risk assessment and management.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance she has issued on the fitting of front-line fire service vehicles with satellite navigation systems; and what percentage of such vehicles in each fire service region is fitted with such devices. [68912]

Angela E. Smith: I have been asked to reply.

No guidance on the fitting of front-line fire and rescue service vehicles with satellite navigation systems has been issued to date.

Details of satellite navigation systems fitted into fire and rescue service vehicles are not collected centrally.

Home Information Packs

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what pilots have been undertaken prior to the introduction of home information packs. [63181]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

A pilot scheme was established in Bristol on 10 December 1999 and ran until July 2000. Some of the findings of that pilot will be updated through research to establish the baseline for home information packs. The first phase of this research is due to begin shortly with completion by September 2006. In addition, I refer my hon. Friend to the statement in the press notice issued on 7 April which gives details of a dry-run prior to introducing home information packs on 1 June 2007.

Neighbourhood Renewal

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has for neighbourhood renewal projects in Milton Keynes. [68141]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply

The Department does not have any plans to extend neighbourhood renewal programmes to Milton Keynes.

Neighbourhood Renewal funding is being allocated to the most deprived localities and neighbourhoods to help narrow the gap between these and the rest of the Country.

Milton Keynes does not meet these criteria.

As a growth area, Milton Keynes is already in receipt of targeted funding to improve the quality of life of residents and create sustainable communities.

Street Wardens (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he plans to provide funding from 2006-07 for the street wardens scheme in Peterborough; and if he will make a statement. [61256]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

There are no plans to further fund street warden schemes. The direct Office of the Deputy Prime Minister funding which ended in March 2005 was awarded on a short-term, pump priming basis, as was stated at the instigation of the funding.

Tyne and Wear Passenger Transport Authority

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the forthcoming White Paper on Local Government will clarify whether an executive mayor could replace the indirectly appointed Tyne and Wear Passenger Transport Authority. [69220]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 10 May 2006]: We expect that the Local Government White Paper will clarify any proposals for directly elected mayors for city-regions or former metropolitan areas.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Claims

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the time taken to rate a claim for (a) jobseekers' allowance and (b) income support was in Alloa in (i) May 2004 and (ii) May 2005. [69303]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what the time to rate a claim for Jobseeker's Allowance and Income Support was in Alloa in May 2004 and May 2005. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Our measure of the time taken to process a claim is the Actual Average Clearance Time. For 2005/06, the Jobcentre Plus Key Management Indicator level for processing claims for Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance were 12 working days.

Jobcentre Plus does not record information separately for Alloa. However, it is included with the information for the Stirling area. The Actual Average Clearance Times for the Stirling area are in the table.

	Jobseeker's Allowance Clearance Time (Days)	Income Support Clearance Time (Days)
May 2004	8.9	12.5
May 2005	8.4	10.9

I hope this is helpful.

Child Poverty

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures the UK Government are assessing to target help to children in the UK that live below 27 per cent. of median income. [67281]

Margaret Hodge: The information is not available.

Specific information regarding low income for Wales, Scotland and the English regions of Great Britain is available in the latest publication of "Households Below Average Income 1994-95 to 2004-05".

Poverty is about more than low income. It is also about health, housing and the quality of the environment. Households who report the lowest incomes may not have the lowest living standards. Therefore households in the lowest range of income distribution should not automatically be considered to have the lowest living standards.

Our current approach in "Opportunity for All" is to present a range of low income thresholds (50, 60 and 70 per cent. of median income). This gives an idea of the depth of poverty and it is simple to interpret. Indeed, the incorporation of two different relative low income thresholds into our new child poverty measure (60 and 70 per cent. of median income), together with the absolute tier, further ensures that different depths of poverty will be looked at separately.

All publications listed are available in the Library.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people came on to the Child Support Agency system in each of the last 12 months. [66831]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the right. hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

In reply to your Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many people came on to the Child Support Agency system in each of the last 12 months.

Following clarification received from your office, a table showing the change in the Agency's caseload over the last 12 months, as well as the Agency's intake of potential applications, is presented in the attached table.

Further information on the Agency's caseload and intake is available in the Child Support Agency's Quarterly Summary Statistics (QSS), published on 27th April 2006. A copy of this document is available in the House of Commons Library. Specifically in the QSS:

Table 1 shows the Agency's caseload, and a breakdown thereof.

Table 2.1 shows the number of potential applications received each month by the Agency.

I hope you find this useful.

The Agency's caseload, and the change in the Agency's caseload relative to the previous month, for April 2005 to March 2006

	Caseload	Change in caseload relative to previous month	Monthly intake of potential applications
April 2005	1,426,000	10,000	25,000
May 2005	1,427,000	1,000	25,000
June 2005	1,432,000	5,000	25,000
July 2005	1,440,000	8,000	25,000
August 2005	1,447,000	6,000	23,000
September 2005	1,449,000	2,000	24,000
October 2005	1,456,000	7,000	29,000
November 2005	1,464,000	8,000	30,000
December 2005	1,475,000	11,000	23,000
January 2006	1,486,000	10,000	30,000
February 2006	1,503,000	18,000	34,000
March 2006	1,519,000	16,000	35,000

Notes:
1. The Agency's caseload consists of all open pre-calculation/assessment cases, and cases with a maintenance liability (including those with both a nil and positive maintenance liability).
2. The size of the Agency's caseload will be affected by the Agency's intake and the number of cases that are closed within any given time period.
3. It is not possible to quantify the extent to which the Agency's clerical new-scheme caseload is or is not included in the above numbers.
4. Volumes are rounded to the nearest thousand. Components may therefore not sum, due to rounding.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the Child Support Agency (CSA) quarterly statistical summary, published on 27 April, what assessment he has made of the reasons for the reduction in the old scheme CSA caseload by 42,000 cases between March 2005 and March 2006. [67633]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the right hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 11 May 2006:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the Child Support Agency (CSA) quarterly statistical summary published on 27th April what assessment he has made of the reasons for the reduction in the old scheme CSA caseload by 42,000 cases between March 2005 and March 2006.

As noted in Table 1 of the Agency's Quarterly Summary Statistics (QSS), the old scheme caseload reduced from 965,000 in March 2005 to 923,000 in March 2006. There are three reasons for this fall:

i. Some cases will have been closed or withdrawn either at the request of the parent with care or because the youngest child in a case has reached an age at which he or she no longer qualifies for child support, and any outstanding arrears on that case have been paid by the non-resident parent.

ii. Some cases will have had relevant links to new schema cases and been reactively converted onto the new scheme during the period in question.

iii. The old scheme no longer has any intake-any new applications received by the Agency from 3rd March 2003 onwards are treated as new scheme applications.

The above means that the old scheme caseload can be expected to reduce steadily over time. It should be noted that the Agency's new scheme caseload increased by 144,000 over the same period, from 452,000 to 596,000.

Natascha Engel: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when a decision will be made to move existing Child Support Agency cases from the old scheme to the new scheme. [68450]

Mr. Plaskitt: We have always said that we could not consider transferring the bulk of the old scheme caseload onto the new scheme until the new scheme was working well.

We have asked Sir David Henshaw to consider this issue as part of his redesign of the child support scheme. Sir David Henshaw has been asked to deliver his findings to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Hutton) before the summer recess.

Departmental Leave

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many days have been lost to sickness absence in her Department in each of the last three years. [64495]

Mrs. McGuire: The information available is contained in the following table. The figures show the total working days lost to sickness absence, as well as an average of working days lost per staff year. The information has been drawn from internal DWP records based on data from the Department's payroll systems.

Year ended	Working days lost	Average
February 2004	1,713,573	12.6
February 2005	1,632,678	12.5
February 2006	1,249,179	10.3

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [68994]

Mrs. McGuire: DWP operates the civil service-wide arrangement for senior civil servants, with retirement at age 60. The head of the Department and Agency chief executives have the flexibility to retain SCS staff beyond 60 if they judge it to be in the public interest and are satisfied about the fitness and efficiency of the individual to carry out their duties. We have one SCS member of staff working beyond age 60 out of a total of 247 SCS members.

DWP policy provides the opportunity for staff in grades below the senior civil service to request to work beyond our retirement age of 65. We have 220 people out of a total of 116,965 working over age 65.

There are no special arrangements to identify work opportunities for people over 65. They are treated the same as all other employees.

We have successfully operated the arrangements for staff below SCS since October 2003, which is three years ahead of the implementation in October this year of the DTI Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006. The regulations will prohibit age discrimination in employment and vocational training.

We have reviewed the effectiveness of this policy and from 1 October 2006 we will have no mandatory retirement age at all for staff below SCS.

By removing the retirement age of 65, we are giving people more choice about managing their working lives and planning for retirement. DWP positively encourages older workers, and recognise the benefits of experienced and committed staff.

This change to our retirement policy is another positive measure in the Department's progress in championing diversity and further demonstrates our commitment to ending discrimination.

Departmental Relocation

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which buildings and sites used by his Department and related agencies (a) have ceased to be used in the last year and (b) will be closed under current plans for relocation. [31763]

Mrs. McGuire: The information has been placed in the Library.

Departmental Websites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list (a) the websites operated by his Department and (b) the reports placed on the internet in March 2006, indicating in each case whether paper copies were also made available. [65209]

Disability Living Allowance

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 20 October 2006, Official Report, column 1198W, on disability living allowance, what proportion of people in West Lancashire awarded disability living allowance on the basis of behavioural disorder, including enuresis and hyperactivity, were children. [64083]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran, dated 11 May 2006:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the Answer of 20th October 2006 Official Report column 1198W on disability living allowance what proportion of people in West Lancashire awarded disability living allowance on the basis of behavioural disorder including enuresis and hyperactivity were children.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service.

As at November 2005, there were 5,840 Disability Living Allowance claimants living in the Lancashire West Parliamentary Constituency of which 140 claimants have their main disabling condition recorded as "behavioural disorder including enuresis and hyperactivity". Of these, 100 claimants (73.8%) are aged under 16.

DEFINITIONS AND CONVENTIONS:"-" Nil or Negligible;"." Not applicable; Caseload figures are rounded to the nearest ten. Totals may not sum due to rounding.

SOURCE: DWP Information Directorate: Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study for totals.

Notes:

1 Totals shows the number of people in receipt of an allowance, and excludes people with entitlement where the payment has been suspended, for example if they are in hospital.

2. Parliamentary Constituencies have been allocated using the ONS postcode directory.

3. Some claimants have more than one disabling condition, only the main disabling condition is recorded on the IFD datasets.

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions his Department has had with charities and campaign groups on the Disability Living Allowance application form; and whether recommendations were made relating to the form following such meetings. [66158]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what discussions his Department has had with charities and campaign groups on the Disability Living Allowance application form; and whether recommendations were made relating to the form following such meetings.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service.

The establishment of DCS as an Agency on 1 November 2004 marked an increased focus on understanding the needs of its customers through early and proactive consultation with customer representative organisations. As changes have been made to some of the Disability Living Allowance (DLA) claim forms over the last year, DCS has undertaken specific consultation activity with the DCS Advisory Forum and where appropriate the wider lobby. The DCS Advisory Forum is the Disability and Carers Service's (DCS) main mechanism for consulting with the Voluntary and Community Sector. The forum was originally established in 1998 to provide advice and guidance to officials of DCS and the Department on the impact of change initiatives on disabled customers.

We are currently reviewing the DLA National claim form. This will be issued to the DCS Advisory Forum in May. Full consideration will be given to any comments received and full responses to those comments will be provided.

In July 2005, we consulted with the DCS Advisory Forum on the proposed DLA Adult Claim form to be used within the Customer Case Management (CCM) test taking place at Manchester and Bootle Disability Benefit Centres (DBCs). At special events in July and September 2005, we also consulted with a high number of local voluntary and community organisations within the Manchester and Bootle DBC catchment areas.

In January 2006, we returned to the DCS Advisory Forum to consult with them on the proposed second version of the CCM claim form.

As a result of this consultation activity, a number of suggestions were submitted, many of which we have been able to incorporate. This has led to improvements being made to the form which will make it easier for customers to understand and answer the questions; provides customers with the option to describe the help they need and the difficulties they have at the end of each question; the layout, format and wording have also been improved and makes the form visibly clearer and easy to read.

When a suggestion has been made but not acted upon, for example where the suggestion would unfairly advantage one group of disabled people at the expense of other groups, reasons were given to the Forum to explain why the suggestion was not taken up.

On 20 March 2006, the provision for customers to make e-claims via the internet for a range of DWP benefits was introduced, including DLA and AA. DCS took the lead on consulting on behalf of the Department with Interactive Demonstration and Preview events of the DWP e-Services taking place in Manchester and Birmingham in November 2005. These events provided customer representative groups with early sight of the DLA, Attendance Allowance, State Pension UK, Jobcentre Plus, and Child Support maintenance application e-forms. The DCS Advisory Forum, Jobcentre Plus Key Stakeholders and the Pension Service Partnerships Against Poverty Group were invited to attend these events, with representation from wider customer representative organisations also attending on the day. As a result of the comments received at these events, improvements to the DLA e-claim form are to be made. Steps are now being taken to include the provision for customer representatives to include their details, an option to provide Textphone details and increasing the size of text boxes.

Our consultation approach via the formal DCS Advisory Forum, the wider lobby where appropriate, and via customer feedback channels allows for continuous dialogue and suggestions from our customers or their representatives as to how our claim forms can be improved.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Disabled People

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on his Department's progress in fulfilling its statutory obligation as a public body of promoting the rights of disabled people. [66008]

Mrs. McGuire: The Disability Discrimination Act 2005 placed new duties on public authorities to promote equality for disabled people, 'the Disability Equality Duty'. This Department (DWP) has taken the following steps to meet the Disability Equality Duty:

DWP is host to the Office for Disability Issues (ODI), which was launched on 1 December 2005 to take forward the Government's strategy for improving the life chances of disabled people. One element of this work will be to overset the effective implementation of the Disability Equality Duty. The ODI is working in partnership with the Disability Rights Commission to support and encourage Departments to commit to meaningful actions that will improve their policies and services and realise the potential of their diverse workforces.

The Department is already working towards the publication of its disability equality schemes by 4 December 2006. The process was formally launched in April 2006 and will mean both central units and agencies involving disabled people in developing action plans for tackling problem areas and identifying positive actions to address these. We have also already begun planning for the Secretary of State's report due in 2008.

DWP is currently revising its existing guidance on accessible communications with a view to introducing a new standard for information accessibility. This set of standards will form part of the disability equality scheme referred to earlier.

We have commissioned public access audits of all its premises used by the public during 2003. A total of 1,735 buildings were surveyed, and a programme of public access improvement works commissioned on 1,032 sites which are scheduled for completion in June 2006. The existing public access provisions are subject to annual review and any future additional requirement is built into the annual maintenance work programmes.

The Department wants staff to understand and embrace diversity and an important part of achieving this has been the development of a diversity toolkit which makes all our diversity and equality policy and information easily accessible in one place on an internal website. The toolkit also is now being used by around 70 other organisations.

The Department is keen to ensure we meet the workplace needs of disabled staff and potential staff and recently DWP has run two pilot exercises on a revised process for delivering reasonable workplace adjustments for staff. The development of the new process was partly in response to the length of time it took to assess and put reasonable adjustments into place, and partly to ensure that the recommended adjustment was the most suitable for that individual. A third pilot is due to start shortly. This will be followed by a formal evaluation exercise. On completion of the first two pilots, and subject to the evaluation, we will commence planning for national implementation across the Department and agencies.

DWP encourages all business units to consider the potential impact of policy and services on all equality groups, ahead of future legislation. For example, at least three impact assessments have been completed to date by the Disability and Carers Service, taking into account disability, with a number of additional assessments in the process of being completed.

The Department has been working in partnership with the Employers' Forum on Disability in order to address the needs of its disabled customers. In particular, it has contributed, along with other public and private organisations, to the interactive "Disability Confident" training resource pack which uses both video and DVD format. This addresses the key principles of dealing with disabled people in general, and particularly communications issues relating to those with specific impairments. This earned a special commendation in the prestigious 'World of Learning Awards'.

Both the Minister for Disabled People and senior officials participate in an annual series of meetings with disabled customers and those with disability interests to explain current and planned policy, and to gain a better knowledge of people's views and concerns.

DWP consults with staff on disability issues through a National Disability Staff Network Group. The Department has recently reviewed all of the staff network groups with the intention of raising their profile and enabling them to contribute to successful diversity outcomes for the Department. Representatives from all of the groups have met with the recently appointed Permanent Secretary twice and he has committed to meet with them on a quarterly basis.

DWP also analyses, and acts upon, staff perceptions on diversity issues in the annual staff attitude survey; and meets regularly with trade unions side to consider disability along with other diversity issues. In addition, staff can raise diversity issues at regular staff forum events held around the country and via a site on the DWP intranet.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment she has made of the reasons for the change in the number of people claiming incapacity benefit for mental and behavioural disorders for the period 1995 to 2005; and if she will make a statement. [63302]

Mrs. McGuire: The department has undertaken substantial in-house analysis to determine both the trends and the reasons for the change in the number of those claiming incapacity benefit for mental and behavioural disorders.

The rise in the number of people with mental and behavioural disorders claiming incapacity benefits mirrors a rise in the overall number of individuals in the population with mental health problems.

Claimants with mental and behavioural disorders as a primary diagnosis now make up an increasing proportion of the overall caseload accounting for almost 40 per cent. of the total caseload, compared with 25 per cent. in the mid 1990s; although growth in the proportion of the caseload with mental and behavioural disorders has been slowing in recent quarters. This is both because they make up an increasing proportion of inflows and because they have lower off-flow rates than other groups. It follows that, people with mental health conditions are, on average, much more likely to become long-term claimants.

Pension Credit

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the current application processing time is for pension credit. [67878]

Mr. Timms: The Pension Service's internal target for processing applications for pension credit is 10 working days. The average time taken during March 2006 was 9.01 working days. The year to date figure is 8.79 working days.

Recruitment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies spent on recruitment, search and selection agencies in each of the last five years. [68334]

Mrs. McGuire: This information is not collated within this Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Staff Development

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total cost was of (a) staff away days and (b) staff team building exercises in his Department in each of the last three years. [68993]

Mrs. McGuire: Full information on the total cost of staff training away days and team building exercises organised by the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) is not collated and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Transactional Processes

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he has taken to modernise transactional processes within (a) his Department and (b) the agencies for which he has responsibility in the last three years. [51988]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department and its agencies are in the course of extensive modernisation, which is being delivered through a number of substantial business change projects.

The information is in the following table.

Unemployment (Brentford and Isleworth)

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action he has taken to reduce unemployment in Brentford and Isleworth constituency since 2001 among (a) young people, (b) disabled people, (c) lone parents and (d) the long-term unemployed. [62120]

Margaret Hodge: Since 2001, nearly 1,200 lone parents, young people and long term unemployed adults have been helped into work through the New Deal in Brentford and Isleworth. People with health conditions and disabilities will also have been helped into work through New Deal for Disabled People but these figures are not available at parliamentary constituency level.

Lone parents in Brentford and Isleworth can also get additional support to help them into work through the Work Search Premium and In-Work Credit. The Lone Parent Work Search Premium was introduced in October 2004 and eligible lone parents can receive an additional £20 per week if they agree to undertake intensive work search activities. Eligible parents in Brentford and Isleworth who obtain employment of more than 16 hours a week can also be paid £40 per week for the first year of the job through the In-Work Credit, which was also introduced in October 2004.

Over the next two years, we will be extending our Pathways to Work pilots to every part of Britain. The pilots have already shown significant success in helping people off incapacity benefit and into employment.

Information on the numbers of people helped into work through New Deal for Young People, New Deal for Lone Parents and New Deal 25 plus, which is specifically aimed at helping long term unemployed adults into work, is in the following table.

New Deal in Brentford and Isleworth

New Deal for Young People	430	770
New Deal for Lone Parents	490	660

[67625]

Mr. Coaker: Information on the Assets Recovery Agency's progress on completed cases and the value of realised receipts is shown in Tables 1 and 2. It is not possible to break down the Agency's figures further by region. The Agency is currently finalising its Annual Report 2005-06 which will set out progress in meeting its targets. Information on the current performance of police forces, including Regional Asset Recovery Teams, in obtaining orders for the recovery of criminal assets is set out in Table 3. The regional teams are not part of the Assets Recovery Agency; they are funded separately by the Home Office.

Conviction Rates

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions for public order offences there were in Doncaster North in (a) 1984, (b) 1994, (c) 2004 and (d) the most recent period for which figures are available. [68404]

Mr. Coaker: The following table shows the number of defendants convicted at all courts in Doncaster for public order offences in 1984, 1994 and 2004. 2004 is the most recent period for which data is currently available. It is not possible to identify convictions in Doncaster north as the data are not collected at that level of detail. Data for 2005 will be available in the autumn.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions since March 2004 applicant details supplied by the Criminal Records Bureau to the police led to conviction details being matched mistakenly with an applicant. [38194]

Joan Ryan: There have been 1472 occasions since March 2004 where disclosure applicant details were matched by the Criminal Records Bureau to a person with the same or similar details who has a criminal record and, where the details had been challenged by the applicant, their dispute was subsequently upheld.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost to his Department was of Criminal Records Bureau applications in 2005-06. [69441]

Joan Ryan: Interim financial results for the 2005-06 Financial Year indicate the amount funded by the Home Office to be £1.78 million.

Economic Migrants (Wirral, West)

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many economic migrants there are in Wirral, West. [62351]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 11 May 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question regarding how many economic migrants there are in Wirral, West. (62351)

We are not able to provide estimates of the number of economic migrants in Wirral West, as this information is not collected.

Electronic Tagging (Providers)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the firms which provide electronic tagging of offenders for his Department. [69365]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Since 1 April 2005 electronic monitoring services in England and Wales have been provided by two companies, Group Four Securicor and Serco.

Foreign Prisoners

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether there is an official in the prison service who is responsible for foreign national prisoners; and if he will make a statement; [67471]

(2) whether there is a unit in his Department with responsibility for liaison between the prison service and the Immigration and Nationality Directorate; and if he will make a statement. [67576]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Different aspects of policy in relation to foreign national prisoners are the responsibility of a number of different policy units. However, the lead for policy on the management of foreign national prisoners in custody rests with the offender policy and rights unit of the national offender management service.

Internet Watch Foundation

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he made of the Internet Watch Foundation's annual report 2005; and if he will make a statement. [66691]

Mr. Coaker: The Government welcome the 2005 annual report of the Internet Watch Foundation (IWF), published in March 2006, and congratulates the IWF and their partners on their achievements. The IWF report an increase in the number of reports made to their hotline, from 17,255 in 2004 to 23,658 in 2005.

This resulted in 6,128 reports being made to law enforcement agencies and other national hotlines around the world. The report also highlights the fact that only 0.4 per cent. of potentially illegal child abuse content identified by the IWF in 2005 was hosted in the UK. This represents a major improvement from 18 per cent. in 1997, and demonstrates the commitment of the IWF, the UK industry, and others, to work collaboratively to remove potentially illegal child abuse content wherever in the world it originates. The IWF report that there were no instances of either criminally obscene content or criminally racist content hosted in the UK during 2005.

The Government also pay tribute to the IWF for supplying a list of websites to ISPs, mobile operators, search providers and filtering companies so they can play their part in protecting UK internet users from being inadvertently exposed to potentially illegal child abuse content by various blocking techniques. The fact that the IWF's core funders have grown in number to over 60 is evidence of their strengthening reputation. The IWF is seen as a highly successful model of cooperation and one which other countries seek to learn from and replicate.

Motoring Offences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the reply 18 April 2006, Official Report, c. 318W, on motoring offences, what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the reasons that females were convicted of offences at a higher rate than males; and if he will make a statement. [69608]

Mr. Coaker: The following tables which appeared in the reply to the hon. Member was subject to a processing error by the official reporters in which columns were transposed. The tables have been re-submitted.

National Identity Register

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the sole address permitted on the National Identity Register will be an individual's private residential address. [68646]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 8 May 2006]: An individual on registration will be required to provide his principal residential address but the Identity Cards Act 2006 also allows the registering of other addresses at which he has a place of residence, including addresses overseas. The extent to which secondary addresses may or must be registered, as with other details of the registration process, will be determined in secondary legislation.

This will have to be approved by Parliament under the affirmative resolution procedure and full guidance will be provided to individuals registering. It is intended that all addresses registered will be residential addresses, not business or contact addresses, except potentially in exceptional cases such as persons with no fixed abode, who may only have a contact address. Section 42(10) of the Act allows regulations to be made defining these special cases.

People Trafficking

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to make it a criminal offence to pay for sex with a person who has been illegally trafficked. [68385]

Mr. Coaker: We consider that the Sexual Offences Act 2003, with its emphasis on consent freely entered into, is sufficient to prosecute men who knowingly have sex with women against their will, including women who have been illegally trafficked. The Act provides at section 74 that "a person consents if he agrees by choice, and has the freedom and capacity to make that choice".

If the trafficked woman is engaging in prostitution under duress then we find it difficult to see how she would be considered to be freely consenting. There are also evidential assumptions at section 75 of the Act which, if proven, will mean that the complainant is taken not to have consented and these include the use and threat of violence and unlawful detention of the victim. Furthermore, creating a further offence of paying for sex with a trafficked woman may give the appearance that it is a lesser offence than rape; it is not.

If the woman does not freely consent to sex and if the defendant does not reasonably believe that she consents, then regardless of her occupation, it is rape.

Pornography

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's working definition of pornography is. [66145]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 27 April 2006]: There is no statutory definition of 'pornography' in UK legislation. Under the Obscene Publications Act 1959 it is a criminal offence to publish any article which is considered to be 'obscene': that is, an article, if its effect when taken as a whole, is such as to tend to 'deprave and corrupt' persons who are likely, having regard to all relevant circumstances, to read see or hear the matter contained or embodied in it.

In the Government's recent Consultation Paper on the Possession of Extreme Pornographic Material, material which is explicit and has been solely, or primarily produced for the purpose of sexual arousal is considered to be 'pornographic'. By explicit we mean material in which the activity can be clearly seen and is not hidden, disguised or implied. In terms of regulation, we consider the harm that any type of material (whether pornography, violence, portrayal of drugs use, etc.) is likely to cause to the vulnerable, particularly children.

Prisons

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many existing governor grade officials in the prison service have had their status (a) upgraded and (b) downgraded; what proportion of these have been on a (i) temporary and (ii) permanent basis; and if he will make a statement. [69417]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Over the past year, 72 operational managers were permanently upgraded and three were permanently downgraded. Over the same period 91 operational managers were temporarily upgraded and 54 reverted back to a lower grade after a period of temporary promotion.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) for what reasons the compulsory transfer may take place of prison governors to alternative establishments; [69326]

(2) at what level of management in the prison service the decision compulsorily to transfer prison governor grade staff to alternative establishments is taken; and if he will make a statement. [69327]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Directed moves can happen for a varied number of reasons. These include for effective succession, to facilitate secondment, for disciplinary or performance reasons, career development, for certain personal and domestic circumstances, to fill new posts and to help support establishment performance tests or improvement plans.

Directed moves of all operational managers and senior operational managers are approved at the following levels of prison service management. Decisions about the appointment and transfer of senior operational managers (senior prison governors pay bands A to D) are made at director level. Decisions about the appointment and transfer of other prison governors (more junior prison governors pay bands F and E) are usually made at area manager level (senior civil servant).

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons in England and Wales use hutted accommodation for inmates; and how many inmates are housed in (a) dormitories and (b) single rooms in each such prison. [68959]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Seven prisons hold prisoners in hutted accommodation. The huts form part of the accommodation available for prisoners at these establishments. These prisons are: Drake Hall, Ford, Haverigg, North Sea Camp, Ranby, Spring Hill and Sudbury. The number of prisoners held in dormitories and single cells/rooms accommodation at these prisons is not recorded centrally.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons have (a) a special educational needs co-ordinator and (b) learning support assistants. [66550]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I refer the hon. Member for North-West Norfolk to the combined answer of 2 May 2006 from my hon. Friend the Member for Slough (Fiona MacTaggart) to questions 65461 and 65462, Official Report, column 1425W, from the hon. Member for Warrington, North (Helen Jones).

Sex Offences (South Wales)

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many sexual offences of (a) rape, (b) sexual assault, (c) indecent assault, (d) gross indecency and (e) unlawful sex were reported to South Wales police in 2004-05; and if he will make a statement. [55999]

Mr. Coaker: The available information relates to those offences recorded by the police and is in the table. The Sexual Offences Act 2003 came into effect in May 2004. At that time, some existing offences were repealed or re-defined and new offences were created. For completeness all the appropriate offences are provided in the table. Detailed information on the changes to sexual offences is contained in the recorded crime offence list which can be found in Appendix two of 'Crime in England and Wales 2004-05', Home Office Statistical Bulletin 11/05. Appendix two can be accessed via the following link:

Sexual Assault Referral Centres

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) location, (b) staffing profile and (c) cost for the most recent year for which figures are available is of each Sexual Assault Referral Centre; what assessment he has made of the work of such centres; and if he will make a statement. [69321]

Mr. Coaker: The information requested is set out in the National Services Guidelines for Developing Sexual Assault Referral Centres (SARCs) published by the Home Office and Department of Health in October 2005 and available at www.homeoffice.gov.uk. SARCs were positively evaluated in Home Office Research Study 285, "Sexual Assault Referral Centres: Developing Good Practice and Maximising Potentials", published in 2004. They are centres of expertise, providing an enhanced medical, forensic and therapeutic response to victims of sexual assault. The Home Office has supported the development of SARCs over the last two years through the Victims Fund, and further funding will be available to assist new SARCs in 2006-07.

Tagging Orders

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders have been prosecuted for breaking the terms of tagging curfews in each of the last five years. [69366]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The readily available information, which relates to the number of persons breaching curfew orders (with and without electronic monitoring) is published in Table 4.13 of 'Sentencing Statistics, England and Wales', 2004 (page 92). This publication can be found in the Library and also on the Home Office website, as follows:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1505.pdf.

Uninsured Drivers

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average fine for uninsured drivers was in each year since 1997. [58870]

Mr. Coaker: Available information, taken from the Court Proceedings Database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform, from 1997 to 2004 (latest available), is in the following table. 2005 data will be available early in 2007.

2004	169

Notes:
Coverage and recording practice affecting the statistics:
1. It is known that for some police force areas, the reporting of court proceedings in particular those relating to summary motoring offences, may be less than complete.
2. Since 1990, due to the delays in implementing new counting procedures, corrective action on non-keying errors was reduced resulting in deterioration in the quality of data on summary motoring proceedings.

Young Offenders

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are detained in young offenders institutions. [67641]

Mr. Sutcliffe: On 28 February 2006 there were 8,252 young adults aged 18-20 (including some 21 year olds who have not yet been reclassified as adults) and 2,726 juveniles aged 15-17 held in prison accommodation in England and Wales. 6,186 young adults were sentenced to detention under YOI rules. There were a further 1,970 young aduits aged 18-20 held on remand under prison rules, and 96 young adults held as civil prisoners. There were 2,122 sentenced juveniles held under YOI rules. There were a further 599 remand juveniles held under prison rules, and five juveniles aged 15-17 held as civil prisoners. This information is as recorded on the Prison IT system, and excludes those held outside of the prison estate in secure training centres and local authority secure children's homes.

Youth Justice and Criminal Justice Act

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the research commissioned by his Department on section 41 of the Youth Justice and Criminal Justice Act will be published. [68558]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 11 May 2006]: RDS-OCJR are proposing to publish the research it commissioned on section 41 of the Youth Justice and Criminal Justice Act on 25 May 2006.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Colombia

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 16 April 2006, Official Report, column 75W, on Colombia, in what ways (a) the UK has re-aligned its project assistance and (b) the EU has re-aligned Commission project assistance to match the UN recommendations on Colombia. [69426]

Mr. Hoon: The UK's project assistance priorities have been aligned with the spirit of the UN human rights recommendations in Colombia since the latter were first published in 2003. We also take into account UK Project Programme Priorities, other donors' activities in Colombia and areas where the UK can add particular value through experience or expertise. In Colombia, current priorities for UK project assistance include the protection of child rights, improvements in the rule of law, protection and promotion of freedom of expression and human rights defenders, security sector reform and conflict resolution. We aim to support sustainable institutional reform, as well as the most vulnerable communities in Colombia. The Department for International Development also supports non-governmental organisations' projects in Colombia on sustainable economic development for vulnerable communities, health and education, environment, strengthening civil society and projects to help reduce poverty and inequality.

The EU has long provided the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights (UNHCHR) office in Colombia with both political and financial support. The EU budget is currently supporting three projects that directly help respond to the needs highlighted in their recommendations, covering capacity building of state and municipal institutions responsible for human rights. Each year the EC delegation in Colombia review the UNHCHR's office's fresh recommendations in order to be able to adapt EU co-operation projects in general, especially in the human rights field.

EU Presidency

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations her Department has made to (a) the EU Commission and (b) the Government of Finland in their capacity as the next EU presidency on the future of the UK's veto on police and judicial affairs. [69832]

Mr. Hoon: Under the current EU treaty framework, co-operation on police and judicial matters is agreed by unanimity. That could only change to majority voting if all member states, including the UK, agree. We are aware of unofficial proposals to apply majority voting to some areas of police and judicial co-operation, but there is no formal proposal under discussion. As such, the Government have not made formal representations to the EU Commission or to the incoming EU presidency.

Iran (Military Technology Sales)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information she has received about the role of Belarus in exporting Russian military technology to Iran, with particular reference to S-300SP surface-to-air missiles. [69302]

Mr. Hoon: We are aware of and concerned by media reports alleging Belarus has re-exported to Iran arms bought from Russia. The established policy of the EU is not to sell arms to Iran.

Israel

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of Israel's compliance with the Non-Proliferation Treaty. [69931]

Mr. Hoon: Israel is not a signatory to the Non-Proliferation Treaty and is therefore not required to be in compliance with it. However, Israel has a site-specific safeguards agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) which gives the IAEA access to certain nuclear sites for monitoring.

Latin America

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has received concerning the level of UK diplomatic representation in Latin America; and if she will make a statement on future plans for such representation. [69222]

Mr. Hoon: In the last two years, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has received a number of representations from members of the public, hon. Members and noble Lords concerning the level of UK diplomatic representation in Latin America. These representations have focused particularly on the closure of the British embassies in Honduras (2003), El Salvador (2003), Nicaragua (2004) and Paraguay (2005).

On 28 March 2006, my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary (Mr. Straw) launched the White Paper "Active Diplomacy for a Changing World: The UK's International Priorities". This updates the December 2003 White Paper "UK International Priorities: a strategy for the FCO", and sets out the Government's international priorities for the next 10 years and the FCO's strategy for delivering them. In the new White Paper we make clear that the network must change and adapt to new opportunities, risks and priorities and that opening, closing and restructuring posts is essential to maintaining our global flexibility. The new White Paper can be found on the FCO website at: http://www.fco.gov.uk/Files/kfile/fullintpriorities 2006.pdf.

We therefore continue to monitor our overseas network to ensure that our resources are deployed in line with our priorities and that we provide the best possible value for money to the taxpayer.

Mikola Kalinin

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment of the human rights conditions in Belarus she has undertaken since the recent attack on Mikola Kalinin. [69473]

Mr. Hoon: The human rights situation in Belarus remains of concern. Following the flawed Presidential elections on 19 March the Belarusian regime has moved to crack-down on the opposition and to stifle any dissent. Demonstrations have been broken up and the main opposition leaders and their key supporters have been arrested or detained. The independent press remains muzzled or has been driven underground. Non-governmental organisations are subject to harassment and their funding severely curtailed. The attack on Mikola Kalinin, an activist on Roma rights, is an example of the atmosphere of intimidation that exists for those seeking to support the fundamental freedom and right of civil society to express its concerns.

We deplore this situation and the unjustified actions taken to prevent demonstrators, human rights campaigners and opposition leaders from exercising their right to peaceful assembly and freedom of expression. We support calls for the immediate and unconditional release of all those arrested for taking part in demonstrations and of those political prisoners arrested before the election. My right hon. Friend the then Minister for Europe (Douglas Alexander) did so in Vilnius on 4 May when he met the wives of the arrested opposition candidates, Milinkevich and Kazulin.

Morocco

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the aims and objectives are of UK relations with Morocco. [69933]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) the then Foreign Secretary visited Morocco on 13 February when he met King Mohammed VI and announced the creation of a bilateral Ministerial Dialogue Forum to take forward relations. We aim to strengthen the relationship, support the Moroccan government's plans for economic and human development, and strengthen our co-operation in areas of mutual interest and concern, including tackling the threat from international terrorism and managing the challenge presented by regional migration.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the Non-Proliferation Treaty. [69932]

Mr. Hoon: The UK believes the Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) remains the cornerstone of the nuclear non-proliferation regime and the framework for nuclear disarmament. As relevant today as it was in 1965, the NPT offers the best hope of achieving a world free from nuclear weapons. That is why the UK has consistently worked to sustain the objectives and strengthen all three pillars of the treaty.

Palestinian Authority

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions her Department has had on the possible resumption of EU aid payments to the Palestinian Authority; and if she will make a statement. [69830]

Mr. Hoon: We regularly have discussions with EU and Quartet partners (US, EU, UN and Russia) about assistance to the Palestinian people. We discussed funding issues at an informal meeting of international donors on 27 April in London, which all the Quartet members attended.

We fully support the position of the Quartet and the EU on direct assistance to the Palestinian Authority (PA). On 30 March the Quartet noted with concern that the new Palestinian Government's programme did not meet the principles which the Quartet set out on 30 January—a commitment to non-violence, recognition of Israel and acceptance of previous agreements including the roadmap. The 10 April General Affairs External Relations Council (GAERC) conclusions stated that "the EU is reviewing its assistance to the Palestinians against the new government's commitment to the aforementioned principles. The Council recalled that the absence of such commitment will inevitably have an effect on direct assistance to that government. The EU will continue to provide necessary assistance to meet the basic needs of the Palestinian population".

On 9 May the Quartet

"expressed its willingness to endorse a temporary international mechanism that is limited in scope and duration, operates with full transparency and accountability, and ensures direct delivery of assistance to the Palestinian people".

We fully support this, having presented similar proposals at the informal meeting of international donors at Canada House on 27 April. The EU has been tasked with developing this mechanism. We will work closely with EU Partners to achieve this. We expect further discussion at the GAERC on 15 May. This mechanism is one of a range of things that the UK is doing to support the Palestinian people. On 9 May the Quartet also noted its willingness to work towards the restoration of international assistance to the PA Government once they have committed to the three Quartet principles.

On 25 April the Department for International Development announced a £15 million payment to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency.

Prisoners (British Citizens)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British subjects are serving prison sentences in other EU countries. [69600]

Mr. Hoon: On 31 March 2006, British consular officials were aware of 739 British nationals detained in EU countries. The breakdown by country is shown as follows. These figures include detainees on remand, as well as those serving sentences. We do not maintain separate statistics on the numbers serving sentences.

Russia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Russian government on racism and racial violence. [69960]

Mr. Hoon: Ministers and staff at our Embassy in Moscow regularly raise human rights issues with the Russian government in the course of their continuous contacts. We also work closely with non-governmental organisations in Russia on this issue. Our Ambassador in Moscow most recently raised our concerns about racially motivated crimes in Russia with members of the Russian Presidential Administration in April 2006. Racism was also an important issue discussed at the EU/Russia Human Rights consultation in March 2006. The EU and Russian delegations taking part also undertook a study tour of the European Centre on Racism and Xenophobia prior to the human rights consultations.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the government of Russia on the use of torture in Chechnya. [69998]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Europe (Douglas Alexander) gave him on 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 312W. Following this answer, my predecessor had further discussions on the human rights situation in Chechnya with his Russian counterpart during his visit to Moscow in March 2006.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Alcohol-Related Conditions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 461W, on alcohol-related conditions, how many people were admitted to each acute hospital in Northern Ireland where the primary or secondary diagnosis was an alcohol-related condition in each of the last three years for which data are available. [69243]

Paul Goggins: The number of individuals admitted is not available. However, the number of admissions[1] to acute hospital in Northern Ireland where the primary or secondary diagnosis was for an alcohol-related condition for each of the last three financial years is available and is presented in the following table.

[1] Discharges and deaths are used as an approximation to admissions. It is possible that any individual could be admitted to hospital more than once in any year and will thus be counted more than once as an admission.

For this answer an acute hospital has been identified as one where services in the acute programme of care are provided.

Ballybeen

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much he expects Ballybeen to receive from the recently announced funding for deprived Loyalist and Unionist areas; and what impact he expects the funding to have. [69662]

Mr. Hanson: On 4 April, I brought forward the Renewing Communities Action Plan, a copy of which is available in the Library. Officials are currently working to implement the measures announced in the action plan, and I would anticipate that the residents of the Ballybeen area will benefit from a range of measures in the action plan.

The Government remain committed to tackling disadvantage and the Renewing Communities Action Plan is an indication of this commitment.

Blue Badge Scheme

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland were found to be abusing the blue badge scheme in 2005. [67583]

Paul Goggins: According to Police Service of Northern Ireland records, 14 fixed penalty notices (FPNs) were issued for 'wrongful use of a disabled person's badge' during 2005 while 2107 FPNs were issued for the offence of 'parking in a disabled person's parking space'.

Boundary Commission

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the expected timetable is of the Parliamentary Boundary Commission review of Northern Ireland's constituencies. [69267]

Mr. Hanson: Independent Assistant Commissioners appointed by the Secretary of State conducted three public local inquiries in September 2005 into the Commission's published Provisional Recommendations for Parliamentary constituencies. The Commission places importance on the reports of the assistant Commissioners and their recommendations and intend to make an announcement shortly having taken into account those recommendations and all the evidence available to them. The Commission is required to complete their review and submit a report with recommendations to the Secretary of State by June 2007.

Civil Service (Disciplinary Procedures)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff in the Northern Ireland Civil Service (a) have received a written warning, (b) have received a final written warning, (c) have reached the trigger points of a written warning but have not received a written warning and (d) have reached the trigger points of a final written warning but have not received a final written warning since the introduction of the Trigger Points Prompting Consideration of Warnings for Sickness Absence on 31 March 2004. [66686]

Mr. Hanson: The following table sets out the numbers of non-industrial and industrial staff who have received written and final written warnings in the two years since 31 March 2004.

Staff receiving a written warning and a final written warning

	Written warning	Final written warning
Non-industrial staff	1,759	207
Industrial staff	244	79

Full information on the number of staff who have reached the trigger points but not received a written warning is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. The number of non-industrial staff who reached a trigger point during the year 1 April 2004 to 31 March 2005 and did not receive a warning is 5,996.

It should be noted that when trigger points are reached, the absentee does not automatically receive a written warning. Trigger points are a mechanism used as a prompt for Departments to give consideration to the case. The Department will consider a range of factors—which is not exhaustive—that may be relevant to whether a warning should issue including:

nature of the illness;

frequency/pattern of absences;

prior attendance record;

any previous warnings and their proximity;

whether the officer is within their probation period;

circumstances relevant to the Disability Discrimination Act; pregnancy related absences occurring during the "protected period"; and any mitigating circumstances presented by the line manager or officer concerned.

Where appropriate, when considering the issue of a warning, the Department will also consult with the welfare officer and the occupational health service.

There are no specific trigger points for the consideration of a final written warning. Where there has been no significant or sustained improvement following the issue of a written warning, the Department will consider the case holistically, taking account of the factors as listed above.

Class Sizes

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average class size was in each (a) grammar school and (b) other secondary school in Northern Ireland in each of the past 10 years. [67816]

Maria Eagle: The requested information in respect of grammar and other secondary schools was not collected at the time, and any attempt to do so retrospectively would be problematic and could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Community Differentials

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to ensure a consistent approach to social considerations between the Procurement Board and the Strategic Investment Board. [66388]

Mr. Hanson: The Procurement Board has approved guidance for Northern Ireland Departments on the integration of social considerations into the procurement process. The Strategic Investment Board Limited operates within that guidance in providing advice and guidance to Departments on strategic projects. The Procurement Board has also established a working group to develop further guidance on integrating social policy considerations into Public-Private Partnership procurement and SIB Limited is represented on this group.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the 20 most deprived wards in Northern Ireland are; and what percentage of the population of each are of (a) Catholic and (b) Protestant background. [66393]

Mr. Hanson: The "Northern Ireland Multiple Deprivation Measure 2005" report details levels of deprivation in 890 Super Output Areas covering Northern Ireland. The 20 most deprived Super Output Areas in Northern Ireland along with information on community background levels of each area from the 2001 Census are given in the following table.

Conference Organisation Review

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who is conducting the recently announced review of the organisation of conferences requiring input from senior Northern Ireland civil servants; what the terms of reference for the review are; what stage the review has reached; and what discussions the review team have had with senior civil servants as part of the review. [67505]

Mr. Hanson: I am not aware of any recently announced review of the organisation of conferences requiring input from senior Northern Ireland civil servants.

Departmental Entertainment

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on entertainment by his Department in 2004-05; and how much of that sum is accounted for by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [69667]

Mr. Hain: The information requested by the hon. Lady is not available in the format requested. The information requested is captured under "hospitality", which includes food, alcohol and other related costs. The amount spent on hospitality by the Northern Ireland Office, excluding its Agencies and NDPBs, in 2004-05 was £258,436.

All expenditure of official hospitality is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on principles set out in Government Accounting. The level of hospitality must be defined, and a broad outline of cost and numbers attending must be provided on all occasions before authorisation. Expenditure should be kept as low as possible, compatible with the occasion and the standing of guests.

A necessary pre-condition for any entertainment or hospitality to be financed from NIO funds is that it will be in the direct interests of the Northern Ireland Office. While one cannot always guarantee that the benefit will be achieved, that must be both the intention and the reasonable expectation.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many days sick leave were taken (a) in total and (b) as a result of stress in (i) each Department in Northern Ireland and (ii) the Northern Ireland office in each of the last three years, broken down by grade. [68006]

Mr. Hanson: Information reflecting the total number of days sickness absence and those attributable to psychiatric/psychological illnesses for non-industrial grades will be placed in the Library.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in (a) each Northern Ireland department and (b) the Northern Ireland Office have been disciplined for using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years. [68008]

Mr. Hanson: Only one officer in the core Northern Ireland Civil Service Departments and the NIO has been disciplined in the last five years for accessing premium rate numbers using a work telephone to access a premium rate number.

The officer is an employee of DARD and was disciplined in 2001.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in (a) each Department in Northern Ireland and (b) the Northern Ireland Office have been (i) disciplined and (ii) dismissed for inappropriate use of the internet while at work in each of the last five years. [68009]

Mr. Hanson: The number of staff in the core NICS Departments and the Northern Ireland Office who have been disciplined for inappropriate use of the internet while at work during the period 2001 to date is set out in the following table:

Department	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006

One officer in the NICS Core Departments and NIO has been dismissed for inappropriate use of the internet while at work during the period 2001 to date. This officer, who was an employee of DARD, was dismissed in 2004.

DXA Scanning

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time was in Northern Ireland in March (a) 2003, (b) 2004, (c) 2005 and (d) 2006 for a bone density (DXA) scan. [69270]

Paul Goggins: The following table shows the average waiting time for a bone density (DXA) scan in all Trusts which provide this service in Northern Ireland.

Average waiting time for a bone density (DXA) scan

HSS Trust	2003	2004	2005	2006

In addition to the above, the Royal Belfast hospital for Sick Children (RBHSC) provide bone density (DXA) scans. There is no waiting time for these scans as patients are given an appointment or seen on the day.

Essential Car Users (Health Service)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what categories of Health Service employees have qualified as essential car users in each year since 2000; and what mileage allowance was payable to each category of essential car user in each year. [69280]

Paul Goggins: Community Nurses, Midwives, Health Visitors, Social Workers, Chief Executives, Senior Executives and Senior Managers working in the Health and Personal Social Services are classified as essential car users. In determining the level of mileage allowance there are four options available to an HPSS employer: a leased car; a regular user allowance; standard mileage rate, or public transport rate depending on certain conditions being met. The mileage rates payable under each category have been in force since April 2000 and are as set out below:

Regular user allowances.

Regular user allowances are paid to employees who are designated by their employer as an essential car user, but it is uneconomic or not possible to offer a leased car, and where in the course of their employment they are required to travel either:

i. An average of more than 3,500 miles a year or

ii. An average of at least 1,250 miles a year and uses their car on average three days a week or spend 50% of their time on travel or

iii. An average of at least 1,000 miles a year and use their car on average four days a week.

The current rates payable for a regular user are in the following table:

Engine capacity	Up to 1000cc	1001cc to 1500cc	Over 1500cc
Lump sum	£508	£626	£760
Up to 9000 miles	27p	33.5p	40p
Thereafter	16.2p	18.3p	20.5p

Standard rates.

Standard mileage rates are paid to employees who use their own vehicle for official business but do not satisfy the criterion for a regular user. The current rates payable for standard mileage are as in the following table:

Engine Capacity	Up to 1000cc	1001cc to 1500cc	Over 1500cc
Up to 3,500 miles	34p	43p	53p
Thereafter	16.2p	18.3p	20.5p

Public transport mileage rate.

Public transport mileage is payable at 23p per mile where the employer deems that standard or regular user rates do not apply.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans the Government have to change the mileage allowance payable to each category of essential car users in the health service; and if he will make a statement. [69281]

Paul Goggins: The Executive of the NHS staff council will undertake a review of all mileage rates payable to NHS staff as part of their work programme for the 2006-07 year. The outcome of this review will be applicable to health and personal social services staff in Northern Ireland.

EU Funding

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much EU income was secured in each of the last 10 financial years for projects emanating from Northern Ireland. [68064]

Mr. Hanson: Details of EU income by structural fund are shown in the following table:

Notes:
1. The question has been interpreted as referring to structural funds and the answer refers to these only.
2. Amounts for 2005-06 financial year are estimated and subject to confirmation.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much EU money was (a) allocated and (b) expended in respect of each source of EU funding in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 financial years. [68065]

Mr. Hanson: Details of each of the EU Structural Fund financial allocations and expenditure are shown in the following Tables A and B showing details by Structural Fund .

The question has been interpreted as referring to Structural Funds and the answer refers to these only.

The allocation amounts to Northern Ireland are made by the Commission in Euro by calendar year. These have been converted to financial years assuming an even spend over the four quarters and to Sterling at a notional rate of 1.55 = £1.00

Allocations for the Interreg III cross-border programme have been omitted, as these allocations are not made separately by jurisdiction.

Amounts for 2005-06 financial year are estimated outturn and subject to confirmation.

Film and Television Commission

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the recent comments of the Northern Ireland Film and Television Commission on the quantity of drama based in Northern Ireland produced by the BBC. [69264]

Maria Eagle: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and I both consider that we need to have more film and television drama produced in Northern Ireland and are directly involved in initiatives with the commission and a range of broadcasters that aim to increase the opportunities for actors, writers, directors and recording crew in the region.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many flags have been taken down since the protocol on flags was agreed between the Police Service of Northern Ireland and departments; and if he will list the flags concerned, broken down by type. [66407]

Paul Goggins: The number of flags removed is shown in the tables. The protocol requires that numbers of flags are recorded as per the categories shown. The type of flag is not recorded.

Foreign Prisoners

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation has taken place between his Department and the Home Office in relation to the deportation and removal of foreign national prisoners announced on 3 May. [69296]

Paul Goggins: Officials from the Northern Ireland Prison Service have been in regular contact with senior management in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate since the announcements in relation to the deportation and removal of foreign national prisoners in England and Wales on 26 April.

Two senior IND officials visited Belfast.on 5 May for detailed discussions with the Northern Ireland Prison Service. Instructions have been issued to Northern Ireland Prison Service governors requiring them to ensure that the IND is appropriately notified by the Prison Service in relation to unconvicted remand and sentenced prisoners who declare themselves to be foreign nationals (excluding Irish nationals).

House Values

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate how many homes in Northern Ireland have been valued at over £1 million. [67060]

Mr. Hanson: The Valuation and Lands Agency is completing a revaluation of all domestic properties in Northern Ireland. Valuations for this purpose are subject to certain statutory assumptions. The valuation date for this revaluation is 1 January 2005 and the number of houses valued at over £1 million, as at that date, is 145.

The Agency is now carrying out a quality assurance "value review" process that may result in change to some property value assessments. The total number of properties in this category may therefore change slightly, up or down.

Independent Monitoring Commission

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 485W, on the Independent Monitoring Commission (IMC)' whether when meeting the IMC he discussed its definition of criminality. [69240]

Paul Goggins: At meetings with the Commissioners of the Independent Monitoring Commission (IMC), the Secretary of State has discussed a range of matters connected with its remit as defined in the agreement that established the IMC. It is not Government policy to disclose the nature or details of such discussions.

Infection Control

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funding was allocated by the Department for Health, Social Services and Public Safety for the implementation of the action plan for the prevention and control of health care-associated infections in Northern Ireland between 2006 and 2009 in each (a) health board area and (b) health trust; and if he will make a statement. [69522]

Paul Goggins: The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety is allocating 400,000 to health and social services board on a capitation basis in 2006-07 for elements of its action plan "Changing the Culture", such as mandatory staff training and a hand hygiene campaign. The eastern health and social services board will receive £160,000, the northern health and social services board £97,000, the southern health and social services board £74,000, and the western health and social services board £69,000. A further sum of £150,000 will be made available in each of the next three years to health trusts for regional surveillance co-ordination and enhanced infection control arrangements etc. Allocations will be determined later this year on the advice of the new regional infection prevention and control steering group. Boards and trusts are also being required to reprioritise resources to ensure the action plan's full implementation.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by his Department in each of the last five years. [67127]

Paul Goggins: For the last financial year 2005-06, the total fuel cost for ministerial vehicles in Northern Ireland was £10,159.16. Figures for the previous years would require a manual trawl of records and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Residences

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the running costs were of each Government-owned residence used by Northern Ireland Ministers in each of the last five years. [69659]

Mr. Hain: Hillsborough Castle is a government owned residence, and when in Northern Ireland I reside there. The facilities at the Castle are also used to provide official hospitality and overnight accommodation for members of the Royal Family, visiting dignitaries and diplomats. Other activities at the Castle include departmental meetings, the annual garden party, and citizenship ceremonies. In addition to its use by the Northern Ireland Office and other Government Departments, charities and local community groups can request to use the facilities, generally for fund raising purposes, and the Castle and grounds are open at certain times of the year for guided tours.

The total cost of running Hillsborough Castle in each of the last five years was:

2005-06	1,726,173.74
2004-05	1,426,105.94
2003-04	1,334,167.48
2002-03	1,451,707.46
2001-02	1,205,796.11

These costs include the maintenance of the listed building and grounds; the security of the castle and its grounds, and that of Ministers, officials and visitors while present at the castle. It also includes the cost of hosting the events listed above, as well as catering, hospitality and administration.

Party funding

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list leaders of political parties in Northern Ireland to whom he has written seeking their views on the funding of political parties; on what date those letters were sent; and what responses have been received. [68780]

Mr. Hanson: The Secretary of State wrote to the following leaders of the political parties in Northern Ireland on 30 March to seek their views on the Lord Chancellor's proposals to regulate the reporting of loans to political parties:

Sir Reg Empey, MLA, Ulster Unionist Party
Mark Durkan, MP, MLA, SDLP
Gerry Adams, MP, MLA, Sinn Fein
David Ford, MLA, Alliance Party
Dr. Ian Paisley, MP, MLA, Democratic Unionist Party
Robert McCartney, MLA, UKUP
David Ervine, MLA, Progressive Unionist Party.

Sinn Fein are the only party, to date, who have replied.

Police

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost was of (a) training and (b) recruiting police constables in Northern Ireland in the last year for which figures are available. [69462]

Paul Goggins: In respect of (a) the cost of training police constables in Northern Ireland:

I am advised there were 10 training courses in the financial year 2005-06, with a total cost of £3,311,081.15. Each course had 44 students with a course duration of 105 days. The cost per student in that year was £7,525.18.

In respect of (b) recruiting police constables in Northern Ireland:

I am advised that the recruiting costs for year 2005-06 are still being processed; therefore an accurate figure cannot be presented at this time.

The total recruitment cost for the financial year 2004-05 was £5,071,988. This figure represents regular police trainee recruitment.

Road Safety

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police vehicles in Northern Ireland were involved in road traffic accidents in each of the last three years. [69225]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is provided in the following table.

Child Protection

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people resident in Northern Ireland are on the Register of Sex Offenders; and in how many of those cases the police do not know the offender's current residential address. [67658]

Mr. Hanson: On 28 April 2006, 644 people in Northern Ireland were subject to the notification requirements of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 and in 17 of these cases the police do not have a current residential address. This represents a compliance rate of over 97 per cent.

In line with the Police Service of Northern Ireland's zero tolerance policy on breaches of the notification requirements of the Sexual Offences Act, all offenders who do not comply are pursued and reported to the Public Prosecution Service with a view to prosecution.

Single Parents

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many single parents in each constituency in Northern Ireland are claiming state benefits; and how much was paid to them in the last period for which figures are available. [69651]

Mr. Hanson: The following table shows the number of lone parents of working age claiming at least one key benefit by parliamentary constituency. The information is taken at May 2005.

Notes:
1. Key benefits are jobseeker's allowance, incapacity benefit, severe disablement allowance, disability living allowance and income support. Pension credit for males aged 60 to 64.
2. Partner and dependent details were not available for all benefits.

In addition to the benefits mentioned above, single parents can also receive tax credits and child benefit. Although not social security benefits, they offer financial support to in-work families or families with children. Figures at a parliamentary constituency level are not available but as of April 2006 34,500 in-work single parents in Northern Ireland were receiving tax credit.

A breakdown of lone parents receiving child benefit is unavailable.

Student Finances

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether changes are proposed in the eligibility criteria for (a) student funding support and (b) student loans for graduate students wishing to undertake a further degree course; and if he will make a statement. [69685]

Maria Eagle: Government's student finance priority is to help undergraduate students, particularly the less well off, to achieve a primary degree.

Consequently, graduate students undertaking a further degree course are not eligible for fee support and maintenance grants and there are no proposed changes to these eligibility criteria.

In the case of student loans for maintenance, from academic year 2006-07 under revised previous study rules, these will be available only to graduate students who do not have an honours degree, except for certain designated courses, for example medicine, dentistry and social work, and on a basis that takes account of time spent on previous study.

Travellers' Camps

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to tackle unauthorised travellers' camps on commercial and private lands. [69665]

Mr. Hanson: The Unauthorised Encampments (Northern Ireland) Order 2005, which was made at Privy Council on 19 July 2005, gives the police greater powers to deal with unauthorised encampments. However the order cannot be fully effective until sufficient sites for Travellers are available. Responsibility for providing such sites falls to the Housing Executive and I am pressing it to ensure the necessary sites are available as soon as possible. I anticipate that five sites will be operational by the summer by which time I will review the situation with a view to enabling the necessary provisions. I believe this represents a fair and balanced approach.

Wind Turbines

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from health trusts in Northern Ireland wishing to provide electricity generated by wind turbines on their sites. [69192]

Paul Goggins: Government are fully committed to sustainable development in Northern Ireland as demonstrated by the Sustainable Development Strategy for Northern Ireland launched on 9 May by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. The strategy places a statutory duty on all Northern Ireland Government Departments and district councils to act in a matter which contributes to sustainable development.

In addition, health and social services trusts are already required to consider options for sustainable energy including wind turbine generation, as part of the business case process, for new capital developments. Currently, wind turbine electricity generation is being considered for the Downe and South West hospital developments.

The United Hospitals Health and Social Services Trust has installed and is successfully operating a wind turbine electricity generator on the Antrim hospital site.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much Antrim hospital has saved in electricity costs as a result of the wind turbine in operation at the site. [69193]

Paul Goggins: The Antrim hospital of the United Hospitals health and social services trust has reduced its payments to the supply authority by a total of £62,437.26, excluding VAT, for the period February 2005 to April 2006 inclusive, as a result of the investment in the wind turbine.

HEALTH

Abortion/Assisted Suicide

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department's policy on (a) abortion and (b) assisted suicide was devised; which organisations and individuals were consulted; and if she will make a statement. [66862]

Caroline Flint: Parliament has decided that abortions may lawfully be carried out in the circumstances specified in the Abortion Act 1967, as amended by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990.

The Department most recently set out its policy on sexual health, including abortion, in the "National Strategy for Sexual Health and HIV" in 2001, and associated documents, which are available from the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk. In addition, recommended quality standards for the provision of abortion services are included in "Recommended Standards for Sexual Health Services", published in March 2005. The strategy was subject to a public consultation exercise.

Assisting a person in committing suicide is unlawful under the Suicide Act 1961 and is subject to a penalty of up to 14 years imprisonment. The Government have no plans to change this legislation. Any proposals to change the law would be dealt with as a matter of conscience.

Animal-based Insulin

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to Question 53473, on animal-based insulin, tabled by the hon. Member for St. Albans for answer on 27 February. [60859]

Andy Burnham: A reply was given on 23 March.

BCG Vaccinations

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 25 April 2006, Official Report, columns 1069-70W, on BCG vaccinations, by what criteria the annual allocation to primary care trusts in relation to the funding of the Bacille Calmette Guerin vaccination against tuberculosis is made; what allocation was given to Wandsworth primary care trust in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07; and if she will make a statement. [68106]

Andy Burnham: The funding for Bacille Camette Guerin (BCG) vaccination is included in the unified primary care trust (PCT) revenue allocations that cover the full range of services commissioned by PCTs. It is for PCTs to decide how their allocations can be used in the most effective way.

Binge Drinking

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with the Portman group on appropriate actions to reduce the incidence of binge drinking; and if she will make a statement. [67326]

Caroline Flint: The Government are working with alcohol producers at a national level to increase corporate social responsibility, which includes the promotion of sensible drinking and actions to reduce the incidence of binge drinking.

The industry launched its social responsibility standards in November 2005 and the Government have been working with the Portman Group and other industry stakeholders on the implementation of these standards.

In addition, the Government have been working with the Portman Group and other stakeholders to establish a national producers' fund, as set out in the alcohol harm reduction strategy. This is a fund from the alcohol industry to pay for new schemes to tackle alcohol related harm including the incidence of binge drinking.

Branded Drug Supplies

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact on patient care and treatment of the adequacy of the supply of branded drugs in England. [67169]

Andy Burnham: No overall assessment has been made. However, the Department works closely with the pharmaceutical industry to resolve medicine supply problems, to help ensure that patients continue to receive the medicines they need.

Care Homes

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) nursing and (b) residential homes there were in (i) England and (ii) Beverley and Holderness in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement; [66522]

Information for 2002 is not available. The Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) produces data on the number of care homes and places registered as at 31 March each year, beginning with 2003. There are some definitional differences between these data and those for years up to 2001.

I understand from the chair of CSCI that the number of nursing and residential homes and registered places in England for 2003 onwards is as shown in table two.

Childhood Obesity

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with (a) the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and (b) Sport England about programmes to reduce the levels of childhood obesity; and what the outcome was. [69920]

Caroline Flint: Meetings between the Department and the Department for Culture, Media and Sport to discuss programmes to reduce the levels of childhood obesity have taken place in November 2005 and March 2006. The aim of these meeting were to create a shared understanding of the relationship between key factors influencing levels of obesity and their elative importance and to build on this evidence to identify effective interventions.

No recent meetings have taken place with Sport England.

Continuing Care Costs

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what protection she plans to put in place for those who may lose their entitlement to NHS funded continuing care under the new National Framework; [67941]

(2) when she expects to publish the National Framework for Continuing Care. [67942]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We expect public consultation on the national framework for NHS Continuing Healthcare to begin in the near future and will last for three months. It would be inappropriate to give any target date for publication of the final national framework until the consultation has been completed.

The national framework will not change the existing legal basis for the provision of NHS Continuing Healthcare. Fully funded NHS Continuing Healthcare will continue to be provided for all those individuals whose primary need is a health need. This is based on an assessment of need and if individuals' needs have not changed there is no reason to expect them to lose their entitlement to NHS Continuing Healthcare. However, it would be inappropriate to give a guarantee that every individual would continue to receive NHS Continuing Healthcare after re-assessment if their needs have changed.

Dentistry

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to commission new dental services in the Eastbourne area. [65497]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Since 2003-04, the Department has invested an additional £250 million in national health service dentistry and supported the NHS in recruiting the equivalent of an extra 1,459 dentists to improve patient access. The Government are also funding an additional 170 training places per year from 2005.

From April 2006, the NHS implemented major reforms to dentistry to build upon this success. New contracts for dentists have abolished the traditional fee per item remuneration system and support new ways of working with a greater focus on preventative care. Evidence from personal dental services pilot schemes is that these new ways of working free up significant capacity that dentists can then use in part to see a greater range of patients.

Dentists' current NHS earnings will be protected for at least three years and there will be a 5 per cent, reduction in the courses of treatment that general dental services practitioners are expected to carry out each year.

From April 2006, primary care trusts (PCTs), including Eastbourne Downs PCT, will also have devolved responsibility and ring-fenced budgets for commissioning primary dental services. This means that, if a dentist leaves the NHS or reduces their NHS commitment, the resources stay with the PCT to be re-invested in local dental services.

Eastbourne Downs PCT has commissioned replacement NHS capacity in Eastbourne valued at £450,000.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that NHS dental treatment is available to all (a) children and (b) residents of Eastbourne and Willingdon. [65498]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Since 2003-04, the Department has invested an additional £250 million in national health service dentistry and supported the NHS in recruiting the equivalent of an extra 1,459 dentists to improve patient access. The Government are also funding an additional 170 training places per year from 2005.

From April 2006, primary care trusts (PCTs), including Eastbourne Downs PCT, have devolved responsibility and ring-fenced budgets for commissioning primary dental services. This means that if a dentist leaves the NHS or reduces their NHS commitment, the resources stay with the PCT to be re-invested in local dental services.

Eastbourne Downs PCT has commissioned replacement NHS capacity in Eastbourne valued at £450,000. The PCT has retained NHS treatment in for children in all but two of the practices that have rejected the NHS contract.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists have (a) signed and (b) refused to sign the new contract for NHS dentistry in the primary care trusts which serve Portsmouth; and if she will make a statement. [66418]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract and the number who have not signed is not available centrally. We do however have some provisional information that covers contracts. A contract may be for more than one dentist so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level.

Provisional management estimates show that in the Portsmouth city primary care trust area:

Contracts signed		Contracts still in discussion		Contracts rejected			Contracts signed
A: Number	B: Approximate unites of dental activity (UDA) value	C: Number	D: Approximate UDA value	E: Number	F: Approximate UDA value	% UDAs	G: Number signed without dispute	H: Number signed in dispute	% Disputes
30	283,111	0	0	4	26,273	8.5	14	16	53

Note:
The information provided is not validated. It represents a snapshot of the position in early April.

A contract may be for either a practice or an individual dentist.

Primary care trusts (PCT) are working with dentists to resolve as many disputes as possible locally.

The majority of NHS dentists in Portsmouth have accepted the new NHS contract and as a consequence the loss is relatively minimal. However, the PCT will be using the funding available to purchase additional units of dental activity from other interested dentists in the short term to seek to maintain levels of dentistry.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on NHS dentistry in the Barnet primary care trust area in 1997; how much has been allocated for 2006-07; and if she will make a statement. [64706]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The main element of national health service dental services are the primary dental care services previously provided by dentists working within the general dental service (GDS) or personal dental service (PDS) pilots.

The latest available data shows that the net and gross expenditure on these services within the area of the Barnet primary care trust (PCT) in 1997-98 were £5.701 million and £7.207 million respectively[1,2]. The difference between net and gross expenditure is the contribution to costs from dental charges collected directly from patients.

A net funding allocation for 2006-07 of £11.55 million has been awarded to Barnet PCT for local commissioning of equivalent NHS primary dental services. The associated indicative gross budget, taking into account expected patient charge income, is £13.787 million. PCTs may direct additional funding to dentistry from their general NHS resources if they judge this to be a necessary and appropriate local priority.

Expenditure figures for 1997-98 do not capture certain elements of the cost of primary dental care services which are reflected in the 2006-07 dental allocations.

[1] 1997-98 expenditure figures are drawn from The Information Centre for health and social care and the Business Services Authority. Gross GDS payments include adult fees (including item of service and continuing care payments), child fees (including item of service and capitation payments), commitment payments and point of treatment check payment training (in 2001 only), seniority payments, maternity/paternity/adoptive leave payments, long term sick leave payments, continuing professional development allowances including travel hours, reimbursement of business rates, vocational training grants and clinical audit payments.

The following costs are excluded from this data:

employer's superannuation costs, vocational trainee salaries and National Insurance contribution costs, clinical audit convenors, clinical audit secretarial support costs and travel expenses, and costs associated with any salaried general dental practitioners and emergency dental services.

[2] Payments are assigned to areas on the basis of practice postcode data.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people newly qualified as dentists in each of the last five years; and how much the training cost (a) per dentist and (b) in total in each year. [68936]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of graduates from dentistry courses leading to professional registration, in England, is held centrally only from 2002 which is shown in the table.

Dentistry graduates

	Number
2002-03	553
2003-04	579
2004-05	605

Note:
HESA do not collect data on dentistry students at Eastman Dental Hospital and Defence Dental Agency Training Establishment.
Source:
Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) student record.

We estimate that in 2005-06 the average cost of training a dentist was £160,000 over the five-year course or £32,000 per year. On this basis, the total cost of training the 3,500 students in dental schools in England in 2005-06 was £112 million. Comparable information is not available centrally for earlier years, but we estimate that these costs have moved broadly in line with inflation over the last five years.

Departmental Management Structure

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will publish the conclusions of the review of her Department's top management structure. [69836]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The conclusions of the review of the Department's top management structure were presented and circulated to staff in January. The presentation, staff bulletin and a supplementary question and answer pack have been available on request from the Department. Copies have now been placed in the Library.

Disability Equipment (Internet)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regulations are in place to ensure appropriate risk assessments are carried out on disability equipment sold on the internet. [68026]

Andy Burnham: New disability equipment such as mobility aids, environmental controls, communication aids, posture management, pressure management and moving and handling systems which are classed as medical devices and have been placed on the European market since June 1998 are required to meet the Medical Devices Directive 93/42/EEC. This directive is brought into United Kingdom law under the Medical Device Regulations 2002 (amended 2003). Such medical devices must carry the CE mark indicating conformity to the directive.

Before applying the CE mark the manufacturer must ensure that all risks are removed or minimised and any residual risks constitute acceptable risks when weighed against the benefit to the user and are compatible with a high level of protection of safety. If it is not possible to reduce these risks by means of inherently safe design or construction whilst providing benefit to the user then the manufacturer must inform users of the residual risks by means of labelling on the device and/or warnings contained in the user information.

On behalf of the Secretary of State for Health, the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) acts as the competent authority for the UK Medical Device Regulations. The MHRA has a specialist unit covering all aspects of assistive technology which includes disability equipment. Proactive and reactive investigations involving medical devices including assistive technology are carried out. Where appropriate the MHRA also works with or refers cases to other regulatory bodies in the United Kingdom such as Trading Standards and also liaises as necessary with other competent authorities within Europe and also with the United States of America, Canada, and Australia.

The requirement for all medical devices placed on the market in the United Kingdom to carry an appropriate CE marking applies equally to products advertised on the internet, regardless of their country of origin. However, the regulation of the sale of medical devices available on the internet is more problematic than with sales from more conventional outlets. The MHRA advises the public to be wary when purchasing any medicinal or healthcare product from an unknown source, such as the internet, as it is not possible to guarantee the efficacy or safety of such items.

Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 6 March 2006, Official Report, column 1203W, on Duchenne muscular dystrophy, what assessment has been made of the progress of research into Duchenne muscular dystrophy; and what actions have followed from the research. [67892]

Andy Burnham: The £1.6 million, four-year programme (2005 to 2008) of research towards a phase one clinical trial for duchenne muscular dystrophy that the Department has been supporting is administered through the company LGC Ltd. Progress is assessed through quarterly reports, and site visits by LGC Ltd. The programme started in January 2005, and the most recent site visit, in February 2006, found the research to be progressing well, with the first-year objectives completed, and the phase one clinical trial predicted to take place towards the end of 2008.

European Health Insurance Card

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 18 April, Official Report, columns 388-9W, on the European health insurance card, how many information leaflets were distributed; and what the total cost was of the awareness campaign. [65757]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The publicity campaign took place over two years at a total cost of £2.4million. The following leaflets were produced:

- 13.6 million copies of the standard the Department's booklet, 'Health Advice for Travellers' containing advice about the European health insurance card (EHIC) arrangements.
- 30 million leaflets specifically about changes related to the introduction of the EHIC.

Free Diagnostic Testing

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the NHS hospitals in London offering free diagnostic testing to GP practices; and what the estimated financial value is of this offer. [67382]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not collected centrally.

It is for local national health service organisations in conjunction with the primary care trusts and strategic health authorities to plan and develop services according to the needs of their local communities.

Herceptin

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the prescription of Herceptin to patients with early stage breast cancer. [67960]

Andy Burnham: The position on the prescription and provision of Herceptin for HER2 positive early stage breast cancer, ahead of a decision on licensing or National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) guidance, remains as set out in the NHS chief executive's bulletin: Issue 294, 4-10 November 2005. This is that:

It is down to individual clinicians to decide whether to prescribe Herceptin for a woman who has tested HER2 positive after discussions with the woman about potential risks and taking into account her medical history.

Primary care trusts (PCTs) should not refuse to fund Herceptin solely on the grounds of its cost.

PCTs should not rule out treatments on principle but consider individual circumstances.

This policy does not in any way replace either the licensing process or the NICE appraisal process.

Independent Treatment Centres

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been treated by Barlborough Independent Treatment Centre since its inception; and how many of these patients lived in Bassetlaw. [69825]

Ms Rosie Winterton: At the end of March this year 3,678 patients had been treated at the Barlborough NHS Treatment Centre. Information on the number who lived in Bassetlaw is not held centrally.

Isolation Wards

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of the availability of isolation facilities in NHS hospitals. [67550]

Andy Burnham: Full information on the availability of isolation facilities is not available but Departmental guidance is that new buildings should ideally contain at least 50 per cent. of their beds in single rooms. NHS Estates published guidance in February 2005 to assist local planning for isolation facilities and the Department is considering the need for guidance on ventilated isolation facilities.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on the role of the national myalgic encephalomyelitis observatory; [70195]

(2) what funding has been provided by (a) central Government and (b) statutory bodies for the development and support of the national myalgic encephalomyelitis observatory. [70196]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Action on myalgic encephalomyelitis (ME) has received over £500,000 funding from the Big Lottery Fund to establish a national ME/chronic fatigue syndrome (CFS) research observatory. No funding has been provided by central Government or statutory bodies to support this research observatory.

This research observatory will gather comprehensive data on a range of important clinical and social factors which affect those living with ME/CFS.

The three-year project, which involves teams from the University of East Anglia, the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, and the Hull-York Medical School, aims to increase the availability of information about the disease and reduce the stigmatisation which can arise from a lack of understanding of this distressing disease.

MHRA

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many changes to labelling applications were considered by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency in (a) 2003-04 and (b) 2004-05; and what the longest time taken to process an application was in each year; [67300]

(2) what representations she has received on the business impact of the time taken by the MHRA to process product licence and labelling applications; and if she will make a statement. [67264]

Andy Burnham: The table indicates the number of applications received by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) in respect of proposed changes to medicines labelling and/or patient information leaflets during the years cited. It also sets out the percentage of applicants notified of the outcome of the submission within 30, 60 and 90 calendar days of receipt of a valid submission. The longest time taken to progress an individual case in the years cited was 128 and 156 calendar days respectively.

	2003-04	2004-05
Applications received	1,537	1,785
Percentage of cases where outcome notified within 30 days	36	42
Percentage of cases where outcome notified within 60 days	57	56
Percentage of cases where outcome notified within 90 days	99	99

The MHRA is in regular discussion with industry associations and individual companies about the processes in place to assess applications and the time scales involved. I am aware that its performance regarding licence and variation approval times during the past months has been affected by a combination of adverse factors including increases in work load, difficulties in recruiting professional assessment staff, especially medically qualified staff, and transitional implementation problems during the introduction of a new information management system. The MHRA is taking a number of steps to improve service levels. These include organisational restructuring, additional recruitment, re-training of staff, voluntary schemes for extended working hours, and information system performance enhancements. The MHRA's new information management system will provide the potential for greater efficiency within the MHRA and also provide a number of additional benefits to the industry, such as the ability to make electronic applications, and track progress of outstanding applications.

The MHRA is committed to developing regulation which is proportionate, accountable, consistent, transparent and targeted and is currently considering how unnecessary regulatory burdens, primarily in relation to over the counter (OTC) medicines, could be eased. To take this important initiative forward, the MHRA is leading the better regulation of OTC medicines initiative. As part of this process, industry has been asked to quantify the business impact of the time taken to respond to applications for a change to product information and this will inform proposals for change.

Mental Health Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were admitted to adult acute mental wards in 2005-06. [69353]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information is not available in the form requested.

In the period from 1 April to 31 December 2005 in England, there were 1,818 hospital occupied bed days spent by patients aged under 16 on admission on adult psychiatric wards. The equivalent figure for patients aged 16 or 17 on admission was 25,045.

Ministerial Statement

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the evidential basis was for the statement she made on BBC Radio 5 Live that the national health service had had its best year ever; and if she will make a statement. [66863]

Andy Burnham: Over the past year, the national health service has continued to deliver improved services. Hospital waiting lists are lower than ever, over half a million down from their peak, and there is now a maximum wait of six months for an inpatient appointment, from over 18 months in 2000, and 13 weeks for an outpatient consultation—it was over a year in 2000.

Patients are also treated more promptly within the hospital—more than 98 per cent. of patients are now seen and treated within four hours of arrival in accidents and emergency.

The NHS is delivering cancer services more quickly, to more people than ever before, and over 99 per cent. of people with suspected cancer are seen by a specialist within two weeks of being referred urgently by their general practitioner (GP)—this figure was 63 per cent. in 1997. In addition, over 96 per cent. of patients receive treatment within one month of being diagnosed with cancer.

Patients now have more choice and involvement in their own care—hospital appointments are booked for the convenience of the patient and, since 1 January 2006, eligible patients needing planned hospital care are being offered a choice of at least four providers, where this is clinically appropriate, at the point of GP referral to consultant-led first outpatient appointments.

Multiple Sclerosis

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to change his proposals for increasing inspection fees for charitable multiple sclerosis treatment centres offering oxygen therapies following the review by the Healthcare Commission; and if he will make a statement. [69395]

Andy Burnham: The Healthcare Commission recently consulted on its proposals for a revised fees scheme for registered private and voluntary healthcare establishments, including those providing hyperbaric oxygen therapy. Their proposals are being considered and the commission will publish their revised scale of fees in the near future.

NHS Finance

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average NHS expenditure per head was in the hospitals located in (a) Bexley care trust's area of responsibility and (b) London in the most recent period for which figures are available. [67381]

Andy Burnham: In 2004-05 primary care trust expenditure per head by unweighted head of population for Bexley care trust was £1,133.12. Average for all London primary care trusts was £1,320.37.

NHS Hospitals

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) name, (b) address and (c) post code is of each NHS hospital in England; and which of these are run by foundation trusts. [70030]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not centrally available.

Names, addresses and post codes for individual hospitals can be found on the following website: www.nhs.uk/England/Hospitals/Default.cmsx

NHS IT

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the McKinsey Report on an NHS IT scheme. [66735]

Caroline Flint: A report completed for the Department by McKinsey and Company which considers the scope and uses of the new national health service information technology systems, and in particular their application to clinical research in the United Kingdom, was published in December 2005 and can be found on the following website:

www.ukcrc.org/publications/reports.aspx.

NHS Logistics Procurement

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he plans to get parliamentary approval for the outsourcing of NHS logistics procurement and supply chain services. [67973]

Andy Burnham: There are no plans to do so.

The plan to outsource the NHS Logistics Authority was set out in "Reconfiguring the Department of Health's Arm's Length Bodies" in July 2004 and an advertisement was placed in the Official Journal of the European Union in August 2004.

I have received representations from Members of Parliament with a local interest to which I have responded. These have included meetings and debating the matter in Westminster Hall in July last year.

NHS Reorganisation

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to the statement of the Minister of State of 7 February 2006, Official Report, columns 806-07 on NHS reorganisation, what progress has been made in developing the detail of a commissioning proposal; what the timetable is for its development and implementation; who is responsible for its development; and if she will make a statement on the steps being taken to ensure equal access to a choice of providers for patients from the Isle of Wight; [64809]

(2) when she will provide a substantive response to Question 64809, tabled by the hon. Member for the Isle of Wight on 18 April, on NHS reorganisation. [70140]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 24 April 2006]: As part of the programme of work set out in "Health Reform in England: update and next steps" (December 2005), the Department is developing a new system of commissioning health services, which will operate as a partnership between general practitioner (GP) practices, primary care trusts (PCTs) and local authorities.

The commissioning policy framework will be published in the summer of 2006. This work is being led by the Department's policy and strategy directorate, with the support and advice of an external reference group drawn from a wide range of stakeholder and partner organisations.

PCTs are responsible for commissioning the choices offered at referral in consultation with patient groups. The Isle of Wight PCT has commissioned services from seven providers, four of which can be reached within approximately one hour 30 minutes travelling time. Some patients will need assistance with travel to hospital. PCTs are responsible for ensuring that there is provision of ambulance services, which could include patient transport services, to such extent as they consider necessary to meet all reasonable requirements. It is, therefore, for the local NHS to decide who provides patient transport services for eligible patients in their area. In addition, patients on a low income may be entitled to reimbursement of their travel costs under the hospital travel cost scheme. This applies to any of the hospitals on their PCT's choice menu.

"Our Health, Our Care, Our Say" set the direction for designing services which will provide patients with access to care as close to their home as possible. This may involve the use of community hospitals and through increasing provision of secondary care services in a primary care setting, for example by GPs with a special interest.

Operations

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were performed in each health trust in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [64981]

Andy Burnham: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Personal Care

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the Answer of 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1301W, on elderly care costs, whether she has requested the figures for the estimated savings on Department for Work and Pensions disability benefits that would result from making free personal care available. [70750]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: A note setting out how the costs and possible offsetting savings in disability benefits were estimated is available in the Library.

Pharmacies

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to permit a pharmacist to act as the responsible pharmacist for more than one community pharmacy. [67342]

Andy Burnham: Clause 29 of the Health Bill inserts two new sections, sections 72A and 72B, into the Medicines Act 1969 in relation to the responsible pharmacist. The Government believe that the general rule should be one responsible pharmacist, one pharmacy, if the responsible pharmacist is to discharge his or her responsibilities for the safe and effective running of the pharmacy. For the vast majority of pharmacies, we expect each to have its own responsible pharmacist. However, we also believe that there should be provision to consider any exception to this rule, where circumstances justify such an exception. Section 72A(2) provides for a pharmacist to be responsible for more than one pharmacy at any one time only in circumstances to be specified in regulations and where there is compliance with certain conditions set out in the regulations. Our intention is to consult, in due course, with all interested parties on what these circumstances and conditions might be.

Queen Mary's Hospital Trust, Sidcup

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many redundancies she expects at Queen Mary's hospital, Sidcup, broken down by specialty or function. [67383]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

It is for local national health service organisations in conjunction with the primary care trusts and strategic health authorities to plan and develop services according to the needs of their local communities.

I am informed that Queen Mary's hospital trust has launched a formal consultation on proposals to reduce the work force. This consultation ends on 28 June 2006 following which the trust board will consider all views received at a formal public meeting.

Shipman Inquiry

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why the Government has not yet implemented all of the recommendations of Dame Janet Smith's inquiries into the case of Harold Shipman; what steps she is taking to implement the remaining recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [68666]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The Government have already published details of the action they are proposing to take forward the recommendations of the Shipman inquiry's fourth report on controlled drugs, and the recommendations in the third report relating to reform of the coroners' system. Good progress has already been made in implementing the action programme on controlled drugs, and draft legislation to implement the action on coronial reform will be presented to Parliament later this year.

The Government are now awaiting the recommendations of a review by the Chief Medical Officer (CMO) of certain aspects of medical regulation, including the revalidation of doctors. The CMO is currently finalising his report and will be reporting to ministers in the near future. Once Ministers have considered the CMC's recommendations, the Government will publish a comprehensive action programme responding to the outstanding recommendations of the Shipman Inquiry and to the linked recommendations in the Ayling, Neale and Kerr-Haslem inquiries.

Mr. Goodwill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the Chief Medical Officer to release his review of the Shipman Report. [67794]

Andy Burnham: The Chief Medical Officer is currently finalising his report and will be reporting to Ministers in the near future.

Small Firms

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what definition his Department uses of a small firm. [59288]

Andy Burnham: The Department does not use any definition of a small firm. In reporting data about businesses placed with small and medium-sized enterprise (SME), we define a SME as a firm employing under 250 people. This is in line with the definition of a SME provided by the Department of Trade and Industry's small business service. The Department does not differentiate between a small firm and a medium-sized firm for procurement purposes.

Treatment Centres

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which clinical procedures are undertaken for NHS patients at the treatment centre at Shepton Mallett; how much is paid to the treatment centre each time each such procedure is undertaken; how much would be paid to an NHS hospital in the area for the same procedure; and if she will make a statement. [68260]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The Shepton Mallett treatment centre provides procedures in orthopaedics, ophthalmology, general surgery and endoscopy. The price per procedure paid to wave one independent sector treatment centres is commercially confidential.

National health service tariff data is available at the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidanceArticle/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=4091529&chk=f%2Bcvh8.

The independent sector treatment centre programme has ensured value for money by running a robust and competitive procurement process, benchmarking procedure prices between contracts and comparing them to those traditionally paid to the NHS.

University Hospital of North Staffordshire

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the review carried out by (a) Ernst and Young and (b) the Department's turnaround team into the forecast deficit of the University Hospital of North Staffordshire for the year ending 31 March 2006. [62899]

Andy Burnham: The Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority (SHA) has advised me that Ernst and Young carried out a review of finances across the whole of the SHA, and following that they were retained by University Hospitals of North Staffordshire NHS trust to specifically look at the financial position there. I do not have copies of their review. Publication of the review is a matter for the SHA to consider.

The first stage of turnaround was a baseline assessment, the aim of which was to ensure there is an agreed understanding of the local financial problem and that actions are in hand to address this. The director of finance of the Department published the national assessment in a report on 25 January 2006.

Further work and planning is being done at a local level by the trust and SHA. Publication of these plans is a matter for them to consider.

Ward Closures

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the hospitals where ward closures are planned, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [68508]

Andy Burnham: The Department does not routinely collect and hold centrally operational management information on proposals to close wards or capacity.

This Government have given local authority overview and scrutiny committees the power to review and scrutinise health services from the perspective of their local populations. National health service bodies are under a duty to consult overview and scrutiny committees on any plans to make substantial variation to NHS services. Those committees have the powers to refer any proposal to the Secretary of State if they believe the plans are not in the interests of the health service.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Anti-Semitism

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the level of anti-Semitism in the UK. [57554]

Meg Munn: I have been asked to reply.

The Association of Chief Police Officers' national community tension team (NCTT) regularly produces a Community Impact Assessment which contains an assessment on the state of community relations, this includes anti-Semitism. This material is not shared with the public, as it contains operational policing information. The NCTT liaises with the community security trust (CST) at the national level on behalf of the police service. Forces with significant Jewish communities liaise closely at the local level. The Home Office's assessment of community relations also draws upon advice from Government Offices who in turn are informed by a wide range of community sources.

Asylum/Immigration

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers were required to report to the police as a condition of their temporary admission on 1 April 2006. [68597]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not readily available as it would require the examination of individual case records which could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers there are in Kingston upon Hull North constituency; and how many of them are children. [69771]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 24 April 2006]: Statistics on the location of asylum seekers in the UK are linked to the available information on the support that the asylum seeker receives. The number of asylum seekers supported by the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) are published on a quarterly and annual basis, broken down by local authority. The next publication covering the first quarter of 2006 will be published on the 23rd May 2006, and will be available on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html. Data on asylum seekers supported by NASS broken down by parliamentary constituency are also available from the Library. Separate arrangements exist for unaccompanied asylum seeking children who are supported by local authorities; the local authority receives funding from the Home Office for this purpose. As at the end of March 2006 NASS was reimbursing Kingston upon Hull for providing support to 13 unaccompanied asylum seeking children, this figure is based on management information.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times (a) a Minister and (b) an official has responded to an hon. Member that a file has been lost in an immigration case in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and what steps are being taken to prevent such files being lost. [69885]

Mr. McNulty: The information is not routinely kept and the cost would be disproportionate to provide the information requested. A range of measures including additional training and targeted exercises to locate files and update records is currently being pursued in order to reduce the number of files that become lost.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are taken by his Department to ensure that victims of torture who seek refuge in the UK, including those whose asylum applications have failed, have access to medical treatment and counselling. [70017]

Mr. McNulty: Asylum seekers receive NHS treatment free of charge while their claim is being considered. If they are to be dispersed, asylum claimants are advised on access to GP services in their dispersal area. If an asylum claim, including any appeal, is unsuccessful routine access to free NHS treatment will cease, although a course of treatment which has already started can be continued free of charge until the patient leaves the country. Immediately necessary treatment would not be withheld, regardless of whether the patient was chargeable or able to pay. In appropriate cases we will advise claimants of the existence of the Medical Foundation for the Care of Victims of Torture which is able to provide care, treatment and counselling.

Criminal Justice System

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps her Department has taken to increase the priority given to victims by the criminal justice agencies; and what changes have been made to the criminal justice system (a) to take more account of the needs of victims and (b) to make the system more efficient and effective. [45205]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government are committed to putting victims at the heart of the criminal justice system. In "Rebuilding Lives: supporting victims of crime" we set out our plans to improve support to victims of crime, by refocusing the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme to provide more financial help to those most seriously injured and immediate, practical help to other victims through delivering Victim Care Units.

The Code of Practice for Victims of Crime will help ensure victims get information about their case, and from April victims can enforce their rights through the parliamentary ombudsman. We are in the final stages of appointing a new victim's advisory panel (the last panel has just completed its three-year tenure). The panel meets with CJS Ministers quarterly to advise on all aspects of services and support for victims of crime. We have increased the amount of money we spend on victims; Victim Support's funding has increased from under £12 million to £30 million .

We have set up 165 witness care units across England and Wales, giving victims and witnesses a single point of contact to help them through the court process. We have allocated over £3 million this year to improve accommodation facilities at court for witnesses. We have also consulted on proposals to pilot victims advocates in homicide cases. We have also established the prosecutors' pledge which sets out the level of service victims can expect to receive from prosecutors; reinforcing our commitment to victims.

Faith Communities Capacity Building Fund

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2006, Official Report, column 813W, on the Faith Communities Capacity Building Fund, what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the exclusion of non-religious belief groups from eligibility for grant money under the Faith Communities Capacity Fund with the provisions of the Human Rights Act 1998 relating to official discrimination between religious beliefs and non-religious beliefs; and if he will make a statement. [60296]

Meg Munn: I have been asked to reply.

Non-religious belief groups were eligible for the Faith Communities Capacity Building fund. All voluntary and community sector organisations including secular ones were entitled to apply for funding provided they could satisfy the criteria.

Illegal Residents (Northern Ireland)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of how many people have been (a) residing illegally and (b) working illegally in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [66457]

Mr. McNulty: Although it is impossible to determine accurately how many people are in the UK illegally, the Home Office published a report which included an estimate of the size of the illegal migrant population in the UK in 2001. A copy of the research and development statistics on-line report 29/05 Sizing the unauthorised (illegal) migrant population in the United Kingdom in 2001 can be found at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/notes/june_summaries.html#rdsolr2905. The method used relies on data from the census undertaken every 10 years, so it is not possible to produce an estimate for other years. Nor is it possible, using this methodology, to estimate the number living in Northern Ireland. No estimate has been made of the number of people who have been working illegally in Northern Ireland.

Migrant Workers

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many migrant worker work permits were granted to farms in Bassetlaw in the last three years, broken down by country of origin. [69738]

Mr. McNulty: Approvals for individuals to work in the UK agricultural sector are granted under the Work Permit Scheme, the Worker Registration Scheme (WRS) and the Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme (SAWS). The following tables show the approval information for each of the schemes.

PQ 69738 tables

Work Permit Scheme

Worker Registration Scheme

	2004	2005
Czech Republic	2	0
Estonia	0	6

The Worker Registration Scheme has only operated from 1 May 2004.

	2004	2005
Belarus	0	2
Bulgaria	8	16
Lithuania	4	0
Russia	10	0
Ukraine	2	17
Total	24	35

Note:
Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme applicants are recruited by Home Office contracted operators and information is only collated for those workers registered on the scheme. Previous to 2004 records were not collected as to which area of the country the workers were deployed to and therefore information is only available for the Bassetlaw area as from that date.

This data is not provided under National Statistics protocols. It has been derived from local management information and is therefore provisional and subject to change.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy when placing material in the Library in response to a parliamentary question to supply a copy of the material to the hon. Member who tabled the question; and if he will make a statement. [64212]

John Reid: Government best practice is that Departments should supply a copy of material placed in the Library in response to a parliamentary question to the hon. Member who tabled it.

Prisoners (Hampshire)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK nationals (a) are serving and (b) have completed in each of the past five years, prison sentences in Hampshire for (i) murder, (ii) manslaughter, (iii) grievous bodily harm, (iv) rape and (v) sexual offences against children; and how many of those released in each category served half of their sentence or less. [68484]

Mr. Sutcliffe: [holding answer 11 May 2006]: The information requested on UK nationals being held in prisons in Hampshire by type of offence, as recorded on the central prison IT system, is provided in the attached table. This IT system does not specify sexual offences against children as a separate category, so information is not available for those offences. The information requested on how many prisoners have been discharged from sentences from prisons in Hampshire is not available.

The only way in which an offender would have been released before the half way point would have been on home detention curfew which, for prisoners sentenced under the Criminal Justice Act 1991, is statutory restricted to those sentenced to less than four years and not convicted of a grave offence. Those who are eligible are then subject to risk assessment. So few of these offenders will have been released before the halfway point.

Prisons

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Health about the merits of giving the Healthcare Commission statutory authority to monitor and evaluate the adequacy of mental health care provision across the prison estate. [65586]

Mr. Sutcliffe: National health service primary care trusts (PCTs) assumed full responsibility for the commissioning of prison health services in the public prisons in England in April 2006. HM Prison Service previously held this commissioning responsibility. The main aim of this transfer is to help ensure that prisoners receive a similar level of service from the national health service as that received by the general public.

As part of this, the statutory authority for the Healthcare Commission to performance manage prison health services, including mental health services, was automatically assumed when responsibility for commissioning prison health services was transferred to the national health service. The Healthcare Commission has responsibility for the assessment and performance of NHS organisations, which includes primary care trusts with responsibility for prison health services.

Probation Service

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the estimates of additional probation staff needed to implement the Criminal Justice Bill 2003 contained in explanatory notes published on 21 November 2002 are still valid. [63083]

Mr. Sutcliffe: On 3 April in answer to the hon. Gentleman's written question number 63078 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 354W, I provided details of substantial increases in probation staffing since 1997 and of further planned increases. Comparison with the estimates that were made three and a half years ago is difficult because the changes introduced through the Criminal Justice Act 2003 are not the only ones to affect deployment of probation resources. We are monitoring the courts' use of the new sentences in the 2003 Act and, thus far, the sentences are being imposed broadly in line with the planning assumptions that informed the explanatory notes.

Sheikha Ahmed

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects Sheikha Ahmed, reference LR1918000565, will be notified of her immigration status. [69475]

Mr. McNulty: Officials from the Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to Mrs. Ahmed informing her of the decision concerning her immigration status on 9 May 2006.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Personal Computers

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many personal computers are allocated to employees of the House. [69455]

Nick Harvey: The latest estimate of personal computers currently used in the House service, including those allocated to PICT which is a department serving both Houses, is 1850, made in connection with the programme for updating computers to Microsoft XP. Following the creation of PICT in January of this year, a more systematic process for central recording of information on equipment volumes and for keeping it up to date is under way. All House staff who require a desk and access to the network have a desktop personal computer. Not all desktop computers are personally allocated; some are based in work areas used by different staff at different times. There are further computers used for training and development purposes, and a small number of laptops held within individual departments.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Animal Welfare

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list his Department's (a) advisory bodies and (b) committees concerned with animal health and welfare; and if he will make a statement. [67177]

Jim Fitzpatrick: For information on advisory bodies and committees with which the Department works, but which also cover the work of other Departments I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment Food and Rural Affairs on 9 May 2006, Official Report, column 125W.

British Nuclear Group

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discount rate has been used to calculate the nuclear liabilities of British Nuclear Group in preparation for its sale by British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. [64055]

Barry Gardiner: Following the European Commission's decision on state aid as announced on 4 April (press release reference IP/06/428), financial responsibility for the civil nuclear liabilities of BNFL including British Nuclear Group was assumed by the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority with effect from 31 March 2006. The sale of BNG was agreed to in the expectation that the State Aid decision would be favourable in allowing for this assumption of financial responsibility. As such, the sale of BNG does not include those nuclear liabilities and no calculations were needed.

Disability Pay Gap

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the pay gap between able-bodied and disabled workers in (a) Kingston upon Hull, North and (b) the UK in each year between 1997 and 2005; and what steps his Department is taking to reduce that gap. [69763]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Low Pay Commission reported that, in 2004, the pay gap for people with a work-limiting disability was 13 percentage points. This Department is not aware of any further data on the pay gap between disabled and non-disabled workers in Kingston upon Hull or the UK in the years 1997 to 2005.

The Equal Opportunities Commission's code of practice on equal pay recommends that it is good practice for employers, when comparing the pay between men and women to also look at disability and seek advice from the Disability Rights Commission to ensure that the relevant provisions of the disability legislation are taken into account.

As a result of a strong economy and active labour market policies, the employment gap between disabled and non-disabled people is starting to close. The employment rate for disabled people was 38.1 per cent. in spring 1998, rising to 46.6 per cent. by spring 2005; over the same period, the employment gap fell from 35.1 per cent. to 28 per cent.

The DTI supports the recommendations in my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit report, "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People", and the aims of the Office for Disability Issues and contributes to implementing recommendations within its area of responsibility.

Energy Saving

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to encourage manufacturers to place on the market televisions and other such appliances which switch automatically from stand by to off mode after a pre-set time. [68465]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply on 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 729W.

Energy Saving Trust

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding was allocated by his Department to the Energy Saving Trust in each year since 1997. [66732]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 27 April 2006] I have been asked to reply.

Total funding for the Energy Saving Trust by my Department is as follows:

	£ million
1998-99	19
1999-2000	23
2000-01	22
2001-02	24
2002-03	23
2003-04	25
2004-05	28
2005-06	27

Figures for 1997-98 cannot be obtained without disproportionate cost.

Ethanol

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the government of Brazil about the implications for the UK of its experience of the use of ethanol as a fuel. [68221]

Malcolm Wicks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not held any direct discussions with the Brazilians on the use of ethanol. However, the Prime Minister discussed the benefits of bioethanol with President Lula during his state visit to the UK in March. Part of the discussion focused on the study scoping a possible Brazil-UK-Africa partnership on bioethanol that is currently being undertaken by E4tech for the Office of Science and Innovation. This project arises from a visit made to Brazil by the UK Government's Chief Scientific Advisor, Sir David King, as part of the preparations for the UK G8 Summit in Gleneagles in July 2005. The final report on the study will be available for discussion at the Brazil-UK science days at the Royal Society on 22 and 23 May. The aim of the project is to try and address two difficult global problems, climate change and African development, through a tri-partite partnership. Work is currently focused around achieving a win on climate change and African development through development of production capacity from sugar cane.

European Energy Charter

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the Government's policy is on the European Energy Charter. [69930]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government see the Energy Charter Treaty as a valuable instrument with important provisions on non-discrimination on energy investment, trade and transit and an energy efficiency protocol. The Government's policy is to help to enhance its effectiveness by encouraging all member countries who have not yet ratified the treaty to do so.

International Energy Agency

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on UK (a) policy on and (b) contributions to the International Energy Agency. [69934]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 11 May 2006]: The Government believe the International Energy Agency (IEA) carries out an important role as expert energy adviser to the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (the OECD).

The IEA organised the collective release of emergency oil stocks held by member states to address the loss of supplies and to restore confidence to the oil market in the wake of Hurricane Katrina. It is also an international respected centre of technical energy expertise and is involved in the Gleneagles Dialogue on Climate Change, Clean Energy and Sustainable Development. The G8 asked the IEA to undertake significant work under the Gleneagles Plan of Action.

In 2005 the UK paid an annual subscription of €1,459,674 (£962,833 at today's rates). The UK also made additional voluntary contributions from the Global Opportunities Fund that, in 2005, amounted to £144,695. The UK, as part of the G8, also made a contribution of €1 million to fund the work under the Gleneagles Plan of Action.

Miners' Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and (b) vibration white finger claims have been submitted from Bassetlaw constituency, broken down by district electoral ward. [69752]

Malcolm Wicks: The breakdown of chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) and vibration white finger (VWF) claims requested above is set out as follows:

Postcode	COPD	VWF
DN10 and 11	4,257	2,364
DN22	996	749
NG20	5,298	3,518

S80	3,280	1,776
S81	2,811	1,489
Total	19,780	12,203

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many bereavement awards have been paid out as part of a miner's industrial disease claim in each year since 1999. [69784]

Malcolm Wicks: In total, 32,681 bereavement awards have been paid out as part of miners' industrial disease claims since 1999. The annual breakdown is as set out as follows:

Number of bereavement awards paid

	Number
1999	1,324
2000	3,186
2001	3,789
2002	5,040

2004	5,242
2005	7,006
2006[1]	2,460

[1] As at 7 May.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many services claims under the vibration white finger scheme have been (a) submitted and (b) refused since 1999. [69791]

Malcolm Wicks: As at 7 May, 50,699 vibration white finger services claims had been submitted[1] and 2,866 denied since 1999.

[1] Some of those claims submitted may not have been pursued to settlement, having either been withdrawn or just not progressed.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) minimum and (b) maximum costs (i) have been claimed from and (ii) paid by his Department for common law (A) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and (B) vibration white finger claims since 1999. [69800]

Malcolm Wicks: The minimum and maximum costs claimed are not readily available but the sums paid each year since 1999 are set out in the following tables:

Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease

1999	?	?
2000	1,048	4,600

Offshore Petroleum Licensing

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 13 March 2006, Official Report, columns 91-92WS, on offshore petroleum licensing, what protection is in place in the 24th round of offshore petroleum licensing for Cardigan Bay, as a special area of conservation. [69304]

Malcolm Wicks: There are several types of protection which will be afforded to any special areas of conservation within Cardigan Bay.

Prior to commencing the 24th Licence Round, my officials carried out a strategic environmental assessment in order to predict and evaluate the environmental implications of the round.

We will shortly be conducting an "Appropriate Assessment" (pursuant to the habitats and birds directives) of potential impacts of the 24th Licence Round. An Appropriate Assessment will enable my officials to ascertain whether the proposed plan or project is likely to have an adverse effect on the integrity of a relevant site. In carrying out this Appropriate Assessment we will consult the Joint Nature Conservation Committee.

Should any licences be granted and the operators subsequently apply to undertake activities that are likely to have a significant effect on a relevant site within Cardigan Bay then further Appropriate Assessments will be conducted at the project level. In addition, an environmental impact assessment may also be required as part of the permit application process.

These assessments will be used to determine what type of activity may be licensed or consented and/or what form of mitigation should be applied.

Post Office Card Account

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will compensate those post offices which will be affected by the proposed withdrawal of the Post Office card account. [70250]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Post Office Ltd and the Department for Work and Pensions are currently discussing various options to help mitigate any impact on post offices resulting from the end of the Post Office card account.

Share Certificates

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his Department's policy is on the removal of share certificates under a programme of dematerialisation; and if he will make a statement. [67757]

Margaret Hodge: The Government have welcomed the work of an industry working group which is looking at options for greater use of paper free holding and transfer of shares. The responses to the company law reform White Paper of March 2005 showed strong support for this initiative, but it is also clear that more information is needed on the costs and benefits of a paper free approach. The Government do not wish to rule out any option at this stage, and have therefore decided to extend the existing power relating to transfer of securities under section 207 of the Companies Act 1989 so that it could be used to require, as well as to permit, the paper free holding and transfer of company shares. In doing so, we wish to ensure that the new arrangements for paperless holding and transfer of securities do not deprive individual shareholders of existing rights which may be important to them.

Sub-Auroral Magnetometer Network

Mr. Goodwill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of how the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council's changes to the funding of the UK Sub-Auroral Magnetometer Network will affect amateur astronomers. [67752]

Jim Fitzpatrick: To maintain the health of its programme, the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council (PPARC) has conducted a rigorous review of its investments. As a result of this review, PPARC has decided to withdraw support from UK Sub-Auroral Magnetometer Network (SAMNET). SAMNET records natural variations in the Earth's magnetic field, PPARC's assessment is that the withdrawal of support will therefore have minimal impact on amateur astronomers.

Telephone Numbers

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many possible telephone numbers had not been issued to subscribers or service providers (a) in the UK, (b) on the Isle of Wight and

(c) in each London code area (i) immediately before the revisions to the numbering system in (A) 1990, (B) 1995 and (C) 2000 and (ii) at the most recent date for which information is available. [64806]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 24 April 2006]: The matter raised is the responsibility of the Regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom) which is accountable to Parliament rather than Ministers. Accordingly, I have asked the chief executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Member. Copies of the Chief Executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Television Licences

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the value of the business brought to the post office by its sale of television licences. [70413]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The value of the business brought to the post office by the sale of television licences derives from a commercial contract with the BBC, and is therefore an operational matter for the company. I have asked Alan Cook, the Managing Director of Post Office Ltd., to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Thorp Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the likely timescale for reopening the THORP nuclear reprocessing plant; and if he will make a statement. [69376]

Malcolm Wicks: The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority estimates that the thermal oxid reprocessing plant (THORP) is likely to be ready to reopen in the summer. A decision on whether to restart rests with the NDA Board is subject to the Health and Safety Executive's safety requirements being met. The Health and Safety Executive's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate will not allow THORP to restart until it is satisfied that these safety requirements have been met.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Avian Influenza

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the average infection rate is for the (a) H7 and (b) H5N1 strains of avian influenza; [69410]

(2) what information he has received on the infection rate in other countries where there has been an outbreak of the H7 strain of avian influenza. [69411]

Mr. Bradshaw: The infection rate within a flock will depend on the stage at which the disease is detected. The rate of spread and local epidemiology within a poultry population will depend on many factors, but once the virus is introduced into a holding its rate of spread within the flock will be most strongly influenced by the virus strain, the host species and the production type.

Recent incidents of low pathogenic H7 avian influenza in Italy have usually resulted in infection rates of 100 per cent., especially where the disease was not detected early and intervention strategies were not put in place. Early detection of low pathogenic viruses is particularly difficult since clinical signs are often very mild or not apparent. In the outbreaks of H7N7 highly pathogenic avian influenza in flocks in the Netherlands in 2003, 100 per cent. of birds became diseased when there was no early detection or intervention. The average infection rates for H7 or H5 avian influenza in flocks of poultry will depend on the influence of all of the factors mentioned above.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the infection rate was in each UK outbreak of the H7 strain of avian influenza in the last 30 years; and if he will make a statement. [69412]

Mr. Bradshaw: The infection rate, as determined by serology, in the three poultry premises recently confirmed with H7N3 was 100 per cent.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what testing methods are used by the UK Government to detect (a) the H7 strain of avian influenza, (b) the H5N1 strain of avian influenza and (c) other strains of avian influenza; what information he has received on the methods used in other countries in each case; and if he will make a statement. [69414]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK national laboratory at the Veterinary Laboratory Agency (VLA), Weybridge follows standard international protocols (including EU directives) to detect avian influenza viruses.

A combination of screening and confirmatory tests are used. Initially, samples are screened using a rapid, highly sensitive and specific real-time reverse transcription-polymerase chain reaction test (RT-PCR) that detects all influenza A viruses. Further tests of this type are used specifically for the detection of H5 and H7 subtypes, in addition to conventional PCR tests that provide information on the pathogenicity of the virus.

In all cases involving suspicion of disease in poultry, or following positive detection in any host, virus isolation in embryonated fowls' eggs is carried out to provide further characterisation. In addition, especially for H5 or H7 viruses, blood samples are analysed for virus-specific antibodies using standard haemagglutination inhibition tests.

As an international reference laboratory—and the EU community reference laboratory for avian influenza—the VLA takes a leading role in developing new technologies for diagnosis, together with the transfer and standardisation of such methodologies to other laboratories. The agency is also responsible for ensuring test harmonisation across all national laboratories and ensuring that common testing methodologies are used.

Carbon Trust

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs why the Carbon Trust is exempt from the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [67866]

Ian Pearson: The Carbon Trust is a private company and is not listed in the schedules of the Freedom of Information Act. It would be Defra's responsibility to answer any request for information held by the Trust on Defra's behalf.

Climate Change

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he has taken to address the effects on the UK of global warming; and what further steps he plans to take in the next five years. [65392]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 11 May 2006]: The recently published climate change programme in March 2006, sets out the Government's commitments both at international and domestic level to meet the challenge of climate change. The programme contains a series of measures between now and 2010 both to further reduce emissions of greenhouse gases and bring us closer to our domestic target of reducing carbon dioxide emissions by 20 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2010. The programme also contains commitments to adapt to that climate change which is already unavoidable.

Further information on the new climate change programme can be found on the DEFRA website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/climatechange/uk/ukccp/index.htm

Community Energy Programme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason the community energy programme has had its funding programme curtailed; and what alternatives have been put in place. [68568]

Ian Pearson: The recent climate change programme review involved a wide-ranging appraisal of the effectiveness of existing climate change policies. We have concluded that other programmes deliver carbon savings in a more cost-effective way, compared with the community energy programme. These include support for biomass community heating through the new heat support scheme, which will include combined heat and power.

Dairy Industry

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of recent developments in the milk producing and dairy industry. [66107]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department commissioned a report from Professor David Colman and Yaqin Zhaung, 'Changes in England and Wales Dairy Farming since 2002/03: A Resurvey', which was published last year. This showed that more farms had ceased production than had been previously indicated and there was a higher concentration of more profitable and larger herds among those that left. It reconfirmed previous findings which indicated that milk production is likely to fall.

Although the trend of farmers leaving the industry is not new, in terms of the sustainable future of the dairy industry, the apparent trend of some of the more efficient dairy farmers leaving the industry is worrying. We commissioned the report because we wanted some firm evidence of what was happening in the dairy sector. This is part of that evidence base. The Dairy Supply Chain Forum, chaired by my noble Friend, Lord Rooker, is working to understand why these farmers are leaving. While it is likely that profitability will be an important factor, there are also issues such as succession and possibilities for diversification which need to be considered.

The report, 'Changes in England and Wales Dairy Farming since 2002/03: A Resurvey', can be found on the DEFRA website at:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/foodrin/milk/pdf/colman3report.pdf

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent steps his Department has taken to assist the dairy farming sector; and if he will make a statement. [66108]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government are helping the industry to help itself, for example by establishing the Dairy Supply Chain Forum, chaired by my noble Friend, Lord Rooker. The dairy farming sector is well represented on the Forum. We believe that the Dairy Supply Chain Forum has had a positive effect on bringing together all sectors of the dairy industry to discuss the challenges and develop collective solutions.

The Forum has commissioned and published a considerable amount of research which has stimulated debate and helped provide information to help the industry make informed decisions about its future.

The dairy farming sector has also benefited directly from grants under the Agriculture Development Scheme, for example to help fund benchmarking and the creation of a network of dairy best practice groups.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent steps he has taken (a) to strengthen the selling systems for milk and (b) to improve the dairy industry structure. [66109]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Dairy Supply Chain Forum, chaired by my noble Friend, Lord Rooker, has had constructive discussions regarding the National Farmers Union's 'Vision for the Dairy Industry' and the Milk Development Council's paper, 'Raw Milk Contracts and Relationships'. Ultimately however, decisions on selling systems are private commercial matters in which Government cannot get involved.

Decisions on the future structure of the dairy industry are also for the industry rather than Government. Through the Dairy Supply Chain Forum, a considerable amount of research has been commissioned and published, which has helped provide information to help the industry make informed decisions about the future.

Environment Agency

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether Crown copyright applies to Environment Agency data. [67801]

Ian Pearson: Crown Copyright applies to Crown and Government Departments. As the Environment Agency is a non-departmental public body (NDPB), Crown copyright does not apply to Environment Agency data.

The Office of Public Sector Information lists Crown and non-Crown bodies on its website at http://www.opsi.gov.uk/advice/crown-copyright/uk-crown-bodies.htm.

Environmental Industries

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has made to the EU Commission on EU support for environmental industries. [67896]

Ian Pearson: UK Ministers and officials regularly discuss EU support for environmental industries with the European Commission. Under the UK presidency of the EU, my predecessor, my hon. Friend the Member for Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley), hosted a stakeholder forum on environmental technologies alongside Environment Commissioner Dimas on 1 December 2005 in Brussels. In addition, the UK has played an active role in the implementation of the environmental technologies action plan since its adoption. We continue to promote ways of facilitating the uptake of environmental technologies, including through Community research programmes and financial instruments.

GM Crops

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the recent announcement by the EU Food Safety Authority on the long-term safety of GM crops. [66628]

Ian Pearson: I understand the hon. gentleman to be referring to the press release issued by the European Commission on 12 April. This document did not make any new claims or provide any new evidence relating to the issue of the long term safety of GM crops. Its purpose was instead to give details of certain proposed measures which provide reassurance that Community decisions on genetically modified organisms are based on high quality scientific assessments which deliver a high level of protection for human health and the environment.

The Government believe that Community decisions on GMOs are already taken on the basis of high quality scientific assessments which provide a high level of protection for human health and the environment. However, we support this initiative from the Commission which aims to improve the transparency of the procedures in place.

Leader Plus (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what Leader Plus programmes are running in Gloucestershire. [68567]

Ian Pearson: There are no Leader plus Local Action Groups in Gloucestershire.

Recycling

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) grants are available and (b) assistance is offered by (i) his Department and (ii) its agencies for the promotion of education about recycling; and if he will make a statement. [69205]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The Government are providing funding and support for the promotion of awareness and education about recycling through a number of different programmes.

Each local authority in England is receiving a share of the £105 million Waste Performance and Efficiency Grant (WPEG) this year. This grant allocation is not ring-fenced and local authorities are encouraged to use it to support further improvements in recycling performance, including education initiatives.

The Waste Implementation Programme (WIP)'s local authority support unit provides best practice guidance, practical support and consultancy advice, including public awareness and education programmes.

The Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) is taking forward, on behalf of the Government, a waste awareness and education programme. WRAP has a budget of nearly £16 million for this programme this financial year. Nearly £10 million of this budget will be spent on the national "Recycle Now" campaign, which includes television and news media campaigns. The remainder of the budget of around £7 million will be used to support local authority communications campaigns. The campaign also involves work with schools.

Sakhalin II Development

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had about plans for responding to oil spills in winter ice conditions in relation to possible European Bank for Reconstruction and Development funding for Shell's proposed Sakhalin II development. [67173]

Ian Pearson: My predecessor, and Ministerial colleagues from other Departments, have held a number of meetings, both with Shell and representatives from NGOs, relating to the Sakhalin II project. A range of issues, including the environmental impacts of the project, and specifically the question of plans for responding to oil spills in winter ice conditions, have been discussed.

Single Farm Payments

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of farmers waiting to receive payments under the single farm payment scheme in Suffolk. [69820]

Barry Gardiner: 120,367 applications were received for the single payment scheme (SPS). By the end of 4 May 2006 over 58,000 claims (48.5 per cent.) had been paid, a total of £552 million in full payment.

31,000 partial payments have been processed to a value of £730 million. In total, 85 per cent. of the £1,500 million of expected payments for the 2005 scheme years will have been distributed.

31,000 claimants were not included in the partial payments system, 26,000 because their claim amounted to less than €1,000, and 5,000 because of a diverse range of other factors which made their cases particularly complex. Making full payments to this group of 5,000 will now be given the highest priority by the Rural Payments Agency.

The Rural Payments Agency does not have the data available on a regional basis, as the scheme is not administered in this way.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who signed the letter from his Department to the Commission for Agriculture dated 12 April requesting an extension of the payment window for the single farm payment until October 2006. [67923]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The letter was signed by the Director General for Sustainable Farming and Food.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many complaints have been received from farmers in Milton Keynes about the single farm payment. [68137]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency does not have data available on a regional or subject basis, as complaints are not administered in this way.

UN Convention on Biological Diversity

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the March meeting of the UN Convention on Biological Diversity and its implications for the Government's policy on terminator seeds. [67467]

Ian Pearson: At the eighth meeting of the Parties to the United Nations Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD), held in Curitiba, Brazil 20-31 March 2006, Governments decided to reaffirm the decision which had been taken in 2000 that there should be a precautionary approach in field testing and commercial development of Genetic Use Restriction Technologies (GURTs).

This decision states that products incorporating GURTs should not be approved for field testing until appropriate scientific data can justify such testing and for commercial use until appropriate scientific assessments with regard to ecological and socio-economic impacts have been carried out and the conditions for their safe and beneficial use validated. In addition to reaffirming the precautionary approach in the 2000 decision, the 2006 decision calls for the respect of farmers' rights to the preservation of seed and for further research on the ecological, economic, social and cultural impacts of GURTs.

The UK Government have pursued a consistent policy on this issue, supporting both the decision taken by the CBD in 2000 and the reaffirmation of this decision in 2006. As far as we are aware, no crops involving terminator technology are in use anywhere in the world, and none are under active commercial development.

Veal

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make it his policy to ban the importation of veal which has been reared in crates; and if he will make a statement. [69253]

Mr. Bradshaw: Under both EU and international trade rules it would be illegal to ban the import of veal reared in crates. However, the UK opposes the use of veal crates, and banned them in this country in 1990. From 1 January 2007, veal crates will be banned throughout the EU.

Many producers on the continent have already moved to other production methods and the Netherlands, Germany and Denmark have also banned their use. Finland has banned veal production altogether and Sweden and Greece have no veal industry.

Waste

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter of 23 December 2005, from the hon. Member for North West Leicestershire on the reprocessed fuel oil, the Waste Incineration Directive and the draft Waste Framework Directive. [57532]

Mr. Bradshaw: I apologise for the extremely long delay in replying.

The Government have been in high level discussions with industry and stakeholders on these issues, and a reply will be sent by 26 May 2006.

Water Metering

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of households in each water company area has water meters; and what percentage of all households was metered in (a) 1990, (b) 2000 and (c) the latest year for which figures are available. [67897]

Ian Pearson: Ofwat is the economic regulator of the water and sewerage industry in England and Wales. Each year it records the percentage of household customers with meters on an individual company and industry wide basis. This information is published by Ofwat in its 'Security of supply, leakage and the efficient use of water' report.

Ofwat holds reliable figures on the percentage of metered properties from 1992-93 onwards. Figures for the period 1990-92 are not available. The latest reporting year for which figures are available is 2004-05. Household metering projections

Water Shortages

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect of (a) water shortages and (b) hosepipe bans on (i) municipal floral displays, (ii) cricket pitches and (iii) the Britain in Bloom competition. [66240]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency has produced a report, 'Drought prospects 2006', explaining the likely consequences of a continuing rainfall deficit and recommending action by water companies and the public. This report is available on request from the Agency (telephone 020 7863 8710) or from its website: www.environment-agency.gov.uk

Hosepipe bans imposed by water companies affect the watering of private gardens. Some water companies in South East England have applied to the Secretary of State for drought orders to ban the non-essential use of water. If made, such orders could impact on the watering of parks and sports facilities.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how long he expects the hosepipe bans in (a) Thames Water and (b) Three Valleys Water to continue; and if he will make a statement. [66880]

Ian Pearson: The typical duration of hosepipe bans depends on factors such as the amount of water stored in local aquifers, base river levels and reservoir storage. The present bans in Thames Water and Three Valleys Water are likely to continue throughout the summer, and until there is enough rainfall for water companies to be confident they can meet demand for summer 2007.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the amount of water likely to be lost due to leaks in pipes owned by water companies over the next decade; and if he will make a statement. [67008]

Ian Pearson: The Director General of Water Services publishes leakage figures annually in the 'Security of supply, leakage and the efficient use of water' reports. Leakage targets are set by Ofwat, currently up to 2009-10. If all water companies were to meet these targets, total water company leakage would be 3,336 megalitres/day by 2009-10, a reduction of 272 megalitres/day from 2004-05 figures.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House what percentage of his private office staff is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [69151]

Nigel Griffiths: The office of the Leader of the House of Commons has 12 staff, 67 per cent. are male and 33 per cent. female.

The provision of personal information on disability is optional and is held on individual staff files. Owing to the nature and size of the office, providing this information could result in the identification of individuals.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

First Level 3 Qualifications

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1591W, on first level 3 qualifications, how many 19 to 25-year-olds studying for a first level 3 qualification are paying fees for the course in each region in England. [69569]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 9 May 2006]: The following table shows the number of 19 to 25-year-olds who were studying for a full level 3 or equivalent qualification[1] in further education in the academic year 2004/05 by region, and the number of those in each region who did not receive any fee remission.

Region of learner	Level 3 learners	Level 3 fee payers	Percentage of fee payers
North East	2,568	807	31
North West	6,572	1,845	28
Yorkshire and Humberside	4,380	1,260	29
East Midlands	3,927	960	24
West Midlands	4,844	1,198	25
East of England	3,652	1,491	41
Greater London	6,431	1,978	31
South East	6,840	2,323	34
South West	4,866	1,970	40
Region unknown	1,056	382	36
Total	45,136	14,214	31

Notes:
1. We estimate that of the 45,000 19 to 25-year-olds in England who were studying for a full level 3 in 2004/05, 22,000 were studying for a first full level 3 qualification.
2. We do not have estimates for "firstness" at a regional level, due to insufficient sample sizes in the research into prior qualifications in FE.
3. The research suggests that, nationally, there is no difference in the proportion receiving fee remission between first and non-first full level 3 learners.

Free School Meals

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of children in each school in Worcester city (a) receive free school meals and (b) are eligible for free school meals. [67402]

Jim Knight: The information requested is shown in the table.

Two sets of figures relating to the number and proportion of pupils known to be eligible for free school meals are given here. The first includes all pupils in the school, regardless of their age. The second includes full-time pupils aged up to (and including) 15 and part-time pupils aged five to 15 (inclusive). This second coverage is as used in the Pupil Achievement Tracker and Ofsted's PANDA reports and provides consistent school level comparisons.

Head Teachers

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools do not have a permanent head teacher. [70792]

Jim Knight: Information is not available in the format requested.

Information on the number of full-time temporary filled head teacher posts is available from the annual survey of teachers in service and teacher vacancies held in January each year. Table 9 of Statistical First Release 18/2006 provides a snapshot of temporarily filled head teacher posts as at January for each year available. This publication is available on the Department's website at the following URL: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000653/index.shtml. A copy has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Learning and Skills Council

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the basis was for the calculation of the estimated £40 million savings from the re-organisation of the Learning and Skills Council; whether the calculation was made (a) before and (b) after a decision had been reached on staff numbers and structures; and how much of the estimated saving was savings on (i) staff costs and (ii) administrative costs. [69884]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 11 May 2006]: On 16 September 2005 Mark Haysom, the Learning and Skills Council's chief executive, announced proposals for a new structure for the organisation with the aim of making it more effective at identifying and responding to local learning and skills needs, and to achieve a less bureaucratic and more strategic relationship with partners and providers. It means that the LSC will spend less time on transactional processes and more time developing relationships with key partners and stakeholders. This requires fewer staff with a different set of skills. The calculation of savings of up to £40 million, which could be released for the benefit of learners, was based on these priorities and a structure that will require some 1,100 fewer posts. The savings include staffing, property and related costs. Due to the complexities involved in the restructuring the level of savings may change.

School Sport

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much of the £750 million pledged for school sport at the 2000 Labour Party Conference has been spent. [69919]

Jim Knight [holding answer 11 May 2006]: All of the New Opportunities for PE and Sport (NOPES) funding is now fully committed, to over 2,000 projects. To date, £341,370,187 has been drawn down by local authorities.

School Statistics

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of children are educated in private schools in each local authority area. [68793]

HEALTH

Addictions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of people with (a) a gambling addiction, (b) an alcohol addiction and (c) a drug addiction in each region in each of the last five years. [66466]

Caroline Flint: The Department's current estimate is that 0.6 per cent. of the adult population are problem gamblers. This figure is drawn from the most recent authoritative research: Kerry Sproston, Bob Erens and Jim Orford (2000): "Gambling Behaviour in Britain: Results from the British Gambling Prevalence Study" (National Centre for Social Research, June 2000). This research was conducted using a sample of addresses selected at random. It is not possible therefore to give figures by region.

During the coming year, and before the Gambling Act 2005 is implemented, the Gambling Commission will be conducting new research into the prevalence of problem gambling.

The Department's 2004 alcohol needs assessment research project (ANARP) is the first alcohol needs assessment in England conducted on a national scale, and reports there are 1.1 million people in England who meet the criteria of alcohol dependence. The regional breakdown is shown in table 1.

Table 1

Region	Total
North East	83,356
North West	145,054
Yorkshire and Number	163,889
East Midlands	42,656
West Midlands	126,658
East of England	95,808
London	217,429
South East	183,611
South West	95,257
Total for England	1,132,074

The Department does not hold data for the numbers of those with a drug dependency in the format requested but we can provide the following data on the prevalence of drug dependence.

Data on drug dependence are available from the survey Psychiatric Morbidity Among Adults (aged 16 to 74) Living in Private Households (in Great Britain) carried out in 2000, by the Office for National Statistics.

The latest data available from the drug survey are shown in table two. The same information is not held for those with a gambling addiction.

Table two provides the prevalence of drug dependence of adults aged 16 to 74 by NHS regional office area, based on responses to five questions, about drug use in the year prior to interview.

Ambulances

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she has issued on the fitting of emergency vehicles with satellite navigation systems; and what percentage of each NHS ambulance fleet is fitted with such devices. [68485]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 11 May 2006]: In 2001-02, there was a £3.4 million allocation from the Department to enable services to equip frontline ambulance vehicles with state of the art satellite navigation to help ambulances reach life-threatening emergencies more quickly. The Department expects all ambulance trusts to meet the national response time standards set, to ensure patients receive the most appropriate, timely care.

The Department does not collect central figures on ambulance vehicles fitted with satellite navigation systems.

Autism

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much was spent by the NHS on autism spectrum-related disorders in each of the last five years; [69399]

(2) what definition of autism is used by her Department; [69400]

(3) what her Department's latest estimate is of the incidence of autism among (a) males and (b) females; [69401]

(4) how many children have been diagnosed with autism in each of the last five years. [69436]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information on spend by the national health service on autism spectrum-related disorders is not held centrally.

For the purposes of statistical collection, the Department defines autistic spectrum disorders (ASDs) as including childhood autism, atypical autism, Asperger's syndrome, Rett's syndrome, and other less common ASDs.

Diagnoses of ASDs within hospitals are available from Hospital Episode Statistics (HES), as shown in the tables.

Bowel Cancer Screening

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps have been taken to roll out the bowel cancer screening programme since 1 April; how many people have been offered screening since 1 April; how many people will be offered screening by (a) 1 July 2006, (b) 1 January 2007 and (c) 1 April 2007; and if she will make a statement' [65381]

(2) what funding she plans to make available for the bowel cancer screening programme in each of the next five years; and what changes in the funding allocation have been made since the programme was announced. [65744]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national bowel cancer screening programme will be rolled out nationally over the next three years. Funding for the first year of the screening programme is being transferred to the national cancer screening team in Sheffield, and Wolverhampton will be the first local screening centre.

We estimate that around £10 million will be spent on the first stages of the national bowel cancer screening programme. Funding decisions have not yet been made for future years but we are committed to ensuring that the necessary funding is available to see through the full implementation of the programme.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to promote public awareness of bowel cancer and its symptoms. [65745]

Caroline Flint: Research has shown that a national, untargeted campaign will not be as effective as local initiatives targeted on areas where there is a higher risk of people developing cancer, often linked to their lifestyle choices.

We have learnt from other awareness raising programmes, for example the west of Scotland cancer awareness project, that people at risk can be encouraged to seek medical help if the message is delivered locally, in the most appropriate way for that audience.

We are working with the healthy communities collaborative and a small number of primary care trusts to pilot different local approaches to raising awareness of the signs and symptoms of bowel cancer, using a model developed by the healthy communities collaborative in their programmes to promote healthy diets, and reduce falls. These pilots will run throughout 2006-07.

Deep Vein Thrombosis

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines her Department provides to British-based airlines on deep vein thrombosis. [67191]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not issued any specific guidelines to British-based airlines on deep vein thrombosis (DVT). However, in 2001, the Department issued advice and information to the airlines and the public about minimising the risk of DVT during long journeys, which is available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/PolicyAndGuidance/HealthAndSocialCareTopics/BloodSafety/VTE/fs/en

Dentistry

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many orthodontists there are in England, broken down by primary care trust (PCT); and what each PCT annual contract value with orthodontists was as of 1 April 2006. [6[illegible]]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of orthodontists in England is not available centrally as orthodontists are not separately identified within general dental services contracts or personal dental services agreements. The number of dentists claiming fees in relation to 200 or more orthodontic appliances in the year ending 31 March 2006 has been placed in the Library.

Information on annual contract values for orthodontists is not held centrally.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many full-time equivalent NHS general dental practitioners there were in the East Hull and West Hull primary care trust area in each year since 1997; [64094]

(2) how many NHS dentists were employed by (a) East Hull and (b) West Hull primary care trust in each year since 1997. [65465]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on a full-time equivalent basis is not available. Dentists are able to vary the amount of hours they work and to vary their national health service commitment. Many dentists do some private work.

Numbers of dentists with a general dental services (GDS) or personal dental services (PDS) contract for the relevant primary care trust (PCT) areas are shown in the following table.

General dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS): numbers of dentists within the specified PCTs as at 31 March each year

Notes:

1. 2006 data includes all notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS, received by the Business Services Authority, up to 3 April 2006. Figures for the numbers of dentists at specified dates may vary depending upon the notification period, for example, data with a later notification period will include more recent notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS.
2. Dentists consist of principals, assistants and trainees. Prison contracts have been excluded from the data.
3. The postcode of the dental practice was used to allocate dentists to specific geographic areas. PCT areas have been defined using the Office for National Statistics all fields postcode directory.
4. A dentist with a GDS or PDS contract may provide as little or as much NHS treatment as he or she chooses or has agreed with the PCT. Information concerning the amount of time dedicated to NHS work by individual dentists is not centrally available.
5. Data on dentists that work only in private practice are not held centrally.

Electrical Fields (Childhood Illness)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of links between overhead power lines and incidences of childhood leukaemia. [69404]

Caroline Flint: The Department's radiation protection research programme supports a number of studies investigating the possible health effects of electromagnetic fields (EMF). A study by Dr. Draper and colleagues on childhood leukaemia and distance from power lines, funded under this programme and published in the British Medical Journal last year, has added to a large existing body of work in this area (BMJ, volume 330, 4 June 2005).

The Health Protection Agency's radiation protection division (HPA-RPD) keeps the world-wide research findings on EMF continually under review. In 2004, on the basis of a comprehensive review of the existing body of research to date, the HPA-RPD, previously the National Radiological Protection Board, recommended the adoption of new EMF exposure guidelines in this country. In addition, in view of the scientific uncertainties, the HPA recommended the Government in relation to power frequency electromagnetic fields. They have also noted that the majority of elevated magnetic fields are due to variations in the electricity supply and distribution system, the presence of substations and equipment in the home rather than proximity to power lines.

"consider the need for further precautionary measures"

Practical precautionary measures are currently being considered in detail by a stakeholder advisory group (SAGE) that includes the Government Departments, agencies, electricity industry, specialists and public concern groups. Details of the process can be found on the website at: www.rkpartnership.co.uk/sage.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment the Health Protection Agency has made of the effects of exposure to electrical fields on children. [69405]

Caroline Flint: The Health Protection Agency's radiation protection division (HPA-RPD) continually monitors the research relating to the potential health effects of electric and magnetic fields. Prior to April 2005, HPA-RPD was the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) and as such it undertook a comprehensive review of the scientific evidence relating to possible adverse health effects of exposure to electromagnetic fields (EMFs) in 2004. This review is available on HPA's website at:

www.hpa.org.uk/radiation/publications/documents_of_nrpb/abstracts/absd15-3.htm.

It provides the basis of HPA advice on quantitative restrictions on exposure and other measures to avoid adverse effects. It explored evidence on the possibility of variations in sensitivity between different groups in the population including children.

The preparation of this review was carried out at the request of the Department and has particularly examined the issues of uncertainty in the science and aspects of precaution. In developing this review, NRPB took advice from individual United Kingdom and international scientific experts, and from published comprehensive reviews by expert groups. It sought advice from an ad hoc expert group on weak electric field effects in the body and gave careful consideration to the views expressed in response to a consultation document on its proposed guidelines issued in May 2003.

Having considered the totality of the scientific evidence in the light of uncertainty and the need for a cautious approach, NRPB recommended that restrictions on exposure to EMFs in the UK should be based on the guidelines issued by the International Commission on Non-Ionizing Radiation Protection in 1998.

General Practitioner Premises

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of general practitioners' premises were above minimum standards on the last date for which figures are available in (a) England and (b) each primary care trust. [61150]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts and predecessor organisations have responsibility for managing delivery of services provided by general practitioners (GPs), including the adequacy of their practice premises from which to provide services.

Since 1997, there has been a 60 per cent. increase in investment in GP premises. Part of this was through the NHS Plan targets to refurbish or replace 3,000 GP premises and create 500 primary care centres housing services appropriate to meet the local need by December 2004. These targets were achieved through the replacement or refurbishment of 2,848 GP premises and 510 primary care centres. We expect to see an additional 125 of these primary care centres built by the end of this year and in 2008 the total will stand at 750.

In addition, there are many examples of new premises provided under the NHS Local Finance Investment Trust initiative (NHS LIFT) that fully satisfy minimum standards. The LIFT programme has contributed to this progress and has proven to be a tremendous success. Already some £812 million in private sector and £210 million in public sector funding has been injected into GP premises and community facilities across the country. There are 42 NHS LIFT schemes established with another eight in procurement.

This has, to date, delivered 68 new buildings open to patients with, on average, a building a week opening during 2006. In addition, we are injecting a further £1 billion national health service capital this year specifically for new buildings and equipment. This money will further improve convenient access to health and social care.

A subjective assessment by PCTs of the proportion of premises meeting the minimum standards as at 31 March 2005 has been placed in the Library. This 2005 snapshot by PCTs shows that collectively they have judged some GP premises across the country as being below minimum standards. This needs to be set in context. Judgments for some of those standards are subjective which by their very nature may lead to some PCTs reporting higher levels of premises that do not meet minimum standards than other PCTs with similar premises. Being below minimum standards does not mean the buildings are in a dangerous state of repair. Rather, that the premises may not have for example, adequate access to and within premises and WC facilities for disabled patients and staff. Failure to comply with the Disability Discrimination Act requirements is a common reason for PCTs judging buildings as not meeting minimum requirements.

This is not because of a lack of intent by GPs' practices and their PCTs to provide these facilities but because for example, the building is too small to incorporate them; with a general lack of suitable, alternative locations to develop. These are historic problems for inner city PCTs that predate this Government and arose from difficulty of investing in smaller buildings.

Health Trainers

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 223W, on health trainers, what range of times have been taken by primary care trusts to complete the training scheme for health trainers. [66829]

Caroline Flint: Approximately 150 primary care trusts are involved in the health trainer project with wide variations in the ways health trainers are trained for the role. However, most training starts with an initial classroom-based period of between 14 and 35 days, over several weeks, followed by supported learning and skill development in the workplace. This may then be followed by further classroom-based training to allow reflection upon what has worked and provide ongoing training tailored to the individual and local environment.

The mandatory competences, upon which the health trainer training is based, were signed off in March 2006. The training programmes are still being developed, evaluated and modified according to local requirements. Therefore, it is likely that the current programmes will be revised and the range of times to provide the training could change.

Healthy Living

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department has (a) taken and (b) plans to take to improve (i) parents' and (ii) children's understanding of the benefits of healthy living; and if she will make a statement. [68838]

Caroline Flint: The Department is working closely with the Department for Education and Skills to ensure an explicit focus on supporting healthy living through children's centres, healthy schools and extended schools—engaging parents, as well as children, is central to each of these programmes. The child health promotion programme and planned life checks will also have a pivotal role to play in communicating health messages.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in implementing her Department's White Paper "Choosing Health: making healthy choices easier". [68839]

Caroline Flint: A delivery plan was published in 2005 following publication of "Choosing Health". This sets down plans for delivery against all "Choosing Health" commitments. A progress report will be published shortly to ensure we remain on track to deliver against our 2010 commitments.

Insulin Supplies

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that (a) diabetes sufferers who are reliant on animal insulin will be guaranteed security of supply and (b) the monopoly position of Wockhardt UK is not exploited once Novo Nordisk discontinues its supplies at the end of 2007. [67954]

Andy Burnham: Wockhardt UK has assured the Department of its commitment to continue the supply of its animal insulin products. It has also given assurance that it will be able to meet any increased demand when Novo Nordisk's products are no longer available.

Under the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme, companies are required to seek the Department's agreement for any increases in the prices of branded prescription medicines. These are only granted if the reasons for the application meet the criteria for increases set out in the agreement.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what support her Department gives to those most severely affected by myalgic encephalomyelitis; [70192]

(2) what criteria were used to determine which primary care trusts received funding to set up specialist myalgic encephalomyelitis services; and under what terms the funding was granted; [70193]

(3) what commitment primary care trusts (PCTs) have made to continuing to provide funding for specialist myalgic encephalomyelitis services; and what steps her Department plans to take if PCTs do not fulfil that commitment. [70194]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Those most severely affected by chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME) have access to the full range of health and social services support as outlined in the national service framework for long-term conditions (the NSF). This includes:

Joint health and social care plans that change over time and take other needs into account such as housing, transport, benefits, education, careers advice, employment and leisure;

Access to a broad range of services including rehabilitation, equipment, accommodation, personal care to help people live as independently as possible at home; and Support to help people to work or take up other vocational opportunities.

Applications for funding from the £8.5 million budget to establish new CFS/ME services were assessed by an investment steering group consisting of health professionals, as well as patient and carer representatives. The criteria used by the steering group included strategy and partnership working, the proposed service organisation and staffing structure, as well as the need to ensure an even geographic distribution of centres.

National health service organisations are expected to demonstrate that they are making progress towards achieving the level of service quality described in the NSF. The NSF sets out a clear vision of how health and social care organisations can improve the quality, consistency and responsiveness of their services and help improve the lives of people with neurological conditions, including CFS/ME. The Healthcare Commission and the Commission for Social Care Inspection may undertake performance reviews to assess progress on local implementation of the NSF.

Meningitis

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children have (a) been diagnosed with and (b) died from meningitis in each of the last five years. [69348]

Caroline Flint: Notified cases of meningitis are collected by the Health Protection Agency (HPA) and published as quarterly and yearly reports.

These reports are available on the HPA's website at: www.hpa.org.uk/infections/topics_az/noids/archive.htm

MMR Vaccination

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her most recent estimate is of the rate of MMR vaccination. [69340]

Caroline Flint: The latest annual estimate of mumps, measles and rubella uptake was published in table two of the statistical bulletin NHS Immunisation Statistics, England: 2004-05 of which a copy is available in the Library. The figure for 2004-05 was 80.9 per cent. Quarterly data are published by the Health Protection Agency in CDR Weekly and are available at: www.hpa.org.uk/infections/topics_az/vaccination/vac_cover.htm.

National Blood Service

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment the Government have conducted of the impact of the closure of the Plymouth unit of the National Blood Service and the transfer of its services to a new super centre at Bristol on (a) service provision to hospitals throughout the South West Peninsula and (b) the willingness of residents of Devon and Cornwall to give blood; and what cost/benefit analysis has been carried out of the regionalisation of blood service provision. [67874]

Caroline Flint: A key factor in the successful delivery of NHS Blood and Transplant's (NHSBT) activities is implementation of its estate strategy. As part of their estate strategy the National Blood Service (NBS) which is an operating division of NHSBT, has proposed the development of a new site at Bristol.

The NBS centre in Plymouth will not be closing. However, some services, such as blood processing will transfer from the Plymouth centre to the new Bristol centre. The NBS will continue to provide critical services from the centre in Plymouth. For example, the centre will continue to have a local blood bank to meet orders for blood. This means that deliveries of blood to hospitals serviced by the Plymouth centre, including emergency requests will not be affected by any change. The proposal to build the new centre in the most cost-effective way will consolidate some services into the new site from centres in Plymouth, Southampton and Birmingham.

It is not expected that the changes will impact on the willingness of donors to come forward and give blood. The NBS will continue to promote the vital role that blood donors play in maintaining the blood supply.

NHS Budgets

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether primary care trusts subject to budget top-slicing in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08 will have their contributions repaid in later years. [70467]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The new strategic health authorities (SHAs) should take the lead locally in developing and implementing a service and financial strategy for managing the financial position within their locality. For 2006-07, this will include creating local reserves to deal with local problems. The size of the reserves and the contribution from each primary care trust (PCT) will vary according to local circumstances.

In relation to the reserves, we expect SHAs to maintain the integrity of the allocations system with PCTs entitled to repayment of any contributions over a reasonable period not usually exceeding the three-year allocation cycle.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she is aware of the letter of 24 February from Surrey and Sussex Strategic Health Authority (SHA) to the chief executives of the SHA's constituent trusts on allocations to primary care trusts, payment by results tariff correction and implications. [70468]

Caroline Flint: Responsibility for performance management of the national health service has been delegated to strategic health authorities (SHAs). The relevant SHA responsibilities are set out in "The NHS in England: the Operating Framework for 2006-07". These responsibilities include holding reserves on behalf of primary care trusts.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what measures she is taking to encourage NHS trusts to balance their budgets; and if she will make a statement; [70520]

(2) what initiatives are in place to reward those NHS trusts that operate to balanced budgets; and if she will make a statement. [70521]

Andy Burnham: All national health service trusts are expected to achieve financial balance, or better, each and every year. However, we recognise this has been a challenging year for NHS organisations, and the NHS as a whole was forecasting a deficit of around £620 million for 2005-06, at month six.

In 2006-07, the priority will be to restore overall financial balance in the NHS. In order to restore financial balance, the following measures are in place:

Strategic health authority (SHA) reserves—From 2006-07, SHAs have the responsibility to develop and implement a service and financial strategy for managing the financial position within their locality. They will develop this with primary care trusts (PCTs) and NHS trusts in their area. Strategies agreed locally may include the creation of local reserves to deal with local problems. The size of the reserves and any contribution from each PCT will vary according to local circumstances, but the underlying principle will be fairness.

Turnaround teams—In December 2005, the Secretary of State announced the creation of turnaround teams. These teams visited the NHS bodies identified as facing particular financial difficulties. The teams consisted of external consultants, they reviewed the bodies' financial positions and produced preliminary reports on what action could be taken to assist recovery. The bodies deemed to be at particular risk were required to engage appropriate turnaround support on the ground to help improve efficiency and cut costs. All the bodies are expected to produce plans to allow them to return to financial balance.

Parkinson's Disease

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people diagnosed with Parkinson's disease there were in (a) England and (b) Beverley and Holderness in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement; [69899]

(2) what percentage of people in England with Parkinson's disease are required to pay for prescriptions; and if she will make a statement; [69896]

(3) how many Parkinson's disease specialist nurses there were in (a) England and (b) Beverley and Holderness in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement; [69897]

(4) what percentage of people in (a) England and (b) Beverley and Holderness diagnosed with Parkinson's disease have access to a specialist nurse; and if she will make a statement; [69898]

(5) what percentage of people in England who have Parkinson's disease were referred to a specialist nurse within six months of diagnosis; and if she will make a statement. [69895]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Data on the number of those diagnosed with Parkinson's disease are not collected. However, estimates produced by the Parkinson's Disease Society suggest that around 10,000 people are diagnosed with this disease each year in the United Kingdom (UK).

The number of people with Parkinson's disease required to pay prescription charges is not identifiable.

The number of Parkinson's disease nurse specialists (PDNSs), and the percentage of Parkinson's disease patients with access to such nurse specialists, is not collected centrally.

The Parkinson's Disease Society reports there are currently over 200 PDNSs in the UK.

Pharmacies

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to publish detailed proposals on how pharmacies may operate with remote supervision by a pharmacist. [67341]

Andy Burnham: Clause 25 of the Health Bill, which is currently before Parliament, makes provision for regulations prescribing the conditions that must be complied with if the preparation, assembly, sale and supply of medicines is to be considered as done under the supervision of a pharmacist, including where the pharmacist is not on the pharmacy premises, that is, remote supervision.

Subject to passage of the Bill, we intend to consult on the development of these regulations, with all interested parties, in due course. In the meantime, in January 2006, we published an information paper outlining the Government's thinking on this matter and reinforcing our intention to set conditions that will continue to ensure patient safety. This paper is available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk.

Post-operative Infections

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many post-operative infections were contracted by patients in each NHS hospital trust in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [67551]

Andy Burnham: Data on all post-operative infections are not available. However, information by trust, for the first year of mandatory orthopaedic surgical site infection surveillance, is available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/12/22/59/04122259.pdf

Queen Mary's Hospital Trust, Sidcup

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the treatment refunding basis applicable to Queen Mary's Hospital Trust, Sidcup is; and what percentage this represents of the national tariff. [67379]

Caroline Flint: In 2006-07, Queen Mary's Sidcup NHS Trust will be paid by national health service commissioners in England at the 2006-07 payment by results tariff rate for elective, non-elective, out-patient and accident and emergency activity. All other activity will be paid via locally agreed contracts between the trust and its commissioners. Information on what percentage this income represents of the total value of national tariff income is not collected centrally.

Strategic Health Authority for London

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the names are of the (a) chair, (b) chief executive and (c) members of the new strategic health authority for London. [67755]

Andy Burnham: I am pleased to confirm that the new strategic health authority (SHA) chair is Dr. George Greener OBE and the chief executive is David Nicholson CBE.

These appointments will commence when the new SHAs come into effect from 1 July.

The additional non-executive appointments have yet to be made. I will arrange for these details be sent to my hon. Friend once they are confirmed.

TREASURY

Correspondence

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the email sent on 30 March 2006 by Sarah Bowron, a constituent of the hon. Member for North-East Milton Keynes. [70795]

Mr. Timms: A reply was emailed to Ms Bowron on 20 April, and a copy was sent to her alternative email address on 10 May.

Earnings

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average earnings were of full-time employees in (a) Carlisle, (b) Eden, (c) Allerdale, (d) Copeland, (e) Barrow and (f) South Lakes district council areas based on the annual survey of hours and earnings in each year since 1997. [70154]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked her to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated May 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question to ask what the average earnings of full-time employees in (a) Carlisle, (b) Eden, (c) Allerdale, (d) Copeland, (e) Barrow-In-Furness and (f) South Lakeland was in each year since 1997. (70154)

Average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for full time employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence. This is the standard definition used for ASHE. The ASHE does not collect data on the self employed and people who do unpaid work.

I attach tables showing Average Gross Weekly Earnings by place of work for the years 1997 to 2005 for Full Time Employees on Adult Rates. These statistics are already published on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=13101.

The ASHE, carried out in April of each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a 1 per cent. sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes.

[2] Includes Supplementary survey data

Guide to quality:

The Coefficient of Variation (CV) indicates the quality of a figure, the smaller the CV value the higher the quality.

The true value is likely to lie within +/- twice the CV e.g. for an average of 200 with a CV of 5 per cent., we would expect the population average to be within the range 180 to 220.

Key:

CV <= 5 per cent.

* CV >5 per cent. and < = 10 per cent.

 CV > 10 per cent. and < = 20 per cent.

The median replaces the mean as the headline statistic. The weighted mean is the sum of the weighted values divided by the sum of the weights. The median is the value below which 50 per cent. of employees fall. It is preferred over the mean for earnings data as it is influenced less by extreme values and because of the skewed distribution of earnings data.

Immigration (EU Accession Countries)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research he has evaluated on the impact on employment levels in the UK of immigration from EU accession countries since May 2004; and if he will make a statement. [70018]

Ed Balls: It is widely believed that net inward migration makes a positive contribution to growth of the UK labour force and employment. With respect to the labour market, since May 2004 employment levels in the UK have risen to record highs, in part due to the expansion of the work force from immigration.

A paper entitled 'The Impact of Free Movement of Workers from Central and Eastern Europe on the UK Labour Market' (2006) published by the Department for Work and Pensions, suggests that the impact of migration from the new EU member states has been broadly positive, reflecting the flexibility and speed of adjustment of the UK labour market. The authors also found no discernible statistical evidence supporting the view that the inflow of A8 migrants is contributing to a rise in claimant unemployment in the UK.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made of the effect on public expenditure in (a) the Eastern Region and (b) the East Midlands Region of immigration from EU accession countries since May 2004; and if he will make a statement. [70177]

Mr. Timms: Evidence from the most recent Home Office Accession Monitoring Report (February 2006) suggests that nationals from the Accession 8 countries continue to come to the UK to work, contributing to the success of the UK economy, while making very few demands of our welfare system or public services. Overall migrants make a net fiscal contribution to the UK. In many cases, Accession workers are supporting the provision of public services in communities across the UK.

The Report finds that numbers applying for tax-funded income-related benefits, child benefit, tax credits and housing support remain very low. Only 3,270 applications for income support and jobseeker's allowance were received from Accession 8 migrants between May 2004 and December 2005, less than 1 per cent. of the total number of Workers Registration Scheme applicants in that period. Of these, only 195 were allowed to proceed for further consideration. The East Midlands region received 5.7 per cent. of these applications and the East of England received 7.9 per cent.

Iraq

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the Government have committed to military operations and peace-keeping in Iraq since 1 January 2000; and if he will make a statement. [69838]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 26 January 2006, Official Report, columns 2260-61W, which provides the net additional costs of current operations in Iraq from financial years 2002-03 to 2004-05.

An estimated cost for operations in Iraq for 2005-06 of £1,098 million was included in the Ministry of Defence's Spring Supplementary Estimate published in February of this year. Final figures will be published in the MOD's Annual Report and Accounts for 2005-06 following audit by the National Audit Office.

Prior to commencing current operations in Iraq in March 2003, MOD also incurred expenditure enforcing United Nations Security Council Resolutions on Iraq. The costs recorded in the MOD's Annual Accounts for these activities were as follows:

Financial year	£ million
1999-2000	28
2000-01	25
2001-02	61

National Youth Volunteering Service

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met Rod Aldridge to discuss the National Youth Volunteering Service. [70753]

Ed Balls: I understand that the Chancellor has not met Rod Aldridge.

Public Sector Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the cost of public sector pensions as a share of gross domestic product in each year from 2005 to 2050; and if he will make a statement. [70291]

Mr. Timms: The latest estimate of the projected cost of unfunded public service pensions as a share of gross domestic product is set out in Table 5.1, which sets out the projections at 10 year intervals, of the 2005 Long Term Public Finance Report published with the pre-Budget report on 5 December 2005.

Standard Life

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what monitoring (a) his Department and (b) the Financial Services Authority is undertaking of the Standard Life ballot on de-mutualisation. [65810]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Neither the Treasury nor the FSA has a role in the Standard Life ballot on de-mutualisation.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the UK's balance of trade was in (a) services and (b) non-service industries in each of the last eight years; and what assessment he has made of the trends over this period. [69939]

Ed Balls: The Office for National Statistics publishes trade in goods (non-services) and services data in their monthly UK trade release (http://www.statistics.gov.Uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=1119). The UK has been running a trade in services surplus over the past few years, peaking at 1.8 per cent. of GDP in 2004 (a record high) before dipping slightly in 2005. The lower surplus in 2005 likely reflected the short-term effects on tourism following the 7 July terrorist atrocities in central London and insurance claims arising from the effects of Hurricane Katrina.

Though the UK's trade in goods balance was in deficit in 2005, export and import volumes continued to grow. Volumes of goods exports rose by 7.9 per cent. in 2005, while goods imports rose by 6.1 per cent.

The current account deficit (which includes income and transfers as well as trade in goods and services) stood at 2.6 per cent. of GDP in 2005, is readily financeable and remains modest compared to historical peaks. The current account deficit last peaked at 5.1 per cent. of GDP in 1989.

Unleaded Petrol

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the change in revenue to his Department would be if the price of unleaded petrol were (a) increased and (b) decreased by (i) one, (ii) two, (iii) three, (iv) four and (v) five pence; and if he will make a statement. [70064]

John Healey: The overall impact of road fuel prices on tax revenues and the public finances is complex as they will increase some tax revenues and Government expenditures while decreasing others, depending on their wider impact on the economy in general. Reliable estimates of the impact of changes in prices are not available.

DEFENCE

Defence Information Initiative

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the revised delivery plan for the Defence Information Initiative will enable the achievement of the original estimated savings of (a) £170 million within three years and (b) £43 million within one year. [68383]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence expects that £43 million input efficiencies and cost avoidance measures will be achieved in 2005-06. This will be confirmed after the formal end of the financial year at the end of May 2006.

We further expect that £170 million input efficiencies and cost avoidance measures will be achieved in the next three years.

Departmental Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facility is available for senior civil servants in his Department to use credit cards supplied by the Department. [70620]

Mr. Watson: There is no facility available in the Ministry of Defence (MOD) for senior civil servants to use credit cards. However, the MOD does make use of the Government Procurement Card (GPC). The GPC is a VISA purchasing card where the account is settled in full by the MOD each month. As it is a charge card it does not attract any interest charges. The GPC is available to all staff having a business need through specific delegations and controls to obtain goods and services on behalf of the MOD.

Royal Ordnance Bishopton

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what type of hazardous materials and chemicals were held within the grounds of Royal Ordnance Bishopton prior to its sale in 1987; how they were disposed of; and if he will make a statement; [69971]

(2) what decontamination operations were conducted by (a) his Department prior to 1987 and (b) BAE Systems after 1987 within the grounds of Royal Ordnance Bishopton; what the cost of each operation was; what materials were (i) recovered and (ii) processed; and if he will make a statement; [69972]

(3) what assessment his Department made prior to the 1987 sale of Royal Ordnance Bishopton of (a) the presence of hazardous materials and chemicals on the site and (b) the likely cost of decontamination; and if he will make a statement. [69973]

Mr. Watson: Any information held has been archived and given the time that has elapsed since the disposal, it will take some time to ascertain what records have survived. I will write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as the material is to hand and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Algeria

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of reports of the use of detention and torture in Algeria. [70125]

Dr. Howells: I am pleased that Amnesty International's memorandum to the Algerian President of 13 April 2006 highlights that, despite Amnesty International's continuing concerns about the use of detention and torture in Algeria, there have been fewer allegations of torture in police custody, and progress has been made on strengthening safeguards to protect detainees.

Brazil

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely impact of Brazil's decision to enrich uranium on other countries' attempts to acquire such technology; and whether the Government were informed of this development. [70072]

Dr. Howells: Brazilian development of its uranium enrichment facility at Resende has at all times been carried out in compliance with its safeguards obligations under the Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT), and has been known to the international community. The International Atomic Energy Agency has confirmed that it has adequate monitoring measures in place. There is no reason why Brazilian inauguration of the facility should influence any other country's policy in this area.

The Brazilian Government have publicly abandoned the nuclear weapons programme pursued by previous military Governments and the development of nuclear weapons is prohibited under the country's constitution. There have been no indications that Brazil has attempted to break its obligations under the NPT. Any State party to the NPT has a right to develop research, production and use of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes without discrimination and in conformity with Article II of the Treaty.

Constitution for Europe

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the proposed revision of the Constitution for Europe. [70525]

Mr. Hoon: No formal proposals for revision of the EU Constitutional Treaty have been tabled. However, a number of ideas have been expressed across the EU on possible alternatives to the Treaty over the last 11 months. There is no point in speculating on abstract possibilities. The Government believe the EU should continue to focus on economic reform and tackling the challenges of globalisation, the agenda set out at the Hampton Court Summit during our Presidency.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department is taking to reduce the flow of arms to Democratic Republic of the Congo. [70009]

Dr. Howells: The UN imposed an arms embargo on the Democratic Republic of the Congo in July 2003 and later agreed to impose sanctions on violators of this embargo. The UK also supported action at the Security Council on 1 November 2005 to impose travel bans and asset freezes on 16 known violators of the embargo.

The UK continues to press the Governments of the region to co-operate more fully with the Group of Experts (which monitors the arms embargo), particularly in its efforts to discover the origins of arms found in the country. The UK further supported UN Security Council Resolution 1649 on 21 December 2005, providing for targeted sanctions against leaders of illegal armed groups.

Ethiopia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Government of Ethiopia on (a) the use of the death penalty, (b) conducting trials in accordance with international and regional standards and (c) observing international standards on freedom of expression. [69999]

Mr. McCartney: Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Ministers have not discussed the death penalty with the Government of Ethiopia recently.

The FCO has financed an international jurist, Michael Ellman, to observe the trial. He has now been officially recognised by the Ethiopian Government as the EU international observer.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn) met the Ethiopian Prime Minister on 18 January and raised the importance of the Ethiopian courts dealing with all charges fairly, quickly and transparently in accordance with international standards. Our ambassador in Addis Ababa reiterated this message to the Prime Minister on 25 April 2006.

We regularly raise our concerns about restrictions on freedom of expression and the detention of journalists.

EU Accession

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the timetable for the accession of (a) Bulgaria and (b) Romania to the European Union. [70526]

Mr. Hoon: Romania and Bulgaria are scheduled to join the European Union on 1 January 2007. The European Commission will publish a report on Bulgarian and Romanian preparations for accession on 16 May. We expect this report to recommend whether Romanian and Bulgarian accession should go ahead in 2007 as planned, or whether further progress is required. This might require delaying accession until 2008, as provided for by the Accession Treaty. The Presidency have included Romanian and Bulgarian accession on the agenda of the European Council on 15 June.

European Parliament (Strasbourg)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it is her Department's policy to support the current practice of the European Parliament sitting in Strasbourg. [70524]

Mr. Hoon: The Government, and many Members of the European Parliament, agree that the splitting of the European Parliament site is far from ideal. However, there is a legal and historical basis for the sitting. At the Edinburgh Council in 1992, member states adopted a decision that designated the European Parliament's seat as Strasbourg and committed the European Parliament to holding 12 plenary sessions a year there.

Any change to the status quo would need the unanimous support of the 25 member states. Unfortunately, we do not think such unanimity is likely in the foreseeable future.

Failed States (Africa)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by her Department to tackle the indicators of state fragility and failure in Africa identified in the failed states Index 2006. [69962]

Mr. McCartney: One of the major priorities of the year of Africa and a key aim of the commitments from the G8 Summit in Gleneagles, was to address state fragility and failure in Africa.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) is working closely with the Department for International Development (DFID) and other Government Departments to help create the conditions in which African countries can end conflict, improve governance and achieve their development goals. Through bilateral dialogue and working through the European Union and other international bodies, we are calling for more accountable governance and better human rights standards. We are also helping build greater capacity in national and regional bodies to prevent conflict and instability by providing training and technical support to African nations, the African Union and Sub Regional Organisations. Funding through the joint FCO, DFID, Ministry of Defence Africa Conflict Prevention Pool helps underpin this work.

G8 Summit

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her strategy is for ensuring that the G8 Summit in July will include a substantive discussion on Belarus. [70278]

Mr. Hoon: In the run up to the St. Petersburg Summit, the UK is working with G8 partners at all levels to ensure that discussions reflect the core democratic values shared by all members of the G8.

Iran

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department is taking to prevent the persecution of religious minorities in Iran, with particular reference to those of the Bahá'i faith. [69703]

Dr. Howells: We continue to have serious concerns about the situation of religious minorities in Iran. We have received numerous reports of discrimination against those wishing to practise minority faiths, including the Bahá'i community.

Ministers and officials have pressed the Iranian authorities on many occasions to address the intimidation and discrimination suffered by the Iranian Bahá'is. At our suggestion, the EU Presidency did so on 31 January and again on 11 April. On 10 April, EU Foreign Ministers underlined their

"continued concerns about the human rights situation in Iran, in particular regarding the situation of Bahá'is".

We have also taken action at the UN. We were pleased that all EU countries co-sponsored a UN General Assembly resolution on human rights in Iran in December last year. This expressed serious concern at, inter alia, "the escalation and increased frequency of discrimination and other human rights violations against the Bahá'i, including cases of arbitrary arrest and detention, the denial of freedom of religion or of publicly carrying out communal affairs, the disregard of property rights, the destruction of sites of religious importance, the suspension of social, educational and community-related activities and the denial of access to higher education, employment, pensions, adequate housing and other benefits". We expect Iran to uphold freedom of religion and belief in accordance with its international obligations under Article 18 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

Kidnapping

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it remains Government policy (a) not to pay ransoms for kidnapped UK citizens and (b) not to co-operate with organisations paying such ransoms. [70025]

Dr. Howells: It remains Government policy not to pay ransoms for UK nationals kidnapped overseas. The Government discourage the payment of ransoms by others and would not facilitate any such payments.

Lebanon

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations she has received about Iranian involvement in Lebanon; and if she will make a statement. [69198]

Dr. Howells: Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers and officials have regular discussions concerning Lebanon and foreign links to groups operating in Lebanon. We believe that Iran funds and has strong connections to Lebanese Hizballah. All members of the international community, including Iran and Syria, must co-operate fully with the Government of Lebanon, the UN Security Council and the UN Secretary-General to achieve full implementation of UN Security Council resolution 1559.

Muslim Brotherhood

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions her Department has had with representatives of the Muslim Brotherhood and its official organisations since September 2001; and if she will make a statement. [69262]

Dr. Howells: British officials have had contact with members of the Egyptian Parliament, including occasional contact with members of the Muslim Brotherhood since September 2001. Officials have also met representatives of the Muslim Brotherhood in Jordan, Kuwait, and Lebanon. In addition, officials have had limited contact with members of the Syrian Muslim Brotherhood, whose leadership is in exile in London.

Nepal

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the implications of the United Nations accepting a mediation role in Nepal; and what representations she has made on this matter. [70069]

Dr. Howells: The responsibility for resolving Nepal's conflict ultimately lies with the people of Nepal, who need to take responsibility for, and ownership of, any peace settlement. But it is clear to us that a lasting solution to Nepal's problems will need the active support of the international community and the assistance of an independent and credible external partner.

We are exploring with the Government of Nepal, and with our international partners, whether and how such a third party role might be helpful, and what its mandate should be. One candidate might indeed be the UN and the UN Secretary-General has made several welcome offers of his good offices. The UN is seen as a credible partner in Nepal; the UN's Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights mission there has proved successful. If all the parties concerned, including our international partners, were to agree on a viable UN role, then the benefits could be significant. But it will still require political will on all sides to make this work and the UN is not the only organisation that could provide such assistance. If external facilitation is agreed there will most likely be financial implications in terms of arranging this. However it is too early to judge what these will be.

We are at present discussing how to take this forward with our international partners.

Nigeria

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place between the US and British embassies in Nigeria on the proposed constitutional amendment by President Obasanjo to remove the limit of two presidential terms. [69678]

Mr. McCartney: Our high commission in Abuja regularly discuss issues of common concern with their US and EU counterparts including the internal political situation. The UK's position on constitutional change is that, done fairly and transparently, it is a matter for Nigeria.

Organ Harvesting (China)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what documents (a) she and (b) her officials have received on organ harvesting in China; and if she will make a statement. [66369]

Mr. McCartney: The Government have received media reports of large-scale organ harvesting in China, including among Falun Gong adherents. We have found no evidence to substantiate these reports. The Chinese Government have denied such allegations. We have also received correspondence from hon. Members, non-governmental organisations and members of the public expressing their concerns about organ harvesting. The Government are concerned about the practice of prisoners subject to the death penalty in China donating their organs and my hon. Friend the then Minister for Trade (Ian Pearson) raised these concerns with the Chinese Government on 7 April. We believe the right approach is to seek to overcome the social taboo of organ transplants in China and encourage donation from the general population. The Government welcome the announcement by the Chinese Ministry of Health of a new regulation to come into effect on 1 July, to ban the sale of organs and introduce medical standards for organ transplants.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Chinese authorities about the allegations of (a) organ harvesting and (b) the use of organs from executed prisoners in China. [66370]

Mr. McCartney: My hon. Friend the then Minister of State for Trade (Ian Pearson) raised the Government's concerns about the use of organs from executed prisoners with the Chinese Government on 7 April. The Chinese Government have acknowledged the practice of organ harvesting from executed prisoners. Despite Chinese Government assurances that prisoners agree to the donations voluntarily and that, in some cases, their families are paid, we are concerned about the use of these prisoners' organs. The Government welcome the announcement by the Chinese Ministry of Health of a new regulation to come into effect on 1 July, to ban the sale of organs and introduce medical standards for organ transplants. We have received no evidence to substantiate recent media reports of large scale organ harvesting in China. The Chinese Government have denied such allegations.

People Trafficking

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response she has made to the UN report "Trafficking in persons: global patterns"; and what steps are being taken by her Department to tackle people trafficking. [70105]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is not required to respond to this report. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) funds the delivery, including by non-governmental organisations, of project work designed to enhance the ability of source and transit countries to identify and dissuade potential victims of trafficking to assist in their return. Projects address issues such as increasing awareness levels among victims and practitioners, methods of victim identification, reintegration assistance for returnees and training for judicial, law enforcement and immigration staff. The FCO, as part of the draft UK Action Plan on Trafficking, is also devising a strategy to publicise overseas the successful prosecution in British courts of human traffickers.

Sudan

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the Government have (a) spent and (b) committed to spend on conflict resolution and peace-keeping efforts in Darfur, Sudan; and if he will make a statement. [69839]

Mr. McCartney: The UK has committed £20 million this financial year to the African Union Mission in Sudan (AMIS). This brings our total contribution to AMIS, since its inception, to £52 million. £27 million has been spent providing 900 vehicles, airlift of African Union (AU) troops, rapid deployment kits and ground fuel. We have also provided experts including military logisticians, Military Observers and Civilian Police Trainers. On 10 March, the AU's Peace and Security Council agreed to support "in principle" a handover of their mission in Darfur to the UN, and we have provided a military and police planner to the UN planning team. This year's budget of £20 million will be used to fund the AU's ground fuel contract and experts, as well as a continued contribution of military and police experts, additional airlift of troops and we may also provide budgetary support to the AU's Peace Fund to enable the AU to pay for vital services.

The UK has also committed £1.25 million to the AU Inter-Sudanese Peace Talks on Darfur, of which over £700,000 has been spent so far. This has been used to fund technical experts for the security arrangements, negotiations and financial assistance to support the running of talks in Abuja, Nigeria. We welcome the signature of the Darfur Peace Agreement by the Government of Sudan and the largest faction of the Sudanese Liberation Movement rebel group, Minni Minnawi, following efforts by the UK and others to agree a deal between the parties.

Uganda

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her assessment is of the statements by the Ugandan authorities that the President of the Forum for Democratic Change is associated with the Lord's Resistance Army; and if she will make a statement. [69273]

Mr. McCartney: We have seen no evidence from the Ugandan authorities that the Forum for Democratic Change President, Dr. Kizza Besigye, is associated with the Lord's Resistance Army. This issue is currently the subject of legal proceedings in Uganda where Dr. Besigye has been charged with treason. Dr. Besigye has strenuously denied any links to the rebel group.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what guidance is issued to magistrates on the publication of the name and photographs in local media of juveniles upon whom antisocial behaviour orders have been served. [69828]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Studies Board has published a guidance document relating to publicity in magistrates court proceedings entitled 'Reporting Restrictions: Magistrates Courts'. The document sets out the legislative, case law and procedural considerations to which magistrates should have regard when considering publicity issues in the context of antisocial behaviour order hearings. This guidance sets up the approach the courts should take in respect of the naming and publication of photographs of juveniles.

All magistrates are issued with a copy of the Adult Court Bench Book, which contains the Checklist "Reporting Restrictions—A Structured Approach". In addition, all youth court magistrates are issued with a copy of the Youth Court Bench Book which contains a similar checklist with information relating to youths, and a specific checklist on dealing with antisocial behaviour orders.

All magistrates sit in court with a qualified legal adviser who is able to provide them with advice on relevant legislation, guidance and case law.

Social Services Abuse

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when the Legal Services Commission last funded an alleged victim of abuse by social services to bring their case to court; and how many cases funded by the Legal Services Commission relating to abuse by social services failed to reach court in each of the last five years. [64887]

Vera Baird: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Initiatives

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the departmental initiatives for each year since 2000 which required bids for funding from (a) voluntary organisations and (b) local authorities together with the total resource allocated to each initiative in each year; how many successful bids there were in each year; what proportion this figure represents of the total bids received; and what assessment she has made of the costs of (i) preparing bids for each initiative and (ii) assessing those bids. [66015]

Mr. Lammy: Most DCMS funding available to local authorities or voluntary sector bodies is distributed by the Department's public bodies. For example, £500,000 has been made available for each of the years 2004-05, 2005-06 and 2006-07 for Ofcom to allocate to support community radio stations. Those running community radio stations, including any voluntary organisations, can make applications to Ofcom for grants. Awards are made by Ofcom and we do not hold centrally information on individual grants.

Full information on these initiatives has not been gathered from all DCMS public bodies as the cost of doing so would fall beyond the threshold of disproportionate cost.

DCMS has no central initiatives which require bids for funding from voluntary organisations, though some voluntary organisations receive funding through contracts following competitive tender.

DCMS has two central initiatives which require bids for funding from local authorities. These are explained in the following table.

DCMS/Wolfson Foundation Museums and Galleries Improvement Fund

The DCMS/Wolfson Fund provides support for capital projects aimed at improving the infrastructure of museums and galleries in England The fund in its present form started in 2002 and bidding rounds have taken place annually since then. The fund currently has a total budget of £4 million a year, with DCMS and the Wolfson Foundation contributing £2 million each.

From 2004-05, the list of institutions eligible to bid for funding has included "Museums with designated collections" and "Museums with non-designated collections in Regional Hubs". The majority of bodies in these categories are either funded or operated by local authorities. Of the 95 institutions eligible to bid, 41 are museums with designated collections and 18 are museums in Regional Hubs.

The following table shows the total bids and sums awarded as a result of the 2004-05 and 2005-06 bidding rounds. The 2006-07 round has recently ended and the results are expected to be announced in July.

No assessment of the cost of preparing bids or of assessing them has been undertaken.

Further information, including a list of all eligible institutions, can be found on the DCMS website at: http://www.culture.gov.uk/museums_and_galleries/wolfson_improvement_fund.htm

PFI Credits

The DCMS PFI programme allows local authorities to bid for PFI credits to support the cost of their projects, as long as the project satisfies the relevant criteria.

Table 1 lists the number of projects that put in a successful bid for DCMS PFI credits in that calendar year (we are unable to represent these figures in terms of the total number of bids received in each year).

Table 1: Successful bids

2003	5

The evaluation of PFI bids is handled by DCMS, Sport England, MLA and the 4ps; but given the number of organisations involved in assessing bids for DCMS PFI credits, a costing of the assessment process is not available.

Licensed Premises

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) on-licensed and (b) off-licensed premises have lost their licences in each of the last five years. [69403]

Mr. Woodward: Data for the number of justices' licences revoked in England and Wales were collected every three years and are available for a 12-month period to the 30 June 2004 as detailed in the following table:

Year to 30 June	Total on-licensed premises revoked	Total off-licensed premises revoked	Total revocations

2004	273	81	354

Licensing Fees

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment her Department has made of the recommendation by the Better Regulation Commission to reduce licensing fees payable under the Licensing Act 2003 by voluntary bodies; and if she will make a statement. [66832]

Mr. Woodward: I am currently considering the Better Regulation Commission's report and expect to make a formal response shortly.

However, the impact of fees on not-for-profit groups and events, as well as other sectors, is already being considered by the Independent Licensing Fees Review Panel, which will report in the autumn.

London 2012 Olympics

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much (a) her Department, (b) UK Sport, (c) the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games, (d) the British Olympic Association on behalf of the Olympic Sport national governing bodies, (e) the Youth Sport Trust and (f) the National Sports Foundation are seeking to raise in sponsorship from the private sector before the London 2012 Olympics. [70346]

Mr. Caborn: The information requested is set out as follows:

(a) My Department does not, at this time, have any plans to directly engage in the raising of sponsorship moneys from the private sector prior to the London 2012 Olympics;

(b) UK Sport will seek to raise £100 million in the run up to 2012 to benefit and support our high performance athletes;

(c) The London Organising Committee for the Olympic Games' (LOCOG) current budget is approximately £2 billion. This money will be generated through ticket sales and merchandising as well as the sale of broadcast and sponsorship rights. LOCOG will be seeking to maximise the amount of money that they can raise from their sponsors to help fund the Games and achieve the overall target of £2 billion.

(d) This information is not held by my Department;

(e) The Youth Sport Trust is a charitable organisation and responsible for its own fundraising programme. However I can confirm that they have already secured sponsorship from Visa for the organisation of the 2006 UK School Games.

(f) The National Sports Foundation has been tasked with generating a total of £30 million additional investment into grass-roots and community sport over the financial years 2006-07 and 2007-08, and this will include moneys raised from private sponsors. Any activity beyond 2008 will be contingent on the outcomes of the next Comprehensive Spending Review.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she will take (a) to prioritise and (b) to prevent conflicts of interest relating to the raising of private sector sponsorship in the run-up to the London 2012 Olympics; and if she will make a statement. [70384]

Mr. Caborn: It is my intention that we effectively and successfully harness the passion that exists for sport in this country and provide effective mechanisms for those who wish to invest in or sponsor sport at all levels. My Department will, therefore, ensure that robust strategies are put in place precisely so that we can maximise the amount of new money flowing into sport, and avoid any possibility of these problems arising.

Preventing Extremism Together

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to implement the recommendation in the Preventing Extremism Together report to set up a unit to monitor the representation of Islam in the media. [69288]

Mr. Woodward: There are currently no plans to take forward this recommendation.

Schools Olympics

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what involvement (a) UK Sport, (b) the British Olympic Association and (c) the individual sport national governing bodies will have in the staging of the Schools Olympics announced in the Budget. [70347]

Mr. Caborn: The Youth Sport Trust have held initial discussions with the British Olympic Foundation, the charitable arm of the British Olympic Association and the British Paralympic Association to integrate and embed the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games' ideals and values into the UK School Games (UKSG).

Arrangements for the UKSG for 2007-11 are being finalised. However, the National Governing Bodies (Swimming, Fencing, Athletics, Table Tennis and Gymnastics) that are participating in the UKSG 2006 are responsible for the competition format, team selection and technical requirements of their sport in this event, as well as assuming responsibility for the developmental work around the National Competition Framework and engaging the National School Sport Associations in that process.

UK Sport has no formal contracted involvement with the UK School Games but it is supporting the event in two ways:

Ensuring that the performance and competition structures build on and link in with the World Class Performance Pathway; and

Advising on the drug testing procedures for the Games

UK Sport will also be using the event to promote Drug Free Sport through their 100 per cent. ME Outreach programme.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many school sport organisations were consulted before the announcement of a Schools Olympics in the 2006 budget; and what representations she received in response to the consultation. [70441]

Mr. Caborn: Prior to the announcement of the UK School Games (UKSG) 2006, as Minister for Sport, I co-ordinated a meeting with key partners. This included the National Council for School Sport (NCSS), (the representative body of the National School Sport Associations in England) and the NGB's from Athletics, Swimming, Gymnastics, Table Tennis and Fencing. The schools associations in England and the Home Countries were informed of these proposals, and an update of the meeting was sent to the Scottish Schools Federation.

The Youth Sport Trust, the organisation responsible for the UKSG 2006 has confirmed support from the School Sport Associations and NGB's.

Details of the UK School Games (UKSG) for 2007-11 have not been finalised.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which body is responsible for the organisation of the Schools Olympics announced in the Budget; and what role the private sector will play in the project. [70442]

Mr. Caborn: The lead responsibility for the UK School Games (UKSG) 2006, rests with the Youth Sport Trust. Sponsorship has been secured from Visa.

Arrangements for the UKSG for 2007-2011 have not been finalised. However the Millennium Commission has recently invited applications from organisations willing to organise the UKSG in 2007-11 and which it is intended will receive funding from the Trust which the Commission, the Big Lottery Fund, Arts Council England and the Government plan to establish to support a diverse range of cultural and sporting initiatives associated with the London 2012 Olympic Games and Paralympic Games. It is our expectation that, as with the Glasgow event, these Games would also attract private sponsorship.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Crown Immunity

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when the majority of the immunity afforded to the Crown in respect of planning legislation will be revoked. [70756]

Yvette Cooper: The legislation required to remove the Crown's immunity from planning legislation has been made and will be laid before Parliament shortly.

Housing

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what representations her Department has received since 4 May on the proposed demolition of urban terraced housing in northern cities. [69959]

Yvette Cooper: We have received no representations of this kind since 4 May, but the majority received prior to this date are in support of the proposals put forward by the nine housing market renewal pathfinders.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the delivery by her Department of the necessary additional infrastructure for housing expansion in North Northamptonshire. [70182]

Yvette Cooper: Infrastructure investment must support housing growth, using a mix of funding from mainstream programmes, investment by the private sector and top-up funding from the growth areas programme.

The Government are encouraging local delivery partners to focus on identifying, prioritising and sourcing investment in their locations—based on their individual circumstances and priorities, and using a mix of public and private funding.

Northamptonshire county council has commissioned EDAW consultants to undertake a study of the infrastructure requirements in North Northamptonshire. This work was supported by funds from my Department.

Delivery of the necessary infrastructure to support additional housing in the growth areas will be undertaken by a wide range of public and private organisations. Substantial funding has already been provided by my Department for those infrastructure schemes already identified to support growth, through growth area funding, and jointly with DfT through community infrastructure fund.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will revise the housing expansion target for North Northamptonshire contained in the Milton Keynes and South Midlands sub-regional spatial strategy. [70185]

Yvette Cooper: There are no plans at present to revise this target.

Infrastructure

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on how many occasions in the last two years personnel from the growth areas directorate have visited North Northamptonshire to discuss additional infrastructure provision, broken down by district council area. [70188]

Yvette Cooper: My officials from Growth Areas Division have been in regular contact with the local delivery vehicles in North Northamptonshire over the last two years to discuss growth issues, including infrastructure provision.

Local delivery vehicles have been established in most of the major locations of growth to drive the delivery of new homes and infrastructure. In North Northamptonshire the local authorities have been members of the delivery vehicles Catalyst Corby and North Northants Together and are founding members of the newly announced North Northants Development Company—a merger of the two organisations. The North Northants Development Company will continue to work with their partners to assess priority infrastructure requirements and suitable funding sources.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her latest estimate is of the cost of infrastructure for (a) schools, (b) health services, (c) transport, (d) water and sewerage and (e) other services required to accompany housing expansion in North Northamptonshire. [70189]

Yvette Cooper: Infrastructure investment must support housing growth, using a mix of funding from mainstream programmes, investment by the private sector and top-up funding from the growth areas programme.

Northamptonshire county council has commissioned EDAW consultants to undertake a study of the infrastructure requirements in North Northamptonshire. This work was supported by funds from my Department.

The Government are encouraging local delivery partners to focus on identifying, prioritising and sourcing investment in their locations—based on their individual circumstances and priorities, and using a mix of public and private funding.

Assessing the infrastructure requirements for growth is a complex and lengthy process. It needs to assess the detailed layout of a development as it evolves and to allow for changing approaches to service provision affecting what is needed and when.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Financial Assistance Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how much on average has been paid (a) per person and (b) to each terminally ill person from the Financial Assistance Scheme; [66467]

(2) how many (a) people and (b) people who are terminally ill are eligible for payments from the Financial Assistance Scheme; [66471]

(3) how many (a) people and (b) people who are terminally ill have received payments from the Financial Assistance Scheme in each month since the scheme started. [66472]

James Purnell: To date, 43 people have been assessed as eligible for payments. Four of these are not yet being paid as they have not reached age 65. None of those eligible are terminally ill.

The gross average payment is £2,291.64 a year, or £190.97 a month. The following table details the number of payments made in each month since the first payments in December 2005.

Payments made each month

	Number
December	13
January	15
February	27
March	32
April	39

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much (a) the largest and (b) the smallest payment has been from the Financial Assistance Scheme. [66468]

James Purnell: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The largest gross payment has been £7,557.72 a year, or £629.81 a month;

(b) The smallest gross payment has been £600.96 a year, or £50.08 a month.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how much capital investment in technology systems there has been for the Financial Assistance Scheme; [66469]

(2) if he will list the main IT suppliers for the Financial Assistance Scheme; and how much has been spent with each supplier. [66470]

James Purnell: There has been no capital investment in IT systems for the Financial Assistance Scheme. The FAS IT system is being designed and built by BT and delivered in phases. At 31 March 2006 we had made payments totalling £483,707.

The IT application is also supported by BT in the live environment for a monthly charge of £13,698 since November 2005. EDS provide the hosting service for the FAS IT system at a charge of £4,252.50 per month, also since November 2005.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were receiving payments from the Financial Assistance Scheme on 31 May 2005; and how many he expects will be in receipt of payments on 31 December 2006. [66473]

James Purnell: The first payments were made to 13 people on 21 December 2005. In the longer term we expect up to 15,000 people to be eligible for payments. We have no estimates for 31 December 2006.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many of his Department's staff are employed to administer the Financial Assistance Scheme; [66474]

(2) what the total staff cost of the Financial Assistance Scheme has been, broken down by (a) managers and (b) administrative staff. [66475]

James Purnell: The Financial Assistance Scheme Operational Unit in York employs 69 people to administer the scheme. Reflecting actual working patterns, this equates to a whole time equivalent of 62 people.

The costs for the financial year 2005-06 are for (a) managers: £234,281.29 and (b) administrative staff: £1,052,724.76.

Note:

Assumes managers are in grades of Higher Executive Officer and above.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many surviving spouses of scheme members have received payments from the Financial Assistance Scheme; [66476]

(2) how much is the average amount of payment made from the Financial Assistance Scheme to surviving spouses of pension scheme members; [66477]

(3) how much is the (a) largest and (b) smallest payment made from the Financial Assistance Scheme to surviving spouses of pension scheme members. [66478]

James Purnell: Under the Data Protection Act it is unlawful to reveal data which relate to a living individual who could be identified from those data. As there is only one surviving spouse currently receiving assistance, I cannot provide the information requested.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many appeals have been made against a decision concerning eligibility for the Financial Assistance Scheme; and what proportion have been (a) successful, (b) unsuccessful and (c) not yet determined. [66479]

James Purnell: To date, no appeals have been made.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what mechanisms are in place to reclaim overpayments made by the Financial Assistance Scheme. [66480]

James Purnell: In accordance with regulations, recovery of overpayments of financial assistance will be handled in the same way as recoveries of overpayments of social security benefits.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the average time taken to process applications to the Financial Assistance Scheme in the last 12 months. [66481]

James Purnell: As the Financial Assistance Scheme Operational Unit opened on 1 September 2005, information is only available for the last eight months.

Applications are generally made by trustees in the form of a notification of the scheme details to the Operational Unit.

Between 1 September 2005 and 25 April, 915 notification decisions have been made and on average it has taken 11 calendar days to process each notification.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many calls were received by the financial assistance scheme operational unit in each quarter for which figures are available; and how many calls (a) were answered, (b) met an engaged tone and (c) were abandoned in each quarter. [66914]

James Purnell: The information requested is as follows.

	September-November 2005	December 2005-February 2006	March-April 2006
Calls received	552	903	467
Calls answered	544	898	463
Calls engaged	0	0	0
Calls abandoned[1]	8	5	4

[1] 15 of the 17 abandoned calls were abandoned within two seconds, giving staff no chance of answering the call.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much of the £400 million made available for the financial assistance scheme he expects to be spent on (a) administrative costs, (b) capital costs and (c) payments to beneficiaries. [66915]

James Purnell: There are no capital costs and the administrative costs will be met from the Department's existing administration resources, separately from the £400 million. The provision of £400 million is to be used entirely for payments to beneficiaries.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people aged 60, 61 and 62 years are not eligible for assistance from the financial assistance scheme because their scheme had a retirement age of 65; [67153]

(2) how many people with a retirement age of 65 years who are over 60 years will not fall within the financial assistance scheme's three year window; [67154]

(3) how many people fall outside (a) the financial assistance scheme's three year window and (b) the three year window but are within 10 years of retirement. [67155]

James Purnell: We estimate that around 70,000 of the 85,000 who may otherwise be eligible for assistance under the financial assistance scheme may fall outside the three year window and that around 55,000 may fall outside the three year window but are within 10 years of retirement.

We will not be able to provide more specific figures on the number of members with a particular retirement age and of a particular age, until detailed data have been collected from eligible schemes as they complete winding up.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pension schemes will be eligible only for interim financial assistance scheme payments due to the wind up being delayed by trustees seeking to recover additional funds through legal action. [67156]

James Purnell: We cannot pay full financial assistance scheme payments until the final scale of individual losses can be established at the end of wind-up. 'Initial payments' allow us to pay some money at a lower rate to those qualifying members who become entitled to assistance before their scheme completes wind up. While the wind-up process may take some time to complete and this may be affected by ongoing court action, all FAS qualifying schemes will ultimately complete wind-up and all eligible qualifying members will then receive full FAS payments.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will introduce a category of attendance allowance which exempts an individual from vehicle excise duty; and if he will make a statement. [69468]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

Attendance allowance is available for those who become disabled after the age of 65 and, unlike disability living allowance, does not have a mobility component. While some of those in receipt of attendance allowance may have mobility difficulties, receipt of attendance allowance does not of itself necessarily represent mobility needs; rather, it contributes towards the personal care needs of those with disabilities who are over the age of 65.

The Government believe that the benefit arrangements in place for disabled people are both fair and sensible and, in particular, that it is right to give the most help with the extra costs of disability to those who are severely disabled earlier in life. The Government have no plans to change the rules governing either AA or DLA.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Prosecutors (Humberside)

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Solicitor-General how many full-time equivalent qualified prosecutors there were in Humberside (a) in 1997 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available. [69764]

The Solicitor-General: In May 1997, the CPS had 13 geographic areas and there were 95.0 full-time equivalent (FTE) prosecutors in the CPS Humber area, which consisted of Humberside, South Yorkshire and Lincolnshire police force areas. By applying, a calculation based on the percentage of staff employed in each of the three areas that made up the CPS Humberside area as at April 1999, we can estimate that there would have been 30.0 FTE prosecutors notionally employed in the Humberside area in May 1997.

As at May 2006, the Humberside area have 44.4 FTE prosecutors.

PRIME MINISTER

Bovine TB

Mr. Drew: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions has he had with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on the situation regarding bovine TB; what plans he has to study the results of the recent consultation on a new strategy; and whether he will be involved directly in any decision on that strategy. [68650]

The Prime Minister: I have regular meetings and discussions with ministerial colleagues and others on a wide range of subjects. Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Consultants

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the companies which were paid consultancy fees by his Office in 2005-06; how much each was paid; and what each of the companies was used to accomplish. [69698]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I have therefore asked my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Hilary Armstrong) to reply. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Honours (Investigation)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Prime Minister how many members of his private office have been interviewed by the Metropolitan Police Specialist Crimes Directorate in connection with investigations relating to the Honours (Prevention of Abuses) Act 1925; and if he will make a statement. [68302]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the press briefing given by my Official Spokesman on Wednesday 3 May, a copy of which is available on the No. 10 website.

Middle East (Special Envoy)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Prime Minister what the duties and responsibilities are of his Special Envoy to the Middle East; whether this post incurs a cost to the public purse; how he measures the efficacy of this person's work; and if he will make a statement. [68763]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) on 17 March 2006, Official Report, columns 2581-82W.

Lord Levy receives no remuneration and travels at his own expense. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office and diplomatic missions overseas provide him with practical support.

Ministerial Resignations

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions he has received offers from members of his Government to resign which he has not accepted. [68610]

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister (1) on which occasions he has asked (a) a Cabinet and (b) a junior Minister to resign during changes to his Government in each year since 1997; [69626]

(2) which (a) Cabinet and (b) junior ministers offered to tender their resignation in each year since 1997; and how many of such offers he (i) accepted and (ii) rejected. [69627]

The Prime Minister: Details of Members of Government for the years requested are set out in the List of Ministerial Responsibilities, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister what criteria he used in deciding not to accept the resignation of the Home Secretary. [68611]

The Prime Minister: A full list of Government changes and resignations was announced on 5 May. Copies are available in the Libraries of the House and on the No. 10 website.

Ministerial Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister what percentage of his staff is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [69251]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I have therefore asked my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Hilary Armstrong) to reply. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Petrol Prices

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the price of petrol; and if he will make a statement. [69625]

The Prime Minister: I have regular meetings and discussions with ministerial colleagues and others on a wide range of subjects. Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Staff Development

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister what the total cost was of (a) staff away days and (b) staff team building exercises in his Office in each of the last three years. [69250]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I have therefore asked my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Hilary Armstrong) to reply. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

TRANSPORT

A14

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the future development of the A14 around Kettering from (a) the East Midlands Regional Assembly, (b) the East Midlands Development Agency and (c) the East Midlands arm of the Highways Agency. [70187]

Dr. Ladyman: We have not received any specific representations from either the East Midlands Regional Assembly or the East Midlands Development Agency. Following our response to the recommendations of the London to South Midlands Multi-Modal Study in July 2003, the Highways Agency is currently investigating options to improve this section of the A14 and continues to work with the County Council and other local partners, including both the Regional Assembly and Development Agency. They hope to submit advice for Ministers to consider later this year.

Air Safety

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will commission research to review the extent of airline self regulation and assess the impact of commercial practices in the airline industry on operational safety. [67472]

Gillian Merron: All United Kingdom airlines are subject to safety regulation and oversight by the Civil Aviation Authority.

The authority's method of safety oversight is well established and is proportionate to the size and complexity of an airline's operation. Oversight includes periodic audit inspections in both commercial and maintenance disciplines. The audits and continued oversight activities are designed to ensure that an airline's commercial practices enhance rather than detract from operational safety. As a result, the Government do not consider that research is necessary.

Airport Security (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answers of 26 April 2006, Official Report, column 1089W, on airport security (Northern Ireland), and 4 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1733-4W, on airport security, what steps are being taken at each of Northern Ireland's three airports to reduce the number of incidents requiring investigation by the Civil Aviation Authority. [70462]

Gillian Merron: There is a robust regulatory regime in place to ensure the safe operation of aircraft in the United Kingdom. Both the Civil Aviation Authority's Mandatory Occurrence Reporting scheme and investigations by the Department's Air Accidents Investigation Branch have key roles in this regime.

The CAA analyses Mandatory Occurrence Reports to identify any patterns or trends so that it can take any appropriate regulatory action. AAIB makes such safety recommendations as it considers necessary on a case by case basis to regulators and industry to prevent further accidents or incidents occurring.

Aviation Fuel

DfT Annual Surveys of PSV Operators.

The figures in the table include journeys made by non-residents. The proportion of residents who used buses at least once a year is available from the National Travel Survey (NTS), as follows:

	Percentage
	Greater London	Greater Manchester
1998	80	63
1999	81	63
2000	79	59
2001	80	55
2003	77	60

The NTS has recorded the proportion of people using buses at county level only since 1998, and on an alternate-year basis only since 2002. Data for all available years are shown in the aforementioned table.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average age is of buses in (a) Leeds and (b) Kirklees. [68852]

Gillian Merron: This information is not held by the Department for Transport.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures his Department is taking to encourage bus operators to introduce higher quality modern vehicles. [69155]

Gillian Merron: In 2002, the Department agreed targets with the Confederation of Passenger Transport to improve services for bus users. The Confederation committed its members, among other things, to achieve and maintain an average bus fleet age of eight years or less until 2010, and to ensure that 50 per cent. of buses are fully accessible by 2010.

The most recent surveys show that the average age of vehicles used mainly as local buses was 7.1 years (as on 1 July 2005) and that 46 per cent. of such vehicles were fully accessible (as on 31 March 2005).

Heathrow

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the maximum hourly landing rate at Heathrow. [68875]

Gillian Merron: The maximum number of arrivals at Heathrow is currently 44, with an hourly average across the day of 39.6.

Ice Falls (Aircraft)

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many ice falls from civilian aircraft there have been in Leicestershire in each of the last 20 years for which figures are available; where and when the incidents occurred; and what (a) injuries to people and (b) damage to property resulted. [66986]

Gillian Merron: The Civil Aviation Authority has received four reports of ice falls occurring in Leicestershire over the last 20 years. None of the ice falls caused any injury. The dates, location and property damage caused by the four reported ice falls are set out in the following table:

Date	Time (UTC)	Location	County	Injuries	Damage to property
24 July1987	1500	Quorn	Leicestershire	None	Roof tiles
7 October 1993	2215	Burbage	Leicestershire	None	None
2 September 1999	1810	Barlestone	Leicestershire	None	Shed panels and furniture
18 March 2006	1640	Great Glen	Leicestershire	None	Vehicle on driveway

It has not been possible for the Civil Aviation Authority to conclude definitively that the ice in these cases fell from civil aircraft.

Level Crossings

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many level crossings have been (a) closed, (b) upgraded and (c) introduced in each region of England and Wales since 1997. [69609]

Derek Twigg: This is an operational matter for Network Rail, who I have asked to reply directly to the hon. Member.

Liverpool Airport

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passenger flights (a) commenced and (b) terminated at Liverpool John Lennon International airport in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [69371]

Gillian Merron: The number of passenger flights that commenced and terminated at Liverpool John Lennon International airport is as follows:

M26

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the estimated date is in which the M26 between junctions one and two is expected to be resurfaced with quieter surfacing. [70170]

Dr. Ladyman: Resurfacing was carried out at seven locations on the M26 between J1 and J2A in 2005-06.

The works had been identified to treat areas of life expired carriageway and, in total, 17.6 lane kilometres (approximately a third of the total area) were resurfaced using a low noise material.

Subject to the availability of funding and the rate of deterioration of the road surface it is expected that resurfacing the remaining carriageway between junctions J1 and 2A eastbound will take place in 2008-09 and westbound, between J2A and J1, in 2009-10. Low noise surfacing will be used and this will complete the resurfacing of the carriageways between junctions 1 and 2A.

Nottingham East Midlands Airport

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many overseas visitors arrived at Nottingham East Midlands airport in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [67112]

Number Plates

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the Government's policy is on the promotion of spray-on formulas which obscure vehicle number plates. [70104]

Dr. Ladyman: The use of sprays designed to defeat speed cameras or automatic number plate reading equipment is in contravention of the Road Vehicles (Display of Registration Marks) Regulations 2001 and is subject to a fine of up to £1,000. The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency is working with police and trading standards officers to investigate what action might be taken against companies that advertise and sell such products.

Parking

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many local authorities in (a) England, (b) the North West and (c) Greater Manchester have decriminalised parking offences within their boundaries. [67251]

Gillian Merron: In England 146 local authorities (including those in the North West) have Decriminalisation Parking Enforcement (DPE) powers. In the North West economic planning region 32 local authorities (including those in Greater Manchester) have DPE powers. In Greater Manchester nine local authorities have DPE powers.

Railways

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes in capacity will be made to rail passenger services as a consequence of the Government's detailed specification for the Greater Western franchise. [64038]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport specified a minimum train service for the Greater Western franchise. This number will increase as a result of the timetable changes announced by First Great Western (FGW) on 3 April 2006. Rolling stock capacity is also a significant determinant of total capacity, and this was not specified by the Department; FGW's redesign of the High Speed Train fleet, a franchise obligation together with a new timetable, will increase capacity on commuter and long-distance trains between London and Reading.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to ensure that the data on which the specifications in future rail franchise tender documents are based are made available to the public. [69680]

Derek Twigg: The non-commercially sensitive data on which the specifications for rail franchise tender documents are based are already available to the public via the following, and include:

TEMPRO forecasts (Trip End Model Presentation Program)—dft.gsi.gov.uk.

NATA (New Approach to Appraisal)—dft.gsi.gov.uk

Standard industry demand models and growth trend data is owned by the Office of Rail Regulation and ATOC (www.rail-reg.gov.uk and www.atoc.org Journey data is available from the Office of Rail Regulation.

Commercially sensitive data, which are usually owned by Train Operating Companies are generally not available to the public.

Road Accidents

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many road traffic accidents resulting in fatality occurred in Suffolk in each year since 1997; and how many deaths these caused in total; [69807]

(2) how many serious motorcycle accidents occurred in Suffolk in each year since 1997; [69817]

(3) how many pedestrians have been seriously injured as a result of road traffic accidents in Suffolk in each year since 1997. [69819]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of (a) fatal accidents and fatalities (b) serious accidents involving a motorcycle and (c) pedestrians seriously injured in personal injury road accidents, reported to the police in Suffolk in each year between 1997 and 2004 (the latest for which figures are available) are given in the table.

Number of fatal accidents, fatalities, serious accidents involving a motorcycle and pedestrians seriously injured in Suffolk: 1997 to 2004

	Fatal accidents	Number of fatalities	Serious accidents involving motorcycles[1]	Pedestrians seriously injured

2003	50	60	69	42
2004	40	42	70	55

[1] Includes motorcycles and scooters, but excludes mopeds.

Road Safety

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicle accidents occurred on (a) A roads and (b) motorways in Lancashire in each year since 1990; and how many (i) fatalities and (ii) serious injuries there were as a result in each year. [70264]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of road accidents reported to the police on (a) A roads and (b) motorways in Lancashire and the resulting (i) fatalities and (ii) serious injuries in each year from 1990 to 2004 (the latest year for which figures are available) are given in the table.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps he (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to encourage pregnant women to wear seat belts; and if he will make a statement; [70366]

(2) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the risks to unborn babies in a car crash; and if he will make a statement. [70367]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department recently published a new leaflet aimed at all pregnant women as part of the THINK! campaign seatbelt strategy to engage with audiences that are more difficult to reach with a particular message through mainstream media channels.

The aim of the leaflet is to educate mothers-to-be on the importance of wearing a seatbelt correctly to protect themselves and their unborn baby and to promote messages on child car seats. The leaflet will be distributed to 4000 doctors' surgeries across the UK and will be displayed prominently on countertops and tables in waiting areas. The leaflet is available on-line at www.thinkroadsafety.gov.uk/campaigns/seatbelts/pregnant.htm

Pregnant women are required in law to use seat belts. A doctor may exempt any person from seatbelt wearing if there is a medical reason for such an exemption.

The Department has not undertaken its own studies as there is research elsewhere that adequately demonstrates the risks to mothers and unborn children in a car crash.

Road Traffic Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amendments have been made to the Road Traffic Act 1988; for what purpose; and when. [70067]

Dr. Ladyman: The Road Traffic Act 1988 has been amended on many occasions by subsequent primary and secondary legislation. A breakdown of all these amendments, their purpose and when they came into effect, could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, several organisations publish consolidated versions of the Act, which also document the amendments. One of these, Butterworths, is available online to Members of this House.

Royal Helicopter

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 5 April 2006, on the Royal Helicopter, if he will make a statement on flights by Prince Andrew to the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews since 1 January 2004. [68510]

Gillian Merron: There have been no helicopter flights by HRH The Duke of York to The Royal and Ancient Golf Club since 1 January 2004.

Transport Projects

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial value is assigned by his Department to each hour of time saved when undertaking cost benefit analysis of transport projects; and if he will make a statement. [70522]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department provides guidance on the values that should be used in undertaking cost benefit analysis of all routine transport projects. It also provides guidance on how the values should be assumed to increase through time.

The published values differ according to whether the transport user benefiting from the time savings is travelling in the course of work or in their leisure time. To reflect the empirical evidence, values for leisure time differ according to whether or not the travel time savings is for a commuting trip. The values for work differ by transport mode. The reason for this is that the work values are based on the cost savings to the employer and this average saving differs between modes.

The average value placed on time saved in work time in the cost benefit analysis of routine transport schemes is equal to £26.73 an hour in 2002 prices and values. The value placed on commuting time savings is equal to £5.04 an hour (in 2002 prices and values) and the value placed on time saved in the course of all other leisure trips is £4.46 an hour (in 2002 prices and values).

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial value is assigned by his Department to each life saved when undertaking cost benefit analysis of major transport infrastructure projects; whether that value is applied to all other appraisals undertaken by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [70523]

Dr. Ladyman: The most recent values used to estimate the benefits of the prevention of road accidents are set out in the "Highways Economic Note No. 1: 2004 Valuation of the Benefits of Prevention of Road Accidents and Casualties" which can be found on the DfT website: http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_rdsafety/documents/page/dft_rdsafety_610642.hcsp

Aviation Security

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether military air bases handling civilian flights on an occasional basis are deemed to meet the requirements of the National Aviation Security Programme by virtue of their military status; [70528]

(2) whether military air bases handling incoming civilian flights on an occasional basis are required fully to meet the requirements of the National Aviation Security Programme. [70529]

Gillian Merron: All UK airports, whether civil or military, from which are operated flights regulated under the National Aviation Security Programme, must meet the requirements of the programme, and are subject to routine inspection, audits and tests by the Department for Transport. Incoming flights will need to have met the requirements of their airport of departure. Military airports are not deemed to have met the requirements of the National Aviation Security Programme simply by virtue of their military status.

European Directive

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his policy on directive 2003/20/EC; when the directive will be implemented in England and Wales; and what consultation he has undertaken on the provisions of the directive. [70401]

Dr. Ladyman: We are implementing directive 2003/20/EC. We will lay draft regulations for approval before both Houses of Parliament as soon as possible and if approved we aim to bring them into force in September 2006.

Public consultation in respect of the requirements in buses and coaches was published on 21 September 2004. The Department's decision following that consultation was published on 19 July 2005.

Public consultation in respect of the requirements for greater use of child restraints in cars and goods vehicles was published on 13 June 2005. The Department's decision following consultation was published on 27 February 2006. These documents have been placed in the Library and are also available on the Department's website at: http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_rdsafety/documents/divisionhomepage/039143.hcsp and http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_control/documents/contentservertemplate/dft_index.hcst?n=13759&1=2 respectively.

Highway Code

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provisions he has in place to assess the level of adherence to the Highway Code by cyclists; and if he will make a statement. [70198]

Dr. Ladyman: We do not have any provisions in place to assess the level of adherence to the Highway Code by cyclists. Road traffic law and The Highway Code apply as much to cyclists as anyone else. Enforcement of the law is a matter for the police. They can prosecute cyclists who ride dangerously, carelessly, ignore traffic signs or signals, cycle on the pavement or commit any other road traffic offence. These offences carry maximum fines between £500 and £2,500. Also, £30 fixed penalty notices can be issued for cycling on the pavement, by police and community wardens.

Road Safety

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what discussions he has had with Governments in (a) Italy, (b) Spain, (c) Portugal and (d) Austria on the effects on road safety of compulsory reflective vests for car drivers leaving their vehicles following a breakdown or accident; and if he will make a statement; [70345]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of deaths and serious injuries that have been prevented by the requirement in law in (a) Italy, (b) Spain, (c) Portugal and (d) Austria for drivers to wear reflective vests when leaving their vehicles at the roadside following a breakdown or accident; and if he will make a statement; [70357]

(3) whether the Government submitted an opinion on the notification by Italy in the Official Journal of the European Union of its intention to require car drivers to wear reflective vests when leaving their vehicle at the roadside following accidents or breakdowns (notice number 2003/357/1); [70358]

(4) if he will commission research to evaluate the effectiveness of the requirement in (a) Italy, (b) Spain, (c) Portugal and (d) Austria for drivers to wear reflective vests when leaving their vehicle at the roadside in the event of a breakdown or accident; and if he will make a statement; [70359]

(5) if he will commission a cost-benefit analysis of a requirement to wear reflective vests for car drivers who leave their car at the roadside following an accident or breakdown; and if he will make a statement. [70383]

Dr. Ladyman: No discussions have been entered into with other Governments, or opinions submitted upon, the benefits for road safety of compulsory reflective vests for car drivers leaving their vehicles following a breakdown or accident.

We will continue to monitor experience in other countries that introduce legislation requiring drivers to wear reflective vests when leaving their vehicles at the roadside following a breakdown or accident. If clear evidence starts to emerge that it is beneficial, we would look again at the need to legislate.

were sent to members of the public in each of the last three years; how members of the public may obtain copies; at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [70364]

Nick Harvey: The House of Commons Information Office publishes 65 factsheets covering a range of parliamentary, legislative and procedural topics. These are currently being reviewed to ensure that they continue to address the queries most commonly raised by members of the public, and in line with planned changes to the parliamentary website. The Information Office would be pleased to receive suggestions from Members and their constituents for suitable subjects for inclusion in future factsheets.

The following table shows the number of factsheets that have been sent to the public, or downloaded from the parliamentary website, for each of the last three years:

	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Factsheets posted to members of the public	3,725	4,965	5,771
Factsheets downloaded[1]	309,200	280,300	309,600

[1] Figures include factsheets downloaded by users of the Parliamentary Network as well as members of the public.

Members of the public can obtain factsheets, free of charge, by contacting the House of Commons Information Office on 020 7219 4272 (email: hcinfo@parliament.uk) or, alternatively, downloading them from the parliamentary website (www.parliament.uk).

IT Equipment

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) how often information technology equipment is renewed for (a) hon. Members and (b) each Department of the House; and if he will make a statement; [70282]

(2) when information technology equipment was last renewed in each Department of the House. [70283]

Nick Harvey: Information technology equipment for staff of the House is now renewed every four years as part of a rolling programme to maximise the return on the investment. There is therefore no single renewal date. For Members, information technology equipment is currently renewed each Parliament, providing this is near to or longer than four years.

Reserved Seating (Officials)

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many seats are reserved for (a) staff and (b) advisers of (i) the Government and (ii) Opposition parties on (A) the Floor of the House and (B) the Floor of Standing Committees; and how many there were in (1) 1979, (2) 1997 and (3) 2001. [70404]

Nick Harvey: On the Floor of the House the Government has the use of eight seats in the Officials Box and two seats in the Under Gallery. The Opposition parties have the use of four seats in the Under Gallery. On the floor of Standing Committees the Government have the use of between four and eight seats depending on the size of the Committee Room. There are no seats reserved for advisers or staff of Opposition parties. The House authorities are not aware of any change in these arrangements since 1979.

Weekly Information Bulletin

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many copies of the House of Commons Weekly Information Bulletin were (a) published and (b) sold in each of the last three Sessions for which information is available. [70363]

Nick Harvey: The number of (a) editions published and (b) copies sold of the House of Commons Weekly Information Bulletin sold in the present Session to date and two previous Sessions is as follows:

	Editions published	Copies sold
2003-04	37	23,420
2004-05	15	9,066
2005-06[1]	33	18,672

[1] To Edition 33.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Prosecutions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Solicitor-General how many cases put forward by the police to the Crown Prosecution Service in each of the last five years (a) resulted in a prosecution and (b) did not result in a prosecution. [69745]

The Solicitor-General: The number and proportion in these two categories was as follows:

	Cases prosecuted		Cases not prosecuted
	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
2001-02	1,021,431	78.1	285,759	21.9
2002-03	1,076,491	78.5	294,594	21.5
2003-04	1,107,604	80.7	264,386	19.3
2004-05	1,048,074	83	214,741	17
2005-06	999,980	85	176,132	15

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Correspondence

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter dated 10 February from the hon. Member for North Down in relation to the tail docking of dogs. [63515]

Mr. Bradshaw: I apologise for the delay. A reply was sent on 28 March 2006.

Forestry

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the comments on the programme for the endorsement of forest certification scheme in the Environmental Audit Committee's second report of Session 2005-06 on sustainable timber; and if she will make a statement. [65244]

Ian Pearson: The Government note that the Committee had some concerns with the Government's decision to accept the programme for the endorsement of forest certification scheme (PEFC) as giving assurance of legal and sustainable timber sources. The Government's response to the Committee focused on the Committee's recommendation that the central point of expertise on timber (CPET):

"should make clear to PEFC that it would be desirable for it clearly and simply to set out the minimum standards it expects all its national members to conform to if it wants continued approval of its scheme."

The Government are generally satisfied that PEFC, having made changes to its scheme, now has a set of requirements that, if implemented by the national schemes endorsed by PEFC, will adequately assure compliance with Government contract requirements for legal and sustainable timber. However, this assessment was made prior to the process of implementation by national schemes being complete, and therefore a public commitment was made to assess the adoption of these changes by the national schemes endorsed by PEFC within a reasonable timeframe.

The assessment of changes made is under way but not complete. It has raised concerns with the interpretation some national schemes have made of the PEFC requirement for achieving consensus in the development and revision of standards. In particular, it is not clear that the voting procedures adopted by some of the schemes reviewed would ensure that decisions could be made only in 'the absence of sustained opposition to substantial issues by any important part of the concerned interests'—the definition of consensus adopted by PEFC. In the light of further discussions with interested parties the Government have decided that these interim findings merit further scrutiny before resolving the probationary status of PEFC. This will be done as part of a review of the five forest certification schemes first assessed by CPET in 2004. In the meantime, the Government are continuing to accept the PEFC scheme as assuring compliance with Government contract requirements for legal and sustainable timber.

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent on tackling fuel poverty in England and Wales during 2005-06; how much is proposed to be spent during 2006-07; and if he will make a statement. [69152]

Ian Pearson: In 2005-06 the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) was funded, and spent, over £190 million to tackle fuel poverty. In 2006-07 this figure will increase to over £300 million.

Most of this funding has been/will be spent on the warm front scheme, which has already assisted more than one million households since its launch in June 2000.

Fuel poverty is a devolved issue, and responsibility in Wales lies with the Welsh Assembly Government. The primary scheme to assist vulnerable households at risk of fuel poverty is the home energy efficiency scheme, which the Assembly Government funded to the order of £14.1 million in 2005-06 and will fund to the order of £19.6 million in 2006-07.

DEFENCE

Body Armour

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the same body armour is issued to armed forces personnel and visiting journalists in Iraq. [69833]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 11 May 2006]: Enhanced Combat Body Armour (ECBA) is standard issue for all personnel serving on operations in Iraq. All civilians visiting Iraq, such as journalists, who are hosted by the Ministry of Defence are afforded the same force protection measures as UK forces and are, therefore, issued with the same ECBA.

Counselling

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many counsellors are employed by each of HM armed forces; and for how many hours per week. [69291]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence does not employ counsellors within the armed forces. Advice and support to personnel is available from within the chain of command as well as from specialists such as chaplains, medical staff, uniformed and civilian welfare officers and voluntary agencies.

Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people in his Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years. [67985]

Des Browne: Information is not held centrally on the number of civil servants in the MOD that have been disciplined and dismissed for inappropriate use of the internet while at work and using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years. Because action on investigating and dealing with disciplinary offences has been delegated to line management in individual MOD business units, it would incur disproportionate cost to collate the requested data. Data for armed forces personnel are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Helicopters

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many helicopters UK forces have in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan. [70240]

Mr. Ingram: UK forces have sufficient helicopters in Iraq and Afghanistan for the task for which they have deployed, and this level is kept under constant review.

My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence (Dr. John Reid) announced the UK force package for Afghanistan on 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 1529; however, we work in a multi-national environment, in both theatres, and therefore other helicopter assets are available to UK forces. To provide the total number of air assets in each theatre would likely prejudice the security of British forces.

HMS Sheffield

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for a permanent commemorative memorial to (a) the crew of HMS Sheffield and (b) other Royal Navy personnel on the 25th anniversary of the sinking of HMS Sheffield; and if he will make a statement. [69663]

Mr. Watson: There are currently no plans for a permanent commemorative memorial for HMS Sheffield, or for the other ships or Royal Navy personnel, lost in the south Atlantic conflict. All those who fell during the conflict will be remembered as part of the official commemorations in 2007. Furthermore, there are plans to construct an armed forces memorial dedicated to members of the UK armed forces killed on duty or by terrorist action since the second world war.

Intelligence Courses

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries which sent students to attend (a) the joint school of photographic interpretation and (b) the international intelligence directors course in 2004-05. [63458]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is being withheld on the grounds that to release it would prejudice relations between the United Kingdom and other states.

Operation Rockingham

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the present functions are of Operation Rockingham; how many staff are employed on it; and if he will make a statement. [69799]

Des Browne: The Operation Rockingham cell is working on residual issues relating to Iraqi WMD and analysing the lessons learned from the Iraq survey group deployment. It consists of three people (two part-time and one full-time).

RNAS Yeovilton

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his plans for RNAS Yeovilton. [70299]

Mr. Ingram: RNAS Yeovilton is the main operating base for the Royal Navy's Lynx and commando helicopter forces and, despite the departure of the Sea Harrier in March of this year, it is still the UK's largest (by aircraft number) and busiest military airfield.

In 2004 the RAF-led defence airfield review (DAR) identified irreducible spare capacity at RNAS Yeovilton which could be exploited. Following publication of the review's report in May 2004, a number of working groups were formed to take the detailed work forward. The issue of spare capacity at RNAS Yeovilton is being considered by the programme belvedere working group. programme belvedere is responsible for the joint helicopter command basing element of DAR and is currently examining options for the basing of all of the Department's current and future battlefield helicopters. No decisions have yet been made, but the effect of any changes on the local community will be taken into consideration as part of the analysis.

The Royal Navy has recently announced the relocation of 727 Naval Air Squadron from Plymouth Roborough airport to RNAS Yeovilton. As part of its task, the squadron provides air experience flying (AEF) opportunities for younger members of the public. A recent review of AEF concluded that the relocation to RNAS Yeovilton will offer a greater selection of AEF to a much wider audience. The relocation will also result in a small increase in employment opportunities in the local area.

Sea King Helicopters

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Sea King helicopters are serving with the Royal Navy; how many are fully operational; how many are non-operational; and what time period is required to bring those which are non-operational into front-line service. [67858]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 3 May 2006]: As at April 2006 the number of Sea King helicopters serving with the Royal Navy was 69, of which 50 were operational and 19 non-operational. Operational is defined as those Sea King helicopters that are in the forward fleet and non-operational as those in the depth fleet. The time period to bring individual Sea King helicopters through depth maintenance ranges from three to six months.

It is our policy not to have the whole fleet available to support the front line at all times. An ongoing programme of maintenance and repair is necessary to ensure that helicopters are kept in an appropriate state of repair to meet operational requirements.

Hospital Treatment

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements are in place for injured service personnel to receive family visits. [66542]

Des Browne [holding answer 27 April 2006]: Our priority is to provide the most appropriate medical care to injured personnel, and to give them the peace and quiet needed to allow a speedy recovery. We recognise that the emotional support provided by friends and family is of key importance to our injured soldiers, and visit arrangements for their relatives are managed by the welfare officer of the individual's unit.

The Royal Centre for Defence Medicine (RCDM), Birmingham, has allocated six rooms in one wing of the hospital for relatives of service personnel who are listed "Very Seriously Ill" (VSI) or "Seriously Ill" (SI) where relatives can stay whilst visiting a patient. These rooms are provided free. Depending on availability, RCDM also allow families and/or relatives of non-listed patients to stay in these rooms, but the priority is of course for the relatives of VSI/SI-listed patients.

One exception to this is that the University Hospital Birmingham Foundation Trust do not allow children under 16 to stay in this accommodation. This is in line with the practices of the trust concerning child protection issues, since the accommodation contains communal facilities which are deemed inappropriate for children as they are used by other adults staying in the accommodation. RCDM therefore can also provide a list of local bed-and-breakfast accommodation which has been inspected by Defence Medical Welfare Services. If there is a medical recommendation that relatives of a patient should stay with them, the MOD provides travel and subsistence costs for two relatives for up to seven days, although this can be extended if medical advice recommends it. If patients are not listed as VSI or SI, the individual's regiment can also pay for family travel. Such decisions are made at individual regiment level.

The Defence Medical Rehabilitation Centre (DMRC) at Headley Court also has a facility where family members visiting patients can stay. Costs for this facility are met by DMRC.

Submarines (Pollution)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the levels of radioactive pollution on foreshores close to the locations of Z berths (a) in Portsmouth harbour and (b) elsewhere; and if he will make a statement. [64784]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Science and Technology Laboratory (DSTL) Environmental Sciences Department monitors the level of radioactive pollution on foreshores close to the locations of Z berths as part of its wider marine environmental survey programme, the findings from which are published annually. Z Berths are monitored on a regular basis of between one and five years depending on their location. The Portsmouth Z berth is normally monitored every two years.

DSTL's November 2005 report, entitled "Marine Environmental Radioactivity Surveys at Nuclear Submarine Berths 2004", includes information on samples taken in Portsmouth harbour. The report concluded that there was no radiological hazard to the public during 2004 as a result of operational nuclear-powered submarines. Copies of the report will be made available in the Library of the House.

Unspent Budget

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much of the budget for his Department remained unspent in the 2005-06 financial year. [70614]

Mr. Ingram: We shall publish figures as soon as they are available. Provisional figures will appear in the Public Expenditure Provisional Outturn which will be published around the middle of July and audited figures in our Annual Report and Accounts which is planned for publication before the summer recess.

Urban Warfare (Training)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the amount of training army units have received in all-arms urban warfare in recent years. [65444]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 563W, to the right hon. and learned Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram).

It is assessed that all infantry units receive sufficient urban warfare training in accordance with the collective training levels required of their formation commanders.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of the staff in her Department is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [69128]

Mr. Lammy: The percentage of staff in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport who are (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled as at 31 December 2005, broken down by grade is as follows. (Data on disability are collected on a voluntary self-declaration basis.)

Grade	Male	Female	Percentage Disabled[1]
SCS	70	30	—
A/A Upper	59	41	—
B	51	49	—
C	46	54	—
D	37	63	8

[1] As the Department has less than five disabled members of staff within the grades SCS to C we are unable to give further information on grounds of confidentiality.

Millennium Projects

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 24 April 2006, Official Report, columns 1358-59W, on millennium projects, if she will collect information on the performance of each project; and what monitoring of the performance of each project is undertaken. [69888]

Mr. Caborn: Like all lottery distributing bodies, the Millennium Commission takes decisions independently on which projects to support with national lottery proceeds. Under Financial Directions from the Department, the Commission is required to undertake appropriate monitoring and evaluation of projects to make sure that, among other things, lottery funds are being used for the purposes intended, that they represent value for money and that they are delivering the benefits identified in the application to the Commission. Under the Directions, a report on monitoring and evaluation studies carried out by or for the Commission must be included in the Commission's annual report to Parliament.

In view of the Commission's independent status, the Department does not collect information on, or separately monitor the performance of, its projects.

Recruitment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much (a) her Department and (b) its agencies spent on recruitment, search and selection agencies in each of the last five years. [68346]

Mr. Caborn: The Department and its agency does not separately identify the cost of recruitment, search and selection agencies from other recruitment costs. The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Television Licences

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether those who do not have a television set are required to inform Television Licensing that they do not require a TV licence. [69812]

Mr. Woodward: A television licence is required to install or use a television receiver, as defined in regulations made by the Secretary of State, rather than a television set. Members of the public who do not require a television licence are under no obligation to inform TV Licensing of the fact.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what discussions she has had with the (a) Department of Trade and Industry and (b) Department for Work and Pensions on the decision to stop selling television licences through the Post Office; [70335]

(2) if she will make a statement on the BBC's decision to stop selling television licences through the Post Office; [70311]

(3) what discussions her Department has had with the BBC on the decision to stop selling television licences through the Post Office; [70412]

(4) if she will list the different ways that viewers are able to purchase television licences; [70415]

(5) how many and what proportion of television licences were bought through the Post Office in the last period for which figures are available; [70416]

(6) what the average annual cost to the Government of selling television licences through the Post Office has been over the last three years. [70414]

Mr. Woodward: The award of the contract for over the counter sales of television licences is a commercial matter for the BBC as television licensing authority. The Government have no power to intervene in such matters, nor would it be appropriate to comment on the corporation's decision. The Secretary of State has not therefore discussed the matter with Cabinet colleagues but DCMS officials have liaised with the DTI to keep them informed of developments. Officials were informed by the BBC of the proposal to put the contract out to tender and were notified by the corporation prior to the announcement of the award of the contract.

The BBC, as licensing authority, bears the costs of licence fee collection direct. The Government have not incurred any costs relating to the sale of television licences through the Post Office since 1991.

As regards the different ways in which the television licence can be paid and the number and proportion of licences currently brought through the Post Office, I have asked the BBC's head of revenue management to consider the questions raised by the hon. Member and to write to him direct. Copies of the reply will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Tourism

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to promote tourism in south-east London. [70183]

Mr. Woodward: DCMS supports the tourism industry as a whole. South-east London benefits from my Department's funding for VisitBritain, which for 2006-07 includes £35.5 million for marketing Britain as a tourism destination overseas, and £12.4 million for marketing England to the domestic tourism market.

Responsibility for tourism policy in London has been devolved to the Mayor and the Greater London Authority (GLA), which works with the London Development Agency (LDA) and Visit London. My Department contributes £1.9 million to the GLA in support of this role and the LDA spent a total of around £24 million supporting tourism in 2005-06, including over £11 million on tourism marketing and promotion for London and its sub-regions. In south-east London, this includes working with South London Business and TourEast London to deliver market research and other business support.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much Government funding has been allocated to promote tourism to the south-west in 2006-07; and how much has been allocated to regional development agencies to promote tourism in the south-west in each of the last five years. [70246]

Mr. Woodward: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) supports the tourism industry as a whole. The south-west benefits from my Department's funding for VisitBritain, which for 2006-07 includes £35.5 million for marketing Britain as a tourism destination overseas, and £12.4 million for marketing England to the domestic tourism market.

The regional development agencies (RDAs) took on strategic responsibility for tourism in the regions in 2003. Since then DCMS has contributed £3.6 million each year to the single pot in support of this role, which is allocated to the RDAs according to the Department for Trade and Industry's single pot funding formula.

All RDAs, including the south-west regional development agency (SWRDA), recognise the importance of the visitor economy to their regions. SWRDA has allocated £2.2 million to direct support for the industry in 2006-07, including marketing, as well as a further £500,000 for tourism skills development and £500,000 towards a regional data management system and the development of EnglandNet.

Before 2003-04, DCMS grant in aid passed to the English Tourism Council and was then allocated to the regional tourist boards, including South West Tourism, which was allocated £663,000 in 2002-03, £814,000 in 2001-02 and £563,000 in 2000-01.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total expenditure by Visit Britain was in each of the last five years. [70247]

Mr. Woodward: VisitBritain is responsible for promoting Britain to the rest of the world and England to the British.

Expenditure is funded by grant in aid provided by DCMS and non government funding raised by VisitBritain in relation to its marketing and promotion activities.

Total expenditure

			£ million
	Grant funded expenditure	Non grant funded expenditure	Total expenditure
2001-02	49.7	15.7	65.4
2002-03	53.8	21.6	75.4
2003-04	48.4	19.5	67.9
2004-05	48.4	15.5	63.9
2005-06	48.9	21.5	70.4

Additional amounts of £14.2 million in 2001-02, and £19 million in 2002-03, were allocated from the reserve to help the tourism sector to recover from the impacts of the foot and mouth outbreak, and the terrorist attacks of 11 September 2001.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress is being made in providing alternative sources of income through humanitarian aid for poppy growers in Afghanistan. [69734]

Hilary Benn: DFID's focus in Afghanistan has changed from mainly humanitarian assistance in 2002 to an approach now looking to secure long-term development.

The UK is playing a major role in supporting the development of legal livelihood opportunities in Afghanistan. In 2005-06, DFID spent almost £50 million for this purpose. In 2006-07 the level of spending is expected to continue at similar levels.

DFID is a major supporter to the National Solidarity Programme, which has helped nearly 7,000 villages prioritise their own development needs, and to plan and implement community-led small scale infrastructure projects. The UK is providing £20 million to the Micro-Finance Investment Support Facility of Afghanistan (MISFA) to provide small loans to the rural poor, particularly women. By funding the National Rural Access Programme (NRAP) the UK is helping those currently dependent on illegal production and processing of drugs, to gain productive employment constructing and repairing essential infrastructure such as roads.

These projects are complemented by a £3 million fund to develop and promote alternative livelihood options for rural Afghans currently economically dependent on opium poppy. The fund is helping to identify local, national and international market opportunities for alternative crop varieties. Under our support for alternative agricultural livelihoods, 26,500 Afghan farmers have received important agricultural inputs.

Burma

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent representations he has received about providing assistance and support for (a) women's networks, (b) civil society groups, (c) democracy groups and (d) organisations working with refugees and internally displaced peoples in Burma. [68235]

Mr. Thomas: DFID regularly receives representations about providing assistance and support in Burma to each of these four groups and considers each seriously. For example, in planning a new fund to tackle HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis in Burma we are carrying out extensive and detailed discussions with opposition groups, civil society groups and other non-governmental organisations. Representations have recently been made at meetings of the All-Party Parliamentary Group on Burma on 28 February, 19 and 26 April, and the Burma Forum in Brussels on 29 March on behalf of all of these groups, with the greatest emphasis on organisations working with refugees and internally displaced peoples.

In Rangoon, the regular representations we receive from a wide range of groups are most frequently concerned with providing support to civil society in Burma. I have also recently received representations from a number of members of the House of Commons arguing for increased support to organisations working with refugees and internally displaced people living near the Thai-Burma border. In response to the increased vulnerability of those internally displaced people, DFID is, with the UN and local community leaders, currently assessing the possibility of providing assistance to these internally displaced people through local community mechanisms. Subsequently, DFID will be carrying out a fundamental review of the level and means of our support to internally displaced people and refugees in Burma.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent representations he has received about providing aid and support for (a) Burmese refugees living in Thailand, (b) internally displaced people living on the Thai-Burma border and (c) vulnerable groups living in Burma. [68241]

Mr. Thomas: DFID regularly receives representations about providing assistance and support in Burma to each of these groups and considers each seriously. For example, DFID's support to the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) (£500,000 in each of the past two years) is intended to provide vital support to those in prison or in conflict-affected areas and our support to the Thai-Burma Border Consortium (£1,838,705 over three years) is intended to assist Burmese refugees living in Thailand. Representations have recently been made at meetings of the All-Party Parliamentary Group on Burma on 28 February, 19 and 26 April, and the Burma Forum in Brussels on 29 March on behalf of all of these groups, with the greatest emphasis on internally displaced people living on the Thai-Burma border.

In Rangoon, the regular representations we receive from a wide range of groups are most frequently concerned with vulnerable groups living in Burma. I have also received recently representations from a number of honourable members arguing for increased support to organisations working with refugees and internally displaced people living near the Thai-Burma border.

In response to the increased vulnerability of those internally displaced people, DFID is, with the UN and local community leaders, currently assessing the possibility of providing assistance to these internally displaced people through local community mechanisms. Subsequently, DFID will be carrying out a fundamental review of the level and means of our support to internally displaced people and refugees in Burma.

Ethiopia

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will take steps to ensure that development funding for basic services in Ethiopia is channelled through non-governmental organisations. [70036]

Hilary Benn: We provide aid through non-governmental organisations in Ethiopia and are identifying ways to increase this. But NGOs in Ethiopia do not have the capacity to absorb the amounts of aid required to make significant progress on health and education and the other Millennium Development Goals; only the Government have sufficient reach to provide essential basic services for the entire country. For this reason we are also working with the Government of Ethiopia and other donors to develop a Protection of Basic Services Grant to deliver basic services such as education, health and water to the poor, with appropriate monitoring safeguards.

Malaria

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent representations he has received on the use of DDT to tackle malaria; and what recent discussions he has had with international bodies on this matter. [69988]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has received no recent representations and has not had any recent discussions with international bodies on the use of DDT to tackle malaria. However DFID does look to the World Health Organisation (WHO) to provide updated technical information on the most appropriate strategies to control malaria.

Current WHO guidance is that DDT may be used for mosquito control provided that it is used only for indoor residual spraying (IRS); it is effective; the material is manufactured according to WHO specifications, and the necessary safety precautions are taken for its use and disposal.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the impact of the use of DDT on rates of malaria in South Africa. [69989]

Hilary Benn: Data for the number of cases of Malaria is available from the South African Department of Health's website (http://www.doh.gov.za/). The following are the official annual figures for the number of malaria cases, the number of deaths and the case fatality rate in South Africa.

	Total cases	Total deaths	Case fatality rate
1999	51,444	406	0.8

Approximately 13 per cent. of the South African population are at risk from endemic malaria, another 6 per cent. face the risk of epidemic malaria. The provinces of Mpumulanga, Kwa Zulu-Natal and Limpopo suffer the greatest burden of the disease and it is in these provinces where DDT is used, after its reintroduction in 2001.

The decline in cases in the table starting in 2001 is noticeable, though there are no reports to substantiate the extent to which this effect was due to the re-introduction of DDT. Both the South African Department of Health and the World Health Organisation (WHO) propose that it is a cost-effective prevention strategy for the provinces which provides a prevention service for a population of some 4.2 million.

DDT use was originally stopped in South Africa because of concerns about its environmental impact. It was reintroduced after careful assessment to demonstrate its effective and safe use. The Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants states that countries should only use DDT for malaria control under guidance from WHO, which South Africa is doing.

DFID supports the WHO managed Southern Africa Malaria Control Programme, with a grant of £18 million over six years. The project will finish in 2007. WHO has been successful in working with Governments in the region to revise and update their policies concerning all aspects of malaria control, including the safe and effective use of DDT for indoor residual spraying. A significant amount of material can be accessed at http://www.malaria.org.zw/

WHO is also organising a conference in Brazzaville in June of this year to review experiences in the use of DDT in Africa. DFID has asked to be kept up to date with the lessons and recommendations from this meeting.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the recent report in The Lancet on the World Bank and malaria treatment. [69990]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has carefully reviewed the critical report published in The Lancet, as well as the World Bank's response in the same issue. As a member of the donor group for the Bank's malaria booster programme DFID will continue to hold the Bank accountable to its commitment to increase its financing to malaria control, and improve the effectiveness of this work.

In its Global Strategy and Booster Programme on malaria the World Bank recognises that from 2000 to 2005 its investments in malaria control were not sufficient for success on a large scale. DFID is encouraged that new agreements totalling US $62 million made under the Booster programme to DR Congo, Eritrea, Niger and Zambia do represent increased commitment and demonstrate demand from countries for Bank lending for malaria control.

DFID supports the World Bank's position that countries should be able to define their own drug policies based on local patterns of resistance, and with the support of the World Health Organisation (WHO), who provide updated technical information on the most appropriate strategies to control malaria. In large countries there may be cause for different policies in different parts of the country.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with the World Bank on the use of chloroquine to treat malaria. [69991]

Mr. Thomas: As a member of the donor group for the World Bank's booster programme on malaria, DFID is in close contact with World Bank officials on progress in this programme, and issues such as the procurement of drugs that arise with the programme. DFID supports the World Bank's position that countries should be able to define their own drug policies based on local patterns of drug resistance, and with support and technical guidance from specialist agencies such as the World Health Organisation (WHO). In large countries there may be cause for different policies in different parts of the country.

DFID also looks to specialist agencies such as the World Health Organisation to provide international guidance on the choice of antimalarial drugs for malaria treatment programmes. WHO advises that chloroquine is still effective for certain strains of malaria, but when resistance develops artemisinin-based combination therapy (ACT) should be used, which is more effective and can delay the emergence of resistance.

Malnutrition (Millennium Goals)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the impact of malnutrition on the ability to meet the other Millennium Development Goals. [69963]

Mr. Thomas: As highlighted in the recent United Nations (UN) report, "Progress for Children: A Report Card on Nutrition", several key Millennium Development targets may be missed due to nutritional problems of children in developing countries. DFID shares the concerns of the report and is convinced of the critical importance of hunger and malnutrition to achieving, not only the Millennium Development Goal (MDG) for hunger (Goal 1), but also to achieving other MDGs.

Children who are malnourished in their early years never reach their full physical or mental potential, trapping them in poverty. They are less likely to attend school and, when they do, they perform poorly (Goal 2, Education). Women are often disproportionately affected by food shortages as in the family they often eat last and least. Educating girls and ensuring good nutrition empowers women and girls (Goal 3, Gender Equality). Child mortality (Goal 4) is dramatically affected by hunger, and malnutrition is implicated in two thirds of child deaths. A malnourished mother will give birth to a low weight child and is more likely to suffer complications during pregnancy and birth (Goal 5, Maternal Health). Finally, those who are malnourished are more susceptible to disease and are less likely to attend school and be able to afford medicine (Goal 6, Combating Disease).

DFID is working closely with the UN, other development partners and developing country governments to address the affects of malnutrition on the MDGs. DFID continues to respond to humanitarian needs and has committed £40 million to the immediate relief effort in the Horn of Africa and £67 million to the southern Africa crisis. DFID is also putting in place social protection mechanisms or welfare transfers; cash, food or other forms of in-kind transfers. They provide predictable and long-term assistance for the chronically hungry to help people before a crisis develops. This includes a three-year commitment of £70 million to the Productive Safety Nets Programme which got under way in Ethiopia last year and is helping over 7.2 million people fight hunger and malnutrition.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he expects the Millennium Development Goal for reducing rates of child malnutrition to be met. [69964]

Hilary Benn: There is no Millennium Development Goal (MDG) which specifically looks at child malnutrition. However, MDG 1 seeks to eradicate extreme poverty and hunger and MDG 4 seeks to reduce child mortality. An indicator associated with MDG 1 is to reduce the proportion of underweight children by half and under MDG 4 there is an indicator to reduce the mortality of under five-year-olds by two thirds.

DFID does not make assessments of when individual goals are likely to be reached. However, we draw on data from the United Nations (UN). For both the indicators mentioned, the UN's latest assessment is that across the developing world as a whole, progress is insufficient to meet the targets by 2015—and in fact both are described as 'lagging far behind'.

DFID measures its progress against a set of public service agreement (PSA) targets, which tie in to the MDGs. In our 2005-08 PSA, DFID has adopted targets for selected countries in Africa and Asia. We have targets to reduce under-five mortality rates for girls and boys by 24 per 1,000 live births in Asia and by eight per 1,000 live births in Africa.

Progress against the PSA targets is assessed twice-yearly in DFID's autumn performance reports and departmental reports. The most recent analysis of progress against the PSA targets was published in DFID's departmental report 2006. The target for Asia was judged off track as the number of live births per 1,000 has reduced only by four. It is too early too tell whether the target for Africa will be reached by 2008, though a reduction of four per 1,000 live births has been achieved to date. The departmental report also gives details of how DFID is seeking to improve off track targets.

The departmental report 2006 was laid before Parliament on 9 May 2006. It is available both in hard copy in the Library of the House of Commons and electronically on DFID's website (http://www.dfid.gov.uk/pubs/files/departmental-report/default.asp).

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the recent UNICEF report on malnutrition in children; and what steps are being taken by his Department to improve malnutrition rates in developing countries. [69965]

Mr. Thomas: More than one quarter of all children under the age of five in developing countries are underweight. Poor nutrition contributes to half of the 11 million child deaths each year. Improving nutrition is essential in tackling poverty and is a critical factor in achieving the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). At international level the UK Government is one of the biggest donors to UNICEF. DFID has worked closely with UNICEF in the development of its health and nutrition strategy.

UNICEF's "Progress for Children: A Report Card on Nutrition", states that achieving improved nutrition requires action across sectors. DFID's approach to nutrition at country level has always been that it cannot be dealt with in isolation. DFID's support for better nutrition therefore encompasses improved food security, support for agricultural production, fisheries and market access, better water and sanitation, education and strengthening health services for women and children.

Particular strategies are implemented in areas of high HIV prevalence, following natural disasters and during conflict. To be successful, programmes to improve nutritional status must be integrated into wider country led poverty reduction strategies.

State Failures

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to tackle the indicators of state fragility and failure in Africa identified in the Failed States Index 2006. [69967]

Hilary Benn: There is no international agreement on what constitutes state fragility. A common way of estimating fragility is derived from the World Bank's Country Policy and Institutional Assessments (CPIA). CPIA scores divide low-income countries into five categories of performance plus an unranked group. The lowest two categories plus the unranked group are used by DFID and other donors as a list of fragile countries. Our understanding of fragility set out in our January 2005 policy paper 'Why we need to work more effectively in fragile states' is therefore similar to that of the "Failed State Index" but not the same.

Our policy on fragile states sets out how we can most effectively tackle the challenges and the underlying causes of weakness. Our approach includes support to early warning systems, analysis to understand the underlying political drivers of fragility and the funding of interventions that are tailored to the specific needs of those states where we work. But aid alone is not enough, and we work with others to help ensure that the international system as a whole works together to reduce fragility and address its causes.

In Africa we are working in the Sudan, Democratic Republic of Congo, Zimbabwe, Somalia and Sierra Leone—all states identified by the "Failed States Index". In each of these we have tailored our support to best tackle the fragility and support poverty reduction and growth.

A copy of the 2005 policy paper is available in the Library of the House.

Water Strategies

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which countries the UK is helping to develop their water strategies. [69525]

Hilary Benn: DFID is committed to helping achieve the Millennium Development Goal (MDG) targets of halving the proportion of people without access to safe water and basic sanitation by 2015. Our programmes are focussed on sub-Saharan Africa and parts of Asia, where achieving the target will be most difficult.

DFID's Water and Sanitation strategy was set out in the 2004 Water Action Plan. This included commitment to doubling spending on water in Africa to £95 million by 2008.

We are currently actively involved in seven African countries (Ethiopia, DRC, Malawi, Mozambique, Rwanda, Tanzania and Zambia), and through our funding of other agencies' programmes, we reach many other countries. In Asia, we have significant bilateral programmes on water and sanitation in China, India and Bangladesh. Our large humanitarian programmes in Iraq, Sudan and Afghanistan, also include assistance on provision of water and sanitation. We also provide core funding to the Global Water Partnership which assists countries in developing Integrated Water Resource Management Plans.

DFID closely monitors progress in water and sanitation and publishes regular updates on the DFID website. The latest update will published this month.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Post Office Card Account

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the progress of the pilot schemes for the migration of Post Office Card Account holders to banking facilities. [68272]

Mr. Plaskitt: We ran a number of small-scale pilots between 13 February and 10 March 2006. Now that they have concluded we are evaluating the results. We will share the results with the Post Office, and I will place a summary report of the findings in the Library.

Pathways to Work

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress is being made in engaging the private and voluntary sector in the Pathways to Work service. [68273]

Mrs. McGuire: Private and voluntary sector providers already play a key role in delivering a number of important programmes within our successful Pathways to Work programme. Their innovative approach has been a significant factor in helping over 21,000 people into work.

We want to draw further on the expertise and skills of a wide variety of organisations to help us to support people on incapacity benefits in getting back to work.

That is why we are currently consulting with a range of providers and stakeholders about our Pathways proposals and will announce our plans for future roll-out shortly.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress is being made in engaging the private and voluntary sector in the Pathways to Work service. [67335]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 3 May 2006]: Private and voluntary sector providers currently play a key role in delivering a number of important programmes within our Pathways to Work pilots—notably New Deal for Disabled People and many of the other programmes in the 'Choices' package.

Discussions are continuing on how we can further draw on the expertise and skills of a wide variety of organisations that can help us to get people off incapacity benefits and back into work. We are consulting with a range of providers and other stakeholders about our proposals and intend to announce our plans for future roll-out shortly.

Benefits

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on (a) jobseeker's allowance, (b) income support and (c) incapacity benefit claims later determined to be fraudulent in London in each year since 1997, broken down by London borough; and if he will make a statement. [57206]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 9 March 2006]: The information is not available.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on progress in reducing benefit fraud. [65080]

Mr. Plaskitt: In 2004-05 fraud across the benefit system was estimated to be less that 1 per cent. of total benefit expenditure at around £900 million; which is less than £1 billion for the first time since systematic measurement of fraud began.

We have firm targets to reduce fraud and error in the benefits which are most vulnerable to fraud. The target for reducing fraud and error in income support and jobseeker's allowance for working age people was 33 per cent. by March 2004, and 50 per cent. by March 2006. National Statistics published in December 2005 show that by March 2005, we had reduced fraud and error in income support and jobseeker's allowance by 44 per cent. Looking at fraud alone, this has reduced by more than two thirds compared to the 1998 baseline figure of 10.4 per cent.

We have set a challenging target to reduce levels of housing benefit fraud and error for working age claimants by 25 per cent. by 2006, and to maintain the 25 per cent. reduction by March 2008 against the 2002-03 baseline year. National Statistics published in January 2006 shows that by March 2005, housing benefit fraud has fallen by around 30 per cent. over a two-year period. However, over the same period there has been a 40 per cent. increase in customer error. The net effect of this is that fraud and error for working age claimants is now reported to be 2 per cent. above the baseline.

We are also taking steps to reduce customer error. We have an on-going programme of addressing complexity in benefits to make benefit rules easier and simpler for our customers to understand. Our processes and customer handling methods aim to make the claim making process straightforward thus lessening the opportunities for customers to make mistakes or leave out important information.

This shows we are getting results in preventing, detecting and deterring fraud. We have achieved this by a variety of methods. In 2004-05, through improved data matching, nearly 300,000 data anomalies were identified. The Targeting Fraud campaign has helped to increase public awareness of the problem of fraud. We now have a more appropriate sanctions regime. In 2004-05, in partnership with local authorities, we imposed nearly 43,000 prosecutions and sanctions—more than ever before and a fourfold increase since 1998. We have tightened our procedures to root out identity fraud. People are now required to verify their identity before they are allocated a national insurance number or have access to the benefits system. We have maintained the National Benefit Fraud Hotline, and for every £1 spent on its running costs, we identify overpayments of over £9 in defrauded benefit.

Despite these good results, we are not complacent and will maintain this hard work. Our efforts in the future will focus on using new technology available to us to stop fraud earlier before it enters the benefit system; increasing our ability to data match to include data from the private sector; exploring the use of new technologies, such as voice risk analysis; the proposed identity card, which will be a useful tool to combat identity and other frauds by verifying identity more effectively; continuing to warn fraudsters and potential fraudsters through the Targeting Benefit Fraud campaign and maintaining the National Benefit Fraud Hotline.

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many single parents in each ward in Doncaster North received income support on average in (a) 1984, (b) 1994, (c) 2004 and (d) the most recent year for which figures are available; and what proportion of all single parents this represented in each case. [68296]

Mr. Plaskitt: Income support data is not available at ward level prior to August 1999. The available information for lone parents in receipt of income support is in the table.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 27 March 2006, Official Report, column 719W, what year his Department published "Paying for Rented Housing: Non-Dependant Deductions from Housing Benefit"; and if he will commission an exercise to update this research. [67215]

[67217]

Child Support

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether the Child Support Agency deposited funds owed to Mrs. Joanna Stephenson, ref. (2) when Child Support Agency (CSA) payments to Mrs. Joanna Stephenson, ref. PCU/154933, will resume; when she will receive funds collected by the CSA since November 2002; and if he will make a statement; [70039]

(3) why the Child Support Agency (CSA) case of Mrs. Joanna Stephenson, ref. PCU/154933, ceased in November 2002; and if the CSA will pay compensation for errors in dealing with the case. [70040]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As the Chief Executive is currently unavailable, I am responding on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions three Parliamentary Questions regarding one of your constituents, case number 3210019483335. As all three questions relate to the same constituent, I will provide a joint response.

As details about individual cases are confidential I have written to you separately about this case.

Natascha Engel: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many single room rent restriction determinations there were in each year since October 1996. [68452]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information for single room rent determinations in England is in the table.

2. The table presents both the number of referrals assessed under the single room rent restriction and the number of referrals where this restriction is binding. Some referrals assessed under the single room rent restriction will be bound by other Rent Officer restrictions and some will not have their rent restricted.
3. The numbers of referrals are rounded to the nearest hundred.

Natascha Engel: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will amend the housing benefit regulations in line with the recommendation in the departmental research report number 243 that all care leavers and disabled people should be exempted from the single room rent restriction. [68454]

Mr. Plaskitt: Our Green Paper "A New Deal for Welfare: Empowering People to Work" sets out our proposals for extending the local housing allowance (LHA) across the private rented sector. The LHA scheme replaces the single room rent with a new shared room rate, which is based on a broader definition of shared properties. We will continue to look at the operation of the shared room rate as we move forward with housing benefit reform, but the underlying principles of the rate, that of encouraging work, remain.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

EU Arms Embargo

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations she has made to the European Union on the lifting of the EU arms embargo on China; and if she will make a statement. [70797]

Mr. McCartney: There have been no recent representations made to the European Council on lifting the EU arms embargo on China. The European Council decided in December 2003 to review the EU Arms Embargo on China. This review is ongoing and it was last discussed by EU Foreign Ministers at the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 13 December 2005. There is no consensus at present in the EU for lifting the embargo. The Government continue to fully implement the embargo.

EU Reform

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it is her Department's policy to endorse the EU Commission's call for a declaration of commitment to future institutional reform; and if she will make a statement. [71140]

Mr. Hoon: The UK welcomes the communication from the Commission "A Citizens Agenda Delivering Results for Europe". The communication stresses that the EU should now be focusing on practical policies which deliver practical results to citizens, and on the economic reforms needed to make the EU competitive in today's global economy.

The Commission recognises that there is as yet no consensus on the constitutional treaty and underlines the need to concentrate on delivery. The Government are open to the idea of a political declaration setting out Europe's values and ambitions and believe that the real challenge ahead for the next year is delivering on the policy agenda.

Kifle Tigneh Abate

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the trial of Kifle Tigneh Abate has begun in Addis Ababa; what representations she made to the Ethiopian Government prior to the trial; and what reports her Department has received from Michael Ellman, the international observer of the trial. [70037]

Mr. McCartney: The trial of Kifle Tigneh Abate started on 10 May in parallel with the trial of other Coalition for Unity and Democracy (CUD) members. My right hon. We have not yet received a report from Michael Ellman, who is acting on behalf of the European Union.

Trade Deals

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1676W, on trade deals, how many bilateral trade negotiations the European Commission has (a) conducted and (b) signed on behalf of the UK in each of the last eight years. [70201]

Mr. Hoon: The European Commission has competence for EU trade policy and conducts all trade negotiations on behalf of, and on the basis of a mandate from, EU member states.

Within the last eight years, and in addition to the trade agreements relating to enlargement of the EU, the following EU trade agreements have entered into force: Mexico, the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Croatia, Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, Morocco, Chile, South Africa and the Cotonou Agreement (with 77 Africa, Caribbean and Pacific countries).

NORTHERN IRELAND

Advertising Review

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the Answer of 27 March 2006, Official Report, column 699W, on recruitment advertising, when he expects the Government advertising review to be published. [71125]

Mr. Hanson: The final report on the review of Government advertising in Northern Ireland was published on 14 April this year. Copies of the report have been placed in the Library of the House.

Ambulances

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the (a) facilities and (b) extent of cover planned for the new ambulance station on the west bank of the Foyle in Derry; and if he will make a statement. [69686]

Paul Goggins: The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (MAS) currently operates from 32 locations throughout Northern Ireland but has identified additional sites from which to deploy ambulances to improve response times for life threatening emergency calls. One of the first of those sites is shared with the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service Station at Northland Road on the Foyle West Bank and became operational earlier this month.

Initially, one ambulance from Altnagelvin Station will be assigned to Northland Road during daytime hours seven days per week and on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. In addition, when Altnagelvin has more than one ambulance available and the Northland Road location requires cover, the additional vehicle will be dynamically deployed there. The effectiveness of these arrangements will be reviewed after one month's operation and regularly thereafter. However, preliminary information suggests that ambulance response times have improved in the West of Derry City since the Northland Road site became operational.

Arterial Routes (South Down)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to improve the main arterial routes from the constituency of South Down to the Belfast/Dublin corridor. [68251]

David Cairns: The chief executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 12 May 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about steps to improve the main arterial routes from the constituency of South Down to the Belfast/Dublin corridor.

I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

You may recall that in my letter to you dated 19 December 2005, I advised that these routes are assessed to be the A50 through Katesbridge, the A25 through Rathfriland, the A25/B8 through Hilltown and the A2 through Kilkeel, Rostrevor and Warrenpoint.

The information I provided then of the improvement works currently planned with the estimated costs has been updated as follows:-

A50—road realignment at Corbet Lough in 2006/07 and 2007/08 at a cost of £375,000;

A25—the junction improvements scheme at Burrenreagh Road, Castlewellan due in 2005/067 at a cost of £40,000 has been delayed until 2006/07 due to difficulties with land acquisition;

A25—road realignment and visibility improvement at Burrenbridge Road, Castlewellan in 2006/07 at a cost of £100,000;

A25—the resurfacing at Windsor Hill, Newry in 2006/07 at a cost of £65,000 has been delayed due to ongoing work by utilities;

A25—junction improvements at Moneygore Road, Rathfriland in 2007/08 at a cost of £20,000;

B8—road realignment and visibility improvement at Crobane on Hilltown Road, Newry, in 2006/07 at a cost of £400,000;

B8—a resurfacing scheme in 2006/07 at Castlewellan Road, Hilltown at a cost of £160,000; and

A2—the junction signals scheme at Moor Road, Kilkeel due in 2005/06 at a cost of £90,000 has been delayed until 2006/07 due to difficulties with land acquisition.

The routes A2, A25, and B2 will also benefit from junction improvements as a result of the Al Beech Hill to Cloghogue, Newry dualling scheme. This work is currently scheduled to start in 2007.

Business Improvements Districts

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce legislation to enable the introduction of business improvements districts in Northern Ireland. [69677]

Mr. Hanson: Given the changes expected to arise from the Review of Public Administration (RPA) and the likelihood of a number of regeneration functions transferring to local government, the Government consider that it would not be appropriate to proceed with legislation to introduce BIDs in Northern Ireland at this time. In addition, the legislative time scale for bringing forward proposals for RPA preclude the opportunity to bring forward BIDs legislation for some time yet.

Code of Sustainable Building

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Government plans to implement the Code of Sustainable Building in Northern Ireland. [64800]

Mr. Hanson: The implementation of the voluntary "Code for Sustainable Homes" in Northern Ireland will be informed by the implementation plans for the Sustainable Development Strategy for NI which was launched by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on 9 May; revisions planned for the code following the consultation exercise which was completed in England in March 2006; and following limited consultation with the local construction industry and other stakeholders, which is scheduled to commence at the next meeting of the Construction Industry Forum for Northern Ireland in June 2006.

Communications

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the percentage of communications between the general public and the Department for the Environment for Northern Ireland made (a) by post, (b) by telephone, (c) in person and (d) by e-mail during 2005. [69268]

David Cairns: It is not possible to provide the hon. Member with the answer in the format he has requested.

I am advised that of the 633 pieces of correspondence received in the Minister of the Environment's Private Office during 2005 nearly 97 per cent. was in the form of a letter and just over 3 per cent. was by e-mail. No records are kept of the contact made either in-person or by telephone.

Community Differentials

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what targets have been set for reducing the community differentials between Catholics and Protestants in relation to (a) economic inactivity, (b) unemployment and (c) housing allocation. [66373]

Mr. Hanson: The report of the task force on employability and long-term unemployment included a number of performance indicators and targets relating to employment and economic activity. A progress report was published in December 2004. There are no targets for reducing differentials between Catholics and Protestants in respect of housing allocation. All social housing is allocated on the basis of need.

We remain committed to eliminating the differentials in unemployment rates between the two communities and will take into account recent information and research. Government continue to direct resources and effort of those in greatest need in a way that will reduce social economic differentials between different sectors of society, and will monitor progress. I have arranged for copies of the documents to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Consumer Advice Handbook

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many copies of the Consumer Advice Handbook have been produced by the Consumer Council in Northern Ireland in 2006. [70425]

Maria Eagle: 10,000 copies were produced in 2006.

Counterfeit Money

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many convictions have been secured in Northern Ireland against people involved in (a) handling and (b) producing counterfeit money in the last five years. [69191]

Mr. Hanson: The number of convictions for handling and producing counterfeit money are included in Table 1 and cover the calendar years 1999 to 2003. Data beyond 2003 are not yet available. Figures are based on the principal offence rule, thus only the most serious offence with which an offender is charged is included.

Table 1: Number of convictions for handling and producing counterfeit money 1999-2003

	Handling[1]	Producing[2]	Total convictions for counterfeiting offences
1999	19	6	25
2000	14	1	15
2001	16	1	17
2002	26	2	28
2003	16	1	17

[1] Convictions include the offences of "tendering counterfeit currency", "possessing counterfeit currency with intent to use" and "possessing counterfeit currency".
[2] Convictions include the offences of "counterfeiting" and "counterfeiting with intent to use".

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of staff in each department in Northern Ireland, including the Northern Ireland Office, is (a) male, (b) female, (c) Protestant, (d) Roman Catholic and (e) disabled, broken down by grade. [69236]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is set out in the following tables and includes staff in the NI Departments and Agencies and the Northern Ireland Office (including members of the Home Civil Service). This reflects the position at 1 January 2006.

Electricity Supply (Limavady)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answers of 28 February 2006, Official Report, column 665W, on mains electricity supplies, and 9 March 2006, Official Report, column 1736W, on electricity supply (Limavady), what the cost would be of locating the power lines in the area concerned underground. [69272]

Maria Eagle: Northern Ireland Electricity (NIE) estimates that, subject to the outcome of technical feasibility studies, undergrounding the electric lines in the Limavady area would cost in the order of £2-£3million.

Fishing

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board to promote fishing holidays in Northern Ireland. [65865]

Maria Eagle: The internet is a key marketing tool for providing detailed information on all aspects of angling. The Tourist Board's website www.discovernorthernireland.com/angling.aspx provides details and contacts on angling waters, licences, permits, tackle and bait, boat hire, ghillies and local angling events.

NITB further markets the angling product through familiarisation trips for angling journalists, media and tour operators, and attendance at specialist shows in Great Britain, Europe and Republic of Ireland.

Tourism Ireland represents NITB and the angling product on the international market. A suite of angling guides has been produced covering game, coarse, sea and pike fishing in the island of Ireland, distributed at all angling shows and servicing consumer enquiries.

The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure (DCAL) promotes angling in Northern Ireland under the tourism Ireland banner at angling fairs and shows in Great Britain, France, Holland and Denmark. DCAL also takes stands at angling fairs in the Republic of Ireland. DCAL has developed a website promoting the public angling estate, which is specifically aimed at tourist anglers with direct links to travel and accommodation providers—www.dcal-fishingni.gov.uk

Free Passports (Senior Citizens)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will reduce the age at which free passports are provided to senior citizens. [69194]

Joan Ryan: I have been asked to reply.

The decision to give free passports for those born on or before 2 September 1929 was announced on 19 May 2004. This was a special concession intended to recognise the sacrifices made by adults of the World War two generation, whether in the services or on the home front. It would therefore not be appropriate, and there are no plans, to extend the scheme by reducing the qualifying age.

Human Rights Commission

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the running costs of the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission; and what plans he has to change its annual budget. [7576]

Mr. Hanson: The Commission's annual budget is currently £1.35 million. There are no plans to change the budget in the current spending review period (April 2005-March 2008).

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications were received for the position of Chief Commissioner of the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission; how many were shortlisted for the position; and what the nationality was of each applicant. [7578]

Mr. Hanson: There were two appointment processes for the Chief Commissioner post. The interview panel on the first process could not recommend an appointment.

Applicants were not asked to confirm their nationality.

La Mon House Bombing

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he plans to meet the victims of the La Mon House bombing. [69670]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has agreed to meet the hon. Lady and the victims of the La Mon House bombing as soon as a meeting can be arranged.

MOT

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many vehicles were tested at each of the MOT test centres in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [71126]

David Cairns: The following table details all MOT tests undertaken in Northern Ireland in the last five years.

New Build Housing Programme

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the legislative framework will be for the transfer of the management of the new build housing programme from the Department of Social Development to the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. [68254]

Mr. Hanson: Consultation on the Housing (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 is currently under way and responses are due by 21 July 2006. On receipt of responses, amendments will be made to the order if necessary. Following on from this the appropriate legislative route will be followed and it is hoped that the legislation will be effective from April 2007.

Northern Ireland Civil Service

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many vacancies there are in the Northern Ireland civil service at (a) AO, (b) EOII,

(c) EO1 and (d) SO grades, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [68257]

Mr. Hanson: Details of vacancies in the Northern Ireland civil service at (a) AO, (b) EO11, (c) EO1 and (d) SO grades, broken down by parliamentary constituency are shown in the following table. These figures relate to vacancies for which Departments have current financial provision and are within the departmental headcount.

The table also shows identified surpluses for each grade.

Railway Maintenance

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent in the past 10 years on maintenance of the railway line between (a) Bangor and Belfast, (b) Larne and Belfast and (c) Lisburn and Newry. [67640]

David Cairns: Information has been provided by Translink on the maintenance costs from 1999-2000 to 2004-05 with estimated costs for 2005-06 as shown in the following table. Other cost details are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The maintenance costs relate to work on the permanent way, signalling and structures but exclude the major works undertaken in recent years for track relays on all these lines.

Regional Development Strategy

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he plans to undertake the five year review of the regional development strategy; and what the timetable will be for that review. [68252]

David Cairns: The first five-year review of the regional development strategy commenced with a re-assessment of housing figures. This work was the subject of a public examination in February this year. The intention is to publish revised uplifted figures in May. In addition, the Department will publish a consultation document on all other aspects of the RDS in May for a three-month consultation period. The objective is to publish the final document on these aspects by the end of the year.

Religious Discrimination

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 501W, on religious discrimination, what the total cost was of investigating complaints of discrimination for religious belief or political opinion in each of the last 10 years. [69238]

Maria Eagle: The Department does not record separately the staff costs of the fair employment tribunal, dealing with religious or political discrimination cases, within the total tribunal service costs. The following table shows the estimated cost of staff dealing with fair employment cases based on the relevant percentage of the religious and political discrimination cases as a total number of cases received by the tribunal service plus the cost of fees paid to fair employment tribunal part-time panel members.

Road Maintenance/Safety

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent over the past 10 years on maintenance of (a) the A8 road between Larne and Belfast, (b) the A2 road between Carrickfergus and Belfast, (c) the A1 road between Lisburn and Newry and (d) the A26 road between Antrim and Ballymena. [67639]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 12 May 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding how much has been spent over the past 10 years on maintenance of (a) the A8 road between Larne and Belfast, (b) the A2 road between Carrickfergus and Belfast, (c) the A1 road between Lisburn and Newry and (d) the A26 road between Antrim and Ballymena.

As this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

Unfortunately the particular information you requested is not available because Roads Service does not record maintenance spend against individual roads or class of roads. We only record expenditure incurred by Roads Service on maintenance activities and on capital (major and minor) road improvement schemes for each District Council area.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to ensure that road safety education officers are allowed to attend District Road Safety Community Committee meetings in Northern Ireland. [68250]

David Cairns: The principal aim of the Department of the Environment's Road Safety Education Officers is the education and training of children and young people in road safety and, while not the limit of their activities, this takes up the majority of their time.

The decision to withdraw Road Safety Education Officers from attending Road Safety Committee meetings as a matter of course does not mean that Committees cannot avail of their support and advice. This is an operational matter and the Department will consider any reasonable request for support on a case-by-case basis balanced against other priorities.

School Buses

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many school bus accidents there have been in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [67068]

Maria Eagle: The number of school bus accidents in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years is set out in the following table. The vast majority of the incidents/accidents recorded are of a minor nature and do not involve injury to children.

The information relates to Education and Library Board vehicles and Translink buses. Details are not available for accidents involving Private Operator vehicles.

School Reductions

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the (a) timetable and (b) process will be for the reduction in the number of schools in each board area under the Review of Public Administration. [69664]

Maria Eagle: The Review of Public Administration does not require a reduction in the number of schools. Rationalisation of the estate is required because of the reduction in the number of pupils, which is expected to decline further over the coming years. There is no timetable for the reduction in the number of schools in each board area. Where it is proposed to close a school or amalgamate two or more schools, this will follow the normal process, which involves the publication of a development proposal, a two-month consultation period, followed by a decision by the Department for Education.

Schools (Financial Balance)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the end of year financial balance was for each (a) grammar school and (b) non-grammar secondary school in Northern Ireland in the last available year. [68545]

Maria Eagle: The following tables provide details of the financial balance at the end of the 2004-05 financial year for each voluntary grammar and grant-maintained integrated secondary school. Schools in both of these sectors receive their funding directly from the Department of Education.

These tables also cover controlled integrated, controlled grammar and other secondary schools in three off the five education and library boards (the western, north eastern and south eastern). The requested information in respect of schools in the other two boards (Belfast and Southern) is not available as these two boards have not yet published their 2004-05 local management of schools outturn statements. When these have been published copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Copies of the published 2003-04 local management of schools outturn statements for all five education and library boards are available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Sewage Services

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Water Service is meeting EU standards for sewage treatment in Northern Ireland. [68116]

David Cairns: During 2004—the most recent year for which verified compliance data are currently available—seven out of 35 relevant Water Service waste water treatment works did not meet the requirements of the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive (UWWTD) as they did not have the required secondary treatment. In addition 13 works failed to meet either the effluent quality standards or the monitoring requirements of the UWWTD.

Initial assessment of 2005 data indicates an improvement in compliance compared with 2004.

Over the three year period to 2007-08 some £290 million is being invested in upgrading Waste Water Treatment Works (WWTWs) to ensure compliance with EC directive standards. Since the compliance assessment of 2004, the Water Service Capital Works Programme has delivered new WWTWs at Culmore, Omagh, Cookstown and Ballyclare, all of which are now capable of producing UWWTD quality effluent. The new works at Larne was completed in early 2006 and, in addition, Carrickfergus and Newtownabbey are scheduled for completion in mid-2006.

In addition, work has commenced on the new North Coast WWTW to resolve compliance requirements at Portrush, Portstewart and Coleraine. In addition, Water Service is pursuing the use of public private partnership (PPP) investment to complement conventionally funded programmes. Initial PPP programmes for wastewater and sludge treatment, currently estimated at some £122 million, are being taken forward for detailed planning and procurement.

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action is being taken to avoid fines for not meeting the EU standards for sewage treatment in Northern Ireland; and what level of fines could be imposed if standards are not met. [68145]

Maria Eagle: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Mrs. Katharine Bryan, dated 12 May 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about what action is being taken to avoid fines for not meeting the EU standards for sewage treatment in Northern Ireland; and what level of fines could be imposed if standards are not met. (68145). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

Water Service recognises that not all of its waste water treatment works are fully compliant with the effluent discharge standards set out in the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive. The nine locations which the Commission identified as having failed to meet the Directive requirements to have secondary treatment in place by 31 December 2000 are at Bangor, Donaghadee, Carrickfergus, Coleraine, Londonderry, Larne, Newtownabbey, Omagh and Portrush. A major capital investment programme is currently underway across Northern Ireland to address deficiencies in the sewerage infrastructure and to achieve compliance as quickly as possible. Since 2000/01, investment on improvements to waste water treatment works has increased tenfold, from approximately £12 million per year to some £122 million per year in 2005/06. Work has been completed at Londonderry, Omagh and Larne and significant levels of expenditure will continue to be invested as Water Service strives to meet the requirements as soon as possible.

It is not possible to specify the level of fines that could be imposed by the European Commission on a particular Member State. Such fines take into account the seriousness and duration of the breach of compliance, the ability of the Member State to pay, and the profile of the Member State within the European Union. They may comprise a lump sum and, or, a penalty.

Water Services

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many domestic properties in Northern Ireland are estimated to be without a mains water supply. [69461]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Katharine Bryan, dated 12 May 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about how many domestic properties in Northern Ireland are estimated to be without a mains water supply (69461). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

It is estimated that less than 1% of domestic properties in Northern Ireland are not connected to the mains water supply. Water Service does not, at present, have a database of all domestic properties connected to mains water. However, a comprehensive customer database is currently being developed in preparation for the proposed introduction of domestic charging from April 2007 and this will identify any domestic properties not connected to the mains water supply.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what procedures are in place for regular testing of the quality of tap water in domestic properties in Northern Ireland. [69470]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Mrs. Katharine Bryan, dated 12 May 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about what procedures are in place for regular testing of the quality of tap water in domestic properties in Northern Ireland (69470). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

The Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations (NI) 2002 necessitate a thorough and extensive water sampling programme to be undertaken, to monitor water quality throughout the supply and distribution systems. The sampling locations and frequencies for the monitoring of drinking water quality are specified in the Regulations. The results and procedures are audited by the Drinking Water Inspectorate. The mandatory sampling programmes requires water samples to be collected regularly at water treatment works, at service reservoirs and water towers used to store treated water, and at customers' taps in the water supply zone.

During 2005, the latest date for which data are available, a total of 57,758 parameters were tested and 99.73% were found to be satisfactory. The results of all unsatisfactory samples are reported to the Drinking Water Inspector along with details of the reasons for the failures and the actions considered necessary by Water Service to rectify the position.

WALES

Consultants

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the companies which were paid consultancy fees by his Department in 2005-06; how much each was paid; and what each of the companies was used to accomplish. [69689]

Mr. Hain: None.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for Ministers of State in his Department on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [68972]

Mr. Hain: As required by the Ministerial Code and Travel for Ministers, we have made the most efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. The total cost of overnight accommodation overseas for the Secretary of State for Wales is:

2003-04	0.00
2004-05	1,389.67
2005-06	0.00

Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year, this information includes accommodation costs. Copies are available in the Library.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Neighbourhood Policing

12. Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the roll-out of the neighbourhood policing model. [70217]

Mr. Byrne: Thanks to an additional £91 million investment in neighbourhood policing provided by the Chancellor in his recent Budget, neighbourhood policing will be introduced to every community in England and Wales by April 2007. There will be increased numbers of police community support officers and police officers working with local people to address those issues that are causing most concern to communities.

17. Chris Mole: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the roll-out of the neighbourhood policing model. [70223]

Mr. Byrne: Thanks to an additional £91 million investment in neighbourhood policing provided by the Chancellor in his recent Budget, neighbourhood policing will be introduced to every community in England and Wales by April 2007. There will be increased numbers of police community support officers and police officers working with local people to address those issues that are causing most concern to communities.

21. Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of neighbourhood policing schemes. [70227]

Mr. Byrne: Evaluation findings from the National Reassurance Policing Programme which were published in January this year showed that a neighbourhood policing approach could deliver statistically significant reductions in levels of crime and perceptions of antisocial behaviour. Such an approach also increased public confidence in policing and feelings of safety, and improved trust in the local area.

Antisocial Behaviour

13. Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued in the south-west region. [70218]

Mr. Coaker: The latest available figures, as reported by the Court Service, for the period up to September 2005, show that 427 antisocial behaviour orders were issued in the south west region.

The Government are committed to tackling antisocial behaviour and its underlying causes, with a cohesive programme to promote positive behaviour and challenge bad. The Respect Action Plan, which was launched in Swindon in January, sets out commitments we will deliver to make that vision a reality.

Prisons

14. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce prison overcrowding. [70220]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The National Offender Management Service keeps under review the capacity of prisons to accommodate those prisoners sent to them by the courts. It is ensuring that maximum use is made of all spare capacity within the prison estate and increasing useable operational capacity by building additional places as part of an ongoing funded building programme.

Home Detention Curfew Scheme

15. David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the management of the home detention curfew scheme. [70221]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The home detention curfew scheme is kept under continuous review.

HDC has been very successful in providing prisoners with a smoother and more effective re-integration back into the community while providing protection to the public.

Asylum Seekers

16. Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to tackle illegal working by asylum seekers. [70222]

Mr. McNulty: The Government are firmly committed to preventing illegal migrant working and the misuse of our asylum system by those seeking financial advantage rather than protection. We have significantly reduced the number of unfounded asylum claims since 2002, increased removals of refused applicants, and strengthened controls on illegal working. Our strategy also involves increasing enforcement, encouraging compliance by business, and developing joint working between relevant agencies.

Licensing

18. Lynda Waltho: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there were for alcohol sales to people (a) already under the influence of alcohol and (b) under the age of 18 years in 2004 and 2005. [70224]

Mr. Coaker: In 2004, there were 13 prosecutions for selling alcohol to a drunken person, and 856 prosecutions for selling alcohol to people under 18 years of age. Data for 2005 will become available in the autumn.

Police Force Mergers

19. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reverse the mergers of local police forces proposed by his predecessor. [70225]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Secretary has just completed his first week in post. He has been receiving briefing from senior officials on all key Home Office issues and this includes the police restructuring process. He will make any further announcements as soon as he has had time to give this important issue the careful consideration it deserves. Meanwhile, he will continue to work closely with the police service on all aspects of police reform.

Foreign Prisoners

20. Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new measures he has put in place to secure the prompt deportation of released foreign prisoners. [70226]

Mr. Sutcliffe: A new multi-agency centre has been created to collate intelligence on the released prisoners. The police and other agencies have been brought together in order to detain the released prisoners, tackling first those where the severity of the crime or the potential risk to the public is greatest. Additional staff have been appointed and trained and processes have been overhauled so that the necessary casework can be completed and those involved can be deported without further delay.

Alcohol-related Crime

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what research he has evaluated on the level of alcohol-related (a) crime and (b) antisocial behaviour in Kent since December 2005; and if he will make a statement; [68536]

(2) how many alcohol-related (a) crimes and (b) antisocial behaviour incidents there were in Kent in each of the last 10 financial years. [68537]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The Home Office has not received any research on the level of alcohol-related crime and antisocial behaviour in Kent since December 2005. From the information collected on recorded crime, it is not possible to identify those offences which are alcohol-related. Such offences are not specifically defined by statute and details of the individual circumstances of offences do not feature in the data series.

Antisocial behaviour is not measured by incident data but through a measure of people's perceptions of antisocial behaviour in their local area using the data from the British Crime Survey (BCS). The size of the sample in the BCS means that we can not provide reliable data for geographical areas smaller than police force areas. Due to changes in the measure of antisocial behaviour used police force area data that are comparable to the national figures are only available for 2004-05.

The following table sets out the national figures for the last four years and the comparable figure for Kent police.

Data on the percentage of people perceiving problems with drunk and rowdy behaviour is only produced and reported at the national level; in 2004-05 22 per cent. of people in England and Wales perceived there to be problems with drunk and rowdy behaviour in their local area. The equivalent figures are not available for police force areas.

Percentage of people perceiving high levels of antisocial behaviour in the local area

	National (percentage)	Kent police (percentage)	Statistically significantly different (at the 95 per cent. level) from the national average
2001-02	19	—	—
2002-03	21	—	—
2003-04	16	—	—
2004-05	17	18	No

Note:
The measure of antisocial behaviour used is based on a scale constructed from seven questions on problem due to noisy neighbours or loud parties, teenagers and young people hanging around, rubbish and litter, vandalism, people using or dealing drugs, people being drunk or rowdy and abandoned cars.

Background Checks (EU)

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the EU-wide register of criminal offences involving children was created; and what impact it has had on facilitating checks on backgrounds of people employed in the school system who come from other EU countries. [68674]

Mr. Byrne: The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) Disclosure process does not make a distinction between UK nationals and EU or other nationals where it is considered appropriate to undertake a Disclosure application. For posts in schools, applicants from overseas are subject to the same vetting procedures as UK applicants.

However, where staff are recruited from countries outside the UK, the CRB's checks of the police national computer, local police force intelligence, the Protection of Children Act list and List 99 may not be sufficient, particularly where job applicants are newly arrived or have recently lived abroad. The CRB has an overseas information service to provide help with this. If it is considered that a Disclosure may not represent a complete picture of an individual's non-UK record the overseas information service provides guidance on how to obtain further information from a current list of 21 EU and non-EU countries.

The Department for Education and Skills (DfES) also currently advise employers to take additional steps in employment checks on overseas candidates and to seek information as to any criminal history from the authorities in their country of origin wherever possible.

In addition, with effect from 21 May 2006, when the European Council decision on the Exchange of Criminal History Records between member states will come into effect, the UK will have the ability to request criminal conviction information held on nationals of other member states. It is the intention that the CRB will be able to subsequently incorporate into its Disclosure service the ability to request such information directly through the UK Central authority for the exchange of information set up in accordance with the Act.

Child Abuse (Internet)

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made by his Department with internet service providers in preventing access to graphic images of child abuse via the internet. [67167]

Mr. Coaker: UK internet service providers (ISPs) continue to lead the world in tackling this issue and the majority are committed to taking all steps available to them to prevent users accessing illegal images of child abuse. This is evidenced, for example, by their commitment to and funding of the Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) and the reduction in the proportion of illegal sites reported to the IWF that are hosted in the UK from 18 per cent. in 1997 to 0.4 per cent. in 2005.

Recently, it has become technically feasible for ISPs to block home users' access to websites irrespective of where in the world they are hosted. It is clear from the various meetings that Ministers have had with the ISPs, that the industry has the will to implement solutions to block these websites. Currently, all the 3G mobile network operators block their mobile customers from accessing these sites and the biggest ISPs (who between them provide over 90 per cent. of domestic broadband connections) are either currently blocking or have plans to by the end of 2006.

We recognise the progress that has been made as a result of the industry's commitment and investment so far. However, 90 per cent. of connections is not enough and we are setting a target that by the end of 2007, all ISPs offering broadband internet connectivity to the UK general public put in place technical measures that prevent their customers accessing websites containing illegal images of child abuse identified by the IWF. For new ISPs or services, we would expect them to put in place measures within nine months of offering the service to the public. If it appears that we are not going to meet our target through co-operation, we will review the options for stopping UK residents accessing websites on the IWF list.

Dangerous Dogs Act

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in (a) England and Wales and (b) London have been prosecuted under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 in each year since it was passed. [68261]

Mr. Byrne: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of people have been prosecuted under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 for England and Wales, and London, from 1992 to 2004, is shown in the following table.

Court statistics for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

DNA

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans are in place to integrate the National DNA Database with other national forensic and intelligence databases; and if he will make a statement. [68463]

Mr. Byrne: The National DNA Database currently has a link to the police national computer (PNC) to enable the police to tell whether someone arrested for a recordable offence has provided a DNA sample on a previous occasion. The national fingerprint system, IDENT1, is also connected to the PNC, but not directly to the National DNA Database. It is planned to pass limited information from IDENT1 to the NDNAD via the PNC in order to link records, contributing to PNC record integrity, without major integration of the systems.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines he has given to chief constables on the manner in which they should exercise their discretion whether to destroy DNA samples. [47730]

Mr. Byrne: Home Office circular 25/2001 states that, when an individual is cleared of an offence, samples taken as evidence during an investigation may be retained, but that they may only be used for the purposes of prevention and detection of crime, the investigation of an offence, the conduct of a prosecution or, since April 2005, for the purposes of identifying a deceased person.

The Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) issued guidelines on 31 January 2006 to all chief officers on the exercise of their discretion to destroy DNA samples and remove the DNA profile from the national DNA database in exceptional circumstances. These guidelines will help to ensure national consistency.

The codes of practice (D) relating to the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 give guidance on when retained samples may be used and the procedures for destruction.

The only time samples would be used is if a match were shown between an individual's DNA profile and that recovered from a crime scene.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of calls to the police for assistance in (a) Southend-on-Sea, (b) Essex, (c) the Metropolitan police area of London and (d) England and Wales were to incidents of domestic violence in each of the last 10 years. [64990]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office does not routinely collect data on calls to the police for assistance and does not have the figures for England and Wales.

Essex police and the Metropolitan police service (MPS) have been able to provide force level statistics on the number and percentage of calls made to their command and control systems which were incidents of domestic violence.

Driver Prosecutions

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been of motorists who have driven through red lights in (a) England and Wales and (b) Northamptonshire in the last 12 months. [68958]

Mr. Byrne: 2005 data will be available early in 2007.

Europol

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is his Department's policy to support proposals (a) to fund Europol directly from the EU budget, (b) to strengthen its mandate, (c) to increase the number of permanent staff at Europol and (d) to give the European Parliament a role in its supervision and management; and if he will make a statement. [69447]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The future of Europol is currently being examined within a 'Friends of the Presidency Group.' All member states, the commission and Europol itself are represented on the group. It will report to the JHA Council in June.

The Government believe that Europol should have at its disposal the resources required to achieve its aims. The permanent staff of Europol has recently increased by 47 and the Government would look at any future bids for more staff in light of the business case for them.

Intelligence Database

Natascha Engel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures (a) Government Departments and agencies and (b) local authorities with independent prosecuting authority for particular criminal offences use to forward details of (i) convictions, (ii) cautions and (iii) intelligence on possible criminals to (A) the Criminal Records Bureau and (B) the police national computer; what amendments to these procedures are proposed in relation to National Intelligence Database; and if he will make a statement. [68448]

Mr. Byrne: Government Departments and any other agency, including local authorities, with independent prosecuting authority for particular criminal offences are required to notify the police service in the area in which the offence was committed of any intention to prosecute such an offence. The police service enters details of such prosecutions onto the police national computer (PNC). Final disposals from courts are entered onto the PNC by the police, regardless of who is the prosecuting authority. The only exceptions to this are Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs and the Royal Military Police who update their own cases on to PNC.

The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) has access to PNC conviction information as part of the disclosure process. In the event of an enhanced disclosure request, the CRB would also cause an inquiry to be made with the local police force who would consider whether or not it is relevant to disclose additional information. This may be non conviction information or intelligence. Guidance is available as to considerations prior to disclosure of such information.

The police national database, to be delivered by the IMPACT Programme, will facilitate the sharing of operational information between forces by giving authorised officers access to a data repository comprising copies of records held in individual force systems. The details of amendments to procedures with CRB in relation to this are still to be determined.

Juvenile Detention

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the Government's policy is on the detention of children and babies for immigration and asylum purposes; and if he will make a statement. [71114]

Mr. McNulty: Unaccompanied minors are not detained other than in one very limited circumstance:

where, exceptionally, it is necessary to detain a child while alternative care arrangements are made and, then, normally just overnight.

Families with children may be detained in the following circumstances: initially, whilst their identities and basis of claim are established; where there are reasonable grounds for believing that they will fail to comply with the conditions of temporary admission or release; or to effect removal. In addition, families whose asylum claims appear to be capable of being decided quickly may be detained as part of a fast-track process.

Mobile Phone Driving Prosecutions

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been prosecuted for driving while using a mobile telephone in the last 12 months in Northamptonshire. [68933]

Mr. Byrne: 2005 data will be available early in 2007.

Mobile Phone Thefts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the operation of the Mobile Phones (Re-Programming) Act 2002; what recent representations he has received about the operation of this Act; if he will place in the Library copies of such representations; and whether he plans to (a) amend and (b) repeal this Act; [69146]

(2) what steps he (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to reduce the theft of mobile phones; and if he will make a statement. [69147]

Mr. Byrne: Action to address mobile phone theft is a key element in the Government's programme to reduce robbery. The Street Crime Initiative has helped develop a strong and successful partnership between Government, industry and police which has led to several key actions being delivered.

These include a database of stolen and lost mobile phones that can be blocked on any network and providing funding, with the Metropolitan police, for the National Mobile Phone Crime Unit to focus specific operations on reducing mobile phone theft.

The Government also introduced the Mobile Telephones (Re-programming) Act 2002 which was welcomed by the police and industry alike. The purpose of the Act was to support the industry and the police in ensuring that stolen phones could not be further used by thieves.

According to National Mobile Phone Crime Unit statistics, from January 2004 to December 2005 there have been over 400 individual police operations. A number of custodial sentences and fines have resulted from the legislation.

Following representations from the industry and the police the Government have sought to strengthen the provisions in the Act, by introducing an amendment to the Violent Crime Reduction Bill to make it an offence to offer or agree to re-programme a mobile phone.

Copies of representations have been placed in the Library. The Government will keep this legislation under review to ensure its effectiveness.

In addition to public information and awareness campaigns, the Government intend to further strengthen the partnership with the mobile phone industry and the police to build on these measures and ensure that mobile phone theft remains a priority for action.

Non-emergency Situations

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer given by the hon. Member for Salford (Hazel Blears) on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 322W, on non-emergency situations, if he will take steps to ensure that the criteria for deciding whether (a) drug taking, (b) drunken behaviour, (c) harassment and (d) intimidation should be treated as (i) emergency and (ii) non-emergency situations are established by Ministers. [67696]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member for Birmingham, Yardley to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Salford (Hazel Blears) on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 322W.

Police

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish his Department's police restructuring proposals following the recent consultations; and if he will make a statement. [48618]

Mr. Byrne The former Home Secretary (Mr. Clarke) announced on 3 March his intention to initiate amalgamations in the West Midlands, North-East, North-West regions and Wales.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 8 March 2006, Official Report, column 1598W, on police, whether the statistical series of deaths during or following police contact produced by his Department's Police Leadership and Powers Unit will now (a) cease, (b) be taken over by the Independent Police Complaints Commission or (c) continue to be produced by his Department and be accessible via links on the Commission's website. [67535]

Mr. Byrne: Responsibility for the collation, analysis and publication of deaths during or following police contact passed to the Independent Police Complaints Commission with effect from 1 April 2005. Figures published on such deaths will be a matter for the Commission. Links to published figures will be accessible via the Home Office website.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers are planned to be deployed in each basic command unit in the Staffordshire police force area in (a) 2006, (b) 2007 and (c) 2008. [68360]

Mr. Byrne: Deployment of police officers in Staffordshire to basic command units and to other specialist units is an operational matter for the chief constable, subject to the resources that are available.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were deployed in each basic command unit of the Staffordshire police force area in (a) 1987, (b) 1992, (c) 1997, (d) 2001, (e) 2004 and (f) 2005. [68361]

Mr. Byrne: Figures for police officers have been collected only by basic command unit (BCU) since March 2002. The available information is given in the following table.

The number of police officers deployed in each basic command unit (BCU) level of the Staffordshire police force area[1]

Basic command unit	31 March 2004	31 March 2005
Chase	419	416
North Staffordshire	301	299
Stoke on Trent	587	585
Trent Valley	392	429

[1] This table contains full-time equivalent figures that have been rounded to the nearest whole number, due to rounding there may be an apparent discrepancy between the totals and sums of the constituent items. Figures include police officers on maternity/paternity leave.

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were deployed in Doncaster, North in (a) 1984, (b) 1994 and (c) 2004. [68405]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 4 May 2006]: Figures relating to the number of police officers are collected by police force area and have only been collected at basic command unit (BCU) level since March 2003. Figures for Doncaster, North are not collected centrally.

As at 31 March 2004, there were 549 full-time equivalent (including those on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave) police officers in the Doncaster BCU.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria were used by his Department for adopting the deadline of 23 December for submitting final proposals on police restructuring. [38868]

Mr. Byrne: The former Home Secretary (Mr. Clarke) chose 23 December as the deadline for submitting final proposals because it provided sufficient time for the development of options.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether more crime data will be held centrally if constabularies are merged. [67083]

Mr. Byrne: The restructuring of the police service is not expected to result in more recorded crime data being collected centrally.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued on the fitting of front-line police vehicles with satellite navigation systems; and what percentage of such vehicles in each police force have been fitted with such devices. [68910]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 11 May 2006]: The fitting of satellite navigation systems to front-line police vehicles is currently a local operational issue for police forces and we do not issue guidance from the Home Office. As a result we no not have data on the number of vehicles which have been fitted with such devices.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that the funding arrangements proposed for setting up the all-Wales police force meet the requirements of the local government finance acts. [67829]

Mr. Byrne: Any order made under section 32 of the Police Act 1996 amalgamating the four Welsh police forces would apply relevant local government finance acts to the combined police authority at the point at which it was established.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the size was of the Metropolitan police force before the British Transport police were brought into it. [68131]

Mr. Byrne: There has been no transfer of functions or staff from the British Transport police (BTP) to the Metropolitan Police Service.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers of the British Transport police are stationed within the area of North Wales police. [69432]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers of the British Transport police are regularly deployed on the Merseyrail rail network. [69434]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions the North Wales police helicopter was launched for operational reasons in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [69369]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Prison Governor-Grade Promotion

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) temporary and (b) permanent governor-grade promotions within the Prison Service are being funded by the (i) central budget and (ii) local establishment budget; on what basis the decision was taken in each case as to where the funding should come from; and if he will make a statement. [69415]

Mr. Sutcliffe: All governor grade promotions are paid for by Prison Service areas, heads of groups (outside of establishments) or by establishment budgets. There are no central budget arrangements for promotions of governor grades whether on a temporary or substantive basis.

Public Disorder

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in Lancashire were given on the spot fines for being drunk and disorderly under age in the last 12 months. [66485]

Mr. Byrne: Provisional data from the Penalty Notices for Disorder (PND) database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform shows that, in the Lancashire police force area in 2005, 410 penalty notices for disorder were issued to persons aged 16 and 17 for the offence of "being drunk and disorderly". This is the most recent 12-month period for which complete data are available. An additional 84 notices were issued to juveniles aged 14 and 15 as a part of the Juvenile PND pilot in Lancashire during the same period.

Public Service Agreements

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress his Department is making towards the Spending Review 2004 Public Service Agreement Target 2, on crime and anti-social behaviour and the criminal justice system; and if he will make a statement. [67856]

Mr. Byrne: The spending review 2004 set the following Public Service Agreement Target (PSA) for the Home Department:

PSA 2 Reassure the public, reducing the fear of crime and anti-social behaviour and building confidence in the criminal justice system without compromising fairness.

The former Home Secretary (Charles Clarke) published progress made against these targets in the Autumn Performance Report of December 2005 (CM6707), and the latest assessment of progress, in the Departmental Report for 2005-06 which will be published in May.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are listed on the Register of Sex Offenders; and for how many such people a current residential address is not known to the police. [67661]

Mr. Coaker: As at 31 March 2005 (the latest point for which figures are available) there were 28,994 registered sex offenders in the community across England and Wales. One of the requirements of registration is that offenders notify to the police a home address and any other address where more than seven days a year are spent, as well as any changes to this information. Moreover, if an offender claims to be homeless or otherwise of 'no fixed abode' then they must provide the address or location of a place in the UK where they can be regularly found. Failure to supply that information, or supplying false information, is an offence punishable by up to five year's imprisonment.

Sex Tourism

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken by his Department to prevent sex tourism by British citizens, with particular reference to that involving children. [68227]

Mr. Coaker: We have reduced the period of time that registered sex offenders are allowed to spend overseas without notifying the police. Now, all registered sex offenders are required to notify the police of any foreign travel of three days duration or more. The police will use that information to decide whether it is necessary to take any action to prevent travel. That action can include applying for foreign travel orders, which we introduced in the Sexual Offences Act 2003. The orders can be sought where the police consider that the offender poses a risk of serious sexual harm to children under 16 in an overseas country.

Since 1997, we have been able to prosecute in the British courts those who have offended against children overseas. In brief, if an act is an offence in England, Wales and Northern Ireland, and constitutes an offence in the country where it was committed, then the offender can be convicted and punished for their crimes in this country on their return.

We are currently reviewing our policy and legislation relating to travelling sex offenders and will be examining whether the law needs to be strengthened further to better protect children overseas.

Speeding Offences

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether defendants charged with speeding offences face potentially higher fines if they choose to appear in court; and if he will make a statement. [68667]

Mr. Byrne: The maximum fine for a person convicted of speeding is set at level three, currently £1,000. The court will decide the exact amount, taking into account the offender's means and ability to pay. If the offender is offered and accepts a fixed penalty, this is set at £60.

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence defendants are entitled to receive in relation to penalties or prosecution for speeding offences; if he will take steps to include information which would enable the defendant to make a time over distance calculation of their speed; and if he will make a statement. [68673]

Mr. Byrne: Suspected offenders will be told that they or a vehicle of which they are the registered keeper have been detected committing a speeding offence. The provision of further information is a matter for individual chief officers of police. Some send a photograph of the vehicle with the notice of intended prosecution. Guidance from the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) is that the registered keeper or person named by the keeper as driver at the time of the alleged offence should be allowed to view photographic evidence on request. If a case went to court, the prosecution would have to furnish the evidence to support the proceedings and relevant material would be disclosed under the provisions of the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996.

Suicides/Infanticide

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females (i) were found guilty of and (ii) pleaded guilty to complicity in or assisting (A) a suicide and (B) infanticide in (1) Southend on Sea, (2) Essex, (3) the Metropolitan police area of London, (4) Hertfordshire and (5) England and Wales in each year since 1983. [64753]

Uninsured Drivers

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what proportion of drivers prosecuted in each of the last five years for driving while uninsured had six to eight penalty points on their driving licence. [68869]

Mr. Byrne: Information is not available in the detail required.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful prosecutions of uninsured drivers there have been in each year since 1997. [68871]

Mr. Byrne: Available information from 1997 to 2004 (latest available) is given in the following table.

The figures given in the table are taken from the Home Office publication "Offences relating to motor vehicles, England and Wales, Supplementary tables". Copies are available in the Library.

Data for 2005 will not be available till early 2007.

Note:
Coverage and recording practice affecting the statistics: (A) It is known that for some police force areas the reporting of court proceedings, in particular those relating to summary motoring offences, may be less than complete. (B) Since 1990, due to the delays in implementing new counting procedures, corrective action on non-keying errors was reduced resulting in deterioration in the quality of data on summary motoring proceedings.

Yarl's Wood

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish a response to the report by the Children's Commissioner on his visit to the Yarl's Wood immigration removal centre on 21 October 2005. [70862]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given on 25 April 2006, Official Report, column WA13.

Youth Crime

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assistance is being given to Staffordshire constabulary by his Department to tackle incidents of youth crime and antisocial behaviour in Tamworth constituency; and if he will make a statement. [68359]

Mr. Byrne: Staffordshire youth offending service has a legal duty to and works closely with Staffordshire police and other partner agencies in preventing and tackling youth crime and antisocial behaviour in Staffordshire. This includes partnership around the priority and other prolific offenders strategy, on which the youth offending service leads in respect of the prevent and deter strand. Staffordshire youth offending service has established a prevention team which will be working very closely with the police, district and borough councils, the voluntary sector and schools to identify and work with young people who are at high risk of committing crime and antisocial behaviour.

The respect action plan is central to the Government's drive to go broader, deeper and further on antisocial behaviour by tackling its root causes; preventing it occurring in the first place for example by ensuring better parenting provision and family support while not letting up on stopping anti-social behaviour that blights many communities.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Child Contact Orders

Tim Loughton: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many parents with custody of their children have been prosecuted for contempt of court in relation to a breach of child contact orders in each of the last five years. [69357]

Ms Harman: A contempt of court can arise within family proceedings in a variety of circumstances and it is not possible to identify the number of cases in which failure to comply with a contact order leads to the matter being dealt with as a contempt of court.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many child contact orders have returned to court due to alleged breaches in each of the last five years. [69381]

Ms Harman: This information is not held centrally and to obtain it would incur disproportionate cost. However, an analysis of a sample of court files published in the Green Paper "Children's Needs and Parents' Responsibilities" indicated that there were repeat applications in respect in half of the cases concerned and that a third of these repeat applications arose from breaches of contact orders.

Civil Servants (Overseas Visits)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what costs were incurred by her Department as a result of sending civil servants on overseas visits in each of the last 10 years. [46289]

Bridget Prentice: Total overseas travel costs for civil servants for the Department, which includes the Court Service, the Public Guardianship Office and the Department for Constitutional Affairs Headquarters, are set out in the following table:

Period	Amount (£)
2005-06	164,632
2004-05	154,368
2003-04	172,631
2002-03	145,257
2001-02	96,251
2000-01	153,737
1999-2000	103,449
1998-99	110,774

There has been an increase in travel costs since 2002-03, because of the increased responsibilities of the Department.

Information on previous years is not readily available.

All civil service travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the civil service management code, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Community Courts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent progress has been made in establishing community courts; and if she will make a statement. [70213]

Ms Harman: There are currently two community justice projects—the Community Justice Centre, North Liverpool and the Salford Community Justice Initiative. Both of which were launched at the end of last year.

We will consider the lessons learned from the Liverpool and Salford projects and work with local agencies to determine ways the concept can be applied elsewhere.

Coroners' Officers

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the role of Coroners Officers. [69995]

Ms Harman: Coroners officers perform a vital investigative and administrative role for their respective local coroner. My oral statement to Parliament on 6 February, and the accompanying briefing note, outlines the proposals for change in the coroners' system more broadly.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps her Department is taking to assist the coroners' service with its workload following the increase in the number of reported deaths in 2005; and if she will make a statement. [69996]

Ms Harman: Resourcing of coroners services is a local responsibility.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans she has to reform the work of coroners officers. [69997]

Ms Harman: The Government plan to reform the coroners' system as a whole. My oral statement to the House of Commons on 6 February, and the accompanying briefing note, outlines the proposals for change. A draft Bill, for scrutiny, will be published shortly.

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs on how many occasions she has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67522]

Ms Harman: None. Paragraph 5.28 of the ministerial code sets out the rules on the registration of hospitality.

County Court Judgment Records

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the implications for competitiveness of the restriction to a single third-party distributor of information based on county court judgment records. [67795]

Ms Harman: No such assessment has been made.

The 'Registrar' is a statutory function established by the Register of Judgments, Orders and Fines Regulations 2005. Registry Trust Ltd., which is a non-profit making company, kept the Register of County Court Judgments for the Department, under the terms of a contract, since 1986. Following a review of the service in 2002 to 2004 and subsequent consultation, the Department concluded that the contract for the keeping of the register should be put out to tender from time to time.

To ensure continuity of the provision of the register service and a smooth implementation of new regulations (which include the provision of new data in the register on unpaid fines), the Department decided in the short-term to negotiate a revised contract with Registry Trust Ltd. They have been re- appointed as Registrar to run the Register of Judgments, Orders and Fines until 2009.

We will be reviewing the options for the longer term in 2007, taking into account competitiveness issues. We currently expect to hold a competition in 2008 for the post-April 2009 contract.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether she has conducted a survey of users of county court judgment records to obtain their views on the value of such records. [67799]

Ms Harman: The Department carried out a review of the service and method of service delivery of the Register of County Court Judgments in 2003 prior to public consultation. This included research among users of county court judgment records of the use to which records are put, their current and future value and sought views on how the service could be improved.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the accuracy of county court judgment records; what plans her Department has to recover the cost of improvement from the users of the records; and if she will make a statement. [67800]

Ms Harman: An audit of the accuracy of the county court judgments recorded in the Register of County Court Judgments was carried out in 2004. This advised the drafting of amendments to the Civil Procedure Rules, the objective of which is to improve the accuracy of the data supplied to the courts by parties on issue of a claim. The cost to the courts of implementing the requirements of the amended Civil Procedure Rules is to be recovered from Registry Trust Ltd. through the charges raised by the Department for the supply of judgment records.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the items of departmental property worth over £100 that have been reported as (a) lost and (b) broken in the last 12 months. [47688]

Bridget Prentice: The Department has had two 15-inch flat screen monitors reported as lost in the last 12 months. The total value of this loss to the Department was £1,143.

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much was spent on entertainment by her Department in 2004-05; and how much of that sum is accounted for by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [50886]

Bridget Prentice: It is not possible to list the entertainment costs spent by the Department broken down by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation without incurring disproportionate cost.

However, total expenditure on entertainment for the Department, which covers costs for the Court Service, the Public Guardianship Office and DCA Headquarters in 2004-05 is £78,097.

All expenditure on official entertainment is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety that is based on principles set out in Government Accounting.

Magistrates

Dr. Vis: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what training in diversity issues is compulsory for (a) sitting and (b) new magistrates. [68122]

Ms Harman: For (a), sitting magistrates, the Judicial Studies Board has included diversity within the Magistrates' National Training Initiative (MNTI 2) competence framework. This framework contains a number of knowledge and performance elements requiring magistrates to demonstrate an understanding of, among other things, "Diversity and fair treatment issues, including the use of non-discriminatory language" and "The potential impact of your background and personal prejudices on decision making". Sitting magistrates are regularly appraised against these competences.

For (b), new magistrates, they must complete induction training before being allowed to sit. Diversity is a part of this programme. Following induction training, new magistrates undertake mentored sittings to identify any further training needs, using the MNTI 2 competence framework. Any needs so identified are addressed at local level. The new magistrate is first appraised after sitting for 12 to 18 months, and thereafter further training follows as for sitting magistrates.

Members of Parliament Judges

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the hon. Members who are serving (a) Crown court recorders and (b) circuit judges. [70088]

Ms Harman: Circuit judges are disqualified from membership of the House. Although the Department does not keep a central list of Members of Parliament who hold current appointments as Recorders, our records show that the following Members of Parliament hold that office:

E H Gamier Esq. QC
H J Malins Esq. CBE
R G Marshall-Andrews Esq. QC.

Sentencing Policy

Dr. Vis: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps are taken to minimise the discrepancies in sentencing practices between magistrates courts. [68121]

Ms Harman: The Sentencing Guidelines Council promulgates guidelines to enable all criminal courts to approach the sentencing of offenders from a common starting point to promote consistency in sentencing. All courts are required to take the guidelines of the Sentencing Guidelines Council into account when sentencing offenders and have to give reasons for departing from them in any particular case. Discrepancies in sentencing in all criminal courts are therefore minimised through the use of these guidelines. Currently magistrates courts use the Magistrates Courts Sentencing Guidelines issued in 2004 by the Magistrates Association but these are to be replaced by guidelines produced by the Sentencing Guidelines Council. Appealing against sentence to the Crown court is another mechanism for ensuring consistency of sentencing in the magistrates courts. Consistency in sentencing is further promoted through the publication of judgments on appeals to the Court of Appeal from the Crown court.

Staff Development

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the total cost was of (a) staff away days and (b) staff team building exercises in her Department in each of the last three years. [69029]

Bridget Prentice: The cost of (a) staff away days and (b) staff team building exercises in the Department in each of the last three years is not separately identifiable within the Department's accounts without incurring disproportionate costs.

The Department is committed to providing access to training for staff and developing them to their full potential.

Tribunals Service

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the estimated net cost is of establishing the Tribunals Service in each of the five financial years from 2006-07. [65714]

Ms Harman: The latest estimated cost of operating the Tribunal Service for the first five years from 2006-07 is:

	£ million Cost
2006-07	300
2007-08	297
2008-09	307
2009-10	315
2010-11	325

The first two years reflects a £15 million efficiency baseline saving in each year from the total cost of running the tribunals separately. The cost of the final three years includes the £15 million a year baseline saving but does not take into account any further efficiency to be identified within the Tribunals Service. The final three years include cost increases due to assumptions of pay awards at the current levels of judicial and staff salary costs and inflation but makes no further assumptions as to targets or further savings or efficiencies.

Voter Registration

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much the Government spent in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006 on campaigns to increase voter registration, including grants to local authorities. [70605]

Bridget Prentice: In 2005, the Government spent £2,132 on the launch of the London-based campaign to raise awareness of the need to register. In 2006, the Government spent £192,571 on this "1824 Collective" campaign which promoted awareness of voter registration amongst London's "urban youth" using the creative concept of an urban music collective to appeal to 18-24 year olds.

During 2006 the Government will also provide grants totalling £90,600 to seven English local authorities to explore new methods of encouraging young people to register to vote through working with youth organisations and further and higher education institutions.

HEALTH

Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment has been made of which at-risk groups would benefit from screening for abdominal aortic aneurysm; [67436]

(2) what plans she has to introduce screening for abdominal aortic aneurysm. [67437]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The United Kingdom national screening committee (NSC) has advised that screening for men aged 65 for abdominal aortic aneurysms can be recommended in principle subject to the two critical issues of ensuring appropriate configuration and to deliver high quality treatment services and providing information and support to enable men to make an informed choice about whether to be screened.

Ministers have noted the advice of the NSC and further detailed work is in progress.

Adverse Drug Reactions

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the online adverse drug reaction report information analyses for the use of the general public will be updated from the January 2004 materials; and if she will make a statement. [69645]

Andy Burnham: Reports of suspected adverse drug reactions (ADRs) are collected by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) and the commission on human medicines (CHM) through the spontaneous reporting scheme, the yellow card scheme. Approximately 19,000 reports of suspected ADRs are reported to the MHRA/CHM through this scheme each year by health professionals and patients.

The MHRA are committed to making drug safety information derived from the yellow card scheme as accessible as possible. To this end, in January 2005 the MHRA published aggregated, anonymised data summarising the suspected ADRs reported for all medicines on its website. At initial publication this information comprised reports received up to January 2004.

In September 2005 the information was updated to June 2005 and this is the information currently available online. A further update of the information to bring it up to March 2006 is in progress and will be in place by the end of May.

The MHRA is currently implementing a major upgrade of the drug safety monitoring database and data reporting systems. This upgrade includes a review of the presentation of aggregated drug safety information with a view to making the information easier to interpret.

Subsequent to this redesign, the MHRA will update the adverse drug reaction data on a three-monthly cycle.

Anaesthetics

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the supply of (a) dental anaesthetic and (b) anaesthetics used in hospitals in relation to expected demand in 2006; [68323]

(2) what recent assessment she has made of the supply of anaesthetic to the NHS from Dentsply; what action she is taking to meet shortfalls in supply; and if she will make a statement; [68324]

(3) whether consideration is being given (a) to supplementing 2.2ml cartridges of dental anaesthetic with 1.8ml cartridges and (b) to licensing the latter. [68325]

Andy Burnham: Departmental officials have met with the two companies who manufacture dental cartridges for the United Kingdom market. Deproco has increased its production to meet the predicted shortfall in the market created by the temporary absence of Dentsply, and is making regular weekly supplies. Based on historic demand the Department's assessment is that these should be sufficient for all dental sectors.

Dentsply is seeking approval from the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) for a new production site, and in the meantime has obtained MHRA approval to supply a limited amount of 1.8 millilitre (ml) cartridges. The Chief Dental Officer has written to dentists and issued a statement on the Department's website to explain the supply issues and advise dentists not to stockpile.

Companies may take the commercial decision to enter the dental anaesthetic market with 1.8ml or 2.2ml cartridges. As with other medicines, these products must be licensed by the MHRA.

Bowel Cancer

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many faecal occult blood kits had been (a) ordered and (b) received by 29 March in preparation for the Bowel Cancer Screening Programme; [63429]

(2) how many individuals she expects to receive faecal occult blood kits as part of the Bowel Cancer Screening Programme by 31 December. [63428]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The first order of 100,000 testing kits has been made with the supplier. We estimate that between 100,000 and 120,000 men and women will be screened in 2006-07.

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Bowel Cancer Screening Programme will be extended to Durham. [68128]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The bowel cancer screening programme will be rolled out across the whole of England over the next three years.

Five programme hubs across England will invite men and women to participate in the screening programme, send out the faecal occult blood (FOB) testing kits, interpret kits and send results out.

The first of the five programme hubs will be established in Rugby. The national cancer screening team are currently assessing where the other programme hubs will be located and announcements will be made as soon as possible.

Ninety to 100 local screening centres will provide endoscopy services for the 2 per cent. of men and women who have a positive FOB test result.

Strategic health authorities (SHAs) were asked to bid last August for their local endoscopy units to become local screening centres as part of the first wave of the programme in 2006-07. Similar exercises will take place for the second wave in 2007-08 and the third wave in 2008-09. It is up to SHAs to decide where local screening centres should be located for the benefit of their own populations.

We intend that all five programme hubs will be established, and around 14 local screening centres will be operating, out of a total of 90 to 100 for full national coverage, by March 2007.

Breast Screening

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the mobile breast screening unit to visit Great Dunmow; and what the date was of its last visit. [68412]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the breast screening programme at St. Margaret's hospital, Epping; how many women are waiting to be examined; and for how long each has been waiting. [68415]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for primary care trusts to commission services to meet the needs of the populations that they serve. However, I understand that the breast screening service in West Essex, based at St. Margaret's hospital, Epping, was suspended between November 2004 and January 2006.

Screening resumed at the end of January 2006 with a limited service initially with a phased implementation plan to expand the service from one mobile unit to two units later this year.

The data as to the number of women waiting to be examined are not held centrally.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the catchment area is for breast screening for Broomfield Hospital, Chelmsford. [68416]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Colchester and Chelmsford breast screening services cover Mid Essex Hospital (of which Broomfield hospital is a part), and Essex Rivers catchment areas and therefore offer a screening service to approximately 83,000 women living in Chelmsford, Maldon, Witham, Braintree, Halstead, Colchester and Tendring.

Cancer

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her Department's Cancer Plan. [68830]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Cancer Plan set out our 10-year strategy for cancer services in England. We are now almost six years into the plan and are focusing on delivering its commitments.

Progress reports on the NHS Cancer Plan were published in 2001, 2003 and 2004, which showed considerable successes and improvements in cancer services in England, while acknowledging that more remains to be done.

Additionally, in March 2005 the National Audit Office published their review of the NHS Cancer Plan. Their review acknowledged the significant improvements in the management and provision of cancer services since the publication of the NHS Cancer Plan and the good progress already made against the major targets.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the five most common causes of lung cancer are in England. [68831]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The greatest risk factor for causing lung cancer is smoking tobacco, which causes 90 per cent. of cases of lung cancer in men and 80 per cent. of cases of lung cancer in women.

Other risk factors include exposure to industrial carcinogens, such as asbestos, exposure to radon gas and its decay products, and air pollution.

Scarring from previous lung disease has been related to increased risk, but would account for a very small proportion of lung cancer cases. Smoking tobacco remains by far the most important risk factor.

Cannabis-based Medicine

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency on the granting of product approval of cannabis-based medicine. [64764]

Andy Burnham: My right hon. Friend, the then Minister of State (Jane Kennedy) had some contact with the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) on the issue of approval of cannabis-based medicinal products from time to time. The MHRA also provided periodic briefing documents on the progress of one marketing authorisation application as background information in support of a variety of parliamentary questions related to cannabis- based medicinal products.

Chernobyl

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the possible health effects in England of radioactive fallout from Chernobyl in respect of incidences of (a) thyroid cancer, (b) other solid cancers, (c) leukaemia, (d) non-cancer diseases and (e) genetic diseases. [68112]

Caroline Flint: Following the Chernobyl reactor accident in 1986 preliminary assessments of the radiation doses were carried out by the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB, now part of the Health Protection Agency (HPA)). In particular, NRPB carried out a study for the European Commission (EUR 11523—a preliminary assessment of the radiological impact of the Chernobyl reactor accident on the population of the European Community) which was published in 1988. This included estimates of the risks of radiation-induced thyroid cancers and total fatal cancers in the population of the European Commission.

The Chernobyl accident was also included in the NRPB study (NRPB-R276) which considered the risks of leukaemia and other cancers in Seascale from all sources of ionising radiation exposure, published in 1995. Since this time, NRPB has not carried out any further assessments of possible health effects from the Chernobyl accident. However, the NRPB has commented on other papers in the public domain, for example in the response to the "Report of the Committee Examining Radiation Risks of Internal Emitters" which is available on the HPA's website at: www.hpa.org.uk/radiation/publications/misc_publications/nrpb_response_to_cerrie_report.htm.

A paper by Dolk et al in 1999 considered the impact of Chernobyl on the prevalence of congenital abnormalities in 16 regions in Europe (Int J Epidemiol 28: 941-8) and found no detectable impact in Western Europe. The effect of the Chernobyl accident on thyroid cancers was also considered in a paper and editorial in volume 37 of the European Journal of Cancer in 1991.

Class A Drugs

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures she is taking to increase the number of residential rehabilitation places available for those addicted to class A drugs. [70208]

Caroline Flint: The Government recognise that residential rehabilitation has a key role to play in ensuring that we have a comprehensive range of treatment services available to meet the needs of drug misusers.

The National Treatment Agency's treatment effectiveness strategy, launched last year, identifies residential rehabilitation as one of the most effective ways of meeting the needs of drug misusers with complex needs.

I hope to be able, in the near future, to announce what resources will be available to commissioners and partners to support the improvements in both quality and capacity we are committed to ensuring.

Correspondence

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Vale of York of 30 March and 18 April on breast screening; and if she will make a statement on the status of breast screening at St. Margaret's hospital, Epping. [68631]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Replies were sent to the hon. Members on 4 May.

It is for the primary care trust to commission services to meet the needs of those communities that they serve.

Dentistry

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether there is a local resolution procedure available to dentists in dispute with primary care trusts over the new dental contract. [69841]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts (PCTs) and dental contractors have a duty to try and resolve any dispute locally before it is referred to the National Health Service Litigation Authority. This duty is set out in Schedule 3, Part 7, of The National Health Service (General Dental Services Contracts) Regulations 2005 (SI 2005/3361) and in Schedule 3, Part 7 of The National Health Service (Personal Dental Services Agreements) Regulations 2005 (SI2005/3373). It is good practice for PCTs to have established a local disputes procedure to deal with such matters.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists were available to NHS patients in the Chichester district on 1 April, or the latest date for which figures are available. [65271]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As at 31 December 2005, there were 58 NHS dentists with a general dental services (GDS) or personal dental services (PDS) contract within Chichester parliamentary constituency. A dentist with a GDS or PDS contract may provide as little or as much NHS treatment as he or she chooses and has agreed with their primary care trust. Information concerning the amount of time dedicated to NHS work by individual GDS or PDS dentists is not centrally available.

Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract is not available centrally. We do however have some provisional information that covers contracts. A contract may be for more than one dentist so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level.

Provisional management estimates show that in Western Sussex primary care trust (PCT):

	Number	Approximate UDA[1] value	Percentage UDAs	Number signed without dispute	Number signed in dispute	Percentage disputes
Contracts signed	23	175,753	—	11	12	52.2
Contracts still in discussion	1	1,022	—	—	—	—
Contracts rejected	2	956	0.5	—	—	—

[1] Units of dental activity.

Notes:

1. Data include all notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS, received by the NHS Business Services Authority, up to 23 March 2006. Figures for the numbers of dentists at specified dates may vary depending upon the notification period, e.g. data with a later notification period will include more recent notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS.
2. Dentists consist of principals, assistants and trainees. Prison contracts have been excluded.
3. The postcode of the dental practice was used to allocate dentists to specific geographic areas. Constituency areas have been defined using the Office for National Statistics all fields postcode directory.
4. Data on the number of dentists working only in private practice are not held centrally.

PCTs are working with dentists to resolve as many disputes as possible locally.

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding her Department has provided to (a) East Hull and West Hull primary care trust and (b) the NHS for dental services in each year since 1997. [65466]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the format requested. The table shows ringfenced funding provided to primary care trusts (PCTs) which is guaranteed for three years.

PCT	2003-04 gross costs (2006-07 prices) (£)	2006-07 gross budget (£)	Increase (percentage)
Eastern Hull	6,222,135.36	6,833,900	9.8
West Hull	7,812,165.04	8,300,214	6.2

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) dentists and (b) dental practices in the Eastbourne Downs Primary Care Trust area have (i) signed and (ii) not signed the new NHS contract. [65499]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract is not available centrally. We do however have some provisional information that covers contracts. A contract may be for more than one dentist so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level.

Provisional management estimates show that in Eastbourne Downs Primary Care Trust (PCT):

	Estimates
Contracts signed
Number	39
Approximate units of dental activity (UDA) value	232,661
Contracts still in discussion
Number	3
Approximate UDA value	1,757
Contracts rejected
Number	6
Approximate UDA value	13,600
Percentage UDAs	5.5
Contracts signed
Number signed without dispute	38
Number signed in dispute	1
Percentage disputes	2.6

Note:
The information provided is not validated. It represents a snapshot of the position in early April.

A contract may be for either a practice or an individual dentist.

PCTs are working with dentists to resolve as many disputes as possible locally.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in Portsmouth (a) were registered with dentists who have not signed and (b) are registered with dentists who have signed the new NHS contract for dentistry. [66433]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract is not available centrally. We do however have some provisional information that covers contracts, contract may be for more than one dentist so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level.

Provisional management estimates show that in Portsmouth City Primary Care Trust (PCT):

	Estimates
Contracts signed
Number	30
Approximate units of dental activity (UDA) value	283,111
Contracts still in discussion
Number	0
Approximate UDA value	0
Contracts rejected
Number	4
Approximate UDA value	26,273
Percentage UDAs	8.5
Contracts signed
Number signed without dispute	14
Number signed in dispute	16
Percentage disputes	53

Note:
The information provided is not validated. It represents a snapshot of the position in early April.

PCTs are working with dentists to resolve as many disputes as possible locally.

The figures show that the majority of national health service dentists in Portsmouth have accepted the new NHS contract and as a consequence the loss is relatively minimal. The PCT will use the funding available to purchase additional UDAs from other interested dentists in the short term to seek to maintain levels of dentistry.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists who have signed the new NHS dental contract have given notice that they intend to resign from that contact. [66712]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Under the new dental contract, as under the old arrangements, dentists are required to give three months' notice of giving up a national health service contract.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the targets are for units of dental activity for 2006-07, broken down by primary care trust. [64982]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not set targets for primary care trusts for units of dental activity.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in North West Cambridgeshire have (a) signed and (b) not signed the new contract for NHS dentists. [66927]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract is not available centrally. We do however have some provisional information that covers contacts. A contract may be for more than one dentist and so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level.

The table shows the number of contracts for national health service dentists that have been signed in the North West Cambridgeshire area.

Diabetes

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, columns 2108-09W, on diabetes, what criteria she used in making the decision not to refer all insulin products used in the UK to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence. [67698]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 3 May 2006]: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's clinical guidelines on the management of both type one and type two diabetes conclude that the majority of studies indicate that both human and animal insulins are equally effective and report no significant differences in hypoglycaemic episodes and glycaemic control between the insulin of human and animal chemical structures.

I understand that the choice of insulin is influenced by other factors such as delivery systems and cultural preferences, and so the decision to use one or other of the insulin types rests entirely with the physician, in consultation with the patient.

Diagnostic Scans

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the performance of Alliance Medical Ltd. in providing diagnostic scans in the NHS; and if she will make a statement; [70809]

(2) what aspects of performance her Department examines when carrying out (a) weekly, (b) monthly and (c) annual assessments of the performance of Alliance Medical Ltd. in providing diagnostic scans in the NHS. [65109]

Andy Burnham: Alliance Medical Ltd.'s contract performance is reviewed by a combination of the weekly and monthly activity reports. The aspects of performance that are assessed include the volume of scans, number of patients contacted and booked, report dispatch times, patient satisfaction, referrer satisfaction, cancellations and quality of radiological reporting. These are collected on a monthly basis. Weekly data are also collected on the number of scans performed at each site visited.

In addition, the clinical aspects of the service have been assessed through joint Departmental and Royal College of Radiologists clinical audits. Each audit compared performance of the Alliance Medical Ltd. service with that of the NHS. The second audit was published on 11 May 2006 and on the Royal College of Radiologists' website at: www.rcr.ac.uk/docs/radiology/pdf/MR_CG_Audit_April2006.pdf.

Embryonic Stem Cells (Teeth)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research has been (a) funded and (b) carried out by her Department on the use of embryonic stem cells to develop human teeth; and if she will make a statement; [70095]

(2) what her policy is on the use of stem cells to grow human teeth; and if she will make a statement. [70096]

Andy Burnham: The Department is not funding research into stem cells for creating replacement teeth. The Government believe that stem cell research offers enormous potential to deliver new treatments, including the improved reconstructive dental surgery for those who have suffered severe injury or cancer.

To date, the published scientific evidence has not established which types of stem cells will be the most useful for human therapies. Therefore, following the UK stem cell initiative report in 2005, the Government have announced up to £100 million for all forms of stem cell research in 2006 to 2008.

Foster Review

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Foster Review of non-medical health regulation is expected to be published; and how much time she expects to make available for consultation about its recommendations. [69257]

Andy Burnham: We will publish our decisions on the review of non-medical professional regulation and on the chief medical officer's review of medical revalidation and related subjects in due course. We will identify any matters requiring consultation and announce the duration of such consultation.

GP Contract

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the ability of (a) GP practices and (b) primary care trusts to fund (i) the purchase of new buildings and (ii) the rental of premises under the new GP contract; and if she will make a statement. [69683]

Ms Rosie Winterton: General practitioner practices should seek the agreement of their primary care trust (PCT) on plans to move to new practice premises. Irrespective of the new general medical services contract, general practitioner practices have always had the ability to lease rented premises or borrow capital to fund new-build premises. In turn, primary care trusts and their predecessor bodies have the ability to consider funding agreed associated revenue costs from their resource allocations.

Health Professionals' Councils

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was to public funds of the (a) General Osteopathic Council, (b) General Chiropractic Council and (c) Health Professions Council in (i) 2004-05 and (ii) 2005-06. [69258]

Andy Burnham: No money was paid to these organisations, which are self-funded through registrants' subscriptions, with the exception of £1,465.40 paid to the General Chiropractic Council in 2005-06 for the cost of room hire and catering.

Herceptin

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of Herceptin at treating early stage breast cancer; [67806]

(2) when she expects the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to issue its guidelines on the prescription of Herceptin to patients with early stage breast cancer. [67964]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is not the role of the Department to assess the effectiveness of treatments.

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Authority in the United Kingdom and the European Medicines Agency (EMEA) for the European Union (EU) consider the safety and efficacy of treatments. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) considers the clinical and cost effectiveness of certain licensed treatments for use in the national health service.

In February 2006, Roche applied to the EMEA to extend its licence indication for Herceptin to include adjuvant treatment of early breast cancer. At the end of April, the EMEA's committee for medicinal products for human use recommended that Herceptin be approved for this indication. The next stage in the regulatory process is for the European Commission to evaluate this recommendation with a view to issuing marketing authorisation in the EU. A decision is expected in a few weeks.

Herceptin for early stage breast cancer has already been referred to NICE. The appraisal is proceeding, through the new fast track process for single technology appraisals, in parallel with the licensing process. NICE has indicated that guidance could be available in July, subject to licensing.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice she has received from the national cancer director on the merits of prescribing Herceptin to treat early stage breast cancer. [67807]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The views of the national cancer director are taken into account when submissions and briefings are put to Ministers on cancer-related issues although these are not always specifically identified. In addition, the national cancer director may take the opportunity to provide Ministers with advice or views on specific issues during the course of meetings. A detailed record of these discussions will not always be taken.

In relation to Herceptin, the national cancer director has made the Secretary of State aware of the reasons why oncologists specialising in breast cancer have found the preliminary findings of recent trials so encouraging. For example:

the studies were large trials, involving over 12,000 women, and appeared to have been conducted to a high standard;

the findings in relation to disease free survival from all of the studies were remarkably consistent adding to the robustness of the data;

both the HERA trial (carried out in Europe) and the combined American trial (NSABP B31 and NCCTG N9831) had reported significant benefits in distant recurrence free survival which could be an early surrogate for improved overall survival in breast cancer trials; in general the absolute benefits of adjuvant therapies are small in the early years but increase over time;

the benefits of Herceptin are additional to those seen with standard adjuvant therapies;

the cardiac side-effects of Herceptin were well recognised and experience suggested that they were manageable and were outweighed by the benefits of Herceptin.

However, he has also made clear that the data is immature and no-one can therefore be certain of the long term benefits or harms of using Herceptin to treat early breast cancer.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in England have applied to be treated with Herceptin for early stage breast cancer and are awaiting funding. [67808]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect information on the numbers of patients applying for specific treatments and awaiting funding decisions by their primary care trusts.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether primary care trusts in England may refuse to prescribe Herceptin to patients with early stage breast cancer on the grounds of its cost; [67962]

(2) whether primary care trusts in England have been given written guidance on the circumstances under which it is acceptable to refuse to prescribe Herceptin to patients with early stage breast cancer. [67963]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts (PCTs) do not make prescribing decisions. It is for individual clinicians, in discussion with a patient, to decide whether or not it is suitable to prescribe a specific drug. PCTs may need to be involved to decide whether to support the clinician's decision and supply the drug at NHS expense. PCTs need to take a range of factors into account, including local factors, when considering the funding of drugs and other treatments.

Guidance has not been issued to primary care trusts in England on the circumstances under which it is acceptable to refuse to prescribe Herceptin to patients with early stage breast cancer. However, the national cancer research institute (NCRI) has produced a United Kingdom clinical guideline on the use of Herceptin for early breast cancer. This provides useful information to those considering prescribing Herceptin for this indication in advance of a decision on licensing and the publication of National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidance. The NCRI guidance was brought to the attention of PCTs via Issue 300 of the chief executive's bulletin published on 13 January 2006.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost is to each primary care trust in England of a course of Herceptin for patients with early stage breast cancer. [67971]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data are not held on the cost to individual primary care trusts (PCTs) of any particular treatment.

The cost of Herceptin for the treatment of early stage breast cancer is estimated to be in the region of £20,000 per patient per year. The cost per PCT would depend on the number of women diagnosed with HER2+ early stage breast cancer in each PCT for whom Herceptin might be appropriate.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what European drug prescription agencies have issued guidelines on the prescription of Herceptin to patients with early stage breast cancer. [68038]

Andy Burnham: Herceptin is a centrally authorised product across the European Union (EU). This means that, rather than each country's licensing body assessing the safety and efficacy of this drug, it is assessed by the European Medicines Agency (EMEA)—which has representation from each member state's licensing body. The regulatory indication approved by the EMEA applies to all member states.

Herceptin currently has an EU-wide licence for use treating advanced breast cancer and an application is currently being processed by the EMEA to extend this licence to include the adjuvant treatment of early stage breast cancer. At the end of April, the EMEA's committee for medicinal products for human use recommended that Herceptin be approved for this indication. The next stage in the regulatory process is for the European Commission to evaluate this recommendation with a view to issuing marketing authorisation in the EU. A decision is expected in a few weeks.

The Department does not hold up-to-date information about what, if any, guidance bodies elsewhere in Europe may have issued about use of Herceptin for early stage breast cancer prior to a decision on licensing. This information can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Home Treatment

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make extra funding available for new technologies that are designed to treat wounds outside the hospital setting. [50520]

Andy Burnham: For any new appliance to be prescribed on the national health service by a general practitioner, it must be listed under Part IX of the Drug Tariff. A listing on Part IX is only possible following a successful application from the appliance manufacturer. This involves consideration of its effectiveness compared to other products, its impact on quality of life, suitability for prescribing in primary care, and price. On listing there are agreed arrangements for funding.

If the appliance manufacturer wishes to make an application to place their product on Part IX of the Drug Tariff, they should contact the prescription pricing division of the Business Services Authority.

The Government are also working closely with industry to facilitate the introduction of beneficial new medical technologies into the NHS and social care system.

Insulin Supplies

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what contingency plans have been made by (a) her Department and (b) Wockhardt UK to ensure that supplies of animal insulins are sufficient to enable their continued and widespread use when Novo Nordisk supplies are no longer available; [69613]

(2) what alternative sources of animal insulins are under consideration from outside the UK to supply the needs of UK users in the event of Wockhardt UK experiencing further difficulties of production and supply; and if she will make a statement. [69614]

Andy Burnham: The Department is in regular contact with Wockhardt. The company is currently enhancing its production capacity. It is working towards building contingency stocks for each of its insulin presentations. It is also taking steps to identify a contract manufacturer as a back-up in the event of problems at its current manufacturing site.

The Department is aware of other possible suppliers of animal insulin elsewhere in the world, but it is up to individual companies to decide where they market their products. The Department is not aware of any companies from outside the United Kingdom (UK) who plan to market animal insulin in the UK.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proportion of insulin products in use in the UK have been fully assessed for their (a) comparative clinical and cost-effectiveness and (b) long-term safety and efficacy by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence; and if she will make a statement; [69646]

(2) if she will refer all insulin products to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) for a comparative clinical and cost-effectiveness and long-term safety and efficacy evaluation with a request that NICE develops standard guidance on the use of insulins; and if she will make a statement. [69647]

Andy Burnham: All licensed insulins have been fully assessed and found to satisfy the regulatory requirements for quality, safety and efficacy. The safety of human insulins in clinical practice is continually monitored by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency and the European Medicines Agency.

Clinical guidelines produced by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence on the management of both type one and type two diabetes conclude that the majority of studies indicate that both human and animal insulins are equally effective and report no significant differences in hypoglycaemic episodes and glycaemic control between the insulin of human and animal chemical structures.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much it costs the NHS Purchase and Supply Agency to buy one presentation of (a) Hypurin Bovine Isophane and (b) Levemir insulin. [69648]

Andy Burnham: The NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency does not currently contract for these two products. The price that national health service trusts in England pay is the published list price less wholesaler discount which would normally be around 11 per cent.

Medical Practitioners

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the annual suicide rate of medical practitioners in each year since 1998 in England; and if she will make a statement. [51904]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not available in the format requested. Information on the number of deaths and proportional mortality ratios for suicide and undetermined injury in medical practitioners (persons aged 20 to 74) in England and Wales in each year since 1998 is shown in the table.

Medicines Review Processes

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the potential effect on costs of ensuring patient compliance with dosing regimens and effective medicine review processes. [69579]

Andy Burnham: No specific overall assessment has been made of the potential effect on costs of ensuring patient compliance with dosing regimes and effective medicine review processes. However, evidence shows that up to 50 per cent. of prescription medicines for long-term conditions are not being taken as intended, and that adverse reactions to medicines are implicated in 5 to 7 per cent. of hospital admissions.

A number of factors would need to be taken into account in making such an assessment. Through improved compliance, patients may benefit more from their treatment, both in terms of length and quality of life. More medicines may be prescribed, but those that are prescribed would be less likely to be wasted. Better management of a patient's condition may reduce the need for more specialist care, including admission to hospital. The provision of effective medication review processes would also have costs in terms of service delivery, for example through payments under the quality and outcomes framework for general medical services or fees to community pharmacists for medicine usage reviews.

Mental Health Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) early intervention teams and (b) assertive outreach teams have been (i) closed and (ii) reduced due to financial deficits in mental health services in the last 12 months. [69437]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not routinely collect information about local service reconfigurations or the reasons for them. Such decisions are for primary care trusts to make in consultation with local health partners and in accordance with assessment of the needs of the local population.

Data on mental health teams are collated through the Durham adult mental health service mapping. The January 2006 data will be available at the end of May.

National Blood Service

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) to what use the National Blood Service premises in the Midlands will be put after services provided there are moved to Bristol; and what the estimated cost is of converting the building for new use; [69628]

(2) what measures she has put in place to ensure that provision of blood to patients in the Midlands is not adversely affected by the closure of National Blood Services in Birmingham; and if she will make a statement. [69629]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A key factor in the successful delivery of NHS Blood and Transplant's (NHSBT) activities is implementation of its estate strategy. As part of its estate strategy the National Blood Service (NBS), an operating division of NHSBT, has proposed the development of a new site at Filton, Bristol.

To build this new centre in the most cost-effective way, NBS proposes to consolidate some services into the new Filton site from centres in Birmingham, Southampton and Plymouth. These services are those which do not need to be close to the patient, such as blood processing and testing. The NBS will ensure that this has no adverse effect on patients across the Birmingham and South West area.

The NBS does not propose to close any centres, including the Birmingham centre. It will continue to provide critical services from Birmingham. For example, the centre will continue to have a local blood bank to meet orders for blood. This will ensure that there is no adverse impact on patients around Birmingham.

The NBS centre in Birmingham will require development, even after these changes, to ensure that those services which remain in Birmingham are provided from buildings which are fit for purpose. A number of options are being considered.

NHS Dispensing Contractors

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Government will publish their response to the consultation paper 'Proposals to simplify the reimbursement arrangements for NHS dispensing contractors' and if she will make a statement. [65512]

Andy Burnham: Due to the large number and technical nature of the proposals consulted on in this paper, it is intended to proceed with the issues raised in the consultation individually. The first announcement, covering changes to the zero discount arrangements, was published on the Department's website on 25 April. Decisions and announcements covering further proposals will be made in due course.

A summary of the responses received to this consultation document is also available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk.

NHS Finance

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial penalties are applied to (a) NHS trusts and (b) strategic health authorities for (i) running continuing deficits and (ii) overspending in a single financial year; and what assessment she has made of the impact of such penalties on patient care. [68133]

Andy Burnham: Under the cross-Government resource accounting and budgeting (RAB) regime, national health service organisations carry forward their year-end level of over or under-spending. The carry-forward is based on the total deficit or surplus at the end of the year, which will reflect overspending in-year as well as spending in previous years.

For 2005-06, the NHS Bank has developed an incentive scheme whereby the level of overspending carry-forward into 2006-07 is subject to an uplift of 10 per cent. The carry-forward regime and the NHS Bank incentive scheme are operated at strategic health authority (SHA) level. SHAs have discretion over how they apply it to their organisations.

The level of carry-forward and the NHS Bank incentive scheme will be factored into the financial planning for 2006-07. The plans for 2006-07 have not yet been agreed by the Department.

All areas of the country will continue to see improvements in patient care in 2006-07.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the financial recovery plan for health trusts in London will be in place; and what measures have been adopted to ensure that it will be fair and transparent. [69533]

Andy Burnham: The five strategic health authorities (SHAs) in London are responsible for ensuring that those trusts that need financial recovery plans have produced plans that are fair and transparent. From 1 July 2006, the new London SHA will take over this responsibility.

The Department is working with the SHAs to finalise the financial plan for the national health service for 2006-07.

To support the work of the SHAs in their work with specific trusts and primary care trusts, the Secretary of State announced the establishment of turnaround teams in a written ministerial statement on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 37WS. The teams comprise experts with a mix of commercial and NHS turnaround skills.

Local turnaround teams are agreeing a tailored package of support with the organisations facing the largest challenges and with their SHA. This will help them to achieve financial balance and provide services more efficiently. The teams will support the chief executive of the organisation. The chief executive remains accountable for the financial performance, establishing financial recovery plans and measures to ensure they are fair and transparent..

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the timetable is for the NHS financial recovery plan; and whether those organisations which have been asked to reduce spending will receive a clear indication of how funding levels will be restored over an agreed period. [69534]

Andy Burnham: The Department is working with the strategic health authorities (SHA) to finalise the financial plan for the national health service for 2006-07. The plan will deliver financial balance across the NHS in 2006-07. SHAs are supporting trusts and primary care trusts in producing robust local plans which will have locally agreed timetables.
